THE DEMONSTRATION OF THE SCRIPTVRES.

BEing about (by the grace of God) to cleare some difficulties, and to collect a few observations from some verses of this Gospel written by S. Matthew: it will not bee amisse, first of all, to resolve a generall question or two. Our first question then shall be this.

Quest. 1. How this Booke or any other may bee knowne to be the divine word of God, dictated by the Holy Spirit of God, and not the humour or fancy of a private, erring spirit.

Answ. I answer, Scripture is knowne to be Scripture, and canonicall bookes are knowne to bee such by these proofes, properties, & infallible markes.

I. First, by the evidence of the Spirit imprinted in the Scriptures, and shewing it selfe in every line of them: or the testimonies of the Scripture it self, that is, the testimony of God speaking unto us in the Scriptures, as Rom. 10. 8. This is the word of Faith which we preach.

Rom. 10. 8.

II. Secondly, the purity and perfection of Scriptures sheweth it to bee Canonicall: For they teach nothing but truth, and teach all truths necessary unto salvation. They are both pure and perfect. Psal. 19. 8, 9. First pure, they being a doctrine according to holines, a rule to direct our wales in righteousnesse, all the exhortations and examples therein tending thereto. Secondly, they are perfectly holy in themselves, and by themselves; whereas all other writings are prophane, further then they draw holinesse from these, which yet is never such but that their holinesse is imperfect, and defective (Prov. 8. 8. and 30. 5. Psal. 12. 7.) But the Scriptures are perfectly profitable in themselves to instruct unto salvation. [d] All other writings are meerly unprofitable thereunto, any further, then they draw from them: yea they containe full and perfect Doctrine, for the pacifying, setling and directing of the conscience in all things. Many Histories shew us the heavy wrath of God upon man for sinne: but the Scriptures onely shewes Morbum, medicinam, & medicum. That is both the sicknesse, the playsicke, and the Physitian to cure it.

d James 1. 21.

III. Thirdly the consent of one part with another, being a perfect concord and harmony in all the Bookes both of the Old and New Testament; notwithstanding the diversity of persons by whom, the places where, the times when, and matters whereof they have beene written. [b] There may seeme some contradiction amongst the writers of holy Scripture, but indeed there is none, but a perfect harmonie. And therefore when we see the heathen history, or Apocryphall bookes contradicting the holy history, we should stand for the holy Scripture against them: but when we see any appearance of contradiction in holy writ, we should labour to reconcile it. When Moses saw an Ægyptian and an Israelite striving together, hee killed the Ægyptian, and saved the Israelite, [c] but when he saw two Israelites striving together, he laboured to reconcile them, saying, Yee are brethren, why do ye strive? So when we see heathen History, to contradict the Scriptures, we should kill the Ægyptian, and save the Israelite: as for example, Iacob cursed Simeon and Levi for murthering of the Sichemites. [d] But Judith blessed Simeon for killing of them, Judith 9. So Jeremiah saith, They shall returne in the third generation. [e] But Baruch saith, They shall returne in the seaventh generation, Baruch 6. Here let us kill the Ægyptian, but save the Israelite: but when we see any appearance of contradiction in the holy Scriptures, we should labour to reconcile them, because they are brethren. Weemse.

c Exod. 2. 13.

e Jerem. 27. 7.

IV. Fourthly, the antiquitie of it: the Scripture being the most ancient of all Histories: from the creation of the world to the flood, was to the heathen Tempus ἄδηλον, a hid & unknowne time: there being no humane Historyes of any thing before the flood: but the Scriptures begunne at the beginning of the world, and continue the History of the world, unto the flood. Againe from the flood to the Olimpiads of the Grecians (which began but in the dayes of Uzziah) was unto the heathen tempus indoctum, a fabulous time, and all their Historyes of Hercules Prometheus, and the rest being but lying and forged tales: but the Scriptures goe on, setting downe unto us the History of the Church, from the flood even unto the comming of Christ. Thus we see how farre Gods word exceedeth all humane writings in antiquitie; it beginneth with the world, [f] in the [illegible] the number of the holy Prophets [illegible]

f Luke 1. 70.

since the world beganne) and endeth with it. g For the world of the Lord endureth for ever.

g 1 Pet. 1. 25.

Fiftly the Majesty of it in plainnesse of speech: the Scriptures seeme at the first view, to bee very plaine, but at a full sight are full of Majesty above all other writings. h Thus their plaine and cleere manner of setting downe things sheweth them to be Divine. i Take a great roule and write in it with a mans pen, Behhoret Enosh, that is cleerely that the simplest among men may understand it, so k This Commandement which I command thee this day is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. In the Hebrew it is Lo nipleeth, non separatum a te. i. e. It is not separated from thy knowledge, that thou canst not understand it: neither is it farre from thee, those things which are obscure, which wee cannot take up, are said to be farre from us, and those things which we understand are said to be neare us. l Sixtly, the power and force, it hath over the conscience: it makes often the stoutest hearer with Felix tremble, and the most stubborne with the souldiers cry out, Men and brethren what shall wee doe to be saved? Although it bee contrarie to mans corrupt nature, yet hath it in all ages won some unto it, whersoever it came: and by an admirable force inclining their hearts from vice to vertue. The Spirit in us lusteth after envie, but the Scriptures gives more grace a that is the Scriptures offer grace and abilitie to doe more, then nature can doe: Nature cannot heale a spirit that lusteth after envy, or after money, or after uncleanesse: b but the Scripture offer more grace to overcome any of these sinnes, bee they never so strong.

b Iames 4. 5, 6.

VII. Seventhly, the certaine prophecies of things to come, which none but God could foretell.

VIII. Eightly, the admirable preservation of it against time & tyrants: many other books have beene written which now are lost, or falsifyed, or grosly corrupted; but the Lord by a speciall providence hath still preserved the fountain of the Scripture pure and entire: Thus God by his especial care of them, shews them to be no other, then his divine Oracles.

IX. Ninthly, the Divells rage against those that desire and endeavour, to regulate, and moderate their conversations according unto the Scriptures: those that walke contrarie unto them he keepes in peace c and persecutes with war, hatred, and rage, onely The woman and her seed, d who conforme themselves according to the will of God manifested unto them in his word.

c Luke 11. 52.

d Apoc. 12. 13. 15. 17.

X. Tenthly, the judgement of God upon those that have opposed it, and the professors of it: as might bee proved by innumerable examples taken from all ages: to instance but only upon the ten bloody persecutors, none of them escaping hence out of this life, without a stroke of vengeance, and some remarkeable iudgement.

XI. Eleventhly, the constant, courageous, and cheerefull sufferings of many millions of Martyrs, who have shed their bloud for the Gospel of Christ, and truth of God.

XII. Twelfthly, a gracious simplicitie in the writers of these bookes of the Old and New Testament, neither fearing their friendes, nor themselves, but most freely and impartially setting downe their owne faults and infirmities, as well as others, testifying thereby, that in writing they were guyded by the Spirit of God, and of truth.

XIII. Thirteenthly, the evidence of Gods Spirit, working in the hearts of his Children, assuring them that the Scriptures are the word of God, whercunto they may safely leane, without the least feare or suspicion of error. e We have a more sure word of Prophesie, whereunto you doe well that yee take heed, &c.

e 2 Pet. 1. 9. 1.

XIV. Againe, The bookes of Scripture containe many mysteries above the reach of humane reason, although not against reason, because wee may discerne a truth in them, and that by groundes and principles of reason.

XV. Againe, the speeches of Scripture aime not at by respects, but simply and absolutely give and ascribe all glory unto God alone: and above all things perswade us to seeke the glory of God, making that the end and aime, and primary scope of all our actions.

XVI. Againe, a reconciliation of Iustice and Mercy propounded in the Gospell, both which meete sweetly in Christ: Iustice (as it were) in a sort giving place unto Mercy.

XVII. Againe, the heavenly order set downe and observed in Scripture, shew them to be divine: there is in the Scripture a fourefold order. 1. Ordo naturæ, 2. ordo coniugalis thori, 3. ordo historiæ, & 4 ordo dignitatis: An order of nature, of marriage, of history, and of dignity; all which orders the Scripture marks, and for sundry reasons setteth one before another, first in setting down the Patriarkes, it observeth the order of nature, as they were borne: As first Reuben, then Simeon, then Levi, then Iudah, &c.

Secondly, there is Ordo coniugalis thori, according to their birthes; and so the children of free women were set first. Thirdly there is Ordo dignitatis, so Sem is placed before Iapher for dignitie, although hee were yonger: So in this Gospell, Saint Matthew observes this order (Mat. 13.) Hee bringeth forth new and old; New is first in dignitie, although old first in time: so Ephes. 2. Apostles and Prophets. Fourthly, there is an order of History observed also by Scripture: as in the first verse of this Gospell, The booke of the Generation of Iesus Christ, the sonne of David, the sonne of Abraham. Why is Abraham put last after David? because the historie is to begin at him. So 1 Chron. 3. 5. Salomon is placed last amongst his brethren, because the Historie was to begin at him: yea, if we shall marke the heavenly order that is amongst the Evangelists, they will shew us that the Scriptures are divine. Saint Marke beginneth at the workes of Christ: Saint Matthew ascendeth higher, to the Birth of Christ: Saint Luke goeth higher, to the conception of Christ: and Iohn goeth highest of all, to the Divinitie of Christ, and his eternall Generation.

XVIII. Lastly, a constant and perpetuall testimonie of the Catholique Church, which wee call Ecclesiasticall Tradition: the Church in all ages allowing of these Bookes, as truly Canonicall, or as sure, certaine, and infallible rules of direction for our lives and conversations; yea, although the Papists themselves dispute of the authoritie and perfection of the Scriptures (whether they be perfect, and of themselves sufficient unto salvation, without Tradition; or whether they have authoritie from themselves, and witnesse in themselves, or from the Church; and how we without the consent and testimonie of the Church, know them to be Scriptures) yet (to my knowledge) there is no learned Papist doth question the question in hand, viz. whether these Bookes of the Old and New Testament be the divine word of God or no? neither is there any controversie betwixt us and them in this particular; they with us agreeing, that the Old and New Testament, and every booke in either, were written by holy men of God, as they a 2 Pet. 1, were inspired by the Spirit of God[a]. And thus much for this first generall question. The second followes.

Quest. 2. How are the Scriptures divided? I answer, Answ. Foure manner of wayes, viz. first in bookes Canonicall and Apocryphall. Secondly, the Canonicall Bookes are divided into the Old and New Testament. Thirdly, the Canonicall bookes of the Old Testament into three parts, 1. Into the Law i. e. the five Bookes of Moses. 2. Into the lesser and latter Prophets. 3. Into the Bookes which the Grecians call ἁγιόγραφα, holy Writings. The Canonicall Bookes of the New Testament are also divided, 1. Into Bookes Historicall. 2. Epistles. 3. Propheticall, as the Apocalypse.

Fourthly, the last division of all the Canonicall Bookes both of the Old and New Testament, is taken from the summe of the whole Scriptures, and that is into the Law and Gospell[b]. Having to handle this question elsewhere more largely, I passe here thus briefly by it. Thus much for this second generall question. Wee now come to consider of this Gospell, and first of the Title, The Gospel according to Saint Matthew. Here first it may bee demanded, what is meant by this word Gospell? Quest. 3. Answ. Answer. For the true and full understanding of this question, wee have two things to consider of, viz. the Name and the Nature of the Gospell: of which not apart, or severally, but together. For the Name shewes the Nature, Conveniunt rebus nomina saepe suis. The Name is εὐαγγέλιον, that is, a good and joyfull message[c], and is attributed and ascribed unto many things. 1. Sometimes to a peculiar message, Ecce, Luke 2. 10. εὐαγγελίζομαι, &c. Behold, I bring you glad tidings. 2. Sometimes to the preaching of the Gospell, as κατὰ τὸ εὐαγγέλιόν μου, according to my Gospel[d], that is, my preaching of the Gospell. 3. Sometimes to holy doctrine, or the preaching of Christ[e], This Gospell of the Kingdome shall be preached unto all Nations, &c. 4. Sometimes this word Gospell is taken for the Evangelicall Bookes, Matth. 26. 13. Wheresoever this Gospell shall bee preached, there shall also this which this woman hath done, bee told.

e 2 Cor. 8. 18. & Mat. 24. 14. & Isa. 61. 1.

Now the Euangelicall Bookes are of two sorts, to wit,

Either { Forged and false, as the Gospel of S. Peter, S. James, S. Clement, and divers others, which the Papists coson the world withall: Or True, which are the foure of S. Matthew, Marke, Luke and John: and are called Gospell, κατ' ἐξοχήν, after a more singular manner, because they bring unto us both true newes, and the best newes that ever we heard[f]: Behold, (sayth the Angel) I bring you glad tidings, tidings of great joy, which shall bee unto you, and to all people, &c. Now the truth of this appeares thus, First, The Gospell is the power of God unto salvation[g]. Secondly, it is a glasse, wherein as with open face (the vaile being taken away) wee may see the glorie of the Lord, and bee transformed into the same image, from glory to glory[h].

h 2 Cor. 3. 18.

Thirdly, it shewes unto us, [i] Gods good will unto mankinde, and mans reconciliation unto the Lord of glory.

i Luke 2. 14.

Fourthly, it shewes unto us the will and pleasure of the Lord more clearly and plainly than was made knowne unto the Fathers in and under the Law[k].

k Ephes. 3. 4, 5.

Fifthly, the Gospell is such a blessed message that woe bee unto him that either { Neglects to preach it, being called thereunto; Woe unto me if I preach not the Gospell[l]. Or Brings any other Gospell than this; let him be accursed that bringeth any other Gospell[m]. Or, Rejects this, It shall bee more tollerable for Sodom and Gomorrah at the day of judgement, than for those that despise this Gospell[n].

l 1 Cor. 9. 16.

m Gal. 1. 8, 9.

n Mat. 10. 14, 15.

And thus much for this question.

Another question here will arise: Why the Gospell or any Scripture was written? To this I Answer first: for the helps of our knowledge, least that in processe of time, there should either have beene no remembrance, or a false remembrance, of our salvation and redemption by Christ: to prevent which God in much mercy and love, hath committed the life, death, resurrection, and ascension of Christ unto writting, that the truth might remaine and bee knowne, for and unto all ages. The Lord would have us remember what Christ did for us, and what hee undertooke, and underwent for our Redemption: and therefore hee commandes that those things which are to bee remembred should bee written, least otherwise the memory of them should perish. The Lord would have our memories to retaine Truth, not lyes, and therefore commands the Gospell to bee written that the truth may not be corrupted.

o Luke 1. 4.

I answer againe, the Gospell was written for the helpe of our faith, least it should have beene uncertaine. If the History of Christs conception, birth, life, temptation, sufferings, obedience, and the like, had only beene by tradition delivered from Father to Sonne; in proceſſe of time, we ſhould have queſtioned the truth of it, and ſo our faith would have beene the more ſhaken, and leſſe ſure: to redreſſe which, the Lord commends all theſe things to writing, that ſo our faith might be firme and working, not fraile, and wavering. If the Goſpel had beene related unto us by others, not by the Apoſtles, wee ſhould have been prone to have called the truth and certainty of it in queſtion: as the Sadduces, who will neither receive nor imbrace any other Scripture, but onely the Pentateuch, or five bookes of Moſes, becauſe none were written by him, but them: and therefore the Lord will have the Goſpel written, and the Canon and Rule of faith taught, confirmed, and ſealed by his Apoſtles, who were eye and eare witneſſes, of what they wrote, that wee might the more undoubtedly beleeve the infallible truth of it.

a 1 John 1. 3.

Queſt. 5 Anſwer. It may here further be queſtioned, what the Goſpel and Scriptures doe containe? I anſwer; Firſt, holy Hiſtories to bee knowne: Secondly, Rules and doctrines of faith to be practiſed and beleeved. For the better underſtanding of this queſtion and anſwer, obſerve: Firſt, what is to expected? Secondly, what is to bee learned from the holy Scriptures? I. What is to be expected from the Scriptures? Firſt the truth of Hiſtorie; not of every hiſtorie and paſſage, but onely thoſe that are neceſſary, b. Secondly, the ſumme alſo of all thoſe things, which are to bee beleeved as neceſſary unto ſalvation. c And therfore 1. they are to blame that ſay, the Scriptures are corrupted, and falſifyed by Heretiques. 2. the Patrons and ſetters up of thoſe ἄγραφα, Vnwritten traditions. II. What is to be learned from the Scriptures? Firſt, the doctrine of faith: d and therefore 1. Papiſts are much to blame, who hold ſome things as articles of their faith, for which they have no warrant from the word of God, as is proved by Sir Humfrey Linde in his via tuta. 2 Ignorant perſons alſo are here very faulty, who will not ſtudie the Scriptures, that thereby they may bee inabled to give an account of their faith, to every one that ſhall demand a reaſon of it e. 3. They alſo are blame worthy, that refuſe to bee Catechiſed and inſtructed in the principles of Religion, grounded upon, and taken from the holy Scriptures.

b Joh. 20. 31.

c 2 Tim. 3. 16.

d Colloſ. 3. 16.

e 1 Pet. 3. 15.

Secondly, the truth of Hiſtory is to be learned from the Scripture; becauſe that is the foundation of faith: and therefore it is neceſſary to heare, reade, conferre, and accuſtome our ſelves unto the ſtudy of holy writ: becauſe for this end God commanded them to bee written, that wee by the frequent and daily meditating thereof, might underſtand what is neceſſary to bee knowne, & what to be beleeved unto ſalvation. And thus much for the firſt word of the Title, viz. Goſpel.

Queſt. 6. It may yet bee demanded further concerning the Title of this Book, what this Matthew was?

Anſw. 1. To which I anſwer, for his perſon, hee was the ſonne of Alpheus, by name alſo called Levi, and it is probable, that hee was the brother of Iames the leſſe, f.

f Mat. 10. 3.

I anſwer againe: for his function hee was a Publican, or a Tole-gatherer; a calling very odious unto the Jewes: Firſt, in regard of the office, becauſe they conceived theſe takes to bee impoſed upon them unjuſtly, by the Roman government, under which they were now ſubject. Secondly, in regard of the office, becauſe for the moſt part they were unjuſt exacters, and oppreſſors, extorting more from them then their due: as Zacheus himſelfe doth intimate, when he ſaith g If I have taken any thing from any man unjuſtly, &c. And hence Chriſt exhorts Publicans h to exact no more then that which is appointed unto them.

h Luke 3. 13.

Laſtly, I anſwer; for Saint Matthewes paines, labour, or imployment, this wee finde: Firſt, that he preached the Goſpel as farre as Æthiopia. Secondly, that hee ſealed with his blood, the Goſpel, he had preached, being martyred for it. From Saint Matthewes calling it will bee queſtioned, why doth God uſe ſinners for the publiſhing of the Goſpel? as here Matthew who was a Publicane; and afterwards Paul, who was a perſecutor, i and Oneſimus, who was diſobedient k? I anſwer, it is very profitable, and behovefull, for the patient or ſicke perſon to have a Phyſitian, who hath had experience of his ſickneſs: for he that hath felt the griefe, knowes beſt how to cure and redreſſe it: and therefore the Lord will have quondam, or ſometimes ſinners, to preach unto thoſe that yet are wicked, becauſe they know beſt the nature of ſinne, and how to apply fit corroſives and ſalves to every ſinfull ſoule. Againe, I anſwer: this the Lord doth to ſhew unto us, that when he doth forgive, he doth alſo forget: when once wee turne unto God by repentance never to bee repented of, hee doth as wholly put our ſinnes out of his remembrance, as though we never had offended him at all, k.

i Acts. 9. 1 Tim. 1. 12, 13.

k Phil. 10. Anſw. 1.

k Ezek. 18 22.

Again, God doth this to encourage ſinners to turne unto him, that having ſuch preſidents, they may bee certainely aſſured that hee who is no reſpecter of perſons, will thinke nothing too deare for them, whatſoever their former lives have beene, if they will but truely returne unto the Lord.

Act. 17. 30.

Anſw. 3.

Laſtly, God doth this to demonſtrate his power unto us, that of great Sinners, he can make great Saints: of oppreſſing Publicans, faithfull Apoſtles; and of cruell Perſecutors, conſtant Profeſſors and Preachers.

Anſw. 4.

Queſt. 8 Anſw. Concerning the time of this Goſpel, it will be demanded, when was this Goſpel written by Saint Matthew? I anſwer, before any of the other three, within 8 or 9 yeares from the Aſcenſion, l.

l Athanaſius.

Queſt. 9 Anſwer. Concerning the Author, it will be demanded, By whoſe authority was this Goſpel written? I anſwer, Saint Matthew was not the Author, but the Hand: for the holy Spirit was the Author: and therefore Caſtalion erres, who thus entitles this booke, The Goſpel by the Author Matthew, for it is more rightly called by Κατὰ, According a Sic Tertul. & Cyprian. b Vet. Interp.

Quæst. 10. Concerning the Idiome, it will hee enquired, in what language this Gospell was written?

Answ. 1. To this some answer, in Hebrew: and the reason they give for this, is, because it was written first and principally for the Iewes. This was the constant opinion of these Fathers, Ireneus, Tertullian, Origen, Athanasius and Epiphanius, all of them giving the fore-named reason, that Saint Matthew being an Hebrew, writ in Hebrew unto the Hebrewes; and Ierome to confirme this, tells us, that hee found an Hebrew Copy in the Cæsarian Librarie: and Syrus the Interpreter is so confident herein, that hee prefixeth this Title to this Book, The Gospell which Saint Matthew preached in Hebrew in the Region Palestina.

Answ. 2. I answer (with reverence to so learned Fathers) that the exposition of the name Emmanuel, Matth. 1.23. doth shew, that either first Matthew did not write in Hebrew, for then he would not have expounded Emmanuel, which is an Hebrew word: or secondly, that hee wrot both in Hebrew and Greeke: or thirdly, that he wrot this Gospell in Hebrew, and that this addition unto Emmanuel (that is, if it be interpreted, God with us) was added by some Greeke Interpreter. Now which of these is the certaine truth, in truth is uncertaine. Indeed the Fathers were not so confident that it was written in Hebrew; but Erasmus, and other learned Interpreters, do as much question it, and their reasons for the contrarie opinions are these: First, because, if this Gospel were written first in Hebrew, then who translated it into Greeke? for none certainly can be produced to have done it: the maintainers of this opinion not agreeing herein among themselves. Theophilact thinkes that Iohn the Evangelist translated it: but Athanasius ascribes it to Iames the Apostle. The second reason is, because all the other Pen-men of the holy Scriptures, both Apostles and Evangelists, writ in Greeke, which was the most vulgar and knowne tongue then, in those parts where they lived; and therefore it is not likely that onely Matthew would use a divers idiome, or language. The third reason is, because the proofe alledged by the Fathers, proves not their opinion: their proofe is, Matthew wrot in Hebrew, because hee was an Hebrew, and wrot to Hebrewes. This followes not, because the rest of the Apostles were Hebrewes, and yet they wrot and preached in Greeke: They are Hebrewes (sayth Saint Paul[b]) and so am I. The fourth reason is, because if we should grant, that this Booke was written by Saint Matthew in Hebrew, we must grant also, that wee have not the Fountaine of this Gospell, but a streame onely flowing from the Fountaine, and derived unto us (as Maldonate sayth) by some uncertaine Authour: Now it is not to be admitted or granted, that this Translation which comes wee know not from whom, should bee coupled with the rest of the Evangelists, and Epistles, whose fountaine (it is granted) wee have, that is, as they were written by them, and not translated by others. The fift reason is, because the Hebrew words which Saint Matthew (for some causes) doth retaine in this Gospell, he doth interpret, not into other Hebrew words (which is very likely hee would have done, if hee had writ in Hebrew) but into Greeke words, as Emmanuel, i.e. God with us, Eli, Eli, lammasabachthani, i.e. my God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me: Golgotha, i.e. the place of a skull: Abba, which is, my Father[c]. I adde a sixt and last reason, which is taken from these words[d], one iot, or iota of the law shall not passe away, &c. Now Iota is the least letter the Greekes have, and Iod the least of Hebrew letters: and therefore it being sayd there, not the least Iod, but the least Iota, seemes (if not a convincing, yet) a probable argument, that this Gospell was written in Greeke, not in Hebrew. These reasons considered, I had rather thinke and conclude, that this Gospell was written by Saint Matthew in Greeke, and not at all in Hebrew. Thus much may suffice to bee spoken concerning the Authour, Saint Matthew.

Quæst. 11. Concerning the name of this second volume of holy writ, it may be questioned, why these Bookes are called by the name of a Testament?

Answer. For the understanding, and better resolving of this question, it is requisite to know, that this word Testament hath a divers signification, viz. I. First it signifies a Covenant: so with the Hebrewes, Berith (which signifies a Covenant, derived from Barath, which signifies to conclude, or make a Covenant) is taken for a Testament. So also the Greekes for this word Testament, have διαθήκην, or (as Aquila hath it) συνθήκην, which signifies an Agreement, or Covenant: so the Latines, they either call it Testamentum, or Pactum, a Testament or Covenant indifferently. II. Secondly, this word Testament signifies sometimes the will of the dead: where a Testament is, there must of necessitie be the death of the Testator[e]. Sometimes againe it signifies, the covenant of the living, and in this latter sence the Scripture is called a Testaments, because it is a Covenant of mercie and grace, which God made with Adam, Noah, Abram, Moses, David, and all his elect people. III. Thirdly, this word Testament doth ordinarily signifie a body of Bookes, containing the Historie of those people who were received by God into Covenant, that is, principally the Bookes of the Law and of the Prophets. IV. Fourthly, Testament sometimes signifies the bare promises which God made unto Abraham, and thus Saint Paul seemes to understand the word[a]. V. Fifly and lastly, most commonly this word Testament signifies the body of all Canonicall Bookes, wherein is contained the Doctrine concerning Christ, who was exhibited and given for a Redeemer of Mankinde[b].

a Gal. 3. 15, 16.

b Aretius. Answ. 2.

I answer againe; these Bookes are called by the name of a Testament for this cause, I. First, because because they describe unto us a Covenant whereby we are reconciled unto God, which is not a legall covenant of workes; but an Evangelicall covenant of faith in Christ. II. Secondly, because in these bookes are truely expressed, the last Will and Testament of the Sonne of God, which hee would have us to performe after his death; and which is plainly expressed, totidem verbis, in the institution of the Lords Supper; Eate and drinke yee all of this, for this is my bloud, τὸ τῆς καινῆς διαθήκης, of the New testament, which is shed for many, for the remission of sinnes.[e] III. Thirdly, because all things which are required in a solemne Will and Testament, are here in these books to be found: for the clearing whereof observe. A Will is either written by the hand, or direction of the Testator in his life time, or it is unwritten, and is called by the Lawyers; Testamentum nuncupativum, a Will declarative and such is the Will and Testament of our Lord and Saviour Iesus Christ; wherein there are principally these foure things. First, a Testator, which is Christ the Sonne of God, the author of this New Testament. Secondly, an Heire or joint-heires, which are all the elect of all ages: and hence the Scripture often calleth the Saints Heires and Coheires of Christ[d]. Thirdly, Legacies, or goods given to the Heires by the Testator, which are life eternall, remission of sinnes, the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, whereby we are enabled to performe (in some good measure) the Will of Christ, as to live holily, to adorne our profession, to be liberall towards the poore, to love one another, to beleeve in God faithfully, and to call upon him fervently, and the like. Fourthly, witnesses of the Will, and these were; I. First, the Apostles, and Disciples of Christ, who are by Christ called his Witnesses, and they themselves are not ashamed to bee so called.[e] II. The holy Martyrs are Christ witnesses also, because they suffered their blood to be shed for the confession of this Testament. III. Thirdly, all good Ministers, who are interpreters of this Testament, and propound the excellencies thereof unto the world, are likewise Christs witnesses. IV. Fourthly and lastly, all the Godly, who labour to performe and fulfil the contents of this Will in their lives and conversations, are witnesses also of this New Testament.

Quest. 12 Concerning the addition, one question more may be propounded, and that is, why are these Bookes called New; The new Testament, seeing that the substance of this volume is contained in the other, commonly called the Old Testament?

Answ. I answer, these bookes are called New, for these reasons. I. First, in regard of the time wherein they were written, because in time they were later written then those of the other Testament: so we call those things new which in tyme are neare unto us, and those things old which are further distant from our memorie and age. II. Secondly, they are called New, in regad of the promises of a new kingdome which they containe: for in the Old Testament, almost[f] all the promises respect the kingdome of the earthly Canaan, and that upon these conditions, that they should dwell safely, securely, and prosperously in that land, so long as they lived holily before the Lord; but the land should spue them out if they forsake the Lord. But this New Testament, hath the promise of a new kingdome, the kingdome of heaven, as also of the abolishing of death, of eternall life, of bestowing righteousnesse upon us, and renewing our humane nature in us, for, and by, and through the merits and mercies of Iesus Christ. III. Thirdly these bookes are called New, for a new adoration or worship of God which is herein prescribed: In the Old Testament they were confined unto a place: they must worship at Ierusalem, in the New Testament God promiseth to bee every where present and propitious unto all those that call upon him faithfully, John 4.23. IV. Fourthly, they are called New, because they speake with a new tongue, in a new language: the Old Testament was written in the old Hebrew tongue, the New Testament in a new, i. e. in the Greeke tongue: for this was a new thing, and never before accustomed, to have the Oracles of God divulged in any other language than Hebrew. There were three languages consecrated in the Title of Christs Crosse, which was written by Pilat, the Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine tongue: and therefore in this regard also these Books are called New. V. Fifthly, they are so teatmed also, because of a new Testator, or Mediatour of this Testament, which was not Moses, but Christ. VI. Sixtly, they are also so called, in regard of their new witnesses, the Apostles and Disciples of Christ. Thus much for the Name, Authour, and Title. Divers other generall questions might be raysed, both from this Gospell, as also from the New Testament, which willingly I omit, for these three causes. First, because some of them (God willing) I shall handle elswhere: And secondly, because Doctor Mayer hath handled many in his learned Animadversions upon the whole New Testament: And thirdly, because neither my parts, nor weake abilities, nor learning, nor library, nor leasure, can raise up, or conjure downe all questions and difficulties, which may be made. I have also (in a manner) wholly omitted the objections, the childish and quarrelling exceptions, and impious wrestlings of the Rhemists upon the New Testament, because both reverend Fulke, and Cartwright, are to be had in English, who answer them sufficiently. I come now to cleare and observe some things in particular from some particular verses of the first Chapter.

[f] I say almost, not altogether. 1. because the promises of the New Testament are in the Old, and those of the Old in the New; though the old hath them satis involutè, & in Typis, but the New revelate satis. 2. Because this Almost, serves to escape the foule errot of the Saduces (apud Hugonem Grotium de verit. Relig. Christ. pag. 64.) And of Servetus (apud Calvin. Instit. lib. 2. cap. 10. pag. 102. 105. & 172.) And of some other Pseudo-Theologues in these times, domi forsan & foras.

THE-

THEOLOGICALL QVESTIONS, DOGMATICAL OBSERVATIONS, AND EVANGELICALL ESSAYES, VPON THE GOSPEL OF OVR SAVIOVR CHRIST, ACCORDING TO S. MATTHEVV.

CHAPTER I.

VERSE 1.

The Booke of the generation of Iesus Christ, the sonne of David, the sonne of Abraham.

I Will (according to the method of our holy Evangelist) first speake a word or two of the Genealogie of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; his genealogie being registred; to let us see that Jesus is THE CHRIST: the agreement of the foure Evangelists doe greatly confirme the same. Two of the foure, viz. Saint Matthew, and Saint Luke record Christs genealogie unto us: hence a question ariseth.

Quest. 1. How can these two Evangelists bee reconciled, differing so much as they doe in this Genealogie? Answ. 1. I answer, They write and set downe the linage and descent of Christ diverso sed non adverso modo, diversely but not contrarily; whose diversity makes up the sweeter harmony: for where Saint Matthew reckons from the Fathers downeward; Saint Luke reckons from Answ. 2. the children upwards. I answer againe; the whole genealogie is divided into five Sections, reckoning as Saint Matthew doth from the Fathers to the children. 1 From Adam to Noah. 2. From Noah to Abraham. 3. From Abraham to David. 4. From David to Zorobabel. 5. From Zorobabel to Christ himselfe. In the first and second Saint Luke runnes alone, Saint Matthew not meddling with the Genealogie of Christ further then Abraham. In the third section from Abraham to David, Saint Matthew and Saint Luke goe together. In the fourth from David to Zorobabel they take different courses, for Saint Matthew descends from David by Solomon, but Saint Luke by Nathan, and both meet in Salathiel: where going on two steps together, they part againe, and the one takes his course from Zorobabel by Rhesa to Mary: the other from Zorobabel by Abia to Ioseph.

It will be questioned againe, How Saint Matthew and Saint Luke can agree in the last example, according to our Evangelist (verse 16.) and the first according to Saint Luke[g] Saint Matthew affirming Iosephs father to be Iacob; Saint Luke, Elie? I answer, Iacob was the naturall Father of Ioseph: Eli was the naturall Father of Mary, and so by the contract of those two, Eli was Iosephs Father in law[h]. Quest. 2. Answ.

[h] Eut. 1. l. 1. Can. 10.

It will be further questioned, why Saint Matthew and Saint Luke have both of them described the genealogie and linage of Ioseph, not of Mary. I answer first, for the convincing of the Jewes, to whom Saint Matthew wrote. Secondly, because Ioseph and Mary were contribules, both of one Tribe, and therefore it was all one whether of them were described; but of this more by and by. Quest. 3. Answ. 1. Answ. 2.

The Booke of the generation:] hence another question ariseth, Whether this bee the Title of the Booke or no? Answer, it is not the title of the Booke, but onely of the Catalogue expressed in the Chapter, to Gen. 5. 1. This is the Booke of the generations of Adam, &c. Quest. 4. Answ.

It will be hence demanded further, why doth Saint Matthew meddle at all with Genealogies, seeing Saint Paul forbids them? I answer, there is a double use of Genealogies: 1. First, a prophane use, for ostentation, pride, boasting, or ambition; and this the Jewes were too much addicted unto: and this is that which Saint Paul forbiddes; namely, a vaine pride, and glorying in their ancestors. 2. Secondly, there is a holy use of Genealogies, which is three fold. 1. For the observing of judiciall Lawes. 2. For the distinguishing of the Church from those that were without: and these second uses of genealogies belong not now unto us. 3. For the declaration or setting forth of the pedigree, race, or linage of the Messiah: and this continued Quest. 5. 1 Tim. 1 & Titus 3. Answer.

8 for and with us, and is that which Saint Matthew here intends, who fearing, least it should be thought that Christ were some obscure, or private, or secret person like Melchizedech, who was a Pater without Father or Mother, doth therefore shew forth unto us his generation, that wee might observe and know it to bee double, viz. First, naturall and knowne, comming from David by this line and descent. Secondly, divine and ineffable.

Quest. 6 Furthermore it will be asked, why Saint Luke proceeds unto Adam, and Matthew beginnes but at Abraham; seeing they both intend one and the same thing, viz. the genealogie of Christ

Answ. 1. according to his humanity? first some answer, that this was done to shew that Christ was given two manner of waies: to wit, first

For the Gentiles and for all men, and that in a double regard.
- First, by the sufficiency of that Redemption, which was wrought by Christ.
- Secondly, by a generall offer of conditional grace, which was made unto all.

Answ. 2. Secondly to the Godly onely, (the seede and children of Abrahams faith) by effectuall Redemption.

But I rather thinke the reason to bee this in short: Saint Matthewes chiefest regard in the reckoning up of this genealogie, was to move the Jewes to embrace the Gospel: and therefore hee beginnes with David in this verse, because then it was most common in the mouthes of all men, that the Messias should be the sonne of David: but Saint Luke (as testifies Eusebius *)

* Eccles. Hist. lib. 3. cap. 4. by birth a Gentile, borne in Antiochia, learned in Physicke, and now a Proselite, truely converted, doth write his Gospel to convert others: and therefore shewes to the comfort of all beleeving Gentiles, that Christ is a Saviour also unto them, even which are of the posterity of Adam: The promise of the Messias was tyed to the families of David, and Abraham † and therefore Matthew proving Christ to bee the sonne of David and Abraham according to the flesh needs goe no further: But Luke writes unto the Gentiles (for he was Pauls companion, who was the Apostle of the Gentiles) and therefore hee proceeds unto Adam the Father of all Nations.

Quest. 7 Answer. Againe, hence it will bee demanded; why is onely David and Abraham here named? I answer, because under these two were all the promises made and given, viz. First to Abraham, Gen. 12. 3. and 22. 18. Secondly, to David 2 Sam. 7. 12. 1 Chron. 17. Psal. 89. 37. Esa. 37. 35. and 53. 3. Ier. 13. 13. 22. 4 30. 23. 5.

Quest. 8. Lastly, one other question may hence be propounded, which is this; why is David set, or placed before Abraham (in this verse) Abraham being the eldest?

Answ. 1. I answer, First, because the promises made to David were more cleare and illustrious, and later; and therefore better knowne unto the people: as appeares by the blinde man, who cries unto Christ, thou sonne of David have mercie upon me: and so the common people call the Messias the sonne of David. Secondly, I answer, it is ordinarie with Historians to proceed from later things to more ancient: first, to relate those things that are freshest in our memories, and then goe one to those that are more remote from us. Lastly, I answer, The matter in hand, or the historie of the Genealogie of Christ, doth require that David should bee placed before Abraham: for the Catalogue of the persons is to bee drawne from the first to the last, or to begin with the eldest first, and so proceed downewards: and therefore being to begin with Abraham, as he doth vers. 2. hee first names David, then subjoynes Abraham, vers. 1. that so the second verse may depend immediatly upon the first. Thus much for the questions. One objection we have further to resolve. Saint Matthew making no mention at all in this his Genealogie, of the linage of the blessed virgin Mary, gives Salmeron the Jesuite occasion to alledge this place to prove, that the virgin Mary was without sinne at all: and that we should not consider her to have sprung from sinners, lest she should thereby have incurred the guilt of originall sinne from them: but wee must conceive of her, as the elect and gracious mother of Christ, and consequently exempted from all sinne: and for this cause (onely sayth he) she is described as Saint Paul describes Melchizedech, without Father or Mother, or genealogie; and as wee understand an other person (i. e. Christ) figured in Melchizedech: so the blessed Mother of Christ, must bee imagined to be without Father or Mother, that so wee may understand her to bee without the least staine of sinne. The Jesuites argument being something confused, we will draw it to this forme. Major. Whosoever is described without father or mother, or genealogie, is altogether voyd of sinne. Minor. But the blessed virgin Mary is such a one, described without father or mother, or genealogie. Therefore she is altogether voyd of sinne.

Answ. 3.

Object.

Answ. 1. First of all, we deny the Major or first proposition: for Melchizedech is described in Scripture, to be without father or mother, or generation: and yet neither Papists, nor any other, goe about to prove, that hee was free from all sinne.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee answer, that the confirmation and proofe of the Major is very ridiculous, Mary is described like Melchizedech, ἀγενεαλόγητος, without any genealogie, or generation; therefore as Melchizedech signifies Christ, so Mary was free from all staine of sinne: this is a Sequitur, à baculo ad angulum, as wee say in the Schooles.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Minor, or second proposition is false: Mary is not described like Melchizedech, ἀγενεαλόγητος; for his parents, none at any time, or any where, hath named in Scripture; yea, he is so obscurely brought in, that wee have no argument to prove, that hee was borne, but onely that generall argument, which is taken from the nature of man: But Mary was not onely borne after the nature of other men and women, but also her Genealogie is named in Scripture. For, I. First, she is called the Cosen of Elizabeth, from whence necessarily one genealogie must bee common to them both. II. Secondly, shee is shewed to bee the daughter of David and Abraham, because Christ was borne of her, vers. 20. and hee is sayd to bee the sonne of David and Abraham, vers. 1. And therefore the Genealogie of the Sonne, must needs appertaine unto the Mother. III. Thirdly, this same Genealogie, which is described both by Matthew and Luke, is both the Genealogie of Mary, and described for Maries sake, and not for Iosephs; because it is described to shew the descent and linage of Christ, who came not of Ioseph, but of Mary onely: and therefore if this Genealogie belong not unto her, it belongs not unto Christ [l].

Vers. 2. Observa. m Rom. 4. 19.

VERRS. 2. Abraham begat Isaac.] Isaac was a type of Christ in 3 things. First, in his nativitie, which was in a manner, and in nature almost impossible [m], Abrahams body being dead: so Christ was wonderfull in his birth. Secondly, in his obedience unto the death, making no resistance against his Father Abraham, Gen. 22. So Christ was also obedient to the stroake of death [n]. Thirdly, he was the sonne of promise, and the promised seed, Gen. 21. 12. and so was Christ, Gal. 3. 16.

Vers. 5. Quest. Sect. 1.

§. 1. VERS. 5. Boaz of Rahab.] It may here bee demanded, why in the Genealogie of our blessed Saviour, none of the holy women are reckoned up, but those onely whom the Scriptures doe taxe and reprehend as sinners?

Answ. 1.

I answer, this was done first of all, because Christ came into this world to save sinners, and to take away their sinnes. Sinners are reckoned up in his Genealogie, and he is sayd to be descended of them, because he descended frō heaven for them [o]. Christ for the comfort of poore penitent sinners, assumed that nature which once was sinfull, that he might separate it from sinne. Secondly, another reason, why they are reckoned up and named, and neither Sarah, nor Rebecca, is to represse the arrogancie of the Iewes, who glorie so much in their progenitors. Thirdly, o Hier. s.

Answ. 3.

and lastly, this is done to manifest Christs glory, in that hee tooke not any of his holinesse from his parents, or progenitors, they being wicked.

Sect. 2. Quest.

§. 1. VERS. 5. Salmon begat Boaz of Rahab: and Boaz Obed of Ruth.] Here it will bee questioned, to what end are these set downe, for they seeme not pertinent to the matter in hand.

Answ.

I answer, These things are not in vaine set downe, but for our instruction, teaching these three things unto us. First, Rahab was an harlot, and yet her husband took her unto himselfe, although shee was such: so Christ hath married himselfe unto the Gentiles, who were spirituall fornicators, through sinne [p]. Secondly, Ruth was a stranger, and very poore, yet Boaz did not despise her for her povertie, nor abhorre her for the wickednesse of her Countrey: no more doth Christ despise us, being most poore and beggarly, through the want of goodnesse, and worthy to bee abhorred for the wickednesse of our lives. Thirdly, to teach us, that as Ruth left her countrey, and her fathers house, and all her kindred, and then was ennobled by this marriage: so wee must likewise leave our old Conversation, that so we may bee bee joyned in marriage unto Christ. Psal. 45. 10. VERS. 8. Ioram begat Ozias.] From these words divers doubts arise. First, what manner of succession this was? For Ioram did not beget Ozias.

Vers. 8. Quest. 1.

Answ.

I answer, t'is true, Ioram did not beget him; but yet Ozias came from him, as appeares thus. I. Ioram had many brethren, as we may finde, 2. Chron. 21. 2. but them hee slew, vers. 4. II. Ioram had also many children; but the Æthiopians slew them all, as wee read, 2. 2 Chron. 21. 17. and 22. 2. excepting one, which is called Iehoahaz, 2. Chron. 21. 17. but Ahazias, and Azariah, 2. Chron. 22. 1. 6. 7. III. The children of Iorams children were slain by Iehu, 2. Chro. 22. 8. even 42. persons, 2. King. 10. 13. IV. Ahazias had many children, 2. King. 10. 13. who (their father being slaine by Iehu) were all slaine by their mother Athaliah, 2. Chron. 22. 10. except only Ioas, vers. 11. whom Iehoiada crownes, 2. Chron. 23. 1. &c. V. Ioas had a sonne called Amaziah, 2. Chron. 24. 27. VI. Amaziah had a sonne whose name was Vziah, or our Ozias (mentioned in this verse) 2. Chron. 26. 1. And thus we see, that although Ozias was not the immediate sonne of Ioram, yet hee was of his linage, and descended from him, as appeares plainly by that which hath been sayd, but more briefly by the Margent [r].

r Ioram: whose son was Ahazias, whose sonne was Ioas, whose sonne was Amaziah, whose son was Ozias

Quest. 2

Secondly, it will be sayd, Was not Ioas, the Grandfather of Ozias, the sonne of Nathan? for so it is generally thought: and if so, then he came not from Ioram, as is affirmed by the former question: but he was the legall sonne onely, and came from Nathan, and not the naturall sonne of Ahaziah, of the stocke of Salomon?

Answ.

I answer, It hath been affirmed by divers, that Ioas was the sonne of Nathan, but without any solid ground at all: And the contrary (that Ioas was the naturall sonne of Ahazias) doth evidently appeare from these places, which I perswade my reader to observe, 2. King. 11. 2. and 13. 1. and 14. 13. 1. Chron. 3. 11. and 2. Chron. 23. 11. and 23. 3.

Quest. 3.

It may yet from hence further bee questioned, Why Saint Matthew here omits these three Kings, Ahazias, Ioas, Amaziah, seeing they came betweene Ioram and Ozias? and why he omits these three rather than others?

Answ. 1.

First, hereunto some say, because these three descended from the cursed family of Ahab, whose posteritie God commands Iehu to destroy.

Answ. 2.

Secondly, others [s] rather thinke fit to give over the Quare, and leave it as a secret, than to dive into it.

Answ. 3.

Thirdly, although it bee true, that the Lord may doe what he please, and need not give an account of his actions unto man, yet he doth nothing but for some good and just cause: and in these Historicall relations gives us leave with modestie to enquire after those things, that at first view seeme to bee obscure and secret: and therefore (I hope without offending in this 10 kind, viz. to dive into the depths that onely the Lord can sound) foure reasons may bee given why these three, and only these three are here omitted.

The first is, because S. Matthew for the helpe of memory hath propounded to reckon up 3 series, or orders of the progenitors of Christ, every one of them consisting of 14. persons, as in the 17. verse of this chapter: and for this cause he is enforced to omit many.

The second reason is this, because the Evangelist would not so precisely stick, or inhere in the enumeration of Christs forefathers, but hastens unto the maine scope hee hath propounded unto himself, and that is the demonstration of Christ, not those from whom hee came, according to the flesh, any further, than the matter in hand necessarily requires.

The third reason may bee this; the series of Christs progenitors from Ioram to Ozias, might easily be knowne by the simplest, from those plaine places of Scripture, cited before, quæst. 1. and therefore the Evangelist troubles not himselfe to reckon them up.

The last reason why hee omits these 3 Kings, rather than others, is for these causes. I. First, because the kingdomes were wickedly governed under them, and therefore they were not thought worthy to be named. II. Because these 3. were most miserably killed: and thus S. Iohn Apoc. 7. 5. 6. 7. 8. doth not reckon up the tribe of Dan amongst the tribes of Israel, for her singular, and exquisite impietie.

Vers. 11. VERS. 11. Iosias begat Iecontas and his brethren, about the time, they were carried away into Babylon.]

Obiect. 1. It may here be objected, Iosias was not the Father of Iecontah, but his Grandfather. Secondly,

2. Iosias begot not these sons, Iecontah and his bre-

Answ. 1. thren, in the Captivitie, but before: I will joyne these two doubts together, in the resolving of them. Firsts some answer hereunto, that Iosias begat Iecontas and his brethren, inregard onely of a legall succession, because they succeeded him. I. Iohaas succeeded, whom the King of Egypt carried captive. II. Ioiachim, whom the King of Babylon carried away. III. His sonne Ioiachim, who in like maner was captivated by the King of Babylon: and these were they, against whom the Prophet Ieremie denounceth all his threatnings, Ier. 22. 18. &c. IV. Zedechias the sonne of Iosias.

Answ. 2. Henry Stephen (although Beza attribute it to Robert Stephen, Beza f.) thinking that the Father Ioiachim was here omitted, amends it thus, Iosias begat Ioachim, & Ioachim begat Iechonias and his brethren: But this correction is not to be allowed; for first, knots must not bee cut, when they should be untied, wee must not adde or diminish from the Scriptures, when woe cannot reconcile them. Secondly, no Greeke examples or copies, have it thus, and therefore no such addition is to be permitted. Thirdly, Iecontas had onely one brother, viz. Zedechias the yonger, and therefore by Brethren (in this verse) is not to bee understood the immediate naturall brethren of Iechonias. I answer therefore (with Beza and Hier f.) that there was a double Iecontas, to wit, the father Ioiachim, and also the sonne Ioiachin, who were both so called, (it being ordinarie with the Hebrewes, to have two names, and sometimes tearmed by the one, and sometimes by the other) and of the father it is here sayd, Iosias begat Iecontah (that is Ioiachim) together with his brethren. Now the brethren he had were three, viz. Ioahas, Shallum, and Mattanias, or Zedechias (although some there be, that conjecture Ioahas and Shallum to be one and the same.) But against this, it will bee objected, how then it is sayd, that Iosias begat them in the Babylonian captivitie? I answer first, Bab is put for Lamah, i.e. about the time of the captivitie. Against, the Captivitie is to be referred unto the sonnes, not unto Iosias, i. e. these words in the Text, ἐπὶ τῆς μετοικεσίας, in the captivitie, are not to be referred to the word ἐγέννησεν, begot, but unto the children which hee begot, in whose time a threefold successive captivity came to passe under their Kings. 1. Vnder Iechonias the father, whom the Hebrewes call Ioiachim (as Hieronie sayth by H and K, for as others Ioiaqim by Q. II. Vnder Iecontas the sonne, whom the Hebrewes call Ioiachin, by Ch. and N. III. Vnder Zedechias, who reigning, the carrying into captivitie, was consummate, & finished: which transportation Saint Matthew here remembers, as though it were but one alone: so that the meaning is not, that Iosias in the Babylonian captivity begot the children, for being prevented by death, long before the Captivity he could not: But that his posteritie was brought into that Babylonian exile: for the words are to be read thus Iosias begat Iecontas & his brethren, τὴν ἐπὶ τῆς μετοικεσίας, i.e. who were in the time of the transportation into Babylon: And thus in the 17. verse of this Chapter the same wordes signifie, Terminum, non temporis durationem.

V. 12. Iechoniah begat Salathiel,] this Salathiel is called elsewhere Shealtiel, and he is conceived to bee the common terme of the stocke of Salomon and Nathan: for whereas hee is called the sonne of Iecontah[a], wee must understand it not, to bee his sonne by nature, because hee had no sonne that reigned after him[x], but his legall sonne, hee being of the stocke of Nathan[y]. And thus these two places are reconciled, to wit, Ierem. 22. 30. and this verse: the first speaking of a naturall sonne, the other of a legall[z]. It will here bee objected. Salathiel Luke 3. 27. is called the sonne of Neri: but in this verse, of Iecontas. Answer. Hee was the naturall sonne of Neri, and the legall sonne of Iecontah: so called, because hee succeeded him in the kingdome: And thus in the genealogie of Christ, Luke followes the naturall order, and Matthew the Legall. See Parens upon this verse, where this question is further prosecuted.

VERS. 13. 14. 15. And Abiud begat Eliachim, and he Azor, and he Sadoc, and he Achim, and hee Eliud, and he Eleazar, and he Matthan, and hee Iacob, Vers. 13, 14, 15. Obiect.

Iacob.] The Papists object these verses for their humane traditions thus. The Evangelists (both Matthew in these verses, and Luk. 3.) name many of Christs progenitors, whose names are not found in the Old Testament, but are borrowed onely from Tradition: and therefore Traditions besides the Scriptures, are to bee allowed. Answ. 1. I answer hereunto first, that although some names in the genealogie of Christ, be not in Scripture, yet it follows not hence, that the Evangelists had them from humane tradition, but from the dictating of the Spirit of God, who did inspire them, when they wrot these books. Answ. 2. Secondly, without the knowledge of these names, our faith may be safe, it not being absolutely necessarie unto salvation, to know directly & successively the line, race, and linage of Christ: and therefore this will prove but a sandie foundation unto the Papists, to build those their Traditions upon, which concerne (as they say) our faith unto salvation. Answ. 3. Thirdly, because it is requisite for the confirmation of our faith, after the comming of Christ, to know him certainly to be the son of Abraham and David; therefore this genealogie is written, and that in Scripture, that we may know it, and beleeve it; and therefore the Papists are not to obtrude any Tradition upon us, but such as are in the Scriptures, as the forenamed examples are; for we beleeve that Christ came of these, and although wee know not, from what histories or authors the Evangelists were taught it: yet now, because it is taught unto us by an Evangelist (who in the writing hereof was directed by an infallible spirit of truth) we therefore confidently assent unto it.

Vers. 16. VERS. 16. Of whom was borne Iesus.] If any Sect. 1. judicious reader desire to know the derivation Tract. 6 f. or reason of this name (Iesus) which is given to 623, 624. the true Messias, let him reade Illyricus de nomine Iesu, where hee shall finde it confirmed by eight reasons, that Jesus comes from the verbe יָשַׁע Iascha to Save: and is the same with Iehoshua a Saviour: where also divers arguments are confuted, by which Osiander would prove, that Jesus comes from Iehovah, or from Iehoschuh.

Sect. 2. §. 2. VERS. 16. Iacob begat Ioseph the husband Quest. 1. of Mary.] Concerning these two holy persons, Ioseph and Mary, much might be spoken, but I will onely observe a word or two. First it may Answ. bee inquired, what they were? I answer, they were one thing jure, another re, one thing by right of inheritance, another by present condition: By right they were successors of the Kingdome of Israel, as is proved by many writers: but for the present, they were poore, he being a Carpenter, and she but meane in regard of temporal possessions, and her present condition. Hence it will be questioned againe, Quest. 2. Why doth God permit the righteous to bee deprived of their right, and to bee brought into Answ. misery and poverty, and want? I answer, that the Lord doth it for many causes. First, because thus God will prove and trye them. Heb. 12. 3, 4. Secondly, because worldly abundance and plenty is not so fit or convenient for them, as shall afterwards be shewed. Thirdly, that he may crowne them with future blessings more abundantly: thus Iob was robbed, and Abraham was to forsake all, that the Lord might double all their losses unto them. Fourthly, God hereby would let us see, how carefull hee is of us, when wee are in neede, either by comforting of us in our affliction, or by avenging himselfe upon those that injure us, or by giving us contented hearts willing to endure, or undergoe whatsoever our God layes upon us: And this last was fulfilled in Ioseph, who although that hee were a great Heire, yet hee was contented with his poore, lowe, and present condition, being herein a patterne and president unto us, that as hee (which was supposed to bee the father of Christ, and was indeede the right Heire unto the kingdome of Israel) was content with that lot of the things of this life, which God alotted and measured forth unto him: so all they, that suppose themselves to bee the children of Christ, and are indeed Heires of the kingdome Observa. of heaven, should bee willingly, and cheerefully contented with their present condition, although they bee brought from riches to povetty, from the throne to the dunghill, and from ruling a Septer, to handle a saw (as Ioseph was) to maintaine life. Hic labor, hoc opus est, this is Quest. 3. (will some say) durus sermo, a very had taske, because in this regard it is hard to descend, and a bitter thing to be brought from plenty to poverty, from honour to a low estate, and therfore how or wherby may we be strengthened thus to submit our selves, to what estate or condition soever the Lord shal call us unto, with this contentednesse of minde, that was in holy Ioseph, & blessed Mary? I answer. Cõtentation is to be cor- Answ. roborated by these medisations. First remember, if thou have victum & amictum, food & rayment, thou hast enough, and therefore having that, be b 1 Tim. contented b. Secondly, remember this is the 6. 8. worke of God: art thou from plenty brought to poverty with Iob, this is Gods work: or art thou brought from a high estate to a low, as Ioseph here? remember the Lord hath a hand in it, and therefore murmure not against him, but rather be contented. Thirdly, remember God tries thee hereby, (as he did Iob) to see whether thou wilt serve him in adversitie, when hee crosseth thee, as well as in prosperitie, when hee blesseth thee, as did Iob: and therefore bee content, and patient, and quit thy selfe, like a man. Fourthly, remember all the children of God are made partakers of some affliction or other, either in body or minde, or estate, or children, or friends, or good name; and therefore bee thou contented with thy crosse whatsoever it bee. Solamen miseris, semper habere pares: thou art no worse than others, yea, thou hast many copartners in misery, and therefore thou mayst beare thy burthen the more cheerfully. Fifthly, remember, if thou be crossed and afflicted in tempotall things, it is an argument of thy filiation or adoption into the fellowship of sonnes: they being bastards, and no sonnes that are are afflicted with no stripes, Heb. 12. 8. And therfore thou shouldst rejoyce when 12 thou art afflicted; much more be content with it. Sixtly, remember, the way unto heaven and glory, is by poverty, adversity, sicknesse, patient enduring of wrongs, injuries, losses, crosses, and the like: and therefore (these things considered) there is great reason to bee content with our condition, although wee bee brought with Ioseph, from heires apparent of a Crowne, to poore handy-craftsmen.

Quest. 1. Here it may be demanded, why is the genealogie of Ioseph here declared, Christ being not borne of him, but onely supposed so to be? This question is urged by all the Jewes and Pagans, against this our Evangelist, as unanswerable, arguing thus; either Jesus was the naturall Son of Ioseph (that is naturally begotten by him) and then he is not God (for whatsoever is borne of the flesh, is flesh: [e] Ioh. 3.6. or else, Christ is not the naturall sonne of Ioseph, and then Iosephs genealogie doth neither appertaine unto Christ, nor at all prove Christ to be the Sonne of God.

Answ. 1. Hereunto it is answered commonly (by the Christians) thus; although Ioseph were onely the supposed Father of Christ, and not the naturall, yet Iosephs genealogie doth prove Jesus to be the sonne of David; because Mary also was of the same Tribe of Iudah, and family of David: This they prove thus; Ioseph was a just man, and one that feared the Lord, and therefore marries one of his owne Tribe and family according to the Law; [d] Numb. 36.8,9. every daughter that possesseth an inheritance, in any tribe of the Children of Israel, shall bee wife unto one of the family of the Tribe of her Father, &c. If this probation were solide, the whole argument were solved: but I finde, that this law is not universall, but limited and restrained, pertaining onely to those daughters, who were left alone in their family, together with their fathers inheritance (as were the [e] Num. 26. 33. & 27. 7. and 36. 2,6. daughters of Zelaphead: and therefore before this probation will be allowed, it must first bee proved that Mary the B. Virgin was such a one, left alone in her family with her Fathers inheritance: which cannot be proved from scripture; but rather the contrary, that her condition was poore and meane, and low in regard of temporall possessions: And therefore seeing this answer doth not satisfie; nor solve the doubt, we will produce another from the Scriptures.

Answ. 2. Saint Matthew here doth plainely demonstrate two things. First, that Jesus was not begotten by Ioseph, but borne of Mary (verse 18. before Ioseph and Mary came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost.) Secondly, that Jesus was the sonne of David and Abraham, verse. 1. and therefore Jesus of necessity must bee the sonne of David, either by Father or Mother. i. e. Ioseph or Mary: but not by his Father Ioseph (as is shewed, from verse 18.) but by his Mother, who therefore must needs bee the daughter of David. Againe, Luke 1. 31. the Angel sent unto the Virgin Mary, doth call Jesus (the child that is to be borne of her,) the sonne of David; but David was not the Father of Jesus by Ioseph, but by Mary: and therefore Mary was the daughter of David. So also in divers other places of Scripture, Christ is called the sonne of David, and of the seede of David: [f] Rom. 1.3. and 2 Tim. 2. 8. and Apoc 22. 16. which he could not be, but by the Mother: And thus these places doe firmely prove, that Ioseph and Mary were both of the same Tribe, and family of David.

But here another question doth arise, If it bee thus, that Christ is not the sonne of Ioseph, why then doth not the Evangelist here rather reckon up the genealogie of Mary, then of Ioseph. To this first some answer, that Saint Matthew doth this ex opinione vulgi, because hee would observe that common opinion, that was of Christ, to wit, that he was the sonne of Ioseph: but this is false, for verse 18. hee testifyes that Ioseph was not his Father, but that shee was found with child of the Holy Ghost, before Ioseph and shee came together. I answer therefore, the cause undoubtedly was this; Saint Matthew was a Jew, and herein observes the custome of the Hebrewes, who reckoned or recorded onely the genealogie of men not of women.

§ 4. VERSE 16. The husband of Mary.] Sect. 4. Concerning the B. Virgin, I will here say nothing, saving onely this, that the Papists say too much; striving manibus pedibusque, with tooth and naile, to prove that shee was without originall sinne: the arguments whereby they endeavour to prove it, I shall (God enabling mee) consider of in their due place: I will here onely produce one example, they bring to prove it, whereof I will say no more but this, recitare est confutare, it needes no better Argument to confute it, then barely to cite it. Baralet to prove the Virgin to bee without sinne, telleth us this story (si credere fas est) that there was one M^r. Alexander Niccham, who having given it out three sundry times, that hee would prove that shee was conceived in sinne, was prevented by sicknesse, so that he could not performe his promise; but afterwards renewing his purpose, the night, before hee was to prove his assertion hee fell into a great disease: and in his agonie calling upon the B. Virgin, shee came presently unto him, and said, hanc infirmitatem pateris pro eo, quod; me esse conceptam in peccato originali, probare niteris, i. e. this punishment is inflicted upon thee, because thou wentst about to prove, that I was conceived in originall sinne: and having so said, tooke a knife, and therewith cut out a peece of rotten flesh out of his side, and with a needle, and a silke thread sewed it up againe, whereupon he did not onely renounce that damnable opinion, but wrote a great booke, for the confirmation of the contrary.

§ 4. VERS. 18. Now the birth of Iesus Christ was on this wise; when as his Mother Mary was espoused unto Ioseph (before they came together) she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. Vers. 18. Sect. 1.

Quest. 1. The first and maine question here will bee this; Why the Lord would have the blessed virgin espoused unto Ioseph? I answer. First, for the honour of Matrimony: the patronage of wedlocke doth take away the infamy of whoredome, teaching us, that honourable marriage is to bee preferred before dishonourable whoredomes: and that for those causes, First, because adultery and fornication are forbidden (by God) unto all men, of all times, in all places, and is allowed unto none at any time, or upon any occasion. Secondly, because God hath commanded Matrimony, and hath given and granted it unto man, as a remedy against uncleane fornications. Secondly, some answer, that this was done, that the Divell might not know Christ, [h] lest that hee should plot or practise some mischiefe, either against the blessed virgin, or her more blessed infant. This answer Parens (upon these words) doth justly reject, upon these two grounds. I. Because there is no probabilitie, that those things which the Angel had openly revealed to Ioseph and Mary, should bee concealed from the Divell. And II. Because from the very nativitie of Christ, the Divell begun to lay a thousand traines for the destruction of Christ, both by Herod and the Jewes. A third answer therefor is given, viz. That this was done for these ends. I. First, that there might bee one, who should provide and take care for the flight of the infant, when Herod should by crueltie seeke his life [i]. II. Secondly, that there might bee one, who should take care for the education and nourishing of Christ, in providing for him whatsoever was needfull in regard of his humanitie. III. Thirdly, that the blessed Virgin might have one, from whom she might receive both comfort and ayd, in the time of Christs infancie. A fourth answer is brought, [k] which is, That Mary might have a domesticall witnesse of her immaculate virginitie: for none was better able to testifie her chastitie, than Ioseph. It is answered againe, [l] Mary was espoused to Ioseph, that by his genealogie (to whom Mary was allied) the originall also, or progenitors of Mary, might the better be demonstrated.

Answ.6. Lastly, I answer. This was done for the avoyding of a threefold mischiefe, or inconvenience, that might otherwise have ensued, to wit: First, lest the Jewes should take occasion to reject Christ, because he was borne out of marriage: and consequently blasphemously esteeme him the fruit of a polluted bed [m]. Secondly, for the avoyding of death, which was allotted by the Law unto such [n]. Hier. f. Thirdly, to avoyd infamie, if shee had not beene betrothed unto a husband, she would have incurred the name of a harlot: teaching us carefully to avoyd every occasion of infamie [o].

Obſerv. 2. But hence a question is considerable; Why should wee bee thus carefull of our credit and good name, doth it not savour too much of vaine ostentation? I answer, we should carefully regard our credit: first, because our owne conscience is more confirmed thereby. Secondly, because our brethren are benefited by our good example, our unreproveable lives being as a candle in a darke place, usefull for the directing and encouraging of them in the trade of vertue. Thirdly, because the Gospel is either honoured or dishonoured by us, that is, if our lives be unblameable, we adorne our profession, and honour the Gospell; but if infamous, wee are a dishonour and a scandall unto it, which wee should be very fearfull of: and therefore very carefull to preserve a good name amongst all, which is as a precious ointment.

Quest. 3. Hence another question will bee demanded; How is a good name or fame to be sought for? Answ. I answer. Fame is either evill or good. I. First, there is an evill fame, which is two-fold, viz. first with evill men, who seeke fame, malè agendo, by wicked workes, as Herostratus burned the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, to get a perpetuall fame: and some also, by drinking others under the table, or by patronage of wicked men. Secondly, with good men, who defend often that which is amisse, and excuse all their imperfections, lest otherwise it should tend to their disgrace; both these are ordinarie, but neither of them good: and therefore Fame is not thus to be sought for. II. There is a good Fame, which is likewise two-fold: first, bonum faciendo, when a man gets a good name, by doing that which is good. Secondly, offensionem cavendo, by avoyding and shunning all occasions of evill: a man gets a good name, by carefully avoyding all evill, and eschewing giving of offence unto all. Now offences arise three manner of wayes. First, malo agendo, by doing that which is evill: and therefore he that covets Fame, must onely employ himselfe in good actions. Secondly, dubia agendo, by doubtfull actions, which may justly bee suspected: and therefore he that desires a good report among men, must eschew all appearance of evill, 1. Thess. 5. 22. that is, all those actions which are of evill report, or may be ill interpreted. Thirdly, bona agendo, sed non cum cautelâ, by doing that which is good for the matter of it, but undiscreetly for the manner of it: and therefore unto a good name are required good actions, performed with prudence and discretion. And by these wayes it is lawfull to acquire fame.

Sect. 2. Obiect. 1. When Mary was espoused.] The Papists doe from this verse maintaine, that Mary the blessed virgin, was not onely a virgin, when shee was espoused unto Ioseph, and continued so all her life time after: (for this we willingly grant) but also that shee vowed or purposed virginitie, before the message of the Angell was brought unto her: and from her example ground their opinion of votaries, or vowes of chastitie, or abstinence from marriage.

Answ. But this assertion is rashly, without Scripture, nay rather against it, affirmed: for the Text is plaine, that they had a purpose to consummate their marriage, from these words: When Mary was betrothed to Ioseph, before they came together: therefore there was a meaning to come together, if shee had not in the meane time beene found to bee with childe of the holy Ghost: for otherwise it would seeme to have been a mockery on Maries part, or behalfe, to promise marriage to Ioseph without any purpose to performe the dutie of marriage. And if it were done with both their consents, then mocked 14 they with God, who instituted marriage for some end and purpose, which could not bee attained out of marriage: for if there had beene a vow of continencie upon them, they should neither have married for avoiding of fornication, which are the two chiefe ends of marriage: as for the third, which is mutuall comfort, it ariseth of the former. Bellarmine (li. 2. de Monach. Cap. 22.) answereth hereunto, that Maries vow was no hindrance to their marriage, because shee knew by revelation, that Ioseph would not exact marriage duties of her.

Answ. 1. To this wee answer first, That this is spoken without booke, a conceit of their owne, having no warrant, nor confirmation from Scripture.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Peter Lombard (li. 4. distinct. 30. b.) thinketh that Ioseph also had purposed virginitie, which if so, then it was a mocking of the ordinance.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the opinion is so unwarrantable, that the opinionists cannot agree among themselves, for Thomas Aquinas thinkes, that Mary made not an absolute vow, before her espousall; but Scotus affirmeth, she did.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it is not likely that Mary had any such revelation before her espousall (as they affirm) because the Angels salutation and message (which hee brought after her contract) was so strange and rare. p p Luke 1. 28.

Sect. 3. Quest. §. 3. Before they came together.] What is meant by this Comming together?

Answ. 1. I answer, first (with Calvin) this may bee understood of cohabitation, or dwelling together.

Answ. 2. Secondly, or (with Muscul. Erasm. Gualt.) de Coitu, of Wedlocke duties.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, or of both, which I rather imagine: and therefore there is a double error to be avoyded and reproved. 1. Of those who thinke, that the Virgin Mary was married unto Ioseph long before, but as yet was not knowne carnally of him, because they abstained by a mutuall vow, as the Papists thinke. (Sup. §. 2.) 2. Of those who thinke Ioseph not as yet carnally to have knowne her, but afterwards did. Both these are to be exploded, because the Holy Ghost speakes of the time { By-past, that as yet Mary was not conjoyned unto Ioseph, either by cohabitation, or copulation. / Not to come, as though hee did know her afterwards: But of this afterwards. verse 25.

Sect. 4. Quest. § 4. Shee was found with Child.] It may here be questioned, who it was that found Mary to be with child?

Answ. 1. I answer, First, Mary her selfe, who presently after the Angels message unto her, Luke 1. 31. perceived a strange motion, and a conception within her, as women doe, when they first quicken.

Answ. 2. Secondly, her parents in whose house, and under whose custody shee as yet remained, and unto whom (it is probable) she declared the Angels message: they also perceive her to bee with child.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Ioseph also her husband perceived it; and that either first by himselfe, observing her wombe to swell greater: or secondly from the common fame of others, who had observed it: or thirdly, by her parents, who had declared it unto him: or fourthly, by the B. Virgin her selfe who revealed it to her husband.

Vers. 19. Sect. 1. § 1. VER. 19. Then Ioseph her husband being a iust man, and not willing to make her a publike example, was minded to put her away privily. Hence it may first be demanded; Quest. § 1. Why is Iosephs righteousnesse here made mention of?

Answ. I answer, because this newes gored him with a Dilemma: hee was (as it were) betwixt the Bulls hornes, and knew not which way to leane: hee was in a Straight, or Labyrinth, that he knew not how to winde himselfe out of: and in a Maze, that he scarce knew how to tread: for first, he was just, and therefore hee will not { Not punish sinne; Justice requireth, that sinne should be punished. / Receive an adulterous wife, such as he conceived her to be.

for although hee were righteous, yet hee hated this wrong in her, adultery being odious to the best men.

Secondly, he was mercifull, and therefore he would not be so extreame unto her, or rigorous towards her, as to make her a publike example.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Was minded to put her away privily.] Here two things are observable; First the place in this verse used, not willing to make her a publike example; that is so publikely to punish her, that she might be an example unto others: but this I passe by. Secondly, the thing it selfe; he desires to spare her, and not at all to inflict any punishment upon her: and hence a double question springs up.

Quest. 1. Why would not Ioseph punish her?

Answ. 1. Some say, because he was no Magistrate; this answer I adhere not unto, because private persons may informe though not punish: yea they are (as it were) the eyes of the Magistrate, and therefore should informe, when any grosse enormities are committed.

Answ. 2. I answer therefore, this was done, because of that conjugall love, that he bare towards her.

Answ. 3. Againe, because of the fame, and rare estimation, she had among all, for her unblameable by-past lyfe.

Answ. 4. Lastly, because it was a private fault: and therefore he would not publikely shame her.

Quest. 2. It will bee hence demanded againe, how was Ioseph a just and upright man, when hee would not μεσῳ μωμαι make an adultrous wife a publike example, seeing the law condemned her; and it is the part of a righteous man, to observe the law?

Answ. 1. To this first I answer; he suspected her to be an adultresse, but he was not sure of it, and therefore being a Iust man, he would not bee too rash in punishing. Answ. 2. Secondly, the law of charity commands us to cover a multitude of secret sinnes in our our brethren: and such this offence was, or seemed to bee; for indeede it was no sinne of uncleanenesse which the innocent and immaculate Virgin had committed, which was the cause of this suspition in Ioseph: but hee so conceived of it, and therefore her fault not being as yet publikely divulged, hee would not make her a publike example.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, a just man is not one, that is indued with universall Justice, but one which loves those things, which are honest and right: And thus Ioseph was a righteous man, loving in himselfe, and in others that which was good, and hating that which was evill, although hee did not punish this fault according to the tenor of the law: for justice is not contrary unto equity, neither doth alwaies perswade to use the utmost rigor of the law; and therefore Ioseph might be a just man, and yet shew this mercy, hee did unto Mary.

Vers. 20. Sect. 1. §1. VERS. 20. But while he thought on these things, behold the Angell of the Lord appeared unto him in a dreame, saying; Ioseph, thou sonne of David, feare not to take unto thee Mary thy wife, for that which is conceived of her, is of the Holy Ghost.

While he thought on these things.] That is pondered them with himselfe.

Quest. 1. First, It may hence be demanded, what manner of reasoning was this that Ioseph had within himselfe?

Answ. I answer, his thoughts were these. 1. That it might be, shee was defiled, before her espousall unto him, and then she was to be married to the former party that had knowne her: and therefore he thought to have dismissed her, but clam sine clamore, privily, without making any word of it. Or 2. he thought, that it might bee shee was defiled, after shee was contracted unto him: but this thought hee presently recalles, charity not being suspicious; rather beleeving that shee was seduced, when shee was a maide, then when shee was a wife, rather simple fornication then adultery, and therefore will secretly put her away. 3. he thinkes with himselfe, that though it should be so, that shee had played the adulteresse, yet he resolves that another shall punish her, and not hee: for, for his part (if it bee so as hee suspects) hee will neither frize her nor persecute her: he will neither excuse nor accuse her: he will neither justifie nor condemne her. And thus before he will determine any thing, or Observa. execute any thing, he doth reason, & debate the matter long with himselfe: teaching us hereby, that in every weighty action wee undertake, it is good to deliberate, and take counsell with our selves.

Quest. 2. Hence, it may likewise bee demanded, why doth Ioseph, or should wee thus deliberate of our Answ. actions, before they are effected or performed?

I answer, for these causes; First because God hath endued us with understanding, to direct us, and our actions thereby; sudden actions proceede from affection, not from judgement: and therefore wee should lay our hands upon our hearts, before we doe any thing of moment.

Secondly, because rashnesse is a forerunner of sorrow and punishment: the people of Israel rashly goe up to the hill top, and are discomfited by the Amalekites[q]. Nabal answers Davids servants inconsiderately: which had likely to have occasioned the ruine both of him and his.[r] Roboboam, unadvisedly (or at least not well advised) answers Ieroboam and the Israelites; wherefore ten Tribes revolt from him[s]. Thus wee see all these were punished for want of due and mature deliberation in their actions: and so the Lord threatens that he will scatter Israel, Because they are a nation voide of counsell, neither is there any understanding in them[t]. Thirdly, because at the least the fruit of rashnesse is repentance, as it was in Davids inconsiderate numbring of the people[u]: and Peters denying of his Master[x]. Hence a third demand may be made; whether deliberation and delay, or procrastination, be all one? and if not, how they differ. Quest. 3.

They differ thus, First, deliberation is before resolution, delay or cunctation is after resolution is fixed. Answ.

Secondly, deliberation is an act of reason contrary to affection: delay is is an act of the affection contrary unto our knowledge: and therefore Abraham will not be overcome by affection[y]: nor Paul consult with flesh and blood[z]: lest that affection had procured delay: And thus Ioseph deliberates against his love unto Mary, what to doe in this case with her, and unto her; and after this deliberation, without any further deferring had thought, privily to put her away. verse 19. Had he not beene forewarned the contrary by the Angell, in this verse.

Hence a further doubt may be raised: If all they doe well, that consult and take counsell before they execute their actions? Quest. 4.

I answer, No: for proofe hereof, observe that there are divers sorts of men very faulty in those things, that are undertaken. First of all, some consult not at all, concerning that which they have in hand: as David towards Nabal[a], and towards Ziba[b]; These are rash persons. Secondly, some consult weakely and childishly of their actions, as Roboboam[c], and Nabal[d]; these are foolish persons. Thirdly, some consults with reason, but captivated by affection, thus David toward Absolom[e]; these are weake persons, being overswayed by affection, not directed by judgement. Fourthly, some consult with reason not subjected unto religion; thus did Pharaoh[f], and Ieroboam[g]; These are wicked persons: and all these foure sorts either erre for want of consultation, or through weake and wicked consultation. Fiftly, some cosult, but are not able to understand, or finde out that which they desire: and although they use all endeavors, yet cannot penetrate into those things which are hid from them: thus did David[h], and of this Paul forewarned us[i], because herein we are alwaies in danger to erre, either by thinking amisse: and such was Iosephs consultation, who had, notwithstanding all his deliberation, punished an innocent person, if by the Angel hee had not beene admonished to the contrary, in this verse. Answ.

16 §. 2. The Angell of the Lord appeared unto him in a dreame.]

Sect. 2. Quest. It may here bee asked, Is any faith, beleefe, or credit to be given to dreames?

Answ. 1. I answer first, sometimes dreames are messengers from God, according to his promise; your young men shall dreame dreames[t]: and wee have many instances of such dreames, as for example, Ioseph. Gen. 37. Pharaohs baker. Gen. 40. Pharaoh himselfe. Gen. 41. and Ioseph in this verse.

t Ioel 2. 28. Act. 2. 17.

Answ. 2. Now these dreames are to be beleeved. Secondly, dreames in times past were more ordinary[l], but the light of the Gospel hath now dispersed and expelled them; signes belonging to unbeelevers. Thirdly, Dreames now are alwaies doubtfull, and therefore not lightly to be credited nor taken notice of: for the confirmation of this answer, observe some make a sixefold originall of dreames[l] thus: every dreame is either first, Naturall, or secondly Spirituall, or thirdly Diabolicall.

l 1. Sam. 28. 6. 15. Answ. 3. m Greg. Moral. 8. ſ. Iob. 7.

Naturall dreames either proceede from causes:
- Internall, to wit either:
  - From the temper or temperature of the body: as fulnesse, emptinesse, or some change wrought in the humors of the body by sickenesse. This the first cause. Or,
  - From abundance or diversity of thoughts: as when our friend is absent, wee dreame that hee is dead, or returned, or the like. This is the second cause.
- Externall, proceeding from abundance of imployments. This is the third cause.

n Eccles. 5. 2.

Spirituall dreames are divine admonitions, and are of two sorts, either:
- Simply divine, as this Dreame of Iosephs, which was a divine admonition meerely from the Lord. This is the fourth cause. Or
- Mixtly divine: that is when our dreames are spirituall, but mixed with some thoughts of our owne[o]. This is the fift cause.

o Iob. 7. 14

There are diabolicall, wicked, and uncleane thoughts, or such dreames arising from such thoughts. And this is the sixt and last cause of Dreames.

Answ. 4. I answer further, Dreames have their significations, either first, as signes, or secondly, as causes.

Dreames have their significations, as Signes, and that either first, of things present, as dreaming of meat or drinke, argues hunger or thirst, &c. Or, secondly, of things to come; this is called a prediction, and is threefold; either first, Naturall and divine, as Galen tells of one (Crus lapideum balneo lotus, &c) who dreamed that bathing himselfe, his legges, and thighes were metamorphosed from flesh to flint.

Or, secondly, Diabolicall and wicked; the devill sometimes forewarning of things to come, to gain credit and beleefe with men. Or thirdly, Divine, and these are to bee observed, and marked; and of this kinde was Iosephs dreames[p] and the dreame which was dreamed by the wise men. Matth. 2. 12.

p Matth. 2. 13.

Againe, dreames have their significations as causes, and that either:
- By illusion of Sathan.

Or,
- By revelation from God and that either:
  - Commanding, as in this verse, and Matt. 2. 19. 22.
  - Or, Forbidding, as Gen. 31. 24.

Answ. 5. And in all these three, we must carefully take heede of the illusions of Sathan, who can doe all these. Deut. 13. 1. &c.

Lastly, all dreames do either:
- First promise something, Or
- Secondly, terrifie and affright us, Or
- Thirdly, declare or shew something unto us.
- Fourthly, or admonish and advise us: and these are not altogether to be sleighted, but to be weighed and pondered, observing therein these conditions, viz.

First, doe not wholly believe them, but onely suspect, that they may be true.

Secondly, Procura, ne cura; if we can provide against what wee doubt and dreame of, doe it, but be not carefull of the successe, nor fearefull for any dreame.

Thirdly, doe nothing upon a dreame, either against thy generall calling as thou art a Christian, or against that particular calling, wherein God hath placed thee. More plaine and particular signes of divine dreames wee shall consider of (God willing) in another place.

Sect. 3. §. 3. For that which is conceived in her is of the holy Ghost.

Exposition. From the words it evidently appeares, that Christ is the true Sonne of God, or the onely begotten Son of the true God. Not First, onely man by nature, and Quasi Deus, as it were a God by grace, as the Arrians, Nestorians and divers others would have it. Nor Secondly, onely God, and made Quasi homo, as it were a man, as the Maniches, Marcionites, and divers others falsly imagine. Nor

Thirdly, true God, and true man, but having the humanity created of nothing; as the Valentinians and Wittcham hold, that Christ tooke not flesh of the Virgin Mary; and Servetus, that the body of Christ was compacted of three uncreated Elements (Beza. epist. 8. confess. Gal. art. 14) But Fourthly, that in Christ are two nattures united by a hypostaticall conjunction: being Man of the flesh of his Mother, without a Father, and God of God his Father without a Mother. Now hence divers Quares may be made, of which briefly.

Quest. 1. Answ. 1. First, why was it necessary that Christ should be God?

I. Because man alone could not doe that which was requisite for our Redemtion viz.

First, satisfie Gods justice. And secondly, overcome and conquer death. And

II. Because neither could an Angell save us, or performe that which was to bee done, before we could be ransomed: that is,

First,

LIBRARY OF THE UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY NEW YORK

First, an Angell could not dye. Nor, secondly overcome temptation for us. Nor thirdly, make us the children of God.

Quest. 2. Secondly, Why was it necessary, that Christ should be man?

Answ. 1. I. That he might dye: for God cannot, it being contrary to the nature of an immortall God, and without death there can bee no Redemption. And Answ. 2. II. That he might merit, which God cannot doe neither; because to merit is to procure unto ones selfe, that which otherwise they have not, nor is due unto them (Thom.) wherefore God cannot merit.

Answ. 3. III. That he might apply his merit unto us; and therefore it was convenient, that hee should be like unto his brethren.

Quest. 3. Thirdly, why was it necessary that the Son, the second person of the blessed Trinitie should be made Man?

Answ. Because he being the Character, and engraven Image of the Father (Heb. 1. 3.) was most fit to restore and repaire againe the Image of God in us.

Quest. 4. Fourthly, why was Christ begotten of the holy Spirit?

Answ. That hee might bee holy, pure, immaculate, and a lambe without spot, both in his generation and conception.

Quest. 5. Fiftly, why is the conception of Christ ascribed to God the holy Ghost alone, seeing it is common to all the three persons in the blessed Trinitie?

Answ. 1. I. This is not done to exclude the Father, or the Son himselfe from this work: but to signifie that it comes of the free gift and grace of God, (which commonly is tearmed by the holy Ghost) that the manhood of Christ, being but a creature, should bee advanced to this dignitie, and become a part of the Sonne of God.

Answ. 2. II. The holy Ghost is the authour of this conception in a speciall manner: for the Father and the Sonne did cause it by the holy Spirit, from them both immediately. M. Perkins.

Vers. 21. VERS. 21. Shee shall bring forth a sonne, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for hee shall save his people from their sinnes.

Sect. 1. §. Thou shalt call his name JESUS.

Quest. 1. Who was to name this child?

Answ. Ioseph, not Mary; for the Angell doth not say, vocabit, Mary shall call his name, but vocabis, thou shalt call his name Iesus. Hence some observe, that it belongs unto the Father to name the child. [g]

[g] Chrysost. Op. Imper.

Quest. 2. What must Ioseph call this child?

Answ. Iesus; Thou shalt call his name Iesus.

Quest. 3. What signifies Iesus?

Answ. 1. First it signifies a Saviour: observe here, that some derive this name from ἰάομαι to cure, heale, or give health, because hee is our best ἰατρός, or Answ. 2. Messias & Physitian of our souls. Others derive it from σῴω, or σόω, and σῴζω, to save or preserve in safety; from which comes σωτήρ, a Saviour, or one who is the authour of salvation.

Secondly, these derivations are true in regard of the office of Christ, which was to save us; but are not according to the literall and grammaticall derivation of it, which is this. Iesus comes from Iashang, or in Hiphill from Hosheang, which signifies to save; and hence in this verse the Angell first Propounds the name [Thou shalt call his name Iesus.] And then secondly, expounds it, for he shall save his People from their sinnes.

Quest. 4. Is this name Iesus proper unto Christ?

Answ. 1. First, no; for it was given unto others, three more having beene of the same name, one mentioned. 1 Chron. 24. another, 2 Chron. 31. and a third, the Authour of the booke of Ecclesiasticus; for he is called Iesus the son of Sirach. There were two more also almost of the same name, Ioshuah that brought the People into the promised Land, and Iosuah, who together with Zerubbabel brought the people backe from Babylon. 1 Esdr. 2. For Ioshuahs name hath in it onely one letter more, and signifies the salvation of the Lord.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this name is given unto Christ καθ' ἐξοχήν, after a more speciall and singular manner, then unto any other, because he is the onely begotten Sonne of God, who by himselfe hath purchased salvation for us.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Iesus shalt thou call him.

Some observe that divers deepe and profound mysteries are included in this name Iesus, many whereof I omit, referring the studious Reader to Petrus Galatinus [r] considering briefely of one or two onely. Jesus is a Triptote, declined onely by three terminations, Iesus, Iesum, Iesu, signifying therby the three persons of the B. Trinity, in unity ever to be worshipped. Againe the first case ends in S. JESUS, the second in M. JESUM, the third in V. JESU, to teach us, that Christ is Summus, Medius, and Vltimus, the beginning the midst, and the ending, the first, and the last, yea all in all. Coloss. 3. 11.

[r] P. Galat. lib. 3. c. 20.

Obiect. The Papists affirme that Antichrist shall be one particular man, and shall have a certaine proper name, which shall not bee knowne untill his comming, but shall consist in certaine letters, which in number make six hundred sixtie six, (Bellarm. de Antichrist. Cap. 10. et Rhemist. in Apoc. 13. §. 10.) And they argue from this verse thus: Antichrist shall have a name, as Christ had: but it is not necessary to be knowne, otherwise then Christ his name was; which was described by the Sybils by the number of eight hundred eighty, eight, as Antichrist is by six hundred sixty six: yet was not Christs name Iesus, perfectly knowne before his comming; neither therefore is it necessary, that Antichrists should, before that time. Iesus in Greeke letters, thus, ιησους maketh as you see eight hundred eighty, and eight.

Answ. 1. First, they must prove Antichrist to bee one singular man, as Christ, was, and then seeke out his name, for the arguments of our men to the contrary are not yet answered.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Non est par ratio, the Sybils prophecies, and Iohns Revelation are not Christianlike 18 parallelled, Iohn having his Revelation from heaven, and the Sybils their predictions by a ſpirit of divination.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the name Ieſus hath ſome evidence out of the Prophets; for Ieſus, and Ieſua, are all one, and both of them ſignifie a Saviour; but Ieſua wee have mentioned Zachar. 3. it being the high Prieſts name, who was a type of Chriſt, and bare his name, verſ. 5. upon whoſe head is ſet a Diadem, which muſt needs be underſtood of JESUS CHRIST our high Prieſt. Againe, JESUS is called HOSANNA[t], which ſignifieth the ſame that JESUS, and is derived from the ſame root; tranſlated SAVE us: and this name we finde Pſalm. 118. 25. And therefore the name of CHRIST may bee deduced from the Prophets.

[t] Ioh. 12. 13. Read D. Willet Synopſ. f. 230.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly and laſtly, if the name Ieſus Chriſt, were revealed to Sybilla, an heathen propheteſſe, how can it bee that the Prophets of God were ignorant of it? Therefore by their owne argument, ſeeing CHRISTS names were knowne before his coming, why ſhould not Antichriſts in like manner, if he ſhould be one ſingular notorious man, as they affirme?

Sect. 3. §. 3. Thou ſhalt call his name Ieſus.] Having obſerved ſomething of the name Jeſus, I come now to conſider of the impoſition of the name, and the reaſon of it. A queſtion will here bee propounded:

Queſt. 1. Why is the Meſſias called Jeſus?

Anſw. I anſwer, becauſe he will ſave his people from their ſinnes: where we ſee, that his name is taken from his office; he muſt be called a Saviour, becauſe hee will ſave his people: teaching us that Obſerva. names ſhould be impoſed upon infants, with reaſon and diſcretion: that is, it were fit that ſignificant names ſhould be given unto them.

Queſt. 2. How many ſorts of names are there?

Anſw. Some divide names into three rankes, Naturall, Officiall, and Perſonall: this verſe ſpeakes onely of Perſonall names, therefore I forbeare the reſt, and will ſpeake onely of this.

Perſonall names are either, 1. changed after they are impoſed. or 2. once impoſed, and never changed. I. Names formerly given are ſometimes changed, and that two manner of waies. Firſt, by taking away the old names, as Saul was called Paul, and Abram, called Abraham. Secondly, by adding of new names unto the old, and that in a foure-fould regard; namely either

1. In reſpect of the Body, ſo wee call ſome men long, ſome thicke, ſome fat, according to their ſhape. Or II. in reſpect, of the minde, and ſo it is two-fold, either in regard of { Vices, when men are named from their vitious natures, as Brutus, Biberius Mero (for Tiberius Nero) Sardanapalus, Helbrand for Pope Hildebrand, Or, Vertues, and that for a double cauſe { Either by reaſon of ſome praiſe, or praiſe-worthy vertue obſerved in them, as Philadelphus. Or By reaſon of ſome admonition given to ſome vertue, as { Peter. / Boanerges. Or

III. In reſpect of ſome atchivements, or deeds that are, or have beene done, as Africanus, Scævola. Or,

IV. In regard of fortunate, or unfortunate ſucceſſe in our enterpriſes; as Felix, Fauſtus, Mara.[t]

[t] Ruth. 1. 20.

2. Names are ſomtimes impoſed, and alwaies retained, being never either left or changed: And herein obſerve theſe two things.

Firſt, when theſe names are given.

Secondly, why or how they are given.

Firſt conſider when theſe names are given that are never changed. 1. Sometimes before the birth; hereof we have examples both in { The old Teſtament as Iſhmael Gen. 16. 11. Iſaac. Gen 17. 19. Ioſiah 1 King. 13. 2. / And New Teſtament; as Jeſus in this verſe and Iohn Baptiſt. Luk. 1. 13

II. Theſe names are ſomtimes given after the birth, both by heathens and Chriſtians.

Firſt, this is obſerved by heathens, who give names to their infants, ſome few dayes after their birth: the Grecians the ſeventh day after they are borne: the Athenians the tenth: the Romans, if a boy the ninth, if a girle the eight,[u] and all theſe in their ſolemnities, did uſe ſome lotions, and ſome manner of purging of the infant, who was to be named[x].

Againe, this is obſerved by Chriſtians, who at the Sacrament impoſe ſome name upon the Childe to be baptiſed; yea, it is fitting, that the name ſhould be impoſed upon the Childe, non cum natus, ſed cum renatus[y], not when hee is firſt borne, but when hee is borne againe, that is in Baptiſme, it being the Sacrament of our regeneration, and initiation into the Church.

Secondly, conſider wee now, how theſe names, which are not to bee changed, are impoſed upon children.

I anſwer. Firſt, ſometimes they are given caſually, without any ſolid ground at all: this is too too ordinarie: for, ſo the childe have a name, we care not what it be.

Secondly, ſometime they are impoſed with reaſon, and judgement, and that three manner of wayes. Either I. by reaſon of Diſtribution, or Diſtinction, that ſeverall children may bee diſtinguiſhed by ſeverall names. II. Or by reaſon of Notation, of body, as Rufus, Simon, Sylla, Longimanus, &c. III. Or by reaſon of Recordation, or Remembrance. And this is two-fold. Firſt of Men. And ſecondly, of Things.

Sometime names are imposed for the remembrance of men, and this is two-fold: either
- Politicke, which is either
  - Evill, for vain-glory, as Scanderbeg, Or
  - Lawfull, for the remembrance, either
    - Of kindred, now living[z], Or
    - Of predecessors, now dead. Or
    - Of friends, whether alive or dead.
- Or
- Religious, which remembrance is for the imitation of the Patriarches, Prophets, Apostles, or holy men, &c.

[z] Luk. 1. 61

Sometimes names are imposed for the remembrance of Things. and that either, First, by-passed, as Evah, Enosh, or the children of Ioseph[a], and Naomi, who changed her name into Mara, in regard of her former losses and miseries. Or secondly, to come, and that either of Hope, as Benjamin, or of Office and Direction.

[a] Gen. 49.

Direction in names is two fold, to wit,
- Imponendo, in the imposition of names: here thou maist direct and dispose of the name according to thy owne wishes and desires: and this is the office and part of the parent, to name his child, after what Patriarch, or Apostle, or Saint, he will.
- Recordando, this belongs unto those that are named, they must remember that their names, are for this end, that they may strive to imitate the vertues of those whose names they beare.

I have omitted to explaine the names here above mentioned, for these three causes. First because it would have swelled this question to too great a bulke: and tediousnesse (especially in these things which are lesse needful unto saving knowledge) I desire to avoyd. Secondly because to the vulgar Reader, they are not so necessary to be known. Thirdly, because of the understanding Reader, which is but meanely Conversant in Histories, they are well enough understood.

Sect. 4. Obiect. §. 4. Hee shall save his people from their sinnes. Hence it will bee objected, how are wee saved from our sinnes, when as yet wee fall daily into sinne, and are overcome by it?

Answ. To this I answer, by Christ wee are saved, first from the punishment of sin, or from death; for now there is no condemnation to those that are in Christ[b]. Secondly, from the Kingdome of sinne; because it shall not raigne in, nor over those that are in Christ[c]. Thirdly, and this freedome from the power and punishment of sinne, is our justification and salvation: And thus Christ here is said to save his people from their sinnes.

[b] Rom. 8. 1.

[c] Rom. 6. 14.

Quest. 1. Further, it may here bee demanded, from what sinnes doth Christ save or free his people?

Answ. I answer from this verse, ἀπὸ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν αὐτῶν, From their owne proper sinnes: for these onely are they that condemne us.

Quest. 2. Which are those proper sinnes from which Christ will save us?

Answ. I answer. First, those that lurke and lye hid in our natures, which are the cause of all the rest. Secondly, those actuall sinnes, that flow from these wicked habits, or at least spring from these reliques. And both these wee are freed from by Christ.

Observ. The maine worke of Christ, qua Iesus, as he is our Saviour, is that which is here expressed, to take away our sinnes; part of which power the Pope and Papists ascribe unto Saints, to the Virgine MARY, and to themselves: Nay, the Pope doth shoulder for the whole power, and doth usurpe as much himselfe, as Christ can doe in that kinde: for this is all, Christ can doe, to forgive his people all their sins fully and perfectly. And Pope Paul the fift did say, he would doe as much[d]. Nay, they say, the Pope hath done more than Christ did: For Pope Clement the 8th, gave indulgentiam plenariã, & remissionẽ omnium peccatorum, tam culpæ quam pœnæ, a full forgivenes of all their sinnes, both in regard of the guilt, and of the punishment thereof: the last whereof they deny, that Christ hath done, in the doctrine of Satisfaction. Yea, the Pope hath done more than ever Christ did indeed, if all be true which they say: Gregory by his prayer did recall the soule of the Emperour Trajane from Hell[e]; Christ never did the like. And thus wee see in regard of this principall blessing, (the forgivenesse of sinnes) which wee receive from Christ, Christ is opposed by the Pope: and therefore hee is rightly termed[f], ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the Adversarie[g].

[e] Revel. Brigct. li. 4. ca. 13.

[f] 2 Thess. 2. 4.

[g] Squire f. 2 Thes. 2. 4. f. 152.

Againe, this verse serves to prove, that the Virgine Mary is not excepted from the common nature of men, neither free from originall sinne, thus: Those unto whom Christ by his death hath brought salvation, were guiltie of sinne: but unto the blessed Virgine Christ by his death hath brought salvation, and for her purchased salvation: Therefore the blessed Virgine was guiltie of sinne. The Major proposition is proved from this verse, and these places, Mark. 2. 17. Rom. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. and 4. 25. and 1. Cor. 15. 3. Galath. 3. 13. 1. Pet. 3. 18. The Minor proposition is confirmed from Luk. 1. 46. 47. 48. 49. and Act. 4. 12. Yea, Bellarmine himselfe can say[h], Inter Catholicos convenit beatam virginem per Christi sanguinem verè fuisse redemptam, &c. The Papists doe generally among themselves agree upon this, and assent unto it, that the blessed Virgine was truly redeemed by the blood of Christ; and that which the Apostle sayth (2. Cor. 5.) Christ dyed for all men, is universally to be understood, without excepting of any.

[h] Li. 4. de amiss. grat. cap. 16.

Repl. But here they give us a testimony of their subtile Sophistry, acutely distinguishing of a double salvation in this manner: Christ is a Saviour in a double respect, either for saving men already fallen into sin and condemnation: or else for sustaining and preserving them from falling: and in this sense onely he was a Saviour to the Virgine Mary, who was preserved only from sinne by Christ, not saved from her sins, which she had not[i].

[i] Francisc. Fox. pag. 802.

20 To this we answer, Christ is called JESUS, a Saviour, in this sense onely, because hee should Answ. 1. save his people from their sinnes (in this verse) he was then either a Saviour unto Mary, or not at all; but her Saviour he was, as shee her selfe k Luke 1. 47. confesseth k, therefore hee saved her from her sinnes.

Answ. 2. Againe we answer, one cannot be said to bee l Dewet. part. 1. dist. 25. ca. 3. Gloss. a Saviour, if he save none: but Christ in their sense never yet saved or preserved any that they should not sinne at all; contra naturam pene est, ut aliquis sine peccato sit l. It is a thing against nature for a man to be without sinne. No man or m D. Willet. Synops. f. 1321. woman then was ever yet so preserved from sinne; wherefore in that sense Christ is not a Saviour, but that he saveth, that is, delivereth us from sinne m.

Vers. 22. VERS. 22. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled, which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophet.

Quest. 1. Why doth the Angel adde this prophecie to his message?

Answ. That thereby hee may confirme his message unto Ioseph: for in the message he brings, are two things observable. 1. the matter or substance of it, and that is the maine and chiefest doctrine of religion, to wit, our salvation by Christ: and therefore it was necessary that it should bee confirmed from the Prophets: the principles of reli-n 2 Tim. 3. 16. gion being to bee grounded n upon Scriptures. 2. The manner of it, and that was miraculous in a double respect; both in regard of the appearing of the Angel, and also in regard of that divine conceptiō, which he preadmonished Ioseph of: and therfore to avoid all deceit which Ioseph might imagine to be in this vision: the Angel cites the Prophecie, that so Ioseph might the more Observ. certainely give credit unto it: teaching us hereby that Miracles are to be confirmed by Scripture: thus the Angel doth here confirme his message from Esay 7. 14. and againe, hee confirmes his message unto Zachary, Luke 1. 17. from Malach. 4. 6. both which were miraculous.

Quest. 2. But hence it may be demanded, why are miracles to be proved by Scripture?

Answ. 1. I answer first, because delusions and false miracles may be wrought by Sathan: Reade these places. Iannes and Iambres wrought miracles. Exod. 7. 11. 22. and 8. 7. so 2 Tim. 3. 8. Deut. 13. 1, &c. Antichrist shall come with signes and lying wonders. Mat. 24. 20. and 2 Thes. 2. 9. and Revel. 13. 14. and 16. 14.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because omnis confirmatio à fortioribus, every confirmation must necessarily bee drawne from the greater, stronger, and more undeniable principles: but unto the faithfull there is nothing more strong then the word of God, and the holy Scriptures; whom they will rather beleeve, then one that should rise from the o 1. Cor. 14. 22. grave unto them: True it is, that the Apostels confirmed the Scriptures by Miracles unto unbeleevers o: but the Angel here (unto faithfull and holy Ioseph) confirmeth his miraculous message by the Scripture: for unto beleevers, Religion is not to bee proved by Miracles, but Miracles by Religion.

VERS. 23. Behold a Virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a sonne, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which is by interpretation, God with us. Vers. 23.

Exposit. This verse is a recitation of a propheste, from Esay 7. 14. the scope of which prophecie is this, Achaz feares, Esai comforts him, and for the further strengthning of him offers a signe, which Achaz refuseth: the Prophet, disdaining this his Observ. obstinacie, doth repeate a generall signe, verse 14. adding a particular signe verse 14. 16. The malice of the Iewes against Christ, and the truth of the Gospel doth evidently appeare by this place: for Obiect. 1 First, they will not grant, that it is to bee understood of Christ the Messias: but either first of Hezekiah; or secondly, of Shearjashub, the sonne of Achaz. Isa. 7. 3. or thirdly, of some other of Achazes sonnes, which was not as yet borne.

Answ. But to this I answer, the first and second were already borne; and how can the third be called Emmanuel, θεάνθρωπον God and Man, without blasphemie?

Obiect. 2. Secondly, they object further, It is not likely that the Prophet would give a remote signe of an approaching deliverance: or thus, the conception and birth of the Virgin Mary could not be a signe unto Achaz, to whom it was promised and made, seeing it fell out 800. yeares at the least after Achazes death.

Answ. 1. It is answered, first, the Prophet doth not give a remote signe of an approaching deliverance; for here are two prophecies, as followes by and by. Secondly, although the Prophet Answ. 2. should doe thus, yet were it no new thing, p Vide Iunii Parall. fol. 8. there being divers instances of the like in Scripture p.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, This signe was not promised unto Achaz, that wicked King, that would not aske of God a signe, (Esay 7.) but unto the house of David, which continued unto the time that Christ was borne of the Virgin Mary; as appeares by the genealogie of Christs drawne from David and Abraham, by Saint Matthew unto Ioseph, and consequently unto Mary, as hath beene aforesaid q.

Obiect. 3 The Iewes object againe, The following scope doth shew that this is spoken of a child, either borne already, or to bee borne hereafter unto Achaz, verse 15. 16.

Answ. I answer those two verses doe not belong to this child: for the proofe of this, see Iunij Parall. fol. 8.

Obiect. 4 They further object, the word Halma doth not alwaies signifie a Virgin, but sometimes a young woman, who is married.

Answ. 1. I answer, it signifies alwaies in Scripture a Virgin, except onely Prov. 30. 19. where Halma is taken not for a pure Virgin, but for a Virgin in shew, or outward appearance, as verse 20.

Answ. 2. I adde one answer more, which may serve as a generall solution of all these objections; That we have the testimony of the holy Spirit in this verse, confirming from heaven unto us, that this prophecie is meant onely of Christ the true Messias.

Answ.3. Lastly, because this question is not questioned amongst Christians, as also because others handle it something largely, I therefore prosecute it no further.

Expos. A Virgin in Hebrew is Halma, derived from the root Halam, which signifies to hide, because Virgins were wont warily to be retained, and detained in their Fathers house, untill they were Observ. espoused: Teaching all Parents carefully to regard the chastity of their daughters, and neither by ill examples, or too much liberty, or by suffering them to frequent the society of wanton persons, endanger the staining of their Virginity.

Some hence may question, why are they so

Quest. charily to be kept? they are filia bonæ spei, very hopefull; vertue shewes it selfe in them, and therefore what neede is there to keepe them like Lyons in a grate, or birds in a cage? we hope wee may safely suffer them sometimes to runne and fly abroad.

I answer first, Casta est quam nemo rogavit, per-

Answ.1. swasion is strong, and there are subtile inducements unto lewdnesse, and little doe we know whether they will hold out or yeeld, untill they be assaulted: and therefore the safest way is to preserve them from all cords of vanity, that draw on iniquity, that is all occasions that may provoke unto sinne.

(Esa. 5. 18.

Secondly, Nature is flexible, and youth easi-

Answ.2. ly to be seduced, the least sparke will set gunpowder on fire: and dry flaxe burneth quickly: there is naturally some wantonnesse in young maides, as well as in young men; and therefore parents should bee the more carefull of them, giving no way to their wantonnesse, but circumspectly curbing, and warily restraining it.

Thirdly, Virginity is a Iewell never to bee

Answ.3. recovered, being once lost: and therefore parents in regard of their owne reputation, and their childrens perpetuall credit, should have a carefull eye over them.

§. 3. His name shall be called Emmanuel, which being interpreted, is God with us.

Sect.3.

Observa. Three things may bee observed from these words. 1. There is none so pure, but malice can deprave, no truth so infallible, but the perverse braine of man will object against it. 2. This verse evidently proves the deity of Christ, because this name Emmanuel given unto Christ, doth testifie that in the person of Christ, God is with us, i.e. united with our flesh. 3. yet there are some who dare oppose the truth of it.

Eniedinus, a Samosatenian Heretike doth here

Object.1 object. It followes not that Christ is God, because he is called Emmanuel. 1. because many are said to be that which they are not. 2. Many have beene called Emmanuel, who were not Gods.

Answ.1. I answer first, It is blasphemie to say, that Christ is not that, which hee is called: for if so, then God should mocke and deceive his people, and Ioseph and Christ by a false name, which is blasphemy to utter.

Answ.2. Secondly, Other Emanuels have nomen sine re, Christ nomen et rem: others are onely so called, but unto Christ the name doth truely agree, hee having this name given unto him, to expresse the nature of his person: he being θεάνθρωπος as the New Testament doth ever and anone confirme: as; the word became Flesh, and God was manifested in the Flesh, and the like phrases: And therefore he onely is the true Emmanuel.

Object.2 It is very doubtfull (saith the same heretical objecter) whether Christ were called Emmanuel or not: because neither the Angel nor the Evangelist doe call him Emmanuel, but Iesus.

Answ.1. I answer, First, if hee bee Iesus the Saviour, then is hee God and man, because none could save us but such a one, as is proved before verse 20.

Answ.2. Secondly, God called Christ Emmanuel not for this end, that it should bee the proper name of the Messias, but that it might signifie his wonderfull person, mercy, and grace, in being God and Man, and becomming Man for us: and therefore the Angel (from that prophesie Esa. 7. 14.) saith that in regard of his person he shall bee called Emmanuel, but his proper name shall be Iesus: Thou shalt call his name Iesus, verse 21.

VERS. 25. And Ioseph knew her not; untill shee had brought forth her first borne sonne, &c. Vers. 25.

Expos. He knew her not Donec, untill, &c. that is, hee never knew her at all; for so Donec signifies; as it is said, Samuel saw not Saul, untill the day of his death, that is, hee never saw him after: the words here used are Greeke; but the phrase Hebrew, for this is frequent in the Old Testament, as Michal had no child untill the day of her death, i.e. she had no more children at all afterwards.

That Ioseph never knew Mary at all, the Church hath alwaies held, and that for these reasons.

First, because it doth establish an Article of our faith, natus ex Virgine, that is, of one who was a Virgin, when he was borne (and this is of absolute necessitie to be beleeved) yea continued a virgin all her life time after; and this we are verily perswaded of.

Secondly, because the Fathers with an unanimous consent, have both alwaies called her Virgin, and also held this opinion, condemning those for heretickes that thought the contrary; as may be seene in Epiphanius, Augustine, Hieron, and divers other Fathers.

Thirdly, some of the Fathers, and Gualter (upon these words) for the proofe of this opinion, have argued from the Prophet; saying: This gate shall bee shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it, because the Lord the God of Israel hath entred in by it, therefore it shall be shut: But this reason seemes not of much weight, that place not bearing it, without allegorizing the place, as shall (God willing) bee shewed elsewhere.

Fourthly, it is not likely, that Ioseph being a just man would know her, whom hee knew to bee

22 the Mother of his Lord: or expose to a common use, that vessell which the Lord had thus sanctified; especially considering that he was of the age of 80. yeares when he was contracted to her, as saith Epiphanius.

Object. 1 But against this opinion, Helvidius, Nestorius, Iovinianus, and divers others object many things.

Answ. First from the phrase of Scripture used in this former verse, where she is called his wife (he took unto him his wife.)

Hereunto I answer, There may be matrimony without carnall knowledge: this appeares most plainely from the law [y], If a Damosell, that is a Virgin be betrothed unto a husband, and a man finde her and lie with her, he shall be stoned to death, because he hath humbled his neighbours wife: Besides, Marriage is not conjunctus carnis, but consensus voluntatum [z], not the conjunction of the flesh, but the mutuall consent of wills.

Object. 2. Secondly, from the phrase of Scripture used in this verse, where Christ is called her first borne, implying thereby that Mary had more children afterwards.

Answ. 1. To this I answer, first, it is not simply said primogenitus, the first borne, but primogenitus ille, that first borne, to wit, of God [a].

Secondly, primogenitus, the first borne, is one before whom none was before, not one after whom some others were borne [b]. Primogenitus est, non post quem alij, sed ante quem nullus alius genitus est. But they instance here, This Vntill is a relative word, and therefore cannot goe alone, a man cannot properly bee called a first borne sonne, and an onely sonne.

Answ. It is true, but withal know, that there is a double relation, viz. in esse, & in posse, in entity (or being) or in possibility: thus the child that first opens the wombe is called Primogenitus, the first borne because although there bee in being, but one, yet in Possibility there may be more.

Object. 3 Against from hence they object, He knew her not Vntill she had brought forth &c. this Vntill implies that afterwards he did know her.

Answ. 1. First, it may be answered, Cognoscere ut involligere mysterium [c], to know is to understand the mysterie revealed unto him by the Angel, that is untill Christ was borne, he did not truely and fully understand this wonderfull and profound mystery.

Secondly, Donec, untill, doth denie the time foregoing, not imply the time following: it doth exclude all time by-past, but not include the time to come: he knew her not untill she had brought forth her first borne; this doth plainely prove that he knew her not before, but not inferre that he knew her afterwards: for Donec is often a note of perpetuity, as donec ponam inimicos scabellum [d], untill I have made thine enemies thy footstoole, i. e. for ever. I am with you (saith our Saviour) usque ad finem seculi [e], untill the end of the world, that is, in seculum seculorum, World without end.

[e] Matth. 28. 20.

The Papists very well like and allow of this exposition of Donec, untill, and therefore I would entreate them not to urge that Donec in the parable so vehemently, as they do [f] Thou shalt not come out, Donec, untill thou have paid the utmost farthing: the Papists urge this Donec against us for the proofe of Purgatorie, in the same manner, that Helvidius, Nestorius, and their adherents doe both against us and them urge Donec here, to prove that Ioseph carnally knew Mary: And therefore it is not fit for them, to make of the Scripture a nose of waxe. But I shall consider of that in his proper place.

[f] Matth. 5. 26.

The forenamed Heretikes object againe, from the testimonies of the ancients, who say that afterwards Ioseph knew Mary [g]. Object. 4

[g] Danæus.

To this I answer, Clavus clavo pellendus; wee have more of the ancients that deny this, then affirme it: And therefore if their Testimony be of value, it will be concluded on our side. Answ.

Further they object, Christ had brethren, Iames and Ioses, Simon and Iude: and it is said unto Christ, thy brethren seeke thee: therefore, Ioseph afterwards knew his wife. Object. 5

Answ. 1. I answer first, the Scripture usually calls Cosen Germans, Brethren: So Lot is called the brother of Abraham, and so Iames was the sonne of Mary Cleophas: And thus Iosephs brothers, or sisters children, or Maries sisters children are the brethren of Christ.

Answ. 2. Secondly, others answer, that Ioseph married after the death of Mary, and that the sonnes he had by that wife were called Christs brethren: of this opinion is Danæus [h]. But if Ioseph were (according to Epiphanius) 80 yeares old, when he was contracted unto Mary, who was alive when Christ was crucified, 34 yeares after, it is not probable that hee married or had children, when he was 114. yeares old at the least.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, others thinke (to which I rather subscribe) that Ioseph had another wife before Mary, by whom he had five children. b Danæus de hæres. f. 224.

Object. 6. Lastly, they object, Ioseph tooke her home in stead of a wife, verse 24. therefore it is likely, that he knew her. Answ.

I answer, he tooke her not home for carnall copulation: but first, that he might defend her, both from the lash of tongues and humane lawes. Secondly, that he might provide for her and the infant, as is foreshewed verse 18.

And therefore I conclude this verse, Chapter and controversie, That although it bee not Determined by Scripture, yet because first there is no Scripture against it. Secondly, because there is (in a manner) a generall consent and agreement of Fathers for it. And thirdly, because it is very agreeable unto reason; it is not therefore lightly to be denied or gainesayed by any.

CHAP.

CHAPTER II.

Vers. 1. VERS. 1. When IESUS then was borne at Bethlehem, in Iudea, in the dayes of Herod the King, behold, there came wise men from the East to Ierusalem.

Sect. 1. Quest. WHY is Christ manifested as soone as ever hee is borne, yea, and before hee was borne? as the Angell reveales it to Ioseph and Mary before, the Holy Ghost to Elizabeth, and Iohn Baptist in her wombe; the Angels to the Sheepheards, the starre to the Wisemen, and they to the Jewes, presently after hee was borne.

Answ. I answer, This was done for these causes; First, that the Gospell might be manifested, or that the message of Christs Nativitie might bee confirmed by many witnesses.

Secondly, that the Jewes, the people of God, might bee admonished of it: the Messias long before was promised unto them; and therefore by the testimonies of many, God will have them to know, that now he is come.

Thirdly, that all might bee left without excuse, seeing that it was so plentifully confirmed.

Fourthly, this was done for the comfort and consolation of those, who did expect the Messias, as Simeon [b], and Anna [c].

[b] Luk 2. 25. [c] Luk. 2. 36.

Sect. 2. Quest. §. 2. In Bethlehem.] Why was Christ born in Bethlehem?

Answ. Answer. For three causes; the first is, Historicall, that they might bee taxed [d], Ioseph being of the linage of David, comes to Bethlehem, the Citie of David to be taxed. The second cause is Allegoricall, because Bethlehem signifies the house of bread [e], and Christ is the true bread from heaven [f]. The third cause is Prophetical, that the prophesie might be fulfilled, which was delivered concerning Christ the Messias [g].

[d] Luk. 2. 4. [e] Gen. 35. 19. and 48. 7. [f] Hier. & Haymo. [g] Mich. 5. 2.

Sect. 3. Quest. 1. §. 3. In the dayes of Herod the King.] Hence it may bee demanded, what manner of dayes were these to the Jewes?

Answ. I answer, dayes of great affliction: for Herod, who now ruled over them, was a stranger, comming thus unto the kingdome. The Maccabees held a certaine kingdome, unto the time of Hircanus, the sonne of Alexander, who contending with his brother Aristobulus, hee calls one Antipater unto his aid, which Antipater, being the father of this Herod, marries him to the daughter of Aristobulus: Hircanus being overcome, and taken, Herod assumes the kingdome, as his Vicegerent, or Deputie. After a while Nicanor returnes into Iudea, whom Herod peaceably receives, but secretly slayes, and then obtaines the kingdome for himselfe, of the Romanes.

Now this time, I say, was unto the Jewes a miserable time in a three-fold regard. I. Because their Kingdome was taken away. II. Their Priesthood was corrupted; there being two high Priests alive at once, as wee shall shew afterwards. III. They were now become tributaries unto the Romanes, which confirmes Christ to bee the true Messias, and promised Shilo, because the Law-giver was now gone from Iudah [h].

Quest. 2. Hence it may bee asked; Why doth God suffer his people to come into such miserie, or to bee in bondage under the Romanes, who were Heathens and Infidels, contemning God, and Religion?

Answ. This was done for these causes: First, that they might bee humbled through the sight and sense of their sinnes, which were the causes of this evill. Secondly, that they might the more earnestly and fervently pray unto God in their distresse. Thirdly, that the reliques of sinne might bee expurged, and evacuated: or that this affliction might bee as fire to purge them from their drosse. Fourthly, that they might the more confidently rely upon the Lord for deliverance, upon their repentance, according to his gracious promises, Psalm. 34. 17, 19. Fifthly, that in the meane time, they might adhere and keepe close unto the Lord [i]. And this was the principall cause of their great captivitie: in prosperitie they runne away from God, and will not be subject unto him; therefore the Lord suffers them to be afflicted, that they may learne to draw neerer unto him, that so hee might draw neare unto them.

[i] Psal. 30. 7. 8. and 73. 28.

Sect. 4. Quest. §. 4. Came Wise men from the East.] It may here bee questioned, who these Wise men, or Magitians were?

Answ. 1. I answere, First, the word is ambiguous and doubtfull, having divers significations: I. Some understand by them, Impostors, or Iugglers. II. Some understand Witches; but neither of these is understood here.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I answer, There are foure kindes of Magicke, the first Naturall, which consists in the knowledge of naturall things. Secondly, Astrologicall, belonging to the knowledge of the 24 the starres, and is called Astrologie; and these two I here omit. Thirdly, Diabolicall, which is the Art used by Magitians, Witches, and Sorcerers. It is called Goeteia, & Theurgia, in which I might observe these double termes, I. Terminus a quo, from whence this Magicke came. viz. 1. From the Divell, the authour of it. 2. From divine worship corrupted, or from the worship of false Gods. II. Terminus ad quem, whereunto this Magick tends, to wit, 1. unto Physicke, Medicines, and the knowledge of Plants. 2. Vnto the vanitie of the starres, this divellish Magicke leading unto forbidden Astrologie. 3. Vnto divellish practises: experience shewing, how that Magicke leads unto all manner of lewdnesse, prophanesse, and wicked enterprises, both against God and our neighbour; but all these, God willing, I shall handle more largely in another place.

Fourthly, there is a Morall and Divine Magicke, which consists in the studie of wisedome, and divine knowledge. Amongst the Heathens, they that were zealous, and learned, and studious in this learning, had divers names given unto them, the Persians called them Magos (and such were these in this verse mentioned) the Assyrians, Chaldaos: the Indians, Brachmanes, or Gymnosophistas: the Egyptians, Prophets, or Priests: the Grecians, σοφούς: the French, Druydas: the Latines, Wise men; (and so these Magi are called in this place by all our Interpreters) and the Jewes called them Scribes[d].

Answ. 3. I answer againe, that there is much question, and little certainty of the number and qualitie of these wise men. First, some say, they were only three in number; who were wise men, and great Schollers, in all the learning of the Persians, but were no Kings. Secondly, others e Calvin. f. thinke, there were fourteene of them[e]. Thirdly, others thinke, that they descended of the f Hier. f. stocke of Balaam[f], from Balaams prophesie, g Numb. 24. 17. which by and by. Fourthly, others thinke, that they were three Kings, called Gaspar, Melchior, Balthasar, who first were buried in their owne Countries. Secondly, translated from thence, by Helena (the Mother of Constantine the great)

b Legenda. unto Constantinople. Thirdly, carried thence, by a Bishop, to Millaine: and fourthly, by the Emperour Henry, transported to Colleine[b]. Now after so many opinions, and translations, wee may conclude, that all these are false, or at least, that it is most uncertaine, which of these is true. And therefore, I. The adoration of the bones that are shewed at Colleine, is but ridiculous Idolatry, like the worshipping of the wood of Christs Crosse. II. That also is but impious Magicke, which is taught by some of them likewise, who prescribe these three names, Gaspar, Melchior, Balthasar to be written in parchment, with the signe of the Crosse, and hung about the necke, as a sure salve, to cure all sores, and diseases whatsoever.

Sect. 5. Obiect. Came wise men saying, &c.] Here it will be objected, Christ (Matt. 11. 25.) saith that the divine Mysteries were hid from the wise: and Paul saith, God hath not chosen them, 1 Cor. 1. 26. And here wise men are formost, and forwardest to seeke our Christ.

Answ. 1. I answer, First, the Apostles speech is not universall, hee not saying, that God hath chosen none, but few, 1. Cor. 1. 26.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour speakes not of those i Ioh. 9. 40. that are truely wise, but of the presuming Jewes, who boasted of their knowledge.

Sect. 6. To Ierusalem.] Here it may bee questioned, Quest. Why they came unto Jerusalem, seeing the starre did not direct them thither, it not being seene of them, at that time?

Answ. 1. First, some say, that the wise men came hither, that they might bee witnesses against the Jewes, both for the present, and also at the day of judgement: or that the Jewes might bee the more inexcuseable: but this is not likely to bee the intent of their comming thither, and therefore I leave it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I rather thinke, they came hither, because it was the Metropolis, and therefore they hoped to finde the King of the Jewes there.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they came hither also, to bee instructed of the Priests, as those who perfectly knew, where the Messias was to be born: for the starre not appearing unto them, they knew not of themselves, how to direct their course, and therefore repaire unto those, whom they thought were able to instruct them.

Vers. 2.

VERS. 2. Saying, Where is the king of the Iewes, that is borne? for we have seene his starre in the East, and are come to worship him.

Sect. 1. This verse may admit a double sense: First, Allegoricall: secondly, Literall.

This verse may be Allegorized, two manner of wayes: First, frivolously, and foolishly. Secondly, fruitfully and profitably.

The Monkes ridiculously allegorize this Starre: We have seene his starre. Five starres are seene, say they, First, a Materiall starre, which is that here spoken of. Secondly, a Spirituall starre, which is faith. Thirdly, an Intellectuall starre, that is an Angell. Fourthly, a Naturall starre, which is the Blessed Virgine. Fiftly, a Supersubstantiall starre, which is Christ. These, as meere fansies, I omit.

This verse may be commodiously allegorized thus. First, the starre signifies Religion, because as the starre shineth, so doth Religion, and so ought the Religious[a]. Secondly, the East, wherin the starre arises, signifies Torch[b], and therefore Religion and Repentance are not to be deferred unto old age[c]. The Jewes were enjoyned to offer up unto God, a Lambe of a yeare old, to teach us to offer up our youth and strength unto God. Thirdly, the most plaine and profitable Allegorie is this, The Starre (onely) here directs us unto Christ, teaching us here-by, that none can come to Christ, except hee bee enlightned from above, and drawne by the Father[d], as wee have an example in Lydia, whose Lord opened her heart, that shee heard the Disciples of Christ willing-willingly [e]. But against the truth of this, some things are objected.

Obiect. 1. First, wee are brought unto Christ by the word, as appeares Rom. 10. 17. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word. See also Eph. 1.13. After ye heard the word of truth, yee beleeved. So likewise, 2. Pet. 1. 19. Yee have a sure word of prophesie, which shines as a light in a darke place. In these texts faith is attributed to the preaching of the word, and not to heavenly illumination.

Answ. This is true, that faith is wrought by the word, by which also wee are brought unto Christ, but first the heart is enlightned from above, by which it is enabled to understand the word: for untill we understand with the heart, we cannot aright heare with the eare [f]. Spirituall things are spiritually discerned; and neither the naturall man, nor the nature of man can aright understand those things, that are of God [g].

Obiect. 2. Secondly, Christ himselfe is the Starre, by whom we are brought unto him (hee being the bright and Morning starre [h],) and therefore not the illumination of the Spirit of God.

Answ. Wee must distinguish betwixt some certaine particular and inferiour starre, and that bright Morning starre (Apoc. 22. 16.) called also Lucifer, or the Day starre [i], &c. yea more than a starre, the Sunne, which gives light unto all the starres [k]. And therefore there is an order to be observed in these things, which is this. First,

I. there is a starre, which obscurely admonishes, and moves; this is the internall (but common and generall) motions of the holy Spirit: as after Peters Sermon, being pricked in their hearts, they cry out, What shall we doe to be saved [l]? These generall motions and commotions a man may have within himselfe for a time, and yet not be brought home unto Christ; and without these, we cannot (at least ordinarily) be brought unto him: and therefore prayer is necessarily to bee adjoyned to the hearing of the word, that so we being assisted (in the hearing thereof) from above, it may become profitable unto us. Secondly,

II. there is the word directing: for this is Gods owne ordination, that wee should bee taught only by his word: the preaching thereof being the power of God unto salvation [m], as we see by experience even from the word of God. Philip preaches, and then the Eunuch understands, and beleeves [n]. Peter preaches, and Cornelius, and all with him, receive the holy Ghost [o]. And therefore wee must not expect Enthusiasmes, or divine revelations, and neglect the word, but we must have recourse to the Law, and to the Prophets, that they may direct us unto Christ. True it is, that the word doth not work in us, or upon us, either ex opere operato, by the bare preaching of it, or incantative, by way of inchanting, or charming of us: yet wee must confesse and acknowledge (yea expect and long for) the operation of God in his owne ordinance, the word, which therefore is called, the word of reconciliation [p], God by the word reconciling us unto himselfe: and without whose gracious assistance, the word will become altogether unprofitable [q]. Thirdly, there is a Sun, or a bright and shining Morning starre, which is the testimony of the Spirit of Christ within us, enabling us boldly and confidently to call God Father [r], which is called a Sunne, Malach. 4.2. and resembled thereunto in regard of a threefold property it hath. First, in regard of his firme, fixed, and apparent light [s]; we thereby beholding, as with open face, the glory of the Lord [t] assuring us of an interest in Christ, and of salvation by him. Secondly, in regard of his feruent heat, making us zealous of good workes, and enflaming all the affections of the soule, with an ardent desire to obey God in whatsoever he requires, and to approve our selves unto him, by true holinesse, and unto others by equity, righteousnesse, and unblameable lives [u]. Thirdly, in regard of solid joy, which it brings unto us: when the Sunne beginnes to rise, then the birds beginne to sing, and most creatures delight in the sight thereof: for this internall evidence of the Spirit of God doth worke in us joy unspeakable and glorious. Read Isai 66.19. 20. Apoc. 21.23. and 25.5. and 1. Pet. 1. 8.

Thus much for the Historical sense of this verse, wee now proceed unto his literall sense. Sect. 2.

In the historicall sence of this verse, I will answer an objection, and then resolve divers necessarie questions. Obiect.

The Papists to prove, that the Pope hath both Regall, and Sacerdotall power, argue thus: That power which was in Christ, the head of the Church, when he was upon earth: is now in the Pope, his Vicar generall upon earth: but Christ had both Regall and Sacerdotall power. i. e. was both a Priest and a temporall King, when hee was upon the earth: Therefore the Pope is such; both a Priest and a Prince, having power Temporall and Spirituall over people and Princes. The whole argument I meddle not withall, referring the Reader to the learned Frenchman [a], I will onely prosecute one particular of the Minor proposition.

Wee deny that Christ was a temporall King upon earth, and therefore although the Pope were his Vicar (which is not yet proved by them by any unanswerable or unanswered arguments) yet hath he not Regall power given unto him. That Christ was a temporall King, some of them [b] prove from this verse: the Orientall Kings, or wise men of the East, aske, where is he that is borne King of the Jewes: therefore they confesse he was a King, and they honour him as a King, by presenting gifts unto him.

To this I answer, first, it cannot bee denied, but that Christ was called by the Wise Men a King. Answ. 1.

Secondly, but whether they call him a temporall King or not, that is the question, and Cererius proves it not: but others witnesse [c] that they came unto Christ as unto God; and then certainely they do not enquire for him, as a temporall King. Answ. 2.

Againe, it is most probable, and agreeable unto reason, that they call Christ an heavenly Answ. 3.

26 King, not an earthly, as may appeare thus; If these wise men had acknowledged no other thing in Christ, but onely that hee was the temporall King of the Jewes, that is a King of a very small people; then had they had no cause to have undertaken this long journey, for the sight of him, but rather cause, not to have moved a foot out of the way for him; the earthly King of the Jewes not belonging at all unto them.

Answ. 4. Lastly, I answer, when they find Christ they worship him; which argues, that they acknowledge him not to bee an earthly, but a heavenly King: for although temporall Kings (amongst them) were wont to bee worshiped, yet none before their coronatiõ, when they were actually Kings; which could not as yet be, his nativity being neither knowne unto, nor taken notice of, by the Jewes; and therefore all interpreters (in a manner) agree that they worshiped him as a God: I referre the studious Reader here, to Opus imperf. in Matth. hom. 2. and Salmeron. Tract. 38. Tom. 3. and Anselm. s. and cyprian. serm. de stellâ & Magi, and August. serm. 29. de tempore. Divers questions from this verse may be made, concerning this STARRE, I will onely propound those which I conceive to bee of most weight, and of greatest necessity to be knowne.

Quest. 1. First, how was Christ manifested to the wise men?

Answ. Answer, by a starre; they confesse at Jerusalem, we have seene his starre, and they conclude that a new starre doth portend a new King.

Quest. 2. Secondly, why was not Christ manifested unto the Wise Men, who were Gentiles, by a speaking Angell, rather then by a dumbe and silent starre: seeing that he was so revealed unto the Israelites: an Angell from heaven (totidem verbis) even in plaine termes telling them of his nativity[d]?

[d] Luke 2. 10. 11.

Answ. 1. First some say this was done for the fulfilling of Balaams Prophesie [e] That a starre should rise from Iacob: but this is false, for the Prophet speakes there of Christ himselfe, under the type of David, who should tame the Moabites, and all his enemies.

[e] Numb. 24. 17.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this was not done without a mysterie, which was this: the Messias was to bee notified and made knowne unto the Gentiles, not immediately from heaven, but mediately by the Jewes: For out of Zion went the law, and the word of the Lord from Ierusalem[f]. Yea to the Jewes onely were committed the divine oracles of God [g], and from them flowed salvation unto the Gentiles [h].

[f] Esa. 2. 3.

[h] Ioh. 4. 22

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Iewes were more worthy then the Gentiles (at least in the Lords esteeme) and therefore God did send messages unto them by Angels: the Gentiles were dogs, and were but to gather up the crums that fell from them, and therefore God admonisheth them by a starre[i].

[i] Haymo s.

Answ. 4. Fourthly the Iewes were directed by reason in their actions, and therefore God sendes reasonable Angels unto them: but the Gentiles know not, how to use reason aright, and therefore God gives unto them a signe [k].

[k] Greg. s. Matth. 2. f. 349.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, Christ was revealed unto these Wise men by a starre, for a two-fold admonition viz. I. That they might be admonished of the person of Christ: that this Iesus, who was borne at Bethlehem, was that King, to whom (as the latine Church sings) both sunne and moone, and starres and aire doe chante by turnes, or unto whom every thing that hath breath should sing praise[l]. [l] Psal. 150. vers. last.

II. This was done, that they might bee admonished of the benefits they should receive by Christ: viz. that by a true and lively faith in this King, a new starre of the true acknowledgement of God should arise in the hearts of the faithfull, which should diffuse his light, and send forth his bright beames into the obscure world: for where the understanding is enlightned, and the affections by a true zeale throughly enflamed, there is light and brightnesse in the life and conversation.

Answ. 6. Sixtly and lastly, I answer, the Wise Men were skilfull in Astrologie and Astronomy, and therefore God revealed Christ unto them by a starre [m], where we may observe two things, first God makes Christ knowne, to the Israelites, to the Priests, to the Persians, and to Herod.

[m] Chryso. & Calvin. supra.

Secondly, hee makes Christ knowne unto these, by things best knowne unto every one of them, and most credited. Christ was manifested to the Israelites by an Angel (Luke 2. 10) to the Persians by a starre: to the Priests and Herod, by the Priests and Magi of the Persians in this Chapter.

Quest. 3. Thirdly, it may bee demanded what manner of starre it was, by which Christ was revealed unto the Wise Men?

Answ. 1. Many grossely, and ridiculously answer this question, which answer I will but barely recite. I. Some say it was an Astrologicall constellation, by a certaine influence shewing Christ, because these Wise Men say; we have seene his star. II. Others say, this was the Holy Ghost, who in the shape of a Dove was seene of the Jewes, when hee descended upon Christ [a]. III. Others say it was that Angell which appeared unto the Sheepherds [b], of which opinion was Chrysostome: But the Angels never appeared unto any, but they speake unto those to whom they appeared; now this starre was mute, and therefore it was no Angell.

[a] Ioh. 1. 32.

[b] Luke 2. 9. 10.

IV. Others say, it was the starre that was foretolde of by Balaam: and some tell us, [c] that 12 men every yeare were appointed perpetually, and carefully to watch for this starre: which they imagined should have the forme of an infant bearing a crosse upon his shoulders. V. The Priscillianists dreame, that to every man as soone as hee is borne, is borne a starre, wherein his fate and destinie may be seene and knowne: and this starre (say they) was such an one, being created just at the nativity of Christ, and fatal unto him. All these I reject, & passe by, comming to more probable conjectures.

Answ. 2. Some answer that this starre was a Comet in the aire: this seemes to many to bee the truth, and therefore I wil a little more strictly examine it: considering herein these foure things. First what what a comet is, Secondly the names of a comet. Thirdly, the ſignification of a comet. Fourthly, wherein and how this ſtarre differed from a comet. A comet is by ſome [d] deſcribed thus: It is an earthly exhalation, of a drie, warme, groſſe, clammy or viſcous nature, who having his parts wel compacted together, and being elevated unto the higheſt region of the aire, by reaſon of his vicinitie unto the elementall fire, and his owne groſſe and tough nature, is inflamed, and ſo becomes luminous or ſhining.

A Comet hath foure names given unto it, firſt, it is called a Comet, ſecondly a Blazing Starre, thirdly, a bearded ſtarre, and fourthly, a long tailed ſtarre.

According to the Philoſophers a comet hath divers ſignifications. Firſt, it is a ſigne of a drie and barren ſeaſon to come. Secondly, it is a ſigne of much winde, and great windes. Thirdly, it is a ſigne of forreine warres. Fourthly, it is the ſigne of domeſticall ſedition, or jarres within the bowels of a land. Fiftly, it is a ſigne of the death of ſome prince [e].

[e] Ariſt. lib. de Meteor.

This Starre here obſerved by the Wiſe Men, was no vulgar comet, as may appeare by theſe differences. Firſt, it differed from a Comet in ſplendor; this ſtarre was ſeene in the day time, but comets vaniſh, when the Sunne appeates.

Secondly, in apparition, this ſtarre was ſeene onely of and by the Wiſe Men, but comets of whole townes, cities, and for the moſt part by the whole land. Thirdly, in the motion of it, ſometimes this ſtarre moves, ſometimes it ſtands ſtill, it walkes along with them, it directs them as a guyde to the place, where they would bee, and then ſtands ſtill over the place where Chriſt was, none of which things are proper to a vulgar or ordinary comet.

Anſw. 3. I anſwer againe (becauſe it is called a ſtarre)

I. that there are many ſorts of ſtarres: First, fixed ſtarrs in the eighth ſphere, ſuch was not this ſtar:

II. Secondly blazing ſtarres, of which in the former anſwer.

III. Thirdly, the ſeaven planets, who are fixed in their orbs, & are as cõſtant in their courſes as the fixed ſtarres: but every one of them hath his ſeverall orbe, and therefore are called wandring ſtarres, becauſe unto us they ſeeme to appeare ſometimes in one place, ſomtimes in another, ſometimes neare unto one ſtarre, ſometimes neare unto another: this ſtarre was no planet neither, for it differed from the planets in theſe things. I. in the originall of it: it now had only its being, they from the beginning. II. in the end of it, the planets are appointed for times and ſignes and ſeaſons, but this ſtarre onely for this one worke and time. III. In the ſituation of it, they are placed in their orbes above the region of fire, this ſtarre in the loweſt region of the aire. IV. In the duration and continuance, the planets ſhall continue to the worlds end, but this was quickely diſſipated. I might here diſpute, whether this ſtarre was now created as a ſubſtance, and by and by reduced to his firſt matter, as the Schoole-men thinke: or whether it was imprinted only in the aire as a quæſtio ſor, and then vaniſhed away, as is moſt probbale, becauſe it was ſeene by the Wiſe Men onely: but as a leſſe needfull controverſie I paſſe it by.

IV. Fourthly, there is a miraculous ſtarre created for ſome one time, differing from the other three ſorts of ſtarres in ſomething: and ſuch a ſtarre was this, being altogether miraculous, as I ſhewed in the concluſion of the former anſwer. Concerning the forme of this ſtarre I muſt gheſſe with others, that either it was of the forme of a comet, or an ignis fatuus, or of Caſtor and Pollux: this is conjecturall and therefore I leave it; concluding according to the Evangeliſts minde and meaning, that there was a new light, placed either in the air (as is moſt probable) or in the firmament (leſſe likely) by the providence and appointment of God, to bee a guide and directer for the Wiſe Men, to bring them unto Chriſt.

Queſt. 4. How did this ſtarre differ from the fixed ſtars? Anſwer in five things. I. The other ſtars were created at the beginning of the world, this onely upon the day of Chriſts nativity. II. Some ſay [f] this ſtar differed from others in forme, becauſe it bare the forme of a child, carrying a croſſe upon his ſhoulders: this opinion is borrowed from Balaams hiſtory, which Chryſoſtome told us before, and which, as a legende I leave. III. It differed from others in ſplendor, all the õther ſtarres not being able to direct the Wiſe Men, as this did. This is alſo the former Friars opinion, and I leave it to the readers judgement; becauſe to my weake underſtanding, it ſeemes of no great force; the ſtarre not appearing to them by night, when other ſtars give their light: but by day, when the Sunne gave them light, not the ſtarre. IV. It differed from the fixed ſtarres in place or ſituation; they being fixed in the firmament, but this in the aire; and as it is probable neare unto the earth, becauſe otherwiſe it could hardly ſo punctually direct the Wiſe men, as it did. V. This ſtarre differed from the other in office, for their office is to manifeſt the night: we know night is at hand when ſtars appeare, and that the ſunne is ſet: but this ſtarre ſhowes, that now it is day, and that the Sunne of Righteouſneſſe doth ſhine in the world.

Queſt. 5. Fiftly, why did not the Starre accompanie and direct them into Ieruſalem?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome ſay becauſe they that ſeek humane helpe, are deprived of divine: and therefore: ſeeing they went to Ieruſalem to be inſtructed, and would not adhere to the conduct of the ſtar therefore it left them; but this anſwer ſeeming ſomething abſurde, I inſiſt not upon it.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome ſay, becauſe ſignes belong unto infidels, not to Jewes, therefore the Starre leaves them, when they come thither. Greg. ſ. Matth. 2. f. 349.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, I anſwer, the ſtarre left them for this end, that this their queſtioning with the Jewes might bee a meanes the more generally, to publiſh and divulge the nativity of Chriſt.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, This was done principally that the wiſe-men might be inſtructed cõcerning Chriſt, by the word of God, and not by miracles.

Queſt. 6. Sixtly, it may bee demanded, how doe the wiſe

28 wise men by the starre conjecture, that Christ is borne?

Answ. 1. First, some thinke, they knew by the starre of the birth of Christ, by Balaams tradition, (Numb 24. 17) they being of the linage of Balaam (according to some) as we said before.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say they knew it by the Sybilles prophecies, some whereof Suetonius mentioneth.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, others say they were taught it by the devill. 1. Because they were heathens and infidels: but Balaam although a worldling was taught and directed by God in his prophecies. 2. Because Sathan sometimes speakes true, as Acts 16. 17. but this is alwaies for some wicked end, the devill being that wicked one: but this manifestation was for the good of many; a good message unto all nations, and therefore was not revealed by Sathan. 3 The devill certainely knew where Christ was borne, and therefore if hee had revealed unto them his birth, hee would also have revealed the place of his nativity.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, others say, they knew it by the motion of the starre towards Ierusalem, and that house where Christ was; but this seemes a meere conceit and phancy.

Fiftly, they were very learned men, and therefore it is credible, that they had calculated or collected the time of Christs nativity: and that either 1. by a supputation of Daniels weekes; or 2. by the Scepter, which was taken away from Iuda. Answ. 5.

Sixtly, some say that they knew of the nativity of Christ by divination, or astrologie. Calvin indeede confesseth, that they were very skilfull in that art, but yet I cannot thinke that they did this way come to the understanding of it; and that for these causes. 1. Because this starre was some stupendious thing against nature [f], being neither planet, nor comet, nor constellation, nor starre, as is aforesaid; and confirmed largely by others [g]. 2. Because this starre did tell of a particular King of the Iewes, which doth exceede all art. Answ. 6.

Seventhly, Although they did not wholy know this by art, yet the beginning of it was from art (as Calvin saith) for the understanding whereof, take notice, that there are two sorts of observations. Answ. 7.

to wit either { Ordinary, and those by aspects and constellations, either by Astrologie, or Astronomy. / Extraordinary and they are either { Metaphysicall, and supernaturall, as are the vulgar and ordinary Comets. or Antiphysicall and contrary to nature, and such { Was the Eclipse, Matthew. 27. 45. of which in his proper place. / Was this Starre, in this place.

And therefore Astrologye could say, first negatively, that this starre was against nature. And secondly in generall that it did portend some great thing: And thus farre their astrologie led them, and here left them.

Answ. 8. Lastly, I answer, they knew it by the divine inspiration of the Spirit of God: as God revealed things to Balaam, Nebuchadnezzer, Balthazar [h]. And this is most probable, and likelye to be truest.

[h] Beta s. & Sculf. Idea. conc. f. 87.

Sect. 3. Quest. §. 3. That we may worship him.] It may be here asked, How doe these wise men, who were Gentiles, desire to worship Christ, or with what adoration?

Answ. 1. First, after the Persian manner, as a King whom they perceive in time, will be most famous of all others.

Answ. 2. Secondly, by way of prevention, because they knew that in time hee should rule and have dominion over the East parts: and therefore they come to worship him, that he may then be propitious and favourable unto them: These two answers are given by some of our interpreters, and I leave them to the considerations of the reader.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they come to worship Christ as one more then a man, as may bee shewed by these reasons. 1. If they had conceived Christ to have beene no more then a man, it had beene a great folly in them, to have exposed themselves to danger, by provoking of Herod, for the onely sight of him. 2 It had beene a thing not beseeming the gravity and wisedome of such men, as they were, to have undertaken so long a journey (though there had beene no danger in it) to have seene a child, that was no more then a man. 3. It had beene derogatory to the estimation and credit of the Persian Kings, for them that were Persians, to have come so farre to worship the King of the Iewes. And therefore we may conclude, that this proceeds from faith, and from some knowledge they had revealed unto them of Christ the Messias and Saviour: but of this something more in the 11. verse.

Vers. 3.

§. 1. VERS. 3. When Herod the King heard these words, hee was troubled, and all Ierusalem with him.

Why was Herod troubled? Sect. 1. Quest.

For two things, First, least he should loose his Kingdome; but this feare was needlesse, Christs Kingdome being spirituall, not of this world. Secondly, for his owne wicked and accusing conscience, which cryed out against him, for the infinite insolences, and villanies which hee had committed: for I. he had gotten the kingdome treacherously and perfidiously: hee bought it with money of Antonius after hee had slaine Hircanus, Nicanor, and the High-priest [a]. II least he should have beene expelled and deposed, or throwne from his throne, hee had committed many murthers. 1. he slew innocent Aristobulus his wives brother. 2 Alexandra his wives Mother. 3 Mariamne his owne wife, whom he loved so extremely, that hee grew extreame jealous of her. 4. Ioseph his owne Fathers brother. 5. Alexander, and Aristobulus, and Antipater, his owne sonnes. 6. The innocent Friends of his sonne Alexander. 7. The Idumeans who were his owne friends, viz. Castabarus, Lysimachus, Antipater, and Dositheus. 8. The whole Sanhedrim of the Pharisees. 9. The chiefe of the Iewish nobility: these these hee slew intentionaliter, for he caused them to be kept together in a place called Hyppodramus, secretly giving in charge to his sisters Salome, and Alexa, that so soone as hee was dead, they should cause them all to be slaine: because hee thought that the Iewes hating him for his tyranny would rejoyce at his death, but by this meanes they should bee inforced to sorrow all over the kingdome [b].

[b] Ioseph. 479. and Macrobius III.

III. Having (as he thought) made all sure, these that hee feared, being now removed out of the way, suddenly all his hopes are dashed by this message: now fearing the sedition of the people; now fearing, lest all his cruelty and tyranny would be revenged upon him: yea now (through the message of the wise men) he feares, that all his money given to the Romans for his Kingdome is utterly lost: Teaching us, that an evill conscience alwaies feares, and presageth evill, it being more clamorous then a thousand witnesses: for first the conscience is alwaies at hand, quocunque fugis, teipsum non fugis [c], fly whether thou wilt, thou canst not fly from thy conscience. Secondly, as the conscience is alwaies present, so is it alwaies prepared to accuse it selfe, as Iosephs brethren did, when they were roughly handled by Ioseph, they say it is just upon them, for their crueltie shewed towards their brother [d]: so Herod the lesse, when he heares of Christ, he saith, this is no other then Iohn whom I have beheaded [e]. Yea thirdly, this is the just judgement of God (quisquis habet ultorem sceleris [f]) that every wicked man should have both a Iudge and a hangman; an accuser and condemner within himselfe: and thus had this Herod: when he heares tidings of a King of the Iewes, he being but a wicked usurper, and cruell tyrant, presently feares his owne downefall.

Sect. 2. Quest.

§. 2. And all Ierusalem with him.] Hence it may be demanded, why Ierusalem is troubled? Herod hath no part in the Messias, and therefore no marvell if hee feare: but Christ was promised unto the Iewes, & they dayly expect him, & therefore why are they troubled at this newes?

Answ. 1.

Firſt, some say, the Iewes were troubled onely with the noveltie of the thing, but were neither terrified, nor sorry for the newes: thus once thought Calvin, but afterwards disliked it.

Answ. 2.

Secondly, others answer that either they loved Herod, or at least they flattered him: (Regis ad exemplum totus componitur orbis) And therefore seeing, hee was troubled in deede, they are troubled in shew: but Herod so inhumainely tyrannising over them as he did, makes me that I cannot imagine this to be the cause of their feare.

Answ. 3.

Thirdly, wickednesse was so rooted in their hearts, and they accustomed to all manner of impiety in their lives, that they desire not a peaceable, holy, and just King (who would punish their offences) to rule over them: and hence afterwards they utterly disclaime Christ: nolumus hunc regnare, we will not have this man to rule over us.

Answ. 4.

Fourthly, they were troubled because they feare, that this message will exasperate Herods suspition, and sharpen his tyranny more against them: but this their disturbance implyes something more then this.

Answ. 5.

Fiftly, I answer, they were now at peace, (although a base peace, conjoyned with slavery and tyranny) and therefore they doe not desire by new afflictions to prepare a way for the Messias, wordly peace thus blocking up the way to Christ: they feare to bee afflicted by Cæsar; and therefore will not acknowledge Christ, as wee may see clearely by a place or two: The Iewes perceiving the extraordinary miracles that Christ wrought, gather together, and take councell thus. If we let this man alone, then all will beleeve in him, and the Romans will come and take away both our place and Nation [a]. And afterwards Christ being accused to Pilate, and he desirous to remitt him, the Iewes cry out unto him, If thou let this man goe, thou art not Cæsars friend, for whosoever maketh himselfe a King, speaketh against Cæsar [b]. And therefore for their parts they utterly deny Christ, protesting that they have no King but Cæsar [c]. And thus they are troubled when they heare of the King of the Iewes, fearing least hereby the Romans should bee incensed against them, and so their peace disturbed, and their misery renewed.

§. 1. VERS. 4. And when Herod had gathether all the chiefe Priests and Scribes of the people together, he demanded of them, where Christ should be borne?

Vers. 4.

We may observe hence, that the Scripture is three manner of waies handled.

Sect. 1.

1. By the Scribes, who reade and study the Scriptures, that they may understand them, and bee able to dispute of those truths contained in them; and goe no further then knowledge, and the information of the judgement. 2. By Herod; he desires to know the Scriptures, that hee may therby the better know, how to oppose Christ, & sooner to prevaile against him: which he feares not, but hee shall easily accomplish, if by the Scriptures he can but learne, where he is: Thus wicked men often reade the Scriptures, that they may wrest them for the patronage of their sins: hence some have learned to urge those examples of Iosephs feasting of his brethren [d], whereby it is said they drunke and were merry, or drunke largely; and of Christs turning water into wine at the marriage [e], where it is said, and when men have well drunken, then the worst wine will serve, for the justifying or excusing of drunkennesse. Thus others excuse their lying by Abrahams and the Mid-wives examples: Heretikes they also study Scripture, that they may either thereby overthrow Scripture, by finding some contradictions and falshoodes in them, as they falsly suppose; or at least and best that they may finde some (medium) midst, whereby they may defend their errors, by wresting and forcing the Scriptures to speak on their side. Both these are wicked Gospellers, that study the Word of God, onely for table talke, and the informing of the minde, as the Scribes did: or who study the Scriptures for some direct wicked end as Herod did. 3. The Scripture is handled by the 30 Wiſe-men, for this end, that knowing the truth, they may follow it: they deſire in ſincerity of heart to know where Chriſt is, that they may runne unto him, fall downe before him, and with their ſoules and hearts truely worſhip him: And theſe only are wiſe Goſpellers, who deſire to know the will of God, that they may zealouſly endeavour to doe it.

Sect. 2. §. 2. He gathered together the chiefe Prieſts &
Queſt. 1. Scribes. It may heere be queſtioned, who theſe Anſw. were? Intending elſewhere to ſpeake largely of theſe, I wil here be briefe. Firſt, the name of High-Prieſt, did belong to the prime and chiefeſt ſacerdotall office, which office, 1. was vitall, and continued for terme of life [e]; 2. now it was become annuall, & continued but for a yere [f]; 3. This office was now divided betwixt two, as it is ſaid; Annas and Caiaphas being the High Prieſts [g]. 4. High Prieſts, or as heere Chiefe Prieſts in the plurall number, ſignifie either thoſe that are of the ſtocke of Aaron, or Eleazar, or thoſe who have borne the office formerly, for a yeere: or thoſe who were governours of the Sanhedrim.

e Numb. 3. 25.
f Ioh. 11. 49. & 18. 13.
g Luk. 3. 2.

Secondly, Scribe is the name of one of the ſeven ſects that were amongſt the Iewes: for Anſw. 2. there were 1. Scribes, 2. Phariſees, 3. Saducees, 4. Hemerobaptiſts, 5. Nazarenes, 6. Eſſeens, 7. Herodians [h]. The Scribes they were interpreters of the law; and hence (in this verſe) Herod called both the Governours of the Sanhedrin the Chiefe-Prieſts, and alſo thoſe that were skilfull in the law, the Scribes: that ſo it might bee a lawfull Councell: and yet the end of this Convocation or convocated Councell was for the ruine and overthrowe of Chriſt: teaching us Obſerv. that a true Councell may erre: that this was a true Councell appeares thus. Firſt, it was lawfully called by Herod the King. Secondly, thoſe that were gathered together in Councell, were the lawfull Rectors and Doctors of the people of God, the Iewes. Thirdly, the conſultation was about a maine queſtion of Religion, the true Meſſias: and yet notwithſtanding all this was done for a wrong, and a wicked end.

h Epiphan. & Danæus.

Hence it may be doubted, If a lawfull Councell may erre concerning religion who then Queſt. 2. muſt interpret the Scriptures? Anſwer, there are three interpreters of the Scriptures?

Firſt, I and thou, or every particular man: now this is to bee exploded; that is, when one private mans opinion or expoſition ſhall croſſe all that hath beene before, it is lightly to bee waved, or not much to be weighed: and yet there have beene ſuch, who have ſpoken truth: as for example, Saint Hierome expounding thoſe words. The God of this World hath blinded their eyes [a], by the God of this world he underſtands the devill; which expoſition was called inventum Hieronymi, Hieronymies phanſy or inventiõ, becauſe they that were before him expounded it of God the Lord; and yet we ſee, that his interpretatiõ is true, and all the other miſtooke the place, by an unanimous conſent of all our now Interpreters, I might give inſtance likewiſe of Auguſtines invention (as they called it) concerning the creation of the Angels; but I paſſe it by, concluding, that a private and particular mans expoſition, which thwarts all that hath gone before it, as it is not raſhly to be beleeved, and admitted of, ſo it is not to bee adjudged to the fire, nor wholy rejected, till it have beene examined by other Scriptures and the analogie of faith.

a 2 Cor. 4. 4.

Secondly, the ſecond interpreter of the Scriptures are the Fathers, and Councells of the Church; theſe are venerable, highly to bee prized, and much eſteemed: but yet not wholy and abſolutely to be adhered unto, or admitted, without examining of them by Scriptures.

Thirdly, the laſt and beſt interpreter of Scriptures, is the word of God it ſelfe, and this interpretation is to be admitted, accepted, and received: nil difficile quod non alibi planum [b], In fundamentall points abſolutely neceſſary unto ſalvation, that which is obſcure in one place, is more plaine and eaſie unto the underſtanding, in another: And thus every expoſition of holy writ, is to be examined, whether it doe croſſe, or contradict any other plaine place of Scripture or no: for the whole Scripture is as one truth, and therefore that cannot bee the true ſenſe of one place, that belies another.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Herod demanded of them, where Chriſt
Queſt. 1. ſhould be borne.

It may heere bee doubted, whether Herod did well in asking counſell of the Chiefe Prieſts concerning Chriſt, or no?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, I anſwer, to take counſell of them, and adviſe with them, was both according to the cuſtome of the Iewiſh Church, and alſo was well done: becauſe to them were committed the Oracles of God, and therefore the Gentiles in theſe caſes were to repaire unto them, and all the Proſelites were inſtructed by them.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, I anſwer, that this was not well done of Herod to adviſe with them upon an hy-Obſerv. pocriticall pretexte: Teaching us, that truth is to be ſought in the word, and of the Miniſters of the word, they being appointed by God for this ſervice and worke [c] that is, Firſt, to teach men, what things are to be beleeved, and known. Secondly, to leade and draw men unto thoſe things, that are to bee obeyed and done: the Scriptures being given for this end, to make a man perfect in knowledge, faith, and obedience, unto ſalvation [d]. Thirdly, to admoniſh, adviſe, perſwade, and exhort [e], whence wee are called diſpenſers [f], that give unto all, that are hungry, good and wholeſome meate, and that in due time: and therefore although it be blame-worthy, to doe as ſome doe, to queſtion with the Miniſters of God, and deſire to bee reſolved by them of ſome ſcruples, for this end that they may entrappe them in their talke, or enſnare them, as the Iewes did with Chriſt: yet it is according to the ordinance & appointment of God, that thoſe that are in doubt, ſhould have recourſe unto his meſſengers for comfort, conſolation & directiõ.

d 2 Tim. 3. 16.
e 1 Tim. 4. 13. & 2. Tim. 2. 25.
f Cor. 4. 1.

Hence it may be demãded quomodo, & quatenus,
Queſt. 2. how and how farre we muſt beleeve the Church, and the Miniſters thereof.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, if the holy Citie become an harlot, and the watchmen of the citie ſeeke onely their owne owne pompe, and glory, and covetousnesse, &c. then they are not to be beleeved.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if the voyce of the Church, and Church-men, be not vox Dei, the voyce of the Lord, we must not then heare, nor beleeve them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wee must heare the Church, and chiefe Priests, and Scribes (as Herod in this verse) but then examine by the Scriptures what they teach unto us: for this Christ commands [g], Search the Scriptures: and Paul commends in those noble Bereans [h], that searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so, that were preached unto them. And this we see, is the present practise of this present Councell holden at Jerusalem, the Magi they repaire unto the Church at Jerusalem, Herod he repaires to the Priests, and they to the Scriptures.

[g] Ioh. 5. 39.

[h] Act. 17. 11.

Vers. 11. VERS. 5. And they sayd unto him, in Bethlehem of Iudea, for thus it is written by the Prophet.

Quest. 1. Why doth the Lord suffer Herod to know where Christ was borne, seeing he sought his life; to prevent which, Ioseph was constrained to flye? Could not the Lord first have admonished the wisemen not to have come to Jerusalem at all, or have blinded the understanding of the Pharisees, that they should not know where Christ was born, seeing Herod desired not the knowledge of it for good., but formischiefe?

Answ. 1. I answer, First, God would not take away such a cleare testimonie of Christ from Herod; the Lord will have him know of the birth of Christ, that by his owne experience, he may perceive and acknowledge, that there is no sorcerie against Iacob, nor inchantment against Israel: yea, that all his Fox-like craft and subtiltie cannot availe him, but that maugre his malice, God will preserve this infant (the newes whereof doth so trouble him) from his rage, tyranny, and crueltie.

Answ. 2. Secondly, God would not take from his children the participation of the crosse. For 1. God can keepe and preserve all his from all danger, whensoever hee will. But 2. Ordinarily hee will not, neither doth manifest his power in the beginning. But 3. Let them fall into danger and then he delivers them.

Hence a quære will bee made.

Quest. 2. Why doth not the Lord rather preserve his children from danger at all, then first suffer them to come into distresse, and then helpe them out?

Answ. 1. I answer first, this is more for Gods glory: he hereby shewing his power, that hee can deliver even out of the jawes of the Lyon, and take away the prey from betweene his teeth [a].

[a] 2 Tim. 4. 17.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this is better for us: sharpe salt makes meate eate the more savourly: we know not what temporall blessings are, untill we want them: Quanta voluptate jamdiu carui (said Dionysius, when he was throughly hungry, before hee could have any thing to eate) no meat tasts so well, as that which is eaten with hunger sauce: and hence it is, that the Lord permits his children to fall into affliction, that their joy may be the more compleat, when they are delivered.

§. 1. VERRS. 6. And thou Bethlehem in the land of Iuda, art not the least among the Princes of Iuda: for out of thee shall come a Governour, that shall rule my people Israel. Vers. 6.

This verse is cited out of the old Testament, Sect. 1. where the place here alleadged is read thus (in shew contrary to this verse.) Micah 5. Chapter. vers. 2. But thou Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be litle among the thousands of Iudah, yet out of thee shall hee come forth unto me, that is to be Shepheard in Israel. Reconcil.

It will here be demanded, how the places may be reconciled? Quest.

I answer first, here seemes indeed, I confesse, to be some apparent changes, in the citing of this Propheſie, as Answ. 1.

Micah 5. 2.	Mat. 2. 6.
1. Though thou bee little.	1. Thou art not the least.
2. Amõg the thousands of Judah.	2. Among the Princes of Iudah.
3. That shall bee shepheard in Israel.	3. That shall rule my people Israel.

Secondly, the particle of the Prophet is adversative: as in the Psalme, I am small [b], and despised, yet doe I not forget thy law. i. e. Although I am small and despised, &c. So againe, Many are my persecutors and enemies, yet doe I not decline from thy testimonies [c]. i. e. although my enemies be many, yet, &c. So else where, the blind man sayth, This is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence hee is, and yet hee hath opened mine eies [d]. i. e. Although he hath opened my eyes, yet, &c. So here the sense is, Although thou bee little, oh Bethlehem, in regard of the Princes of Iudah, yet notwithstanding out of thee shall come a Governour, that shall rule my people Israel. Answ. 2.

[c] Psa. 119. 157.

[d] Ioh. 9. 30.

Thirdly, what Saint Matthew saith, the Prophet Micah insinuates: that is, Out of thee shall come one, who shall not be the least. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, Micahs words may bee read thus, by an interrogation: Art thou the least of the rulers? thou art not: as Iob saith, Wilt thou draw the Whale with a hooke? That is, thou canst not [e]. Answ. 4.

[e] Iob. 40. 30.

Fiftly, Saint Matthew hath respect unto the end of the Propheſie; or unto the dignity, that the City Bethlehem should have after the nativity of Christ therein [f]. Answ. 5.

[f] Beza.

Sixtly, the Evangelist doth not change the Propheſie, but the Pharisees they render it, thus changed unto Herod [g]. Answ. 6.

[g] Iunii Parall.

Lastly, although not the Pharisees, but the Evangelist have changed the Propheſie; yet it is no reall change, but onely verball; because he shewes the true sense in other words: viz. thou art the least in regard of thy selfe, but in this respect thou art not the least [h]. And therefore the phrase is prudently changed in regard of the Answ. 7.

[h] Calvin.

32 time, when it was altered, because now Bethlehem was become a noble and a royal City, Christ the i Tremel f Mich. 5. 2. Messias being now borne there[i]. So that from the premisses, the sense of the verse seemes to be this, that the City Bethlehem amongst the families of Iuda was the least, but now by the birth of Christ there, it is become to be a thrice noble City.

Sect. 2. Observ. §. 2. And thou Bethlehem Iudah.] There were two Bethlehems, the first in the portion of Zabulon k Ioſh. 19. 15. l Muſc. & Gualt. ſ. k, and this Bethlehem was in Galile[l]. Secondly, in Judah[m]. And this is is called Bethlehem Ephrata. Gen. 35. 19. and 48. 7. So named from m Iudg. 19. 1. Ephrata one of Calebs wives[n]. This is the opinion of Tremell. ſ. Micah 5. 2. as also of Lyranus & Rabbi Solomone, that hence it was called n 1 Paral. 2. 19. Ephrata, after which name, was added Bethlehem, for the abundance of corne that it brought forth after that great barrenneſſe that was in o Ruth. 1. the dayes of Elimelech[o]. Thus thinke the forenamed authors. But I cannot admit of this for these two causes. First, because that Caleb, who had so many wives dyed before Moses: and Caleb the sonne of Iephuneh it was not (Numb. 14. Ioſh. 14.) Secondly, the name Bethlehem was knowne to Moses (because it is mentioned in Geneſis) and therfore it was not brought into the land of promise after his death.

Queſt. Why was Christ borne in Bethlehem?

Anſw. Answer, because the promise of the Messias p 1 Sam. 16. 1. was made to David, & Bethlehem was a City of David[p] and therefore it is called the City of Da- q Luk 2. 4. and Ioh. 7. 47. vid, by the Evangelists[q].

Verſ. 7. VERS. 7. Then Herod, when hee had privily called the Wiſe men, enquired of them diligently, what time the ſtarre appeared.

Queſt. It may here bee questioned, why doth Herod call the Wise men secretly?

Anſw. Because he calls them for evill: he had a wicked purpose in his malicious heart towards Christ, and therefore he calls them secretly, asking their counsell, but hiding his intent from them.

Obſerv. Teaching us, that it is the nature of wicked a Pro. 1, 11 men, to hid their Counsell, that they may the better hurt the religious[a].

Obiect. It may bee objected, it is lawfull for a man to b Pro. 11. 13 hide his Counsels: Salomon saith, Hee that is of a faithfull spirit concealeth the matter[b].

Anſw. I answer there are divers sorts of hiders, or concealers.

First, some hide their Counsels, least they themselves should be harmed of others, by the revealing of their Counsell: this is prudence and good providence, both allowable and lawfull, for a man to be cautelous & warie of revealing his secrets unto others, least so he bring himselfe into c Pro. 11. 13 danger. and that which Salomon speakes of, in the place objected[c].

Secondly, some hide their counsels and conceale their secrets, least their friends should be hurt by the revealing of them: this is honesty,

Thirdly, some hide their counsels, that they may harme others; this is wicked, and the practise of wicked men: and it is two-fold 1. Vindicando, inferendo mala: when they desire to bee avenged, and to bring some mischiefe and evill upon some one or other: and this was Herods intent in this place. 2. Supplantando, auferendo bona, when they have a purpose to supplant some one or other, by some bargaines, or deprive them of some thing they possesse, or to wrong them by some meanes in their estates: Now this third sort of hiding and concealing counsels is altogether forbidden, for these causes.

First, because it argues a wicked man: the truth fears not the light, but the sun is an enemy to him that doth evill[d]. Secondly, because it
d Ioh. 3. 20. argues a distrust in the providence of God, and a confidence in a mans owne wicked prudence: thinking, God hath forgotten him[e] and therefore hee must trust to himselfe, and his owne e Psalm. 10 10. carnal wisedome. Thirdly, because this is a deed full of danger, a practise very perilous: the Lord having threatned to Judge these wicked secrets[f] f Rom. 2. 16. yea, to punish them: One speaketh peaceably to his neighbour (saith the Lord) with his mouth, but in his heart hee layeth wait: ſhall I not visit for theſe things, and bee avenged of ſuch tranſgreſſors?[g] Fourthly, because it is a foolish thing, and argues g Ierem. 9. 9. him to bee a foole that doth it[h]. It is a foolish h Pro. 10. 18. thing (I say) for a man to hide his counsels (that hee may the sooner hurt his neighbour) in a double respect. 1. Because the time will come, when this thy counsel shall bee laid open, and made manifest unto the whole world: and therefore it is but a folly now to hide it[i]. 2. Because i Luk. 8. 17. and 12. 2. even now when thou most closely concealest thy counsel, it is most apparent unto three, who will bee both witnesses against thee, to accuse thee, and Judges also to condemne thee. It is a great folly for a man to hide a murther from his neighbour and dearest Friend, and commit it in the sight of the Judge, Jury, and his most deadly enemies: So here wicked Herod, and other wicked men in this kinde, hide their bloody intents, treacheries and mischievous practises from others, when in the meane time, they are clearely seene and knowne, first to their owne conscience, which will be more clamorous then a thousand witnesses against them. Secondly, to the Divell, who will accuse them[k]. Thirdly, k Eccleſ. 10 10. to God, who is greater then the Divell, or their own Consciences, and will both accuse and con-

§. 1. VERS. 8. And Herod ſaid unto the Wiſe men, goe and ſearch diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him, bring me word againe, that I may come and worſhip him alſo. Verſ. 8.

Sect. 1. Obſerv. Wee may observe here, that although the Wise men were no wicked men, yet a wicked man goes about to abuse them, by making them instruments and co-workers with him in his wickednesse: they must search out the child, and finding it, bring him word that he may slay it. Teaching us that oftentimes the righteous are in great great danger to bee abuſed by the wicked unto wickedneſſe [m], and that for theſe three cauſes.

[m] 2 Sam. 15.11.&c.

Firſt, becauſe familiar friends can ſcarce deny, what they are intreated: as Iehoſhaphat ſaid unto Ahab, I am as thou art, & my people as thy people [n]: And hence oftentimes they conſent, through their friends importunitie to that which is evill. Secondly becauſe wicked men are crafty, like unto the Lapwing, crying moſt, when they are fartheſt from their neaſts, hiding their hearts from him, whom they meane to deceive: yea under good actions they can hide and cover wicked intentions, as Herod did here both with the Wiſe men, Chiefe Prieſts, and Scribes. Thirdly, becauſe charity is not ſuſpicious, but alwayes hopes the beſt, and therfore oftentimes is moſt quickly deceived.

[n] 1 King. 22.4.

Sect. 2. §. 2. That I may come and worſhip him: It may here bee asked, why doth not Herod ſay, venit, eamus, come let us goe, but I præ, ſequar, goe before, and I will follow after?

Queſt.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, becauſe hee was idle, he would not take the paines to ſeeke Chriſt.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, hee is here in a type of wicked and carnall men, who ſtand in neede of fore-runners unto Chriſt.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe if he had gone with them, he might have been hindred by them from his purpoſe; and therefore hee goes not, but awaits, untill they bring him word of the place of Chriſts abode, that then privily he may deſtroy him, and not be hindered by any.

Sect. 3. §. That I may come and worſhip him.] Wee Obſerva.

Anſw. I anſwer, there are two things here to be diſtinguiſhed, to wit,

- Diſsimulatio, Diſſembling; which is committed either
  - Loquendo by ſpeaking deceitfully; and this is a lye; as Herod here promiſeth to worſhip him, but purpoſeth no leſſe.
  - Tacendo, by ſilence, & holding ones peace: or a hiding of a mans own counſel, and this is lawful [f], that is, if thou do it wel; viz. that thou may conceale
    - Thine anger, Prov. 12.6.
    - The ſinnes of others, Prov. 17.9.

    But this ſilence is not lawfull, if thou doe it onely to hide thy malice, and deſire of revenge, &c.
- Simulatio, counterfeiting of that which is not, or a meere pretence: and this is altogether unlawfull.

[f] Pro. 29.11

It may bee here replyed, Pretences are lawfull, and allowable; and therefore all are not forbidden.

Object. 2.

Anſw. I anſwer. Pretexts are either

- False, and this is palpable fraud, and no leſſe than lying, being lawfull to none at any time, upon any occaſion: and this was HERODS fault, a meere falſe pretence.
- True, and that is either
  - Conditionally true, as our Saviour made, as though hee would have gone further [g], and certainly ſo would, if they had not entreated him to ſtay with them.
  - Partly, but not totally true; and this ſometimes is lawfull, as Zedechiah the King bids Ieremiah the Prophet, if the Princes ſhall aske him what he ſayd unto the King [h], he muſt anſwer, that he entreated the king, that he might not returne to Ionathans houſe, to dye there. This he ſaid unto the King, but this was not all he ſayd unto him; ſo that it was partly, but not totally true; it was verum, but not veritas, that which he told the Princes was true, but that was not all the truth.

[h] Ierem. 38 26.

I will therefore thus conclude this queſtion, I. All verball Diſſimulation is evill. II. All counterfetting of that which is falſe, is evill. III. All diſſimulation unto evill, is fraudulent; yea, IV. All counterfeiting and feigning alſo, if it be for an evill end.

ſee Herod pretends one thing, but intends another, Prætendit cultum, præparat cultrum, he ſaith, he will come and worſhip him, but the Fox intends to come, and worrie him. 33

Hence it may be demanded, Whether is all Diſſimulation evill, or not? Queſt.

To this it is anſwered. Firſt, Diſſimulation is the wicked mans inſtrument unto wickedneſſe; and therefore to be eſchewed by all good men. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, Diſſimulation is a kinde of lying, mentiri eſt contra mentem ire [a], to lye is to ſpeake againſt a mans knowledge: but diſſimulation is, contra mentem ire, to ſpeake or pretend outwardly, that which our heart neither thinkes, nor intends; and therefore it is no other thing than lying [b]. Thirdly, a Chriſtian mans minde ſhould be ſimple, not double: God hath given us but one tongue, and one heart, that wee ſhould not bee double-tongued, nor double-hearted [c]; but we muſt bee ἁπλοῦς [d], ſincere, and of ſingle hearts; and therefore all diſſimulation is to be avoyded. Anſw. 2.

[c] 2 Cor. 1. 12. & 11. 3.

[d] Phil. 2. 15.

Fourthly, the end of diſſimulation is deceit, but this is evill, fraud binding, but looſing not: and therfore, ſeeing diſſembling tends and leads unto evill, as evill in it ſelfe, it is to be eſchewed. Anſw. 3.

It may be objected; Sometimes certainly it is lawfull to diſſemble, as the Father ſayth [e], Aliquando bonum eſt verum cèlare, nunquam falſum dicere, although wee are never allowed to ſpeake an untruth, yet ſometimes it is convenient to conceale part of the truth, which is nothing elſe but a kinde of diſſimulation, and therefore all diſſembling is not forbidden. Obiect. 1

[e] Auguſt.

Sect. 4. §. 4. That I may come and worſhip him.] The Magi came from farre to ſeeke Chriſt, and from their hearts deſire to finde him: Herod pretends the ſame outwardly, though the newes touch him to the quicke.

Hence a queſtion may be propounded, How may hypocrites, and the enemies of Chriſt, bee diſcerned from the children of God; and the true friends of Chriſt. Queſt.

I anſwer, By theſe notes, or markes of hypocrites. Anſw.

Firſt, they are wary, craftie, and wickedly prudent and politicke, as we ſee here in Herod.

Secondly, they are diligent and induſtrious, compaſſing ſea and land to effect their purpoſes;

34 ſes, as Herod, both in this verſe, and afterwards verſe 16.

Thirdly, they are falſe in their words, not ſticking, by lying and counterfeiting, to bring to paſſe their projects, as wee ſee Herod doth in this verſe.

Fourthly, they counterfeit friendſhip, that they may kill with more freedome and ſafetie: And thus doth Herod alſo in this place.

Fifly, they ſuborne others to aſſiſt them: vis unita fortior, that many forces being conjoyned together, they may the eaſilier prevaile: and thus Herod ſubtilly, would have had the wiſe men to have had a hand in this crueltie, and to have aſſiſted his bloudy purpoſe by their information.

Sixthly, they are cruell, breathing nothing but threatnings, ſlaughters, bloudſhed, and crueltie: and thus did Herod, verſ. 16. when hee was croſſed of his information, and intelligence from the wiſe men.

Seventhly, they are no better than Atheiſts, thinking that they can kill, Chriſt, (as Herod did here,) or at leaſt prevaile againſt him and his. Thus although many outwardly profeſſe a love unto Chriſt, the Goſpel, and true Religion, yet if they be inwardly enemies, they may be diſcerned and unmasked, at one time or other, by ſome one of theſe markes or other.

Verſ. 9. §. 1. VERS. 9. When they had heard the king, they departed, and loe, the ſtarre which they ſaw in the Eaſt, went before them, till it came, and ſtood over, where the young child was.

Sect. 1. Wee may obſerve here how many impediments and lets theſe Wiſe men meet withall, and yet how conſtant they are in their reſolution of finding out Chriſt. Firſt, the ſtarre failes them, and appeares not, which was their principall guide. Secondly, they come then unto Jeruſalem, but there they finde not the babe. Thirdly, the Jewes unto whom they came, were offended with their tidings. Herod and all the people being troubled, verſ. 3. Fourthly, no man accompanies them, when they proſecute the queſt and ſearch of Chriſt: yet all theſe doe no whit diſcourage or diſ-hearten them from their Obſerv. former intent and purpoſe: Teaching us thus much, that wee are not to bee hindered by any obſtacles from the courſe of pietie and religion; but conſtantly to proceed on in the wayes of God, notwithſtading all hindrances whatſoever.

Queſt. Here it may be asked, what lets are there, in the way of Religion, and how may we arme our ſelves againſt them?

Anſw. I anſwer, Firſt many are diſmayed by reaſon of the greatneſſe of the labour, and difficultie of the worke of the Lord; but let us remember, that Labor omnia vincit; be not weary, but be induſtrious, and thou ſhalt prevaile; for conanti aderit Deus; God hath promiſed to be graciouſly aſſiſtant to every one, that in ſinceritie of heart deſires, and endevours to ſerve him.

Secondly, many are diſcouraged, becauſe the way of Religion is not liked by the world, neither the profeſſors thereof loved, but rather deſpiſed and ſcorned: neither this ſhould hinder us from the ſervice of the Lord, although others be offended with thee, becauſe thou ſeemeſt by thy puritie and ſplendor, to eclipſe their credit & eſtimation, yet be not diſcouraged, but remember, Chriſtians muſt bee principally carefull to pleaſe God, not men [a]; both becauſe wee are the ſervants of the Lord, not the ſervants of men; and alſo, becauſe wee ſhall be judged by God, and not by man at the laſt day. [a] Rom. 12. 3.

Thirdly, ſome are with-held from the zealous profeſſion of Religion, by reaſon of the paucitie of companions, that trace that path; there are but few truly religious, and therefore they diſlike the practiſe of it: but we ſhould bee here moſt reſolute, ſaying, as Peter ſayd, Although all men ſhould forſake Chriſt, yet we will never forſake him [b], though none ſhould accompany, or aſſociate us in the worke of Religion, yet this ſhould not diſmay us; but with reſolute Ioſhua, we ſhould reſolve, let others doe as they will, we will ſerve the Lord [c], calling to minde theſe two things, I. vivimus legibus, non exemplis, God doth not command us to follow Preſidents, but to follow precepts. II. If thou deſireſt, preſidents as well as precepts, remember then, that thou haſt many examples in this kinde to imitate, both in the Old, and New Teſtament, yea, Even compaſſed about with a cloud of witneſſes [d]; and therefore follow not a multitude unto evill, but a multitude of good men unto good. Thus let us be like theſe Wiſe men, conſtant in the labour of the Lord, and in the courſe of holineſſe all the dayes wee have to live, not being either hindred, or turned backe, or diverted, by any impediments whatſoever. [b] Mark. 14. 29. [c] Ioſh. 24. 15. and 1 King. 19. 10. [d] Read Hebr. 11. the whole chap. and 12. 1.

This ſtar may be conſidered, either tropologically, or Allegorically, or hiſtorically.

Some [e] expound this ſtarre tropologically thus: Herod is the divell, and the ſtarre is the grace of God: and therefore when the Wiſe men goe unto Herod, and while they are with Herod, the ſtarre forſakes them: teaching us, that the grace of God flies thoſe, that follow the divell, or run after ſinne: becauſe the pure Spirit of God, will not come unto a polluted ſoule. [e] Haymo ſ. Epiphan. Obſerv.

This ſtarre may be conſidered of Allegorically; the ſtarre ſignifies the light of faith in the heart: and therefore although the Wiſe men have the word of God delivered unto them by the Chiefe Prieſts, which teacheth them, where Chriſt is to be borne, yet they cannot finde him, nor come unto him, untill the ſtarre of faith doth ariſe in their hearte [f]: Teaching us, that the knowledge of the Scriptures, without the light of faith is inſufficient to bring us to Chriſt: as the Apoſtle ſaith, the word profits not, when it is not mixed with faith [g]. [f] Muſcul. ſ. [g] Heb. 4. 2.

Hiſtorically this ſtarre may alſo be interpreted; even now the ſtarre was not ſeene, when they were in Jeruſalem; but as ſoone as they are upon their journey, and want a guide, it appeares unto them: Teaching us, that the Lord will never Obſer. 2. Obſerv. 3 never be abſent from his children in an acceptable time: Or, whenſoever the children of God ſtand in need of his helpe, by reaſon of any neceſſitie or danger, he will bee preſent with them, if not by and by, yet certainly at length. Hence a queſtion may be propounded.

Queſt. How may wee be aſſured of the Lords gracious ayd, and aſſiſtance in the time of trouble?

Anſw. I anſwer, by a carefull obſervation and obſervance of theſe three rules.

Firſt, labour for a pure and immaculate conſcience both towards God, and towards man, leſt otherwiſe we be plagued for our juſt deſerts, and plunged into ſome gulfe of danger for our ſins committed.

Secondly, labour that our faith may be without wavering [a], that we doe not call the mercy, or truth, or love, or power of God in queſtion, but boldly walke by faith, when wee cannot by ſight [b].

[b] 2 Cor. 5. 7.

Thirdly, although theſe two rules bee obſerved, yet thou muſt not expect ſuch mercy, or helpe, or deliverance as thou wouldeſt have, but ſuch as the Lord ſees and knowes to be behovefull, & beneficiall unto thee; for, Deus non ſemper audit ad voluntatem, vel voluptatem, ut ſemper exaudiat ad ſalutem [c]. faith doth not aſſure us of any particular temporall bleſsing, or freedome from any particular outward croſſe, but only in generall, that whatſoever the Lord knows to be good for us, in his appointed time he will give us.

[c] Iſidor. lib. 1. cap. 3. de ſum. bono.

Verſ. 10. VERS. 10. When they ſaw the Starre, they rejoyced with exceeding great joy.

Obſerv. 1 The eſtate and condition of theſe Wiſe-men, ſeemes at firſt viewe to bee deploreable and miſerable, but upon more mature deliberation, it is happie and bleſſed: for firſt, their journey was long and tedious; but God protects them in it from all danger. Secondly, Herod is netled, and the Iewes troubled; a tyrant raignes in this Citie, to which they bring the newes of the nativitie of a new King: but God doth ſo curbe, and reſtraine Herod, that he can doe them no harme, but rather performes divers friendly offices unto them.

Thirdly, they goe to Ieruſalem, hoping there to finde Chriſt, but they cannot meet with him there, for there hee is not: yet this journey is not loſt, but well ſpent; for 1. they are confirmed by the prophecie concerning Chriſt; and 2. they are taught the Citie and place, where he is to be borne.

Fourthly, they had loſt their guide, the Starre, as they came to Ieruſalem: but 1. there was no neede of it there, as is ſhewed before: and 2. when they ſtood in neede of it, it appeared againe unto them, as in this verſe:

Obſerv. 2 All this that hath beene ſaid, Teaching us, that wee often thinke our eſtates and conditions to be miſerable and evill, in regard of temporall things, when (if they were rightly weighed, examined, and conſidered) they are good and bleſſed.

Queſt. Hence it may be demanded, How ſhould we learne aright to judge of our conditions, and eſtates in theſe outward things?

Anſw. I anſwer, if we ponder our conditions according to theſe three rules

Firſt, conſider, what thou haſt deſerved juſtly at Gods hands, and what thou haſt received mercifully from his hands; and compare theſe two together, and thou ſhalt finde, that God hath dealt gratiouſly with thee, and farre above thy deſerts: yea it will make thee then confeſſe with Ieremie, that it is of the Lords mercy, that thou art not conſumed [d].

Secondly, conſider what thou haſt, not what thou wanteſt; and thou ſhalt finde that thou art at the leaſt equall, that is, thou haſt as many bleſsings, as thou wanteſt.

Thirdly, look upon thoſe that are below thee; not thoſe that are aboue thee, and thou will ſay, jam ſumus ergo pares, that there are as many in a worſe condition then thou art, as are in a better; and therefore thou haſt no cauſe to complaine, but a great deale of reaſon to bleſſe God, for that eſtate and condition wherein thou art, and to be abundantly contented with it.

§. 1. VERS. 11. And when they were come into the houſe, they ſaw the young child with Mary his Mother, and they fell downe and worſhipped him; and when they had opened their treaſures, they preſented unto him gifts, gold, and frankincenſe, and Myrrhe. Verſ. 11.

Sect. 1. It may heere be asked, How or in what manner doe the Wiſe-men finde Chriſt?

Queſt. 1.

Anſw. I anſwer, Saint Luke gives a conjecture, that they found him in a ſtable and in a manger [e].

[e] Luk. 2. 7. 12. 16.

Queſt. 2. It may bee demanded againe, Why did the Lord preadmoniſh the wiſe men, of the birth of this infant, by a miraculous ſtarre.

Anſw. I anſwer, leaſt otherwiſe they ſhould have beene offended, with this poore and meane eſtate, wherein they found Chriſt.

Queſt. 3. It will be queſtioned further, The Lord admoniſhing the Wiſe-men of the birth of Chriſt, and they undertaking ſo long a journey to ſee him, why doth hee ſuffer them, to finde him in ſo poore, and meane a place, and condition?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, becauſe God would heereby ſhew them, that Chriſts kingdome was not of this world.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe the Lord would hereby ſhew them, that Chriſts glory is not helped by earthly pompe.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe the Lord hereby would have them underſtand, that as Chriſt, the head of his body the Church, was in outward ſhew ſo poore and deſpicable, ſo the true religion of Chriſts Church is not pompous: I am not aſhamed (ſaith the Apoſtle [f]) of the Goſpel of Chriſt: as if hee ſhould ſay, our religion ſeemes to him that lookes upon it with an earthly and carnall eye, to be worthy of ſhame, and to deſerve a bluſh, and that in all regardes.

[f] Rom. 1. 16.

1. If we reſpect religion it ſelfe, that is fooliſhneſſe [g], and a ſtumbling blocke [h].

[g] 1 Cor. 1. 18.

[h] 1 Cor. 1. 23.

2. If we reſpect outward Churches, or viſible ſocieties

36 societies, professing this religion, we shall finde them, in regard of heathenisme, but a very little flocke [i].

i Luk. 12. 32.

3. If we respect the outward worship, or externall exercises of religion: we shall finde that, First the religion of the heathen is more pompous. Secondly, that the preaching of the Gospel seemes but foolishnesse [k], in regard of that pompe, which was in the Iewish ceremonies.

k 1 Cor. 1. 18. & 2. 1. &c.

4. If we respect the stones of this Church, the men, or the professors of religion, we shall perceive them to be many times of the inferiour sort [l]; Great men being hardly drawne from their pleasures.

l 1 Cor. 1. 26.

5. If wee consider the outward estate of true professors, we shall finde them for the most part, to bee the scumme of the world (in the worlds esteeme) yea the ofscouring, and laughing-stocke of men and Angels [m], and the most miserable also of all men [n]. And thus we often see, that in no respect outwardly is the true religion pompous or stately.

m 1 Cor. 4. 9. &c.

n 1 Cor. 15. 19.

Sect. 2. §. 2. And they fell downe and worshiped him.

Quest. It may be asked here, How or for what end do the Wise men, who were Gentiles worship Christ?

Answ. 1. First, some say that they were altogether ignorant of the mysterie of the Messias, and did onely worship Christ after the Persian manner: but this is false, as followeth by and by.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Is it probable that they would worship a young babe, that by reason of his infancy understands nothing, except they did beleeve some divine thing to be in him? and therefore not the childhood, but the divinitie in the child was worshipped by them [o].

o Chrysost. s.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if Christ had beene no more then a naturall child, they would never have undertaken so long, so tedious, and so perillous a journey to have found him out; principally, considering that in all probability (as I conceive) they themselves were little inferiour to the Kings of the Iewes.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, It is uncertaine what these Wise men (who were Gentiles) knew particularly concerning the mysterie of the Messias: but certainely they knew, that hee was something more then a man, by the internall revelation of the Spirit of God: who by faith taught them to beleeve, that he was a King though in a cottage, and a God though in a cradle; and therefore as unto a God they fell downe and worshipped him.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And they presented unto him gifts, frankincense, and myrrhe.

Quest. 1. These wisemen they come to seeke Christ, but they come not empty, from whence it may be questioned; Why they offer gifts unto Christ?

Answ. To teach us that we must never come unto God empty handed, without some offering or present.

Quest. 2. What have we to offer unto God?

Answ. Spirituall sacrifices of repentance, and thanksgiving [p]; but of this more largely else where.

p Hebr. 13. 15.

Quest. 3. What offer they unto Christ?

Answ. Gold, Frankincense, and Myrrhe.

Why doe they offer these unto Christ? Quest. 4.

I answer first, these were in times past offered up unto Kings, and that for a double end. First for a politike end: they offered unto their Kings, 1. Gold for their expenses, or for the maintaining of their state and pompe [q]. 2. Frankincense, for their sacrifices: 3. Myrrhe, for the splendor, and ornament of their sepulchers [r]. Answ. 1.

q Psal. 72. 15.

r Muscul. s.

Secondly, for a morall end; they offered unto their Kings, 1 Gold, that they might learne to be of golden manners. 2. Frankincense, that they might learne to sacrifice unto the Gods. 3 Myrrhe that they might remember their mortality [s].

s Gualt. s.

Secondly, these three, the Wise-men offer now unto Christ, either First in regard of his offices, and so they give him gold as a King, Frankincense as a Priest, and Myrrhe as a Redeemer. Answ. 2.

or Secondly, in regard of his nature, and then they offer unto him gold as a King, Frankincense, as a God, and Myrrhe, as a man. Or Thirdly, they offer them all unto him as a King according to the Persian manner, as is shewed in the former answer: Or Fourthly, by these they enrich Christ, that he might be furnished and provided, for his flight into Ægypt. Or Fiftly, they present these unto Christ, because the Persians and Arabians abounded with these three things [t]. Or Lastly, they offered these three in regard of the present estate and necessitie: that is, because they saw the poverty of the Mother, the tendernesse of the child, the nastinesse, and noysomnesse of the place, wherein Christ was (the Stable) therefore they offer unto him these things for the releeving of these necessities: they present him with gold, for the releeving of his Mothers poverty; with Frankincense, for the expelling of all noisome smels; and Myrrhe for the consolidation of the infants joynts [u].

u Carthus. s.

Quest. 5. What benefit may we reape or learne by these their offerings?

Answ. I answer, we must by their example be incited to doe the like, first offering nosmet, our selves, secondly, nostra, our substance.

First we must offer up our selves unto Christ, giving our selves wholy unto him, and devoting our selves wholy unto his service [x], because he hath bought, ransomed, and redeemed us for this end, and purpose [y].

y Luk. 1. 75. and 1 Cor. 6. 18. 19. 20.

Secondly, wee must offer our estates or substance unto God, that is, offer unto him, 1 Gold, 2 Frankincense, and 3 Myrrhe.

First present God with thy Gold, that is, 1 Temporall gold, by almes, charitie, liberality, and hospitality, for such as are rich in goods, must be rich in good workes [z]. 2 Spirituall gold, viz. 1 a true & a lively faith, for this is more precious then gold, to trust confidently in God. 2 a pure & unblameable life: for this is more esteemed by God, then the Gold of Ophir, the pure in life being precious in his eye sight; & this is more excellent in regard of our selves, for riches availe not in the day of wrath, but righteousnesse delivereth from death [a]. And thus by true charitie towards others, by true faith in God, and purity of life in our selves, wee offer unto God Gold: and wee build with Gold, which will endure the fire [b].

b 1 Cor. 3. 12.

Secondly,

Secondly, we must offer unto God Frankincense: that is faithfull, pure, and fervent prayer.

Thirdly, we must offer unto God Myrrhe, and that is either 1 Good workes; or 2 Mortification, and that first externall, by suffering affliction, and willingly undergoing, whatsoever the Lord is pleased to lay upon us. Secondly, or internall, by mortifying our members [c], that is, all corrupt, and carnall affections, which are in our mortall bodies, because they warre against the soule [d].

c Col. 3. 5. 6.

d 1 Pet. 2. 11.

Vers. 12. §. 1. VERS. 12. And being warned of God in a dreame, that they should not returne unto Herod, they departed into their owne country another way.

Sect. 1. Quest. It may heere bee doubted, what manner of dreame this was, which the Wise-men had?

Answ. 1. I answer first, Dreames are either, 1 naturall, which the minde causeth of it selfe, but upon some occasion or beginning, either externall or internall: or 2. they are somnia immissa; dreames which the minde of it selfe procureth not; but are sent unto it, or wrought upon it, by some other power: and these are of two sorts, either first θεόπεμπτα, sent of God, (and such was the dreame of these Wise-men) or δαιμονιόπεμπτα, sent of evill spirits.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Divine Dreames are such, as God offereth to the minde, and these dreames 1 Sometimes are shewed to the faithfull, or to those that are in the visible Church, and of the invisible, as to Jacob, Ioseph, Daniel: Sometimes to those who are neither in the visible Church, or of the invisible, as to Laban, Gen. 31. to Pharaohs baker. 40. to Pharaoh himselfe. 41. 3 Sometimes these divine dreames are shewed to those, that are not in the visible Church, but yet of the invisible: and such was this dreame: it was sent by God, unto the Wise men, who were not Iewes (and therefore not of the then visible Church) and yet (I hope) of the true Church of Christ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Divine Dreames are all μαντικὰ, that is, containing some divination of things hid and secret, and afterward to come to passe: and these are of two sorts. 1 nuda σήματα, naked visions, simply, & plainly, expressing the meaning, scope and purpose of the dreame; and such was this dreame: or else 2. they are αἰνιγματα mysticall dreames, folded up in types and figures; which cannot be understood without some signification: such were Pharaohs dreames of the seven fat and leane kine, and of the seven full and thinne and lancke eares. Gen. 41.

Sect. 2. §. 2. That they should not returne unto Herod.

Quest. 1. Heere it will be demanded, why doth not God save and preserve Christ miraculously, or by some other way, then by the flight of the wise men?

Answ. 1. First, some answer heere unto, that wee must not dare to summon God to the barre, to render a reason to us of his actions [e].

Answ. 2. Observ. Secondly, God will not use miracles when and where there is no neede; Teaching us thereby, that we must in all our necessities, 1. use all lawfull meanes; and then 2. begge a blessing at Gods hands upon the meanes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, God doth this because he would not have these Magi made instruments of Herods cruelty.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the Lord doth this, because hee will not have Christ twice made known, or revealed, to those that inwardly contemne and despise him. The wise men once bring Herod word of the nativity of Christ; and in stead of rejoycing at that joyfull newes, hee plots, how to shed his most precious blood, by an untimely death: and therefore God will not permit the Magi the second time, to reveale Christ unto him.

Quest. 2. It may heere further be enquired, Why doth God forbid the wise men, to play the part of honest men; that is, to keepe their word? they had promised Herod, that when certainely they had found out the place of Christs abode, they would give him notice of it, and in this verse God doth prohibite it?

Answ. The Lord doth this to shew, that hee hath authority to prohibit the performance of humane promises: the will of man is to give way to the will of God; and the commandement of God doth nullifie and make voide all humane promises: for the full understanding of this resolution and question, two things are carefully to bee taken notice of: First, promises oblige in themselves. Secondly, God commanding, promises are to be violated.

First, promises oblige and binde in themselves, and that jure divino, by the law of God, and that whether they are made { With an oath. Or Without an oath.

Promises that are bound with an oath, binde a man unto the performance of that which hee hath promised: it being a note of an upright man, and an heavenly citizen, not to change his promise, although he have sworne unto his owne temporall hurt [f]; when the law of an oath was given in Sina, the whole world shooke (say the Rabbines [g]) because an oath is stabilimentum orbis, the stay and proppe of the world, and if promises and oathes were not observed, how should men trade, or buy, or sell, or live in the world? an oath is for the confirmation of the truth, and for the end of contention; and therefore all falshood of wicked men in their Promises, is much to bee reprehended: whether committed by Heathens, or Christians.

g Vide Pet. Mart. fol. 238.

I. Many Heathens slight promises though bound by oathes: the Turkes say, children are to be deceived with apples, and men with oathes: so lightly doe they value and oath. Lingua juravi (said one [h]) I sware it onely with my tongue. This is a most wicked practise, thus to slight an oath, in any whosoever.

h Ennius

II. Some Christians are faulty also heere, and they are the Papists, who make no conscience of breaking an oath made unto any, whether Christians or Heathens, that are not sworne servants and vassailes to the Pope, as they are: It is an ordinary phrase at the Court of Rome, Mercatorum est, non Magistratuum stare juramento: it is the 38 the part of a Merchant, not of the Pope, or any placed in authority by him, to keepe his oath [i]. So Iohn Husse, and Hierome of Prage, were promised by an oath, from the councell of Constance, safe conducte, and yet contrary to promise and oath were killed [k].

[k] Sleydan.

Promises though made without an oath, yet binde: omnia quasi jurata [l]; all promises are halfe oathes, or promises (in a manner) doe partake of the nature of an oath: Now the reason, why promises binde although not bound with an oath, is this; because fidelity is a part of truth, and a promise is a greater part, then an affirmation: and therefore promises are are not to bee violated, either 1 Lucri causâ, for gaine, as one saith [m], Linguâ rei servandæ, &c. I made a promise with my mouth, that I might save my purse, but Eadem linguâ jam nego, with the same tongue that I made the promise, with the same, I refuse to keepe it, because it is not for my profit to performe it: as if a man should promise a thiefe to send him to such a place, twice so much money, as he hath about him: if hee will but spare him that which now hee carries, because hee hath undertaken some urgent affaires, which cannot be accomplished, if now hee should be robbed: In this case I say, a man ought not for lucres sake to violate his promise. Or, II. Hostilitatis causa, promises are not to be violated, no not unto our enemies: this the Lord reproves [n]; and Peter Martyr [o] from Augustine and Ambrose proves, that the faith, and faithfull promises which are plighted unto our enemies are to be observed.

[n] Ezech: 17. 13. 15. 16.

[o] f. 364.

Secondly, although promises oblige in themselves (as is already shewed) yet, God commanding, it is lawful, and behoveful to violate them: and the reason hereof is, because God is by no means to be disobeyed; Disobedience being as the sinne of Witchcraft [p]. Yea hee must bee obeyed without any delay when hee commands. Here wee must consider, what promises are unlawfull, and in that regard to bee broken: then how promises come to be unlawfull.

[p] 1 Sam. 15. 23.

First, we are to consider what promises are unlawfull, or the causes, why promises become to bee unlawfull: the causes are either, 1. conjecturall, or, 2. true.

Peter Martyr [q] doth propound many causes, why promises are made unlawfull: viz. I. If the promise bee impossible to bee performed. Or II. contrary to the wil of God, or the good of Gods Church. Or III. If it be evill for him to perform, who hath promised it. Or IV. If it were extorted by deceit and fraud: Or V. If the promise were forced by violence and feare, then these promises are not to be observed.

The true causes of the violation of promises are two, Ordinary, Extraordinary.

The Ordinary causes of the violating of promises are these, First, if the promise be impossible to bee performed; for then of necessity it must be broken: yet two things are here to bee observed.

I. If the thing promised were impossible to be performed before the promise was made, then is he no better then a deceiver, that made that promise: yea if a man be not certaine, that it may be performed, hee sinnes, because hee ought to take heed least hee should offend with his tongue [r] and therefore every one must beware of promising those things, which are either impossible, or may prove impossible to him afterwards, as single life, because the gift of continency is not given unto all.

[r] Eccles. 5. 4. 5.

II. If the thing promised were in thy power to performe, when the promise was made, but after the promise becomes impossible unto thee to performe; then thou art freed from thy promise, because God hath hindred thee from the performance of it. And this is the first ordinary cause.

Secondly, the second ordinary cause of the violation of promises is this, if the promise made be unlawfull to be performed, that then it is not to be observed.

A promise is made unlawfull in a double regard, either in respect of the - Action promised to bee performed: thus some promises are unlawfull.

- In themselves, the substance of the promise being wicked, like Herods promise: and this promise is not to be kept. And the reason of it is this, because the first vow and promise of obedience which we made unto God (and which we are principally obliged to performe) doth contradict this. This promise is two-fold, I. When being first made, it is knowne to be unlawfull: this is sinfull. And herein David sinned towards Nabal [a]. II. Or when the thing becomes unlawfull, after the promise is made, and then it is not to be observed. As for example, if a man promise upon such a day to lend his friend armour and weapons; and before the day comes, his friend proves a traytor, and a rebell, or mad and distracted; he is not then to keepe his promise: And the reason is this, because hee is not changed that made the promise, but he to whom the promise was made, is changed from what he was.
- In regard of some circumstances, that is, when the thing promised may be performed in regard of the substance or matter of it, but some circumstances doe make it unlawfull. As for example. I. If that which is promised tend to the scandall of thy brother, which being contemptuously and freely performed, (without any coaction by superiours) is evill; but not so, if it be commanded or enjoyned by lawfull authority. II. If the promise tend to the impunity of sin: for this is good, if it be done in mercie (as David towards Shemei [b]) but evill, if by negligence and remisnesse, because the Magistrate should not hold the sword for nought, but for the punishment of offenders.

[a] 1 Sam. 25. 22.

[b] 2. Sam. 19. 23.

Time

Time when the promise is to be performed: and thus some promises are unlawfull, either by { Promise, the time being altogether unlawfull, for the performance of the promise; asif a man should promise his friend to plow his ground upon the Lords day. Or,
{ Some subsequent alteration, as if a man should promise his friend, to come and feast with him, and make merry with him such a day, and in the mean time, upon some urgent publick necessitie, it is proclaimed a day of solemne fasting and humiliation, as in Niniveh[c].

[c] Jonah 3. 4. 5.

Besides these ordinary causes of violating of promises, there are extraordinary, and that is the commandement of God, when God forbids the performance of the promise, as in this verse, the Lord forbids the wise men to goe backe unto Herod according to their promise: so also the Israelites borrowed of the Egyptians eare-rings, and jewels, and the like, with promise (without doubt) to restore them againe; but God forbids them to returne them[d]. Now this wee must observe, that these are not to bee imitated, without a particular command from the same Spirit of God.

[d] Exod. 3. 22. & 11. 2. & 12. 35.

Thus wee have seene what promises are unlawfull, and the causes why promises are not to be performed: wee are now to consider how promises are made unlawfull, which may briefly be shewed, first affirmatively, secondly negatively.

I. Promises are violated, and not performed, by a mans owne impietie and wickednesse: as for example, a man perswades his friend to promise him, that he will neither meddle with himselfe, nor any weapon he hath; and when the promise is made, (the other dreaming of no such thing at all) he goes about to hang himself, or to stabbe himselfe: this promise otherwise lawfull, is made unlawfull to be performed by his desperate enterprises.

II. Lawfull promises are not made unlawful by an Episcopall absolution: but here observe, A Bishop may absolve, first declarativè, by a power declarative, as a Levite, or an interpreter, and expounder of the law of God; that is, he may shew from the word of God, what promises are not to be kept, and by vertue of the power and authoritie given unto him by Christ, may absolve and acquit them. But secondly, not positively, as a Lawgiver, or as one that hath power to dispense with the Law of God: for they must doe nothing against the truth, but for it. And therefore, I. the Pope erres here, that will not suffer a wicked promise to be broken, without a facultie, or leave from his holinesse. But, II. hee erres worse, in breaking promises and oathes, which are lawfull: as freeing subjects from the oath of allegeance unto their Soveraignes; husbands from their promises made to their wives in marriage: and the contrary, with diverse the like, which (the Papists say) hee can dispense withall, and absolve from.

Sect. 3. Observ. 1. §. 3. And they departed into their owne countrey another way.] We may observe here the admirable obedience of these wise men: for they might here have objected many things, as first, that it is a shame to returne home by another way, because this is is a kinde of flight. Secondly, that it is a great shame to breake the promise, which they have made. Thirdly, that it is dangerous to double with kings, for they have long armes; and their anger is heavie. Fourthly, cannot the Sonne of God protect himselfe? how shall wee beleeve, that he can save others (much lesse bee the Saviour of the world) that cannot save himselfe? These things flesh and bloud might have alledged; but they object nothing at all, but in all things obey: Teaching us, that our obedience unto God, ought to bee absolute, and ready, without murmuring, without disputing[a], without consulting with flesh and bloud[b], and without procrastination, and delay[c].

[b] Gen. 26. 19. and Act. 26. 19
[c] Gen. 12. 4.

Why did these wise men, or why should wee thus presently obey God? Quest.

I answer, this is required of us, either in regard of God, or in regard of our selves. Answ.

First, it is required of us absolutely and readily to obey God, in regard of the Lord himselfe, and that for these causes: First, because God requires the obedience of the mind, and of the inward man, that our minds should alwayes be prepared to obey the will of God: and therefore as soone as ever the Lord gives any command unto us, we must obey it, with all readinesse and cheerfulnesse.

Secondly, because God deserves at our hands, that we should doe whatsoever hee requires of us, be it never so unpleasing or unprofitable unto our selves: yea it is a great indignitie offered unto the Lord, either to dispute or indent with him concerning any thing, that hee commands us.

Thirdly, because the will of God is the rule of good, just, profitable, and convenient, that is, wee only know things to be good, just, holy, & welbeseeming, because they are agreeable unto the wil of God, and therfore to doubt of that which God requires, is to contradict either his prudence or justice, and therefore it is by and by, yea in all things carefully to be obeyed.

Fourthly, because, if we obey God, when hee commands, he wil accept of our obedience, as performed in subjection unto his will: but not so, if we obey him at our owne leasure.

Secondly, it is required of us, presently and willingy to obey God, in regard of our selves, & that for these two causes, first, because it shewes in us a willing minde, which God loves.

Secondly, because now, when God commands, we may obey, but afterwards (perchance) wee shall not bee able, God withdrawing his grace from us.

Sect. 4. §. 4. They went to their owne countrey another way.

Quest. 1. It may here be asked, why doth not the Lord suffer them to goe unto the Jewes? or forbid them to goe into the Gentiles?

Answ. 1. First, the Magi would not go unto the Jewes, because they were offended with the corrupt state ſtate of their Church[d].

Secondly, God would not ſuffer them to goe unto the Jews, becauſe they refuſing, or at leaſt not caring for Chriſt, the Lord will not have him, to be offred unto them any more.

Thirdly, God would not prohibit them to go unto the Gentiles, becauſe he would have Chriſt to be preached unto them, the Iewes thus ſlighting the meſſage of his nativity.

Verſ. 13. Sect. 1. §. 1. VERS. 13. And when they were departed, behold the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Joſeph in a dreame, ſaying, Ariſe, and take the young childe, and his mother, and flye into Egypt, and be thou there, untill I bring thee word: for Herod will ſeeke the young childe, to deſtroy him.

Hierom. ſ. Obſerva. Some obſerve[e], that when Ioſeph took Chriſt and his mother, that hee might flye with them into Egypt, he tooke them by night, when it was darke, but when hee returnes into Judea, neither night nor darkneſſe is mentioned in the Goſpell: to teach us, that there is nothing but palpable darkneſſe with us, when Chriſt leaves us, but when he comes unto us, then comes true and cleare light.

Sect. 2. Queſt. §. 2. Take the young child and his mother.] It may here be asked, when Ioſeph thought to have put Mary away, becauſe ſhe was with childe, the Lord calls her his wife (Chapter 1. 20.) Feare not Ioſeph, to take unto thee Mary thy wife: why therefore doth the Lord now call her the childs mother?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer, Firſt, becauſe they had now both of them agreed upon her perpetuall virginitie, as is probable, ſhe askes, and he grants, that ſhe ſhould remaine an unſpotted virgin all her life.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe by a moſt forcible argument, the Lord would excite Ioſeph to have a ſpeciall care of her, remembring, that ſhee was the Mother of Chriſt.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the Lord hereby would ſhew unto Ioſeph, that Mary was more to bee reſpected, loved, tendered, and eſteemed for the childes ſake, than for marriage ſake.

Sect. 3. Obiect. 1 §. 3. And flye into Egypt.] It will hence bee objected, flight is diſhoneſt, it hath but a loathed aſpect, contrarie to all generoſitie: yea, by this meanes the faith of Ioſeph and Mary may bee ſhaken, why therefore doth the Lord command it?

Anſw. I anſwer, God hereby would ſhew two things unto theſe two pious perſons: to wit, Firſt, that they that will follow Chriſt, muſt take up their croſſes, and arme themſelves to endure, and undergoe afflictions. And ſecondly, that they muſt thinke nothing vile, baſe, or unſeemely, which God requires of them, and in them.

Obiect. 2. It will be objected againe, This flight derogates from the authority of Chriſt, there being no neede of it at all: he can otherwiſe ſave both himſelfe, and them: For firſt, he can walke inviſibly, and not bee ſeene; hee can paſſe out of their ſight, as hee did divers times, when they had thought to have laid hold upon him: Or ſecondly, he could blinde them that they ſhould not ſee him, as the Angels did the Sodomites. Gen. 19. and Eliſha the Aramites 2 King. 6. Or thirdly, he could deſtroy them, as hee did Sennacherib. And therefore ſeeing Chriſt was able to defend himſelfe, why doth he flee?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, the ſinnes of Herod were not as yet come to their full height and maturity, and therefore the Lord will not yet come againſt him in judgement.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, God hereby will ſhew, that Chriſts kingdome is not of this world: and therefore he ſhall not exerciſe temporall power, no not over his enemies, but in this life ſubmit himſelfe to the forme of a ſervant.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, God heereby will ſhew, that Chriſt came not to deſtroy but to ſave. Anſw. 4. Fourthly, God heereby will ſhew, that Chriſt is true man.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, this was done, that Chriſt heereby might ſhew, that his Kingdome was not confined to one place: the Jewes bragged that in Iudea was God knowne[a], and that he dwels in Jeruſalem[b], but Chriſt breakes downe the partition wall[c], accepting the Gentiles into favour, ſending the Goſpel unto them, & cauſing them to receive it.

[a] Pſa. 76. 1 [b] Pſa. 135: 21. [c] Epheſ. 2. 14.

Anſw. 6. Sixtly, this was done, that Chriſt might ſhew unto us, that there is for him and his, ſtill ſome one place or other to reſt ſafely in: or that hee will alwaies, in ſome place or other, procure a refuge, and ſafegard for his Children.

Anſw. 7. Laſtly, this was done for our inſtruction, that we in Chriſt might have an example, to uſe all lawfull meanes to preſerve our lives in the time of danger.

Sect. 4. Queſt. §. 4. And flee into Egypt.

Why is Ioſeph commanded to carry Chriſt into Ægypt?

Anſw. I anſwer, the cauſes heereof are either firſt Naturall, or ſecondly Spirituall.

Firſt, there may be theſe three naturall reaſons rendred, why Chriſt was to goe into Ægypt. Firſt, becauſe it was neere unto Iudea. Secondly, becauſe it was a ſafer place then any part of Iudea, Herod having no command, nor power there. Thirdly, others adde[d] becauſe the Ægyptians were of old (in the time of Ioſeph) well willers unto the Iſraelites, and therefore Ioſeph hopes and expects favour and kindneſſe from them.

Secondly, there may bee theſe five Spirituall reaſons given of this fleeing into Ægypt.

First, that hereby might bee ſignified, that Chriſt was offered unto the Jewes, and given unto the Gentiles.

Secondly, that the prophecy might bee fulfilled, which was given by the Prophet Hoſea.

Thirdly, becauſe God will hereby ſhew, that his anger laſts not for ever: and therefore although in time paſt, in his wrath hee wounded the Ægyptians, yet now in the fulneſſe of time he ſends a Saviour unto them, to cure all their maladies, and heale all their infirmities.

Fourthly, becauſe Ægypt is a type of the world, and therefore Chriſt was carried thither by Ioſeph, to ſhew that by the preaching of the Apoſtles, Chriſt was carried unto the whole world[e].

Fiftly,

Fiftly, the last reason is, because Ægypt of all countreyes was most corrupted with Idolatry, and therefore for the more magnifying of his mercy, in the conversion of this countrey, and making it most famous for piety, the Lord was carried thither [f].

f Chrysost. Hom. 8.

Sect. 5. §. 5. Be there untill I bring thee word.]

Quest. Why doth not God appoint Ioseph a set time, but leaves him in uncertainties, with a Donec untill I bring thee word?

Answ. I answer, because God would have Ioseph to depend upon his providence: Remembring, first, that not to waite Gods leasure, is not to beleeve his providence. Secondly, that the providence of God is most prudent, it knowes every article of time. Thirdly, we are ignorant, what may prove good heereafter for us, and therefore God would have us to depend upon his gracious providence.

Sect. 6. §. 6. Because Herod seekes the young Child to destroy him.

Quest. Why doth the Lord admonish Ioseph of this danger?

Answ. 1. I answer, first, that the knowledge of the perill may increase his care.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to shew that God doth graciously beare with our infirmities.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, God hereby doth testifie, how readie he is to open his minde, and reveale his will unto his servants, whensoever they stand in g Psal. 25. 14. needs of his direction, and desire with all willingnesse of heart to be ordered by it [g].

Vers. 14. Sect. 1. §. 1. VERS. 14. When hee arose, he tooke the young child and his Mother by night, and departed into Ægypt.

Ille excitatus, when hee arose, that is, by and by, as soone as ever hee was awaked out of sleepe:

Observ. Wee may observe hence, how readily and constantly Ioseph obeyes every charge and severall injunction given unto him by God, notwithstanding the many great impediments and lets which he had to the contrary: for he might have thought or argued thus with himselfe: First, the child is none of mine. Secondly, why should I then offend my King for his safegard. Thirdly, by betraying the child, and delivering of him into Herods hands, I shall gaine honour and riches. Fourthly, my journey will bee full of perill. Fiftly, the Mother of the child, is very tender, and scarcely able to undergoe such a journey. Sixtly, I shall loose all the substance, I enjoy by this my flight. Seventhly, I know not but Ægypt may bee as dangerous unto mee as Israel is: These things Ioseph might have objected unto him selfe, but hee doth not: but is still readie prest to performe the will of God: to goe when God bids him, to come back againe when God calls him, and to obey God when and how he pleaseth: Teaching us, that that obedience of God, which is truely pleasing unto him, ought to bee performed with readinesse, willingnesse, and chearefulnesse of heart.

Sect. 2. §. 2. He tooke them by night.

Why doth Ioseph flee in the night? 41

I answer, because it was most safe: hee doth not say, God hath commanded me to goe to Ægypt, and therefore he will protect me: I neede neither care when, nor how I goe, nor bee so hasty to goe: but he is providently carefull, and therefore he flyes as secretly, and speedily, as possibly he can, having now a charge from God to remove. Quest. 1. Answ. 1.

Secondly, Ioseph departed towards Ægypt in the night for feare. Answ. 2.

Hence it may bee doubted, whether in generall it is a good thing to feare danger? or in particular, whether Ioseph did well, and warrantably in thus flying by night for feare of danger? Quest. 2.

I answer, First yes, because hee had no calling nor warrant to abide there; yea hee was forbidden by God to stay: and therefore he did well to feare: we can have no confidence in God beyond our calling, all our hope being grounded upon his promises: but hee hath not promised to protect us any longer then wee walke in our callings, and that according to his will [a]. And therefore Ioseph did well in fearing to stay there, seeing God had called him away. Answ. 1.

a 1 Ioh. 5. 14.

Secondly; God doth not kill and wholy destroy our affections, but converts and changes them, and then useth them: and therefore Ioseph did not amisse in fearing to abide in Bethlehem. Answ. 2.

It may heere bee demanded, whether doe our affections helpe us or hinder us in the service of God? Quest. 3.

I answer, a right use of the affections doth helpe us in Gods service: Shame makes us blush for sinne: feare makes us warie: anger makes us zealous of the credit and good name of our neighbour, and of the glory of God: Lostinesse of minde, makes us constant and resolute in our callings and duties, both divine and humane: Praise makes us more prompt and ready to obey vertue, it being cos virtutis vertues whetstone. Answ.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And departed into Ægypt:] Ægypt was a place of ill report in many things. First, a place of noe faith nor truth, but perfidious and treacherous: Pompeius was slaine there: Iulius Cæsar was in danger of treachetie when he was there; and it was a fatall place to Antonius. Observ.

Secondly, they were persecuters of the Israelites, and God makes that great deliverance of his people, from them, the Preface of the law [b]. And hence it is that God forbids them to returne any more into Ægypt, but rather to goe to Babylon, and submit themselves to the Chaldean captivity; as Ieremiah the Prophet often perswades.

b Exod. 20. 1.

Thirdly; the Ægyptians were most bitter and cruell enemies of religion, abounding in all manner of superstition; and this is that which most grieves the children of God, to bee among those that are lovers of superstition, and haters of religion [c]. And yet notwithstanding all this; Ioseph being commanded by the Lord to goe thither, doth neither refuse it (as the Iewes did when they were bidden by the Prophet to goe to c Psa. 120. 5, 6.

42 Babylon) neither doth hee flye into ſome other place (as Ionas did, who would have fled to Tarſus, when he ſhould have gone to Nineveh) but goes preſently when, and punctually whether the Lord bids him.

Verſ. 15. Sect. 1. §. 1. VERS. 15. And was there vntill the death of Herod, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken of the Lord by the Prophet, ſaying, out of Ægypt have I called my Sonne.

A man in the ford ready to ſinke, catcheth at every thing he feels or ſees (which he can reach) hoping that it will helpe to keepe his head above water: ſo Papiſts ſnatching every occaſion for the confirmation of their religion, laye hold upon this verſe to ground their unwritten traditions upon, objecting thus, Many bookes truly ſacred and canonicall have utterly periſhed and beene loſt, and therefore that Canon of Scripture which now wee have is not ſufficient: the Antecedent they confirme from Chryſoſtome [a] who ſaith, the Jewes loſt ſome of their ſacred and canonicall bookes by negligence and careleſneſſe, and ſome of them have beene burnt: and therfore theſe Books could never be repaired or written again by Eſdras, ſeeing that they were no where extant: they give us examples of this, as this verſe, Out of Ægypt have I called my ſonne, and verſe 23. he ſhall be called a Nazarite, which words are not at all to be found in the Old Teſtament: And therefore the Scriptures are inſufficient without eccleſiaſticall or humane Traditions.

Obiect. [a] Hom 9. ſ. Matth.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, we deny that any ſacred and canonicall bookes have beene loſt.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, if there bee any loſt, as ſome Proteſtants grant (as we ſhal ſee elſe where) yet they were either hiſtoricall, and not abſolutly neceſſary unto ſalvation: or doctrinall, containing fundamentall truths which are clearely taught and laid downe in ſome of thoſe bookes which we have now extant, and therefore this doth not conclude the Scriptures to be inſufficient.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the proofe they bring for their Antecedent proves nothing, becauſe Chryſoſtome being ignorant of the Hebrew tongue; followes the tranſlation of ſome interpreters, who hath not theſe two ſentences, which are in this verſe and the 23. verſe: but S^t. Hierom, learned in the languages affirmes [b], that they are both to bee found in the Hebrew Text, that is, this verſe, in Hoſ. 11.1. and verſ. 23. in Iudg. 13.5. and Iſa. 11.1. Yea both theſe ſentences are to bee found in the vulgar tranſlation, which the Papiſts hold onely authenticall of all other tranſlations.

Anſw. 4. [c] Lib. 2. de verbo Dei. [d] Scharpius curſ. Theog. 137. Fourthly, the Jewes ſo religiouſly and carefully did keep theſe ſacred books, that no one book either by their negligence or malice hath periſhed; as ſhall bee elſe where ſhewed, and as Bellarmine himſelfe proves [c] and others are verily perſwaded of [d].

Sect. 2. §. 2. That it might bee fulfilled which was ſpoken of the Lord by the Prophet.

Expoſit. The ſcope of that place Hoſ. 11.1. Is to commemorate the deliverance of Iſrael from Egypt, by way of reproach and upbraiding of the Jewes who were ſo unthankefull, and diſobedient unto God, who had done ſuch great thing for them.

Queſt. Hence a principall queſtion offers it ſelfe to be diſcuſſed, which is this: How is it ſaid here, This was done that it might be fulfilled, &c. Is this the ſcope of Hoſeas propheſie?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, a Propheſie is fulfilled three manner of wayes.

I. When that which is fore told come to paſſe, as Samuel foretold Saul that his kingdom ſhould not continue [e] becauſe God had rejected him [f], which was ſhortly after fulfilled in David, to whom the crowne was given.

[e] 1. Sam. 13.14. [f] 1 Sam. 15. 23.

II. When a thing is foretold of one time in generall, which may often come to paſſe: or when a Propheſie is given, which ſeems to aime at ſome one time, but the ſubſtance of it is accompliſhed many times: as the Prophet Eſay Propheſieth of the Jewes, they ſhall heare but not underſtand, ſee but not perceive [g]. Which is dayly accompliſhed whereſoever the Goſpel is preached.

[g] Eſa. 6. 9. 10.

III. When not that numericall thing comes to paſſe, which is foretold, but ſome thing like thereunto: and thus ſome ſay, the Prophets prediction is fulfilled in this place [h].

[h] Muſcul. ſ

Anſw. 2. But becauſe it may be replyed, although ſomething like unto that which is foretold come to paſſe, yet it cannot truely be ſaid to be fulfilled: I will therefore give a ſecond anſwer, and that is, Prophecies have many ſenſes, as may appeare by a fivefold explication of them, viz. Hiſtoricall, Morall, Allegoricall, Tropologicall, Anagogicall, of which I ſhall ſpeake (God enabling me) plainely elſe where.

Anſw. 3. But becauſe it may yet be replyed, that this is full of danger [ſeeing 1 Origen, and ſome others have turned all Hiſtoricall narrations into Allegories: and 2. becauſe the Anabaptiſts doe denie the very truth of the Hiſtorie of the Scriptures, embracing onely Allegories, and excluding all Hiſtoricall truths, as Ixion embraced a cloud in ſtead of Iuno] I will therefore produce a third anſwer, which is, that one prophecie hath but one ſenſe onely, yet there may bee two parts thereof: and thus M^r. Perkins anſwers [i]. This is not ſo plaine nor cleare unto the underſtanding, and therefore I adde a fourth anſwer; That certainely there is a double ſenſe of this prophecie, and that in a threefold regard.

Anſw. 4.

I. In regarde of the Perſons mentioned, which are { Iſrael / Chriſt } Therefore there muſt neceſſarily bee a double ſenſe, which may be applyed to both the perſons:

II. In regard of the things ſpoken of, and mentioned, which are { The Jewes deliverance out of Ægypt. / Chriſts calling from Ægypt. }

III. In regard of the ſcope of the prophecie { It ſpeakes of Iſraels deliverance out of Ægypt, which is paſt, by way of reproach. / It is a prophetical prediction of Chriſt, hereafter to bee accompliſhed: And therefore it neceſſarily requires a double ſenſe. }

Some

Answ. 5. Some propheſies are mentioned in the Holy Scriptures, in expreſſe words; ſome in figurative words. First Some prophecies are mentioned in expreſſe words, and are fulfilled one of theſe two waies, either firſt ſemel, once, as it was foretold unto Abraham that after 400 yeares his poſterity ſhould enjoy deliverance, and freedome from Ægypt; which prophecie was only once fulfilled: ſo it was foretold Eli, that upon one day his two ſonnes Hophni and Phinehas ſhould both be ſlaine[a], which was once accompliſhed [b]; ſo it was foretold unto Ieroboam, that Ioſiah ſhould be borne which ſhould raigne over Iſrael[c], which was once fulfilled [d].

Secondly, theſe prophecies which are mentioned in expreſſe words, are ſometimes fulfilled ſæpius, oftentimes, as it was prophecied of the Iewes, that for their obſtinacie, they ſhould ſee, but not perceive, they ſhould heare, but not underſtand[e]: this prophecie was truely accompliſhed in the time of the Prophet, although it be often repeated elſe where[f]: ſo it was foretold, that the Iewes would draw neere unto God with their lips, while their hearts were farre from him[g]; which was truely fulfilled in the Prophets time, although it be repeated in the New Teſtament [h], yea accompliſhed alſo in our dayes, and in all times of the Goſpel, becauſe there will be hypocrites and formall profeſſors alwaies in the Church.

Some Prophecies are mentioned in the holy Scriptures in figurative words, which

According to the literall ſenſe

- Cannot bee underſtood, and that in a double regard, ſometimes
  - For the impoſſibility and falſhood in the thing it ſelfe, as it is ſaid, that there ſhall be no end of the kingdome of David, but it ſhall continue for ever [i]; which cannot literally be underſtood: Let the reader but diligently conſider of all theſe places, where hee may plainely ſee prophecies propounded, which are impoſsible literally to bee accompliſhed. Eſa. 11. 6. and 14. 28. Ier. 30. 9. Ezech. 34. 23. 24. and 37. 24. 25. Hoſea. 3. 5. Mal. 4. 5. Matt. 11. 14. Luke 1. 17.
  - For ſome circumſtance in the Prophecie, let but the reader (though of a meane underſtanding) marke well the prophecies expreſſed in the places following, and he ſhall ſee ſome circumſtances which hinder them from a literall interpretation. Eſa. 9. 6. Pſal. 2. 8. and 16. 10. which place Saint Peter expoundes, of Chriſt. Acts 2. 27. and ſo alſo Saint Paul. Acts 13. 35.
- May be underſtood, but yet ſo, that ſome further thing may be drawne from thoſe tipes, which hath ſome analogy either in
  - The things themſelves, the one being a type of the other: as the Paſchall Lambe, was a type of Chriſt: and therefore that which was ſaid literally of the Lambe, a bone of it ſhall not be broken [k], was applyed, and ſaid to bee accompliſhed in the Lambe of God [l]: ſo David was a type of Chriſt, and therefore that which hee ſaid literally of himſelfe (expreſsing his affliction) they gave me gall to eate, and vinegar to drinke [m]: it is ſaid to bee fulfilled in Chriſt [n]: ſo alſo David ſaith, it was my friend that lay in my boſome: and they divided my garments [o], which are applyed unto Chriſt.
  - Or at leaſt in the words: David praying againſt his enemies, ſaith, Let another take his office [p], which is ſaid to bee fulfilled in Iudas. Acts 1. 20. there being ſome reſemblance in the words: And thus Hoſeahs prophecie is fulfilled in this place; there being ſome analogie betweene the Iſraelites deliverance out of Ægypt, and Chriſts calling from thence.

Obſerv. In theſe Prophecies, which admit of a literall ſenſe, we muſt be very warie and cautelous how we convert them into Allegories: and therefore obſerve heerein theſe ſhort rules.

First, conſider the ſcope of the place, and marke well, what the marke is that the Holy Ghoſt aymes at.

Secondly, conſider the circumſtances of paralleld places, or Scriptures like unto that which thou deſireſt to underſtand.

Thirdly, obſerve the analogie and proportion of faith; allegorize not one place to overthrow another.

Fourthly, let us have the teſtimonie, and the warrant of the holy Scriptures: thoſe places that may literally be underſtood, but are allegorized by the Holy Ghoſt, wee may by the warrant of Scripture alſo allegorize (as Gal. 4. 22. &c. Agar and Sina are allegorized) but without this guide the journey is dangerous: and without the preſident of the Scripture, we muſt be very fearefull to draw it from his true, naturall, and germane ſenſe.

§. 1. VERS. 16. Then Herod when he ſaw that hee was mocked of the Wiſe-men, was exceeding wroth, and ſent forth and ſlew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coſts thereof, from two yeares old and under, according to the time which hee had diligently enquired of the Wiſemen. Verſ. 16. Sect. 1.

When hee ſaw that hee was mocked.] It may bee asked heere, Why doth God elude and fruſtrate the cruelty of the wicked? Queſt.

I anſwer, First, becauſe it is intended againſt his children, Pſal. 2. 2. 4. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, the Lord doth this, becauſe thereby Anſw. 2.

44 he would ſhew us two things. viz.

I. That he is faithfull in all his promiſes, now he hath ſaid that hee will infatuate all the counſels of the wicked, therefore he will doe it: and hence it comes to paſſe, that the wicked ever err, or fail, or are over-ſeen in ſomething, as Herod here might have wrought wiſelier then hee did, for he might have injoyned ſome of his ſervants to have accompanied the wiſe men, in this queſt of Chriſt: or he might have ſent ſome of his attendance to have brought the infant to the court, but the Lord be-fooles him: ſo Pharaoh, when he might by himſelfe have deſtroyed the Iſraelitiſh children, makes uſe of the women who deceive him.

II. The Lord hereby would teach us, that he is carefull over his children, neither ſleeping, nor ſlumbring, but vigilantly watching over all his, to preſerve them from all their enemies.

Obiect. It will here be objected, ſomtimes the plots of the wicked take place againſt the righteous, how then can it be ſaid that God infatuates their devices?

[a] Act. 3. 18. & 4. 28. I anſwer firſt, if the wicked do prevaile, it is by the permiſſiō of God, not by their own malice[a].

Anſw. 2. Secondly, God doth this for the greater and more ſpeedy deſtruction of the wicked: as Pharaoh oppreſsing Iſrael is plagued with many plagues, and at length both he and the pride, and prime of Egypt miſerably drowned in the Red Sea: ſo Hamans plot is likely to ſucceed according to his wiſhes againſt the poore Jewes, but this proves onely fatall and mortall to himſelfe. The Perſians get a decree againſt Daniel, and proſecute it home, untill he was caſt into the den of Lions, but thus onely they wrought their own ruine. Pope Alex. 6. prepares poyſon for Cardinall Adrian, but by a miſtake it was drunke by himſelfe, and his ſon Ceſar, which coſt the Pope his life[b]. And thus the Lord lets the wicked for a time prevaile, for their greater judgement and downfall.

Dan. 6.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Hee was exceeding wroth: We have here an hiſtory of a wonderfull cruelty, which is (in Queſt. 1. theſe words) attributed to Herods anger, from whence theſe queſtions may be propounded.

Anſw. Firſt, de origine, from whence anger comes?

I anſwer, from the Divell Epheſ. 4. 27. from hell. Iames 3. 9. but meekeneſſe comes from Chriſt. Mat. 11. 29. from above. Iames 3. 17. and therefore is rather to be imbraced.

Queſt. 2. Secondly, de natura, what is the nature of anger?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, it is voyde of charity, for charity is not angry[c] and therefore all charity is extinguiſhed, when a man is tranſported with anger.

[c] 1 Cor. 13. 5.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, anger is carnall, it is a worke of the fleſh[d] and it argues him to be carnall, at leaſt guilty, that will not ſuffer himſelfe to be touched or croſſed.

[d] Gal. 5. 20.

Queſt. 3. Thirdly, de effectis, what are the fruits and effects of anger.

Anſw. I anſwer, many & miſchievous are the conſequets therof, both { In regard of our neighbour, & In regard of our ſelves.

1. Miſchievous are the effects of anger, in regard of our brethren: for firſt, it ſtirres up contention; anger is the bellowes that kindles brawles, ſtrifes contentions, ſeditions, duels, curſed ſpeeches, blaſphemies, and the like[e]. Secondly, it is more heavy then a ſtone, yea, more pōdrous then ſand, not to bee ſupported, not to bee undergone[f]. Thirdly, it makes us forget all the former reſpect we have borne our neighbours, or favours, received from them; as they of Nazareth, who admire Chriſt[g], but when they are angry with him, they would ſtone him[h]. Fourthly, anger will teach us cauſeleſſe cauſes to bee avenged of our brethren: as Piſo who in his anger ſlew three ſouldiers, the firſt, becauſe he came home without his fellow (hee having given them a charge both to come together, and before ſuch a day) the ſecond becauſe he came home after the day limited: and the third becauſe he would not hang up the firſt, at the firſt bidding: And thus anger which is but a kinde of frenzy and madneſſe for the time, did teach Piſo to give reaſons, for this his extreame and reaſonleſſe cruelty. Fiftly, it hurries a man into moſt horrible cruelties, as Herod in this verſe, and Caine againſt his brother[i], and Nebuchadnezzar againſt the three Children; Becauſe his anger waxed hot againſt them, he cauſed the fornace to be heated ſeven times hotter then ordinary[k]. Yea ſometimes it produceth treaſons, as might bee proved by many examples from humane ſtories.

[g] Luk. 4. 22.

[h] Luk. 4. 28.

[i] Gen. 4. 5. 8.

[k] Dan. 3. 19

2. Many and miſerable are the effects of anger, in reſpect of our ſelves, & that in a manifold regard, firſt, in regard of the minde, ſecondly, in regard of the calling, thirdly, in regard of the reputation, fourthly, in regard of the body, fiftly, in regard of the ſoule.

The effects of anger, in regard of the minde are theſe, Firſt it blindes the minde ſo, that it can underſtand nothing: as the clouds hinder us from the aſpect of the ſun, ſo anger darkens and obſcures the underſtanding, and makes a man often with the dogge to bite at the ſtone, that is throwne at him.

Secondly, it hinders our prayers[l], and therefore we ſhould alwayes remember, that meekeneſſe prepares a man to prayer, by humbling the heart, but anger makes the heart altogether unfit to pray.

[l] 1 Tim. 2. 8. 1 Pet. 3. 7.

Thirdly, anger makes a man more prone unto many other vices; Irâ creſcit ſel, augmento ejus ad iram proniores ſumus[a], by anger the gall encreaſes, and by the encreaſe of the gall, a man is more prone unto anger: Vinegar being long time kept ſpoiles the caske, ſo anger[b]: Imo inveteratа parit odium, illa feſtuca, hec trabs eſt. Old and long continued anger begets inveterate hatred, the moate thus encreaſing to a beame.

[a] Auguſt.

[b] Auguſt. ſ. Pſal. 54.

4ly, The effects of anger in regard of the calling or emploimēt, are theſe, it diſtracts a man in his affaires: when he is angry, he is unfit to buy or ſell, or caſt up his accounts, or write his letters, or do any thing elſ aright ſo long as he is angry: like a diſordered locke which will neither locke nor unlocke, without turnings and wreſtings, and hurting either the locke or key: or like a

shippe in a tempest, which is carried with the waves and wind hither and thither; and is not able by all the skill of the Pilot to steere a right, steady, and direct course; or like a drunken man, who being overcome with wine, is unable to go, or stand, or speake, and unfit for any imployment untill the vapours of the liquor be evapourated.

The effects of anger in regard of Reputation are two. First, it makes a man a foole, and to be esteemed foolish [c] Ira ab omni consilio ac mente deturbat, ut insanire videatur [d] an angry man seems for the present a frantick man, being distracted and disturbed both in his counsels and consolations: and therefore the angry man should consider, that howsoever hee may please himselfe in his peevishnesse and wrath, yet by others hee is judged both a foole and a mad man.

c Pro. 14. ch. 17. 19. verf. & Eccles. 7. 11.
d Hier. ad Demetr.

Secondly, anger shewes a man to bee but base mettall, and of a dunghill disposition, it not being so incident to generous spirits: Anger rebounds from a noble mind, as a ball frō the wall: the highest heaven never stoops to the clouds, and heavenly tempers shun anger which is of an earthly nature, as wee shewed before, quest. 2. on the contrary, he that is slow to anger, is better then hee that takes a Citie [e]. and therefore if a man did but respect his owne reputation, hee would avoid anger.

e Pro. 16. 32.

The effects of anger in regard of the body are two. First, it oppresseth the body; and hurts both the agent and patient, him that is angry, and with whom he is angry, but it more perniti-ously hurts him that is angry, then the other, because it comes from the minde of the one and from within, but reflects onely outwardly upon the other: yea, experience shewes that anger often brings men to Fevers and dangerous sicknesses, as is to the life pourtraied by a great historian and generall scoller [f].

f Guevara, familiar Epist. fol. 114. 115.

Secondly, it weakens and enfeebles the body, making it thereby daily more and more infirme, and consequently the life to be the lesse comfortable, and the more short; anger being like worldly sorrow wihch causeth death [g], and therefore a man (at the least) should take pitty of himselfe and his owne life, in not giving way to wrath.

g 2 Cor. 7. 10.

Anger doth easily subdue a mans selfe to the craft of his enemies, for by provoking him unto anger, they can leade him whether they will: for an angry man is easily incensed, and once incensed, hee is easily ensnared, being quickly entrapped in his talke, hee as then not being compos mentis, in his right wits.

The effects of anger in regard of the Soule are these, First, it displeaseth God [h] but meekenesse is much valued by him [i], and therefore Fathers are forbidden to be angry with their children [k], and Masters with their servants (Ephes. 6. 9. Philem. 16.) and therefore doe not displease God, when thou maiest please him, but remember, that howsoever anger may please thy distempered temper, yet it doth not please God, and therefore ought carefully to bee eschewed.

h Iam. 1. 20.
i 1 Pet. 3. 4
k Ephes. 6. 4. & Col. 3. 21.

Secondly, it provokes the anger of God [l], who is incensed unto wrath against the angry man, because he is not in charity; the nature of anger, being to be void of charity as I shewed before: and therefore remember, hee that is angry with his brother, God will be angry with him.

l Pro. 19. 19. Matth. 5. 22.

§. 3. And slew all the children that were in Bethlehem.] Herod seeing himself to be mocked of the Wise-men, converts his craft into cruelty, and that extraordinary. Sect. 3.

It may heere be asked, what manner of cruelty was this of Herods? Quest. 1.

I answer, there is a threefold cruelty, viz. First, of punishment; Secondly, of law; Thirdly, of blood. Answ.

First, there is crudelitas pœnæ, a Cruelty of Punishment towards inferiors; certainely Correction is commended and commanded [m], and therefore they are to blame, who blame the Magistrates correction, because he is not to hold the sword for nought: but heere three rules may be given to Magistrates, for the avoiding of their cruelty of punishment.

m Pro. 23. 13. 14.

First, let it be magnâ causâ; punish not but for a weighty cause: heere is a vulgar errour to be reformed, damages are alwaies thought heavie and worthy of punishment, but sinnes are thought light (as blasphemy, lying, swearing, fornication, drunkennesse, and the like) and scarce deserving correction.

Secondly, when the cause is weighty, and truly worthy of correction, yet parcâ manu, punish with a gentle and sparing hand: parvum supplicium satis est patri [n]; a little correction sufficeth a father to give, and Superiours are Fathers; Magistrates must punish as the Lord punishes, not for revenge against the person, but for the amendment of the offender: This rule needes not be inlarged, because for the most part Magistrates offend more by remisnesse, and too much lenity, then by too great severity.

Thirdly, if the cause bee weighty that justice exacts a severe punishment, and that correction be laid on with a heavie hand, yet amante corde, let it be inflicted with a pittifull, and commiserating heart, not as an enemie, or tyrant, who punisheth with anger, hatred, and delight, but as a mother, with teares.

Secondly, there is crudelitas legis a cruelty of the law, this consists in suites, and contentions, wherein the most part of men are too faulty: going to law one with another for every trifle. In going to law wee should observe the same rules, that before are prescribed to Magistrates in giving correction. First, magnâ causâ, men should not sue one another but in case of urgent necessity, or great wrongs, not for every cause, and petty wrong, as now adayes men ordinarily doe. Secondly, when there is just cause of suites, yet they must bee parcâ manu, not with the utmost extremity, for summum jus, summa injuria, to prosecute men to the utmost as far as law will extend is seldome or never lawfull. Thirdly, though suites in law be great, and concerne thy 46 livelihood, yea thy life, yet they should bee in charitate, prosecuted in love, which is very hard to be done.

Thirdly, there is crudelitas sanguinis, a cruelty of blood, when men seeke the precious lives one of another; and that either first, rashly, and in the heate of blood, occasioned sometimes by playing, sometimes by drinking, sometimes through whoring, sometimes by the lye given, or some distastfull words. Or Secondly more deliberately, and in cold blood, and that either I. privately by duels, (which is thought a part of fortitude, for a man to murther his brother by the law of a Duell, a diveliſh law, that doth either teach or allow men, to shed the blood of a Christian, and so deface Christs image) or II. publikely, and that by edicts, as Herod in this verse, and other (like him) bloody tyrants in the times of Persecutions.

Sect. 4. Observ. §. 4. Of two yeares old and under.] Wee may observe hence Herods arrogant folly. First, Christ was expected by the Iewes and Samaritanes[a]. Secondly, hee was foretold of by the Prophets. Thirdly, his comming is now revealed, and declared. Fourthly, It is by the Star and the Wise-men confirmed: yet notwithstanding all these, Herod hopes to meete with him, and kill him, either by Fraud or Force. If the oracle by Herod bee { Beleeved, why doth hee oppose himselfe? / Not beleeved, why doth he slay so many innocents?

[a] Ioh. 4. 25.

For Herod might thus have reasoned with himselfe: If it bee true that Christ the Messias and heavenly King of the Iewes, that hath beene so long since promised and expected, be now come, it is in vaine for me to strive with him, because so I shall be but θεομάχος a fighter against God, and I can expect no other event, then that which the Gyants had, who warred against heaven, their arrowes returning upon their owne heads. On the contrary, If there be no such thing, but that this is a meere fiction, like many other of their Rabbinicall conceits, why should I then either trouble my selfe, or trouble Israel, in murdering so many sweete innocent babes. Thus (I say) Herod might have thought, and deliberated within himselfe, but he doth not: True it is that he thinkes, the prophecies concerning Christ to be true, that he must come, and beleeves also the report that hee is come; yet hopes to dash all their hopes, and to falsifie all these divine truths, by prevailing against Christ. Teaching us that wicked men most wickedly imagine, that they can prevaile against God: as Pharaoh said, who is the Lord, that I should obey him, I know him not, neither will I at his command let Israel goe[b], as if he would say; mauger all his power, I will still keepe them: so in divers other plaine places, we may see this truth confirmed[c]. This arrogant branch, that thus thinkes to toppe the heavens, sprouts from these three roots: First from those desires which are too importunate and boundlesse, unde habeat, quærit nemo, sed oportet habere: when men have not learnt to want, nor to bridle their ambition, but are infected with the itch of honour, then they runne on in a violent course, to obtaine their desires, either by right or wrong: thus hoping in despight of God (as Pope Iulius said) to obtaine and effect their purposes. This was Herods fault, who being blinded with ambition, and desire of raigning, hoped by his craft and policie to cut Christ short.

Secondly, this hope, that wicked men have to prevaile against Christ, ariseth from the confidence, they have in their owne power and strength: wicked great men thinke nothing hard for them to doe, and therefore dare wage open battell against Gods religion, and his children. Thus doth Herod; and, because none dare gainsay him, hee hopes to prevaile. This hope arises from forgetfulnesse, they remember not oftentimes the hand of the Lord, but looke upon things as meerely ordered and governed by second causes[d], they consider not the eye of the Lord, that sees all, nor the hand of the Lord that swayes all; or they presume, God will take no notice of them; or they dare violate the truth, and yet hope to escape punishment, as Adam and Evah eate the apple, and yet hoped they should not dye, although God had positively without any If or and (for that peradventure[e] was of Evahs adding) affirmed the contrary[f]; and thus doth Herod hope to prevaile against Christ, although God himselfe had most plainely said the contrary[g]. And therefore every one should learne 1. to restraine his bottomles desires, and be content with whatsoever estate or condition the Lord shal call him unto, or settle him in. 2. Every one must remember, that he can doe nothing of himselfe, because in God we live, and moove, and have our beeing[a], yea because preferment comes neither from the East, nor from the West, but from the Lord, and therefore when we endeavour against the will of God, we doe but strive against the Streame. 3. All must learne, not to forget either the eye, or hand, or power, or truth of God; but remember all things are ordered by a divine hand of providence, and therefore let us not put forth our hands to use any wicked or unlawfull meanes, either for the procuring of any blessing, or the preventing of any evill: for in doing so, we prove our selves to be like wicked Herod, that thinkes hee can prevaile against Christ, the onely begotten sonne of God.

Vers. 17.

VERRS. 17. Then was fulfilled that, which was spoken by Ieremiah the Prophet, saying.

Then was fulfilled,] Wee see heere how carefull the Lord is, that every word of his should be fulfilled: whence First it may bee asked, shall every word of God whether promises or threatnings be accomplished? Quæst. 1.

Certes it shall, Esa. 55. 11. my word (saith the Lord) shall be fulfilled, and not one jot or jota thereof shall perish[b]: for if the Lord speake it, he wil also doe it. 1 Pet. 1. 24. Answ.

[b] Matth. 5. 18.

Secondly, Why shall every word of God be fulfilled? why is the Lord so carefull to bring to passe whatsoever he hath spoken? Quæst. 2.

I answer, First, because God is truth it selfe. Answ. 1.

Iohn

Iohn 14.6. and the truth of the word doth depend upon the truth of God; and therefore the Lord will fulfill whatsoever he hath spoken, least an aspersion of falshood should be cast in his face

Secondly, because God is infinite in knowledge, he knowes from the beginning, what shall Answ. 2. be for ever, and cannot be deceived [c], and hence c Gal. 6. 7. it is, that the Prophets doe so often speake of things which are to come, as though they were present, yea sometimes as though they were bypast. I. Sometimes they speake of things, which shall not bee for many yeares after, as though they were already present, as [d] the Prophet from d Mal. 3. 1. & Mark. 1. 2. the Lord saith concerning Iohn Baptist, Behold I send my messenger, who shall prepare the way. II. Sometimes they speake of things, that are to come divers hundred yeares after, as though they were already past; as it is said of Christ [e], for unto e Esa. 9. 6. us a child is borne, and unto us a sonne is given; as though he were then already borne and given: Now the reasons of their thus delivering their prophecies, was because they were as sure of the event and accomplishment of that, which by them from the Lord had beene spoken, as though it were already present or past.

Thirdly, because God is omnipotent, able to effect whatsoever hee hath promised or threat-Answ. 3. ned; by his word at first all things were made, yea so powerfull is the voice of God, that it never returnes in vaine [f]. If the Lord should not acf Esa. 55. 11. complish, what he either promises or threatens, men would beleeve that he were not able to doe it, and therefore being jealous of his honour, hee is carefull to fulfill whatsoever he hath spoken.

Fourthly, God will fulfill every word of his,
Answ. 4. because he is constant and immutable [g]: for 1. he
g Iam. 1. 17. is never disturbed with affection, nor transported by passion, he doth all things upon mature deliberation, with infinite wisedome, and most calme affection. 2 His will is never changed, he is to day and to morrow, and for ever the same, and therefore hee certainely fulfilles whatsoever he speakes.

To summe up all this whole question in few words; If the Lord did not fulfill or performe what he promises, and threatens, it were for some of these causes: either first, because hee is not true, or not a God of his word: Or secondly, because he knew not, what would come to passe, some thing thwarting or crossing him, which he did not foresee nor know: Or thirdly, because he is not able to performe what hee hath spoken: Or fourthly, because he is mutable, and of another minde to day, then he was yesterday: Now all these are blasphemously derogatory from the Majestie of the Almighty, and therefore least men should thus conceit of him, hee fulfills all his prophecies and predictions, that they may see and know, that hee is infinite in truth, power, knowledge, and also immutable.

Against this it will bee objected, God threatens all sinners, that none of them shall escape, but Obiect. 1 every one shall perish [h], the sinner shall be cast into
h Psal. 9. 17. hell; that is, every sinner; an indefinite proposition being equipollent to an universall, and yet many Publicanes and Harlots have come unto heaven, how then is every word fulfilled?

I answer first, all the threatnings of God are conditionall, and therefore if the condition required be fulfilled, then they shall not come to Answ. 1. to passe, but if the condition be not accomplished, then they shall certainely perish that are threatned [i].

i Ezech. 18. 22. 26.

Secondly, threatnings sometimes have a double sense; first, Literall, and this sense is al-Answ. 2. waies conditionall. Secondly, Allegoricall, and this sense is alwaies true: as for example, Ionah goes through Niniveh, and cryes, yet 40 dayes and this citie shall be destroyed [k]: the literall sense of which commination was conditionall, that is, k Ionah 3. 4. if Niniveh repent her not, then within 40 dayes after this denunciation she should be destroyed: but they repent, and are therefore spared. The Allegoricall sense of this Prophecy was true, because about some 40 yeares after this (they returning unto their former wickednesse) the citie was overcome and destroyed.

Thirdly, it is most certaine, that all sinners shall be cast into hell, but not all that are or have Answ. 3. beene sinners (for then none shall bee saved) but onely those that continue in their sinnes, and will neither by mercies nor judgements, promises nor threatnings, be weaned from them, but qualis vita, finis ita, as they have lived in sinne, so they die in iniquity without true and unfained repentance. And thus all the threatnings of God rightly understood shall be fulfilled.

It may be objected againe, God threatens to bring many temporall plagues and calamities Obiect. 2. upon the wicked in this life, and yet we see none florish so much, nor abound with wealth as they doe.

a Psa. 73.

I answer first, certainely God spares wicked Answ. 1. men a long time, rarely punishing any speedily: si quoties peccant homines, sua fulmina mittat Iuppiter, for if he were as ready to punish, as men to offend, who could escape: and therefore he forbeares a long time for these two causes. I. That thereby hee may lead sinners to repentance [b]. b Rom. 2. 5. And II. That hee may glorifie his long suffering and patience, according to his owne proclamation of himselfe [c]. Hee spared the old c Exod. 34. 6. world after he tooke notice of their impieties, d Gen. 6. 3. 120. yeares [d], which is called the great long suffering of God [e]. e 1 Pet. 3. 20.

Secondly, though God spare wicked men long, Answ. 2. yet he will not spare them alwayes; for at length hee will awake as a giant refreshed with wine, and smite his enemies [f]. Pharaoh was ten times admo- f Psa. 78. 65. nished, but at length utterly overthrowne: God expects untill their sins come unto maturity, and then punishes.

Thirdly, though these generall threatnings are Answ. 3. universall, that is, although God threatens in generall all wicked men, with many temporall judgements, yet he doth not alwaies inflict them upō every particular offender, neither dealeth the Lord alike with all wicked men in outward things; because he would have us know that neither love nor hatred can be known by these Answ. 4. externall things.

Fourthly

48 Fourthly, God denounceth divers and ſundry judgments againſt al wicked men, that all might Anſw. 4. learne to feare, and none think himſelf ſecure, or ſafe: God threatens all, and puniſheth ſome even in this life, that every particular man might looke unto himſelfe: Tunc tua res agitur, paries cum proximus ardet, when the Lord threatens all, and corrects one wicked man, he would have every one to remember that they have deſerved to be thus puniſhed, and that the threatnings of God are denounced againſt them, as well as others, and therefore they had need to feare, need to beware, need to looke about them, need to prevent the ſtorme that is comming, neede to kiſſe the ſon before he [g] grow angry with them, g Pſa. 2. 11 and ſo they periſh by his juſt wrath [g].

And this is one of the chiefe ends of Gods temporall menaces, to make all men fearefull to offend him, and carefull to pleaſe him: and therfore every threatning according to the no. Ghoſts meaning ſhall bee accompliſhed in Gods appointed time.

Obiect. 3 It wil be objected again, God hath made many

Or III. Solamine, God will afford unto them internall comfort and peace of conſcience, and joy in their ſufferings [o]. And Verſ. 18. Sect. 1. §. 1. VERS. 18. In Rama was a voice heard, mourning and weeping, and great lamentation, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not bee comforted, becauſe they were not.

It may here be asked where Rama was? Queſt. 1
I anſwer firſt there was Ramathaijm in mount Anſw. 1. Ephraim, as may be ſeene 1 Sam. 1. 1. and Iudg. 4. 5.

Secondly, there was Rumah in Nephthali, Ioſh. Anſw. 2. 19. 36.

Thirdly, there was Rama in Benjamin, Ioſh. 18. Anſw. 3. 25. Iudg. 19. 13.

§. 1. VERS. 19. And when Herod was dead behold an Angell of the Lord appeareth unto Ioſeph in Egypt in a dreame. Verſ. 19. Sect. 1.

It may here be doubted, whether Herod died Queſt. a naturall death, or if he went out of the world (after ſo many bloudy cruelties) without ſome remarkeable judgement? It ſhould ſeeme hee did, becauſe the Scripture makes no mention of any thing, but that onely he died, neither expreſſing when nor how.

I anſwer firſt, that he dyed about two yeares Anſw. 1. after.

Secondly, as his life was ſhort (after this un- Anſw. 2. heard-of cruelty) ſo it was miſerable [a] as may appeare by this deſcription of it: Hee firſt was ſtricken with an extreame burning heat within, which ſo faſt conſumed his meat, that hee had continually a moſt greedy deſire to feed, but could never be ſatisfied; his intrails rotted in his body, he was tormented with moſt cruell pangs in his genitals, and his feet were greatly ſwolne. To all this was added a putrifying of his privy parts crauling with wormes, and a moſt horrible ſtinch proceeded from him: in which miſerable lothſome caſe hee continued ſome weekes and then dyed.

Sect. 2. §. 2. This verſe may bee allegorized thus: Herod is ſin, and as long as he lives and raignes, Chriſt doth abſent himſelfe, and will not come unto his people: Herod muſt dye before Chriſt will returne: ſinne muſt bee mortyfied before Chriſt will come unto the ſoule; whence it may be queſtioned.

Queſt. Why is there no participation of Chriſt before mortification?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, becauſe the Holy Spirit will not come into a polluted veſſell, God and Mammon cannot dwell together [b], one Temple cannot hold the Arke and Dagon. 1 Sam. Non bene conveniunt, nec in una ſede morantur, ſin and grace, Satan, and Chriſt will never bee immates, or cohabitants in one, and the ſame heart, at one and the ſame time; and therefore ſinne muſt bee expulſed, before Chriſt wil be entertained.

[b] Matth. 6. 24.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, to dye, and to live are contraries: as the Apoſtle S^t Paul ſaith, how can hee that is dead in ſin live therein [c]? A man cannot be alive and dead at one inſtant, in one ſenſe: and therefore we cannot pertake the ſpirituall life of grace and Chriſt, untill ſinne dye [d] Chriſt will rather continue an exul in Egypt, then come into Iſrael ſo long as this Herod (ſin) is alive; and therfore if we deſire the fruition, and poſſeſſion of Chriſt in the ſoule, wee muſt labour to fight againſt [e] & to mortifie [f] all carnal affections in us, putting off this old garment of ſinne, and caſting it from us, that ſo wee may bee clothed with that new man Chriſt Jeſus [g].

Verſ. 20. Sect. 1. §. 1. VERS. 20. Saying, ariſe, and take the babe, and his mother, and goe into the land of Iſrael: for they are dead, which ſought the babes life.

Queſt. It may bee demanded, What was the end of Chriſts flying into Egypt, and returning from thence?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, this was done, that in the beginning of Chriſts nonage, he might ſhow that hee was borne to undergoe many temporall miſeries.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, that in regard of that eſtate of humanity, which he had undertaken, he might as a man have a care of his life, in foreſeeing and preventing all dangers, that may enſue.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, this was done, that Chriſt hereby might ſhew, that it was he alone, that was appointed by God to bring us out of ſpirituall Egypt into the promiſed land of eternall reſt.

Sect. 2. §. 2. And goe into the land of Iſrael.

Queſt. It may be asked, why muſt Ioſeph returne with Chriſt into Iſrael?

Anſw. 1. Obſerva. I anſwer firſt, that he might be educated, and brought up amongſt his owne people: where was the law of God, and the true Church of God; teaching us, that parents ſhould be very carefull of the pious education of their children, that they may have both good inſtruction, and diſcipline, and alſo good example: Now there is a three-fold good education, the I. Learned, this is good for thoſe that are able, to allow into their children, ſome learning, that they may be the more capable of religion. The II. Is ſober; to teach them humanity, and humilitie towards all, and ſobriety and temperance in themſelves. The III. Pious and holy, and this is required (as well as the former) of all parents, to endeavour by Catechiſing, inſtructing, and godly example to educate their children, in the feare and nurture of the Lord.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this was done alſo that it might be knowne, that Chriſt was an Iſraelite, leaſt otherwiſe hee ſhould have beene called an Egyptian.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, this was done for Ioſephs and Maries ſake, that they might be no longer afflicted, then was neceſſary, God not ſuffering his to bee afflicted, ſave onely for a moment.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Becauſe they are dead, who ſought the babes life.

Queſt. 1. Here it may bee demanded; who were they that ſought the childs life, and now are dead?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Hierome thinkes it was the Phariſees and Sanhedrin [a], and he is moved to this opinion for theſe reaſons, I. Becauſe it is ſpoken in the plurall number, mortui, not mortuus, they are dead, not he is dead. II. Becauſe they were troubled, as well as Herod, verſ. 3. and (as Hierome thinkes) conſulted alſo with Herod againſt Chriſt. III. Becauſe they were ſlaine by Herod, as we ſhewed before, verſ. 3. Some [b] deny S. Hieromes ſecond reaſon, affirming that the Phariſees did neither lye in wait for the life of Chriſt, nor conſult to kill him.

[a] Hiero. ſ.

[b] Gualt. ſ.

Anſw. 2. Obſerv. Secondly, this is certaine, from this verſe, that whoſoever they were, that ſought the childes life, were by death removed out of the way: Teaching us, that whoſoever oppoſeth himſelfe againſt Chriſt, ſhall bee deſtroyed; Chriſt is now at the right hand of the Father, in power & glory [c]; and therfore they that ſpurne at him, doe but kicke againſt the prickes. Hence a queſtion may be propounded.

[c] Phil. 2. 8. 9.

Queſt. 2. Anſw. Who are they that oppoſe themſelves againſt Chriſt? I anſwer, thoſe that perſecute him, 1. in his Perſon, 2. in his Power, 3. in his Preaching: all ſuch being στρατηγοι, fighters againſt Chriſt, and which ſhall never goe unpuniſhed [d].

[d] Matth. 21. 44. & Act. 3. 23.

Firſt, in Perſona, they oppoſe Chriſt that perſecute him in his perſon: the perſon of Chriſt taken largely, conſiſts of an Head, and a Body, and therefore they are oppoſers of Chriſt, that I. perſecute him in Capite, that blaſpheme Chriſt, or refuſe to be ſubject unto him (as many doe in all places, where Chriſt is preached) or directly oppoſe Chriſt himſelfe, as Herod did here, and the Iewes afterwards, when they perſecuted him, and crucified him: all theſe ſin againſt their own heads, this their oppoſition being treaſon in the higheſt degree. II. They are oppoſers of Chriſt in his perſon, that perſecute him in membris, in his body; that is, they that perſecute the true profeſſors of the Goſpell of Chriſt, or the children of God.

Secondly, they oppoſe Chriſt, that perſecute him in poteſtate, in his power, as, I. traytors doe

50 doe, that imagine and practise evill against Kings, the Lords Vice-gerents, as the Pope doth, that sometimes opposeth Kings, sometimes deposeth Kings, sometimes interdicteth and excommunicateth Kings, sometimes freeeth their subjects from the oath of allegeance, & either by secret policie, or open power, laboureth to murther those Protestant Princes, that will not be subject to his Antichristian power; yet this should no whit dismay any of the Lords Vicegerents, upon earth: for although they bee craftie, fraudulent, malicious, cruell, and bloudy, yet they need not feare them, because they oppose themselves against Christ, in opposing themselves against Christian Kings; and they shall not prevaile against them, God having promised to protect his Vice-royes, who are defenders of the true faith, and hath graciously performed his promise to our late dread Soveraignes of famous and blessed memory, King James, and Queene Elizabeth, against whom, none of the plots or practises of the Jesuites, or Seminaries (seedsmen of mischiefe) ever tooke effect. These, I say, are opposers of Christ, and e Psal. 2. 4. 5. 6. therefore shall be destroyed [e]: yea, many are the examples that might be produced of Gods heavie judgements inflicted upon those that have opposed Protestant Princes; but I referre the f fol. 541. Reader to Doctor Beard his Theater of Gods Judgements [f].

II. There are others that oppose Christ in his Power, besides Papists, and those are Anabaptists, who deny obedience unto all Christian g Rom. 13. 1. 2. Magistrates: and although the Apostle positively sayth, that they are ordained of God [g], yet these Separatists doe deny all superioritie and Magistracie, amongst Christian people, as shall be shewed more largely elswhere.

Thirdly, they are opposers of Christ, that persecute, or oppose him in Predicatione, in his preaching; and that either, I. By the patronage of sinne, or sinners, many delight to support and uphold wicked men in their wickednesse; but such must remember, that herein they oppose Christ, which opposition will bring destruction at last. Or, II. by an obstinacie in sinne, transgressing with an high hand, and will h Ephes. 4. 19. not be reclaimed by the preaching of the word: some will sinne, let the preacher say what hee will, stat pro ratione voluntas, their owne will shall be their law, not the will of God published by the Minister: some would leave some sinnes, if Christ did not forbid them: that is, because the preacher reprehends them, therefore they will not amend, to vex him. Or, III. Those that hate the preachers of the Gospell, and endevour that all preaching were left. These must beware, because this is a direct opposition of Christ, as appeares most clearly by this one example: Paul breathes out threatnings against the Disciples of the Lord, persecuting and pro-

a Act. 9. 4. why persecutest thou me [a], and fore-warnes him of it, as a Scylla, that will suddenly dash him to b Vers. 5. pieces [b]. And therefore all these must take heed of Herods sinne, (in opposing themselves unto Christ) least that Herods punishment (mentioned before, vers. 19.) be their portion: for none are stronger than Christ [c], none are able to prevaile one jot against him; but hee is able to c 1. Cor. 10. 22. throw both the bodies and souls of all those into everlasting burnings, that, like Herod, set themselves against him, either in his person, or in his power, or in his preaching.

§. 4. Returne, for they are dead that sought the babes life.] We may observe here, that as soone as ever they are dead, which sought the childes life, Ioseph was called back againe: the cause of his going into Egypt, was the preservation of Christ, and as soone as this storme was blowne over, and this danger past, hee is reduced, and brought backe againe. Hence it may bee asked, Sect. 4.

Why doth the Lord remove the affliction from his children, as soone as the danger is removed? Quest.

I answer, First, because his mercie is infinite, immense, and unspeakable towards his children, Psal. 103. 8. 9. 11. 12. Answ. 1.

Secondly, hee doth not afflict his children willingly, but by a certaine coaction: Gangrens are necessarily to be corroded, or cured by corrosives, but as soone as the dead flesh is eaten out, the Chyrurgion changeth his plaister: so affliction is sometimes necessary, to weane us from sinne; and when wee are so weaned, then the Lord turnes our mourning into mirth. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, because the Lords end in the affliction of his children, is the prevention of some danger; which once being prevented, the Lord returnes againe unto them in mercie. And thus the Lord doth with Christ, and Ioseph, and Mary in this verse: when their enemies are dead, then they are called home againe. Answ. 3.

§. 1. VERS. 22. But when hee heard that Archelaus did reigne in Iudea, in the roome of his father Herod, hee was afrayd to goe thither, notwithstanding being warned of God in a dreame, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee. Vers. 22. Sect. 1.

It may here first bee questioned, Why Ioseph went into Galilee, and Nazareth? Quest. 1.

I answer, First, because Herod Antipas was a man of a meeker spirit, and lesse cruell than Archelaus, as may thus appeare, I. This Herod heares John Baptist preach, Mark. 6. 20. &c. II. Unwillingly he slayes him, vers. 26. and III. His respect unto those that sate with him, vers. 26. shewes that hee was of a soft temper, Answ. 1.
non possum adversari meis [d]. d Terent.

Secondly. the King of the Jewes was not expected from Galilee, and therefore Ioseph goes thither, as the safer place. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, it is very probable, that the Lord did advise him whither to goe, as well as forewarne him of not going into Judea. Answ. 3.

Hence further it may bee asked, Why doth the Lord command Ioseph this? Quest. 2.

I answer, First, because Galilee was the safer place, as is aforesayd: Teaching us, that God Answ. 1. Observ.

will

will ſecurely, and ſafely provide for his children, and that for theſe two cauſes, I. Becauſe God loves them, and alwayes cares for them, yea, ordained the whole world for their good [e]. II. Becauſe hee is infinite in wiſedome, and onely knowes what is truely profitable for them.

e Rom. 8. 28.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Lord could have preſerved them from Archelaus, but hee doth this for our Obſerv. 2 inſtruction. Teaching Ioſeph, and all the Godly heereby to uſe the meanes, and then referre the ſucceſſe unto God: as Ioab did. 2 Sam. 10. 10.11. and as Hezekiah did. 2 Chron. 32.34. and Nehem. 4. 9.

Obiect. But againſt this it may objected. The decrees of God are ſure, the end is appointed, and therefore vaine is all the meanes that men can uſe.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, If wee muſt not uſe the meanes where there is a decree, then wee muſt neither eate nor apparell our ſelves, nor ſow ſeede or the like: becauſe God hath decreed whether there ſhall be plenty or ſcarcity, whether thou ſhalt have health or ſickneſſe, poverty or riches, yea f Iob. 7.1 how long thou ſhalt live [f].

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the meanes are ordained of God for our good and reliefe, and are bleſſed by him to that end, and therefore not to bee neglected. I. Sometimes God ordaines and bleſſeth internall meanes, as prayer unto him: thus when Moſes prayed, Iſrael prevailed, but when hee ceaſed

g Exo. 17. 11. praying then Amalek got the upper hand [g]: ſo Eliſha promiſeth (from the Lord) unto Ahab

b 1 King. 18,42. raine, but obtaines it not without prayer [b]. II. Sometimes the Lord ordaines and bleſſeth externall meanes alſo; and hence the Prophets of God uſed the meanes, when they could have wrought miracles; thus Eliſha uſeth ſalt, 2 King. 2.10. and meale (4.41.) and wood, (6.6.) yea Chriſt makes clay, (Iohn 9.6.) and the Angels i Luk. 22. 43. comfort Chriſt [i]. And all this was to ſhew us, that in all our neceſſities, both externall and internall, corporall and ſpirituall, wee muſt uſe thoſe meanes which the Lord hath ordained in his word, for our eaſe, helpe and ſuccour.

Sect. 2. §. 2. He turned aſide into Galile.] In Galile, Obſerv. 1 two things may be obſerved, the Firſt is Infamy and contempt, the Iewes held it an infamous, or at leaſt a baſe place; and therefore they ſay, k Ioh. 7. 52. no Prophet ariſeth out of Galilee [k]. And Nathanael thinkes it ſtrange b Ioh. 1.46. [b] that any good thing ſhould come out of Nazareth. So Iulian the Apoſtate when hee warring againſt the Perſians, was mortally wounded with a dart from heaven, cryed out (his breath being ready to expire) with that blacke and blaſphemous mouth, vicisti Galilæe, oh Galilean (calling Chriſt ſo in diſdaine and contempt, as a word of diſgrace) thou haſt now prevailed and got the maſtery over me: yet notwithſtanding this, Chriſt diſdaines not to dwell in Galilee, and that for theſe cauſes. 1 Becauſe hee refuſed nothing for our c Phil. 2.7. d Matth. 20, 28. e Ioh. 13.9 ſakes: for us he humbled himſelfe, taking upon him the forme of a ſervant [c], yea came into the world that he might ſerve [d], and refuſed not that ſervile office, to waſh his Apoſtles feete [e].

Obſerv. 2 2. Becauſe he contemned all worldly glory, and therefore goes into obſcure Galilee, which was of ſmall note, or account in regard of the cities of Iudea. 51

Secondly, the ſecond thing obſervable in Galilee, is Prophaneneſſe: for as it was a baſe and contemptible place, ſo (which is worſe) it was held a wicked, prophane, and irreligious place: hence it is called Galilee of the Gentiles [f], that is frequentiſſima Gentibus [g], being ſituated neere unto Tyre and Sidon, and frequented continually by the Gentiles, & abounding with them: and hence (as is conjectured) it was that Solomon gave unto Hiram 20 cities in Galilee [h] & Galilee being thus peopled with Gentiles was juſt like unto Iſrael, where the Syrians dwelt [i], ſo Tetrachia ab Ethnarchia ſeparatur (ſaith Ioſephus) the Tetrachie of Galilee was ſeparated from from the Principalitie of the Iewes, as is plaine by the Evangeliſt [l]. Yea it is evident, that the Gentiles firſt did inhabite thoſe cities, becauſe after that Hiram had reſtored thoſe cityes to Salomon, hee repaired them and then cauſed the Iewes to inhabit them [m], and yet notwithſtanding all this Chriſt dwels in Galilee.

f Matth 4. 15. g Iunius ſ. h 1 King. 9.11. i 2 King. 17.24. l Luk. 3.1. m 2 Chro. 8.2.

Queſt. Hence no ſmall queſtion will ariſe: Is it lawfull to cohabite or dwell with infidels?

Anſw. I anſwer it is, Lot dwels in Sodom, David in Gath, Ioſeph with Pharaoh, Ieremie in Babylon.

Obiect. Againſt this it will be objected: This is directly forbidden moſt plainely by many ſeverall ſcriptures, as Eſa. 52.11. 2 Cor. 6. 17. Revel. 18.4. Epheſ. 4.11. David complaines that hee is conſtrained to abide amongſt them, Pſal. 120. verſe 6. ſo alſo Deut. 7.2. and Exod. 23. 33. and 34.12. In which places wee are commanded to come out from infidels, to ſeparate our ſelves from them, and the like phraſes, and therefore it is not lawfull: The Argument ſyllogiſtically is this, That which is prohibited by God is unlawfull, but cohabitation or converſation with infidels is prohibited by God, and therefore is not lawfull.

Anſw. I anſwer heere to the Minor or ſecond propoſition, our converſing or abiding with infidels is threefold. 1. Of conſent, when a man living amongſt them, learnes their maners: as Salomon, with Pharaohs daughter [n]; this is dangerous and forbidden, and is the meaning of all the places objected, that wee muſt take heede of learning the vices and wicked cuſtomes of unbeleevers.

n 1 King. 11.4.

2. Of neceſſitie, & thus Lot, David, Iacob, Ioſeph, were by a kinde of inforcing neceſſity urged and compelled to dwell with heathens: and this is tolerated and allowed; whether firſt it bee abſolute for life, neceſſitie thereunto conſtraining: or ſecondly, whether it be reſpective, onely for a time, in regard of our preſent, pious, and lawfull calling, (as our Factors amongſt the Turkes.

3. Of Office, as a Phyſitian, and thus Chriſt dwells among the Galileans [o]. Thus Chriſt eates with Publicanes [p], and this converſing with infidels is commended; but here two cautions are to be obſerved. Firſt conſider what calling thou haſt o Eſa. 42.1 p Matth. 9. 12. Luk. 7.34.

52 haſt to doe it, for it is dangerous adventuring without a calling, and little better then preſumption: Chriſt was not onely ſent to the loſt ſheepe of Iſrael, but alſo to be a corner ſtone, to joyne Iewes and Gentiles in one in him [g], and therefore he had a warrant from God and a particular calling to doe this.

g Col. 3. 11.

Secondly, conſider thine owne ſtrength, leaſt in ſtead of converting of them, thou be perverted by them: they had neede of ſtrong men in grace, that undertake to cure the wicked, leaſt that themſelves bee ſeduced: Thus Chriſt was a lambe without ſpot, in him was no ſin found, and therefore having a calling he might ſafely dwell, and converſe, and eate with ſinners.

Verſ. 23. Sect. 1. S. VERS. 23. And he came and dwelt in a citie called Nazareth, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet: hee ſhall bee called a Nazarene.

Queſt. It is heere doubted, where is this written, in what booke, by what Prophet?

Anſw. 1. a Chryſoſt. Theophil. Muſcul. To this firſt ſome anſwer, [a] that the booke is loſt, wherein this Prophecie was contained; becauſe many ſentences are recited in the New Teſtament, which are no where extant in the Old: and this came (as they thinke) through the envy and malice of the Iewes: but this reaſon ſeemes weake; for if any ſuch bookes were in the Apoſtles time, and were by them received as the divine and infallible oracles of God, it is not likely, that now they are loſt, they being neither envious nor negligent: but of this wee have ſpoken in the fifteenth verſe.

Anſw. 2. b Iunius Others anſwer [b], that Chriſt is heere ſaid to have beene thus ſpoken of by the Prophets, He ſhall be call a Nazarite, becauſe hee is by them ſet forth by the name Netzer, a branch, which appellation howſoever it was not underſtood any otherwiſe, but as ſetting forth a branch comming out of a Kingly ſtocke, yet myſtically withall is intimated thereby, in what place hee ſhou'd be brought up. Others to this purpoſe [c] reade this verſe thus, he ſhall be called a Netzerit, not a Nazarit, becauſe he is called Netzer [d], a branch; the Evangeliſt thus expounding the Prophet in ſenſe, though not in words, becauſe Chriſt was not a Nazarit: and thus this author would interpret Saint Matthewes words, he ſhall be called a flower, or a branch. Thus (I ſay) theſe thinke, that Chriſts name was not Nazarens, but Netzer, which ſignifies a Branch [e]. And the reaſon they give for this is, becauſe it is ſaid, dictum per Prophetas, in the plurall number, as it was ſaid by the Prophets [f]. This reaſon is altogether diſliked by learned Beza, upon a double ground, the firſt is becauſe although this Teſtimony be found but in one of the ſmall prophets, yet it is ſaid to be ſpoken διὰ τῶν προφητῶν by the Prophets, becauſe all theſe 12. ſmall Prophets were joyned in one booke.

c Weemſe Chriſt. Synag f. 49.
d Zach. 6. 12.
e Eſa. 11. 1. & Zach. 3. 19. & 6. 12.
f Hierom. & Iunius.

Secondly, becauſe this verſe is quoted from the book of the Judges, which booke was written by diverſe ſeverall Prophets; and therefore it may be underſtood thus, dictum per Prophetas that is written in that booke, which was penned by diverſe Prophets.

Anſw. 3. The moſt part anſwer, that this verſe is taken from Iudg. 13. 5. 7. The child ſhall be a Nazarite unto the Lord.) for 1. Sampſon is called a Nazarite. 2 he was a type of Chriſt. 3 therfore Chriſt is called ſo ſpiritually. 4 therfore, that which they will not acknowledge, God hath thus brought to paſſe, viz. that they ſhall call him a Nazarene. Heere then wee muſt diligently obſerve, how Sampſon was a Type of Chriſt. Firſt, in his birth, which I. was prophetically foretold [g]. II. from his birth he was prepared: in that ſame verſe. III. ordained for the good of Iſrael: in that ſame place alſo. Thus the birth of Chriſt was foretold [h], himſelfe alſo prepared and ordained to ſave his people [i]. Secondly, in his life. 1. hee was full of ſtrength, and employed it for the protection of the Iewes: ſo Chriſt is a ſtrong rock, ſtronger then Sathan and all his inſtruments, and therefore will protect his children [k]. 2 Sampſon marries a Gentile, ſo Chriſt marries the heathens, receiving them into an everlaſting covenant. 3 he overcame the Lyon, and drew hony from him: ſo Chriſt overcame Sathan that roaring Lyon, that he might give liberty, and life, and ſalvation (which is ſweeter then honey) unto his ſervants. 4 Sampſon for the love of an harlot exinaniuit ſe, ſuffered himſelfe to be emptied, ſtripped, diſtrobed and deprived of his ſtrength: ſo Chriſt diſtrobed himſelfe of glory, and tooke the lowly ſhape of man upō him, for mans ſake who had played the harlot with many lovers [l].

Thirdly, in his death, 1 Sampſon was ſlaine by his enemies, ſo was Chriſt. 2 he revenged himſelfe more in his death then in his life [m], ſo Chriſt by his death overcame death, hell, and the devill [n]. And thus we ſee from whence this verſe is gathered by the Evangeliſt.

Sect. 2. §. 2. He ſhall be called a Nazarene.] Wee have two things heere to obſerve, firſt the explication. Secondly the application of this word, Nazarite.

Queſt. 1. Firſt, for the explication of the word, I propound two queſtions; The firſt is drawne from the text, And he came and dwelt in Nazaret, that it might be fulfilled, which was ſpoken by the Prophet, And hee ſhall bee called a Nazarit unto the Lord.

How were theſe two accompliſhed in Chriſt, to be called both a Naſarit, and a Nazarit?

Anſw. He was Nazarens voto, Nazarenus habitatione: he was a Nazarene by habitation or dwelling, becauſe he dwelt there; he was a Nazarit, the true branch of the root of Ieſſe, in regard of his humanity: and he was a Naſarit truly ſeparated, and ſet apart to the Lord: thus hee is called ναζηραῖος, holy unto the Lord, & ναζωραῖος, one belonging to Nazareth.

Queſt. 2. What is meant by Naſarit?

Anſw. I anſwer, the word is ambiguous and doubtfull, there being foure kinds of Naſarits, whereof two of them are { Theologicall. / Hereticall.

The firſt ſort of Naſarites (which are the firſt Theologicall) are of the old Teſtament, and are thoſe those that were separated, and set apart onely unto God, either, I. By ordination and vow [a], or, II. By the commandement of God, as Sampson was [b].

[a] Numb. 6.2. [b] Iudg. 13 4.

The second sort of Nazarites (which are the second Theologicall) are of the New Testament, and they are those who were borne or brought up in Nazareth, because Nazareth in the old Testament is never named: and thus these words are ever interpreted, ναζαρεῖος, ναζαρηνος, Matth. 26.71. Mark. 1.24. and 10.47. and 14. 67. Luk. 4.34. and 24.19. Iohn 19.19. Acts 2.22.

The third sort of Nazarites (which are the first Heretical) are of some of the Jews, who acknowledging the Patriarches (untill Iosuahs time) reject the Scripture, boasting that they have other writings, of more worth than these are. Danæus (in Epiphanio) calleth these Nazaræos.

The fourth sort of Nazarites (which are the second heretical) are of the Christians, borne in Pella, in the yeare of Christ 37. who would have all the ceremonies to be observed, and that for these two causes, I. Because the Apostles themselves observed them for a time, II. That so they might avoid persecution, Gal. 3.

Quest. 3. How may this be applied with Benefite, or to whom?

Answ. I answer, It may bee applyed, either unto Christ, or unto our selves.

Quest. 4. How may this be applyed unto Christ?

Answ. I answer, Christ is a Nazarite, I. Literally, according to the second sort of Nazarites, because he was brought up there. II. Spiritually, according to the first sort of Nazarites; but not one of those, who were separated and set apart unto God, BY VOVV, but by the Ordination and appoyntment of God.

Quest. 5. How may this be applyed unto us?

Answ. I answer, Wee, as the members of Christ, ought also to bee Nazarites unto God. Nazar signifies one that is separated, as Ioseph amongst his brethren, and divers others, Gen. 49. 26. and Deut. 33. 16. and Lament. 4.7. and Amos 2. 11. that is, first, in generall wee must bee separated from the world [c]. Secondly, particularly, I. First, cut not the haire, let no razor come upon your heads; this hath a double signification, first, it signifies fortitude and strength: teaching us three things, 1. To bee constant and resolute in our obedience, that nothing may divert, or hinder us from the service of God. 2. To fight manfully, even unto bloud, against sinne, Hebr. 12.4. 3. To bee constant in the profession of the truth, even unto death, as the three children [d] were.

[d] Dan. 3. 17.

Secondly, it signifies a certaine neglect of outward ornament, or bodily adorning: Teaching us to mortifie our affections unto the world, to labour that the world may bee crucified unto us; and that we may looke upon it as a dry branch, and a withered stocke, wherein there is no beauty, nor comelinesse, that wee should desire it.

II. Secondly, abstaine from wine; this signifies temperance: and therefore let us learne to mortifie our affections in all worldly things, using the world, as though we used it not [e]. Principally take heed of Drunkennesse, this breakes our vow of a Nazarite unto God.

[e] 1 Cor. 7. 30, 31.

III. Thirdly, touch no dead carkasse, that is, leave all mortified affections; the lusts that are killed, let them never be revived; the sinnes that are left, let them never bee learned [f], put off sinne for ever, and take heed of turning with the Dogge to his vomit, or the Swine that is washed, to the wallowing in the mire, lest that the latter end bee worse than the beginning [g].

CHAPTER III.

Vers. 1. Sect. 1. Obiect. §. 1. VERS. 1. And in those dayes Iohn the Baptist came, and preached in the wildernes of Iudea.

THE Papists object this place to prove the lawfulnesse of Monasticall Vowes; arguing thus, Iohn Baptist lived from a childe in the wildernesse: therefore it is lawfull for young ones to professe Monkerie.

Answ. 1. I answer, First, Iohns example was extraordinary, as his office and calling was singular; and therefore he is no more to be imitated, and followed in his solitary life, than in his diet of Locusts and wilde honey: he sprang also in his mothers wombe, which I thinke Monkes and Eremites doe not.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is not certaine at what yeares Iohn entred into the wildernesse: for hee was thirtie yeares old when hee came and preached in the wildernesse, as followes afterwards[b].

[b] Willet. Synops. f. 343.

Sect. 2. §. 2. In those dayes.] Here divers questions may be propounded.

Quest. 1. First, in what yeare of Christs age was this?

Answ. I answer, This seemes to bee presently after Christ turning aside into Nazareth, mentioned chapter 2. 23. but it is not: for it was in the 15. yeare of Tiberius, and in the 30. yeare of Christ, as appeares by another of the Evangelists[a].

[a] Luk. 3. 1. 23

Quest. 2. How could Christ be so long time unknowne, seeing there had been so many manifestations of him?

Answ. 1. I answer, First, because those revelations of the wise men, of Anna, and Simeon, and of the Sheepheards, and the consultation of the Priests, were all private.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because God had given them over to drowsinesse, and the spirit of slumber; and therefore they did not marke, nor observe these things.

Quest. 3. Why are there so many yeares intermitted, wherein there is no mention made of Christ? For hee came out of Egypt when hee was about two yeares old, and at this time hee was about 30. as is sayd before, so that for the space of 28 yeares, there is no mention made of him.

Answ. 1. To this I answer first of all, Certainly, many things are omitted by this our Evangelist, as first, the Purification of the Virgin before Christs flight into Egypt. Secondly, Christs disputation with the Scribes, when hee was about twelve yeares old[b]. Thirdly, this obedience unto his parents, Luk. 2. 51. Fourthly, his growth and increase in { Spirit and Grace, Luk. 2. 40. / Stature of Body, Luk. 2. 52. Fifthly, and many things were done in this interim, which are not mentioned at all.

[b] Luk. 2. 46.

Answ. 2. This was done to teach us, that the holy Spirit would not satisfie our curiositie, but declare onely the things which appertain unto salvation.

Observ. The holy Ghost writes not, what wee curiously desire to know, but what seemes best unto himselfe, the will of God being regula recti, the true rule of equitie.

Quest. 4. What dayes or times were these to the Iewes? I answer, Miserable, and full of calamitie: for first, they were in subiection under the Romanes. Secondly, Pilat was governour, who had mingled their bloud with their sacrifices[c]. Thirdly, Herod their King was lascivious and cruell. Fourthly, the Scribes and Lawyers were divided into divers Sects; the Pharisees were proud and superstitious; the Sadduces prophane and Atheisticall: the Esseenes few and despised. Fifthly, the Priests were covetous, corrupting all things: their sacrifices were polluted, their governement changed, having two high Priests at once. Sixthly, the common people were contumacious, and on all sides afflicted; and in diebus illis, in those dayes comes the preaching of the Gospel unto them: Teaching us, that affliction strowes the way to mercie: adversitie being unto mercie, as the foyle unto the Diamond; the greatnesse of mercie not being perceived, untill wee want it: and therefore the Lord afflicts, that mercie may bee the more sweet and acceptable unto us.

Observa.

Quest. 5. What times and dayes were these to Iohn Baptist, who now began to preach the Gospell?

Answ. These were the dayes when hee was called to preach the Gospell, and to prepare the way for Christ: for before this time hee was in the wildernesse[d]: whence two things are very observeable: First, the Baptist doth not undertake to preach the Gospell, untill hee bee called, although hee were ἁγιασθὲς, sanctified, and repleniſhed with the Spirit of God from the wombe: Teaching us, that none must run into the Ministerie, before they be called[e]. Secondly, when once hee is called, hee delayes it not, although it were a worke not onely full of labour, but also full of danger: Teaching us, that all things are to bee undertaken when wee have a calling from God, willingly and readily, although they may seem laborious & perillous.

§. 4. In the wilderneſſe. Sect. 4.

It may here be asked, why did Iohn preach in Queſt. 1. the wilderneſſe?

I anſwer firſt, to teach them that the Church Anſw. 1. was become a wilderneſſe, and that there was a certaine deſolation of piety, they being now altogether careleſſe of the true worſhip, and ſervice of God.

Secondly, becauſe he taught them, that Chriſt Queſt. 2. forſaking the Jewes (they having rejected him) who were often termed a City; doth now make choice of the wilderneſſe (the Gentiles) to plant his Church in.

Thirdly, becauſe hee would ſhew thereby, Anſw. 3. that none can bee made partakers of Chriſt, by ſitting in Cityes, but by journeying into the wilderneſſe. That is not by pleaſure and eaſe, but by labour and induſtrie, hereby Teaching us that Chriſt and the graces of God, are to be ſought induſtriouſly, and cannot bee obtained without Obſerv. labour and paines, for χαλεπα τα καλα, rare excellent and precious things, are not eaſily obtained.

Some will ſay here, I would refuſe no paines, Queſt. 2. nor labour, for the procuring of Chriſt, or grace, but wherein muſt I labour?

I anſwer, Firſt, thou muſt labour in the hea- Anſw. 1. ring of the word of God; that is, labour therein for theſe things, to wit,

- Firſt, that thou mayſt underſtand it in thy minde.
- Secondly, that thou mayſt retaine it in thy memorie.
- Thirdly, that thou mayſt aſſent unto it (as true and good) in thy judgement.
- Fourthly, that thou mayſt love it, and delight therein in thy affections.
- Fiftly, that thou mayſt practiſe and obey it with all willing ſubmiſſion in thy life and converſation.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thou muſt labour againſt ſinne, that is, labour
- Firſt, that thou mayſt hate it, and that it may bee a burthen unto thee.
- Secondly, that thou mayſt ſtrive manfully againſt it, fighting even unto bloud, in reſiſting of ſinne. Hebr. 12. 4.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, thou muſt labour in the moleſtations of this life; that is, labour to endure them, labour to tranſcend & paſſe over them, labour to overcome them, that they may not hinder thee from the purſuite of Chriſt.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, labour in prayer, cry mightily unto God, with the Saints under the Altar: How long a Rev. 6. 10. Lord, how long, holy and true, doſt thou deferre thy b Rev. 22. 20. comming [a] yea with the Bride, Come Lord Ieſus, come quickely [b].

Anſw. 5. Fiftly labour in piety; the Kingdome of Heaven ſuffers violence and the violent take it by force; and therefore bee induſtrious in the exerciſes of religion, carefull and diligent in thy life and converſation, ſtriving hereby to enter in at the ſtraight gate, becauſe without ſtriving thou canſt never enter, as followes Chapter. 7. verſe 13, 24.

Verſ. 2. Sect. 1. §. 1. VERS. 2. Saying, repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.

Queſt. 1. Repent.] It may here bee doubted whether inward repentance, or ſome outward penance be by Saint Iohn here underſtood?

I anſwer, certainely that inward repentance is here ſignified, as may appeare by theſe reaſons, Anſw. Firſt, Iohn is ſaid, to preach the baptiſme of repentance, for the remiſſion of ſinnes [c], that which he c Luk. 3. 3. preached, the people practiſed: but we read not of any outward penall workes they did, but onely of contrition and confeſſion for their ſins [d].

Secondly, Baptiſme is in the name of Chriſt; d Matth. 3. 6. penance is a worke of man, whereby ſatisfaction is made unto God, as they teach: how then can it be the baptiſme of penance: for Chriſt to ſatisfie, & man to ſatisfie, are two contrary things.

Thirdly, Iohn alſo ſaith, bring forth fruits of repentance: worthy and meet for repentance; outward penall acts then are the fruits of repentance, and not repentance it ſelfe.

§. 2. Repent. The Papiſts object this place for Sect. 2. the prooфe of the Sacrament of penance, and one e Greg. Martin. of them more particularly undertakes to prove it by foure Arguments.

Obiect. 1. The first Argument is drawne from the circumstances of the place: Saint Iohn here exhorteth unto repentance, which else where is joyned with sackecloath and ashes: as this same Evangelist saith, If the workes done in thee had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they had ere this repented in sackcloth and ashes [f], so the Ninivites repented in sackcloth and ashes [g], so here μετανοεῖτε, agite pœnitentiam, doth signifie some externall penance.

[f] Matth. 11.21. [g] Iona. 3. 5.6.

Answ. 1. I answer first, here is a false position: for I. our Saviour doth not reprove Corazin & Bethsaida, because they did not some externall penance but because they repented not: And he beganne to upbraid the Cityes, because they repented not [h] II. This repentance which our Saviour requires in these Cities, and the want whereof he reproves in them, can be no satisfactory, nor sacramentall penance, because it was before Baptisme, which is truely called the initiall or first Sacrament of the Church.

[h] Matth. 11.20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, as Gregory Martins position is false, so is also his collection: for although to their repentance were adjoyned humiliation, the signes wherof are sackcloth and ashes, yet these are not repentance, but the adjuncts of repentance, neither do they satisfie the justice of God for our sinnes: saccus juvat ad pœnitentiam, quia signum est humiliationis [a]. Sackcloth and ashes helpe unto repentance, because they are the signes of humiliation.

[a] Basil. s. Psal 29.

Obiect. 2. Secondly, he objects againe, drawing his argument from the propriety of the Greeke word here used μετάνοια.

Answ. 1. I answer, it signifies Resipiscentiam, a change of the minde afterwards: Resipiscere est mentem quasi ad insania recipere [b] to repent is to grow wise againe, that is, both in the reforming and amending of by-past sinnes, and in the avoiding of future temptations: and this is the true signification of the word; but more of this in both the following arguments.

[b] Lactant. de vero cultu. li. 6, 24.

Obiect. 3. His third argument is, because the vulgar interpreter renders it thus, agite pœnitentiam, that is (saith our Objecter) doe penance.

Answ. 1. I answer first, it matters not much, how hee renders it, seeing Lindanus condemnes him as one not much skilled in the latine tongue [c] yea as one that erres egregiously in many things as for example, there was a woman who had lost a groat, and in stead of everrit, hee reads evertit, that is, in stead of sweeping her house, she overturned her house: If the studious Reader desire to see more examples of barbarous interpretations in the vulgar latine Bible, I referre him to our worthy Whitakers [d] & Willets synops. f. 30. 31.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the vulgar translation is none of Saint Hieromes worke, but of some unknowne Authour; as is largely proved by our renouned Whitaker, de sacra script. qu. 2. ca. 6. & Willet synops. f. 23.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, whosoever was the author of this vulgar latine bible, yet neither he by the action of repentance, doth understand an eternall satisfactory sacrament, (as Gregory Martin doth) as may appeare by these reasons, first, because he takes else where in another sense both μετάνοια and pœnitentia, as Acts 5. 31. God hath exalted our Saviour: Ad dandam pœnitentiam Israeli, to give repentance (not penance) to Israel Act. 11. 18. When they heard these things, they glorified God saying, then hath God given Gentibus pœnitentiam ad vitam, unto the Gentiles repentance unto salvation. So also 2. Timoth. 2. 25.

Secondly, because the author of that vulgar translation, takes the phrase, agendi pœnitentiam, in another sense, then doing of penance: as 1 Kin. 8. 33. If thy people Israel shall flie before their enemies, et agentes pœnitentiam & confitentes, and shall confesse their sinnes and repent (not doe Penance) then forgive, &c. So vers. 35. If heaven shall bee shut, that it raine not. Et orantes isto loco pœnitentiam egerint nomini tuo, and they shall pray unto thee and repent, thenbee mercifull, &c. But most plainely, vers. 47. Et egerint pœnitentiam in corde suo: If they shall repent in their heart, when they are in captivity, &c. This cannot bee meant of an externall satisfactory sacrament, because the words expresse clearely an internall and cordiall repentance.

Thirdly, because he makes these words, pœnitemini and agite pœnitentiam synonyma, as both signifying one and the same thing; for sometimes this word μετανοῦτε, is rendered by him, agite pœnitentiam, as Matth. 3. 2. and 21. 21. and Act. 26. 20. Sometimes pœnitemini. Mark. 1. 15. and Luk. 10 13. and Act 3. 19. Fourthly, hee attributes this phrase agendi pœnitentiam to those whom Gregory Martin himselfe will confesse, did no externall satisfactory penance; as 1. this phrase is given to the Israelites for Benjamin. Judg. 21. 15. and all Israel was very sorry: Et egit pœnitentiam, and repented them for the destruction of that Tribe; they were sorry for what had hapned, but they did not doe penance for it. 2. This phrase is given to the damned spirits. Wisdo. 5. 3. Tum egerint pœnitentiam, then they shall change their mindes, not doe penance. 3. This phrase is given to God himselfe. First negatively. 1 Sam. 15 29. Hee is not like man, ut agat pœnitentiam, that he should repent Secondly, affirmatively, as Ierem. 18. 8. 10. if that nation which I have threatned doe repent, agam & ego pœnitentiam, then will I also repent, &c. Now unto the Lord, neither the Rhemists, nor Gregory Martin, (I hope) dare attribute externall penance.

Obiect. 4. His fourth Argument is, because all the latine Fathers read it thus, agite pœnitentiam, doe penance.

Answ. 1. I answer first, Basil interprets it otherwise, as aforesaid, and hee was a Father, although a Greeke Father, so Lactantius expounds it otherwise, as aforesaid also, so Tertullian (contra Marc) in græco sono vox pœnitentiæ, non a confessione, sed a mentis mutatione: this word μετάνοια, repentance, according to his true and germane signification, is so called from an internall mutation of the minde, not from an externall confession of the tongue.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this word Pœnitentia is expounded two manner of waies, 1. Grammaticè, & 2. Translatitiè. First this word Poenitentia (repentance) may be expounded Grammatically, & that two manner of waies, first simply, pro mentis in melius mutatione, for the change of the minde from evill to good; and thus it is most usually taken in Scripture, as Acts 5.31. and 11.18. and 2 Tim. 2.25. and in this verse also, and Matth. 4.17. and in all those places where repentance is preached absolutely. Secondly, complicatè, for repentance testifyed by outward signes, whether 1. by sorrow and mourning, as the Corinthians did [a]: or 2. by sackcloth & ashes, as the Ninivites did [b]. & they of Tyre and Sidon would have done, had they had those meanes which Corazin & Bethsaida had [c]: and this is the same repentance formerly spoken of, to wit, a true change of the minde expressed by some outward signes of humiliation, but not as satisfactory penance.

[a] 2 Cor. 7.10. [b] Iona 3.5. [c] Matth. 11.21.

Secondly, this word poenitentia may bee expounded Translatitiè, and that two manner of waies. First, orthodoxè truly, for repentance testifyed by the signes of sorrow and shame publikely and solemnly being imposed by the Church: and thus Augustine and many both Greeke and Latine Fathers take the word: this is true, but this word μετάνοια is not found in this sense in all the Scriptures. Secondly, haereticè falsely, for satisfaction imposed secretly in auricular confession: in which sense the word is never used by the Ancient Fathers, & therefore I may conclude that this penance injoyned by the Church of Rome for the satisfying of the justice of God, is meerely erroneous, and is built upon no authority of Scripture at all.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Repent.] Iohns preaching is repentance, that is, the renovation of the minde, which is the one halfe of the Gospel, the summe whereof consists in these two, Repentance and Faith: and therefore I intreate the reader (without tediousnesse) to suffer both me and himselfe to dwell a little longer, then ordinary in this verse.

Quest. 1. The maine question here is concerning the parts of Repentance?

Answ. 1. To which, First some Papists answer that the three parts of repentance, are the three steps in Iacobs ladder by which we mount unto heaven; the first whereof is sorrow, the second is shame, the third is labour and industry: But this is an abuse of repentance, these being not the parts of it, as else where more largely shall be shewed.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I answer, the true parts of Repentance are three; to wit, First Preparation, Secondly, Resolution; thirdly, Execution.

Quest. 2. What necessitie is there of Preparation?

Answ. I answer, because a worke so holy as this is, cannot rightly be performed but by a due preparation, considering these two things. 1. that wee our selves are by nature very unfit to effect it. 2. & that the worke in it selfe is very hard and difficult, Sathan being strong that labours to retaine us in sinne, and sinne, from which wee should turne, being customary unto us, and pleasing unto our natures.

Quest. 3. Thirdly, it may be demanded, wherein doth this preparation consist?

Answ. I answer, in two things viz. {1 Dejectione. 2 Erectione.} cordis. That is, the casting downe and raising up of the heart.

57

First, this preparation consists Dejectione cordis, in the dejecting and humbling of the heart, here it may be asked, What necessitie is there of this casting downe of the heart?

Quest. 4

Answ. I answer, Because our hearts are to be softned and humbled before we can truely repent: Thus the Prophet exhorts us, to rend our hearts, and to turne unto the Lord [f]: because without this rending there is no true repentance: our hearts must bee plowed up before the seedes of grace can be sowne [g], because the spirit of bondage begets the spirit of adoption [h].

[f] Ioel. 2.12. [g] Ierem. 4.4. [h] Rom. 8.15.

Quest. 5. Hence it will be inquired, wherein doth this our dejection or humiliation consist?

Answ. I answer, for the full & cleare resolving of this question, two things are to be observed. First, the beginning of this humiliation, which is examination. Secondly, the end of this examination which is the hatred of sinne.

First, the beginning of this humiliation is a serious examination of our selves, our estates and conditions: for when wee examine our selves by the rule of the law, and finde how many and how mighty our sinnes are, which wee have committed, and which wee are never able to satisfye for, then our peacockes plumes and Pharisaicall conceits are laid aside.

Quest. 6. Hence a question may be propounded: What must we examine in our selves?

Answ. Three things, First thy estate and condition wherein thou art, thou must trye how thou standest, whether in grace or nature [a]? whether thou art truely & perfectly regenerated, or seduced by the spirit of slumber & presumption? thou must examine, ubi fuisti, es, eris, non es [b]: what hast thou beene? what art thou? what shalt thou be after this life, happie or miserable? what art thou not? what is wanting in thee which thou shouldest have? Thus we should examine our selves whether wee grow in grace at all or not? and how the strength of sinne decreases, and the strength of grace, and of the spirit of God doth increase in us.

[a] 2 Cor. 13.5. [b] Greg. Mor. 23.

Secondly, examine thy sinnes, consider what they are, whether oppression, or adultery, or blasphemy, or drunkennesse, or prophanesse; and deale herein faithfully with thy selfe, not deceiving thy owne soule: speake truely as thou wouldest doe to thy Lawyer or Physitian, hide none of thy sinnes least they bee not pardoned; keepe none of them backe with Ananias and his wife, least (as they did) thou perish thereby: for this is the true way unto humiliation to labour to finde out, and fullie acknowledge al our transgressions whatsoever: sese ignorare caeteris naturae est, homini autem vitio [c]. It is naturall for other creatures not to know themselves, but for men to be ignorant of their estates, or the sinnes they commit, is most shamefull: and therefore it is very necessary that wee should examine our waies, workes, words, and thoughts, that so we may attaine to the knowledge of our selves

Thirdly, examine how thou mayst avoide thy sinnes, and be freed from them: remember how often thou hast beene displeased with thy selfe, how often thou hast condemned thy selfe, how often thou hast resolved to leave thy sins; and yet how often thou hast returned with the dogge to his vomit: hence consider how difficult a thing it is to leave our beloved sinnes, that knowing it, we may bee more carefull to avoide them, and more diligent in the enquiring after the remedies against them. And thus much for the beginning of our humiliation, which is the examination of our estates and sinnes.

Secondly, the end of this examination, is the loathing of sinne, and a desire to leave it: wee must examine what we are, that so what is amisse may be amended; we must examine our sinnes, that finding them out, wee may the better detest, and endeavour to leave them: the way unto repentance is the hatred of sinne, and as long as sinne is loved, so long the Lord is neither regarded nor served: and therefore, that we may the better learne to hate sinne, let us remember these foure things.

First, that our nature is wholy corrupted both within and without, viz. our cogitations, actions, words, members, and all the faculties of the soule, the best things in us beeing but a polluted ragge, our whol man overspread with the leprosie of sin, and no better then painted sepulchers, or dead carkasses, who stinke in the nostrils of the Lord by reason of our transgressions.

Secondly, remember that thou art so ensnared and envassailed unto sin and corruption by nature, that thou art no more able to helpe or free thy selfe, then a Leopard, is to leave his spots, or a black-moore to change his hewe: thou mayest in some measure know the wickednesse of thy nature, but thou art not able to redresse it.

Thirdly, remember the many dangers and evils we are subject unto, onely by reason of sin, viz. 1. Temporall miseries, as poverty, sickneſse, diseases, casualties, which wee are not worthy to bee protected from, by reason of our iniquities. 2. Spirituall evils, as obstinacy in sin, to be given over to a reprobate sense, hardnes of heart, and finall impenitency: all which wee have plunged our selves into, by giving way unto sin, and which we of our selves are not able to redresse. 3. Eternall death and destruction both of body and soule for ever and ever [b].

[b] Rom. 7.

Fourthly, these things considered, remember whether we have cause to hate our sinnes or not, bee they never so deare unto us? that thus pollute us, that thus provoke the Lord against us, that thus captivate and inthrall us, yea thus subject us unto evils temporall, spirituall, and eternall?

And thus much for the first part of our preparation unto repentance, the dejection and humiliation of the heart: the second followes.

The second part of our preparation unto Repentance, is the erection or raising up of the heart, for except the heart bee comforted and cherished, this DEJECTION will prove DESPERATION.

Quest. 7. It may here bee asked, whence this comfort flowes unto us, or whereupon it is built?

Answ. I answer, our consolation is founded upon the hope of pardon, by Christ: for the truely dejected sinner may argue thus, he that is truely humbled and contrite for his sinnes committed, and is truely carefull to finde out all his transgressions, desiring also and endeavouring to leave and loth every thing that is evill, he may hope and expect mercy from God, in & through Christ, because Christ hath called such unto him, and God hath promised to receive such: But I am such an one, I sorow for my sins, and desire with the prodigall child, to returne unto my father, & therfore I know God will receive me, as hee did him; and pardon mee, as hee did Paul [d], in and through the merits & mercies of Christ. Thus the heart is to bee cherished by the comfortable promises of the Gospell, least otherwise our humiliation drive us to despaire: and on the contrary, this sweet musicke is unprofitable, before the heart be truely dejected, and teacheth us to presume: and therefore to avoid presumption as well as despaire (as the more usuall and dangerous) wee must remember that the promises of mercy belong onely unto the truely penitent, and therefore untill wee bee such, as are spoken of before, we have no right nor interest in these promises at all.

[d] 1 Tim. 1. 13.

And thus much for the first generall part of Repentance which is Preparation.

The second part of repentance is RESOLUTION: Here a question may be propounded.

Quest. 8. Wherein doth this our Resolution consist?

Answ. I answer in three things, first, deplorando, in bewailing of our sinnes. Secondly, devovendo, in forsaking our sinnes. Thirdly, implorando, in imploring the assistance of God for strength against our sinnes.

First, our Resolution doth consist Deplorando, in the deploring and bewailing of our sinnes, or in the confession of the filthynesse and errours of our former life: and here beginnes μετάνοια, the true change and renovation of the minde. Hence it may be demanded.

Quest. 9. Why is the confession of our sinnes necessary unto true Repentance?

Answ. 1. I answer first, because all promises of pardon are made unto such as confesse their sinnes, and depend upon this condition: thus Salomon praies, If thy people shall returne unto thee and say, we have sinned and have done perversly, wee have committed wickednesse: then bee thou oh Lord gracious unto them [e]; and againe, the same Kingly Preacher from God prophecieth, that he that covereth his sinnes shall not prosper: but who so confesseth and forsaketh them, shall have mercy [f].

[f] Prov. 28. 13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because wee cannot aright determine to leave our sins; untill we have found out, and confessed the sins that are to be left.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because our repentance is not a bare determination onely to leave our sins, but also a promise thereof, and that made unto God: and therefore it is necessary that confession of sins should should be made unto him: thus Dauid confesseth his sin. I haue sinned [g], and hee promiseth that he will doe thus, so often as hee offendeth his God, because otherwise he cannot be assured of pardon [h]: this was the practise of the Publicane, Lord be mercifull unto me a sinner [i]: and of the Prodigall, I haue sinned against heauen, and against thee [k], and am not worthy to bee called thy child.

g 2 Sam. 12. 13.
h Psal. 32. 5.
i Luk. 18. 13.
k Luk. 15.

Quest. 10 It may againe be asked, Doth every confession of sin argue a true change of the minde? or if not, then what confession doth?

Answ. I answer, that confession of sin which begins this μετάνοια, is thus qualified. First, it is an ingenuous confession of our sins, judging and condemning our selves for our iniquities [l], not denying them as some doe, or excusing them as others doe, or extenuating, mitigating or leffening them as a third sort doe, but truely acknowledging both the evill of sinne, and the evil of punishment deserved for sinne.

l 1 Cor. 11. 31.

Secondly, it is an humble confession, not shaming to confesse sin as some doe, but in humilitie of soule and spirit confessing our transgressions unto the Lord.

Thirdly, it is a contrite, and a sorrowfull confession: because wee are destitute of all hope in our selves, and we have not deserved any favour or mercy from God, because we have thus wickedly, and wretchedly provoked him by our iniquities: thus Ezra and Daniel with wet eyes and blushing cheekes confesse their sinnes, and the sins of the people unto God [m]. Confession without Contrition, neither pleaseth God nor profiteth man; but where they are conjoyned, there is a promise of mercy: the Lord having assured such, that he will dwell with the for ever [n]. Confession is the speech of the tongue, Contrition is the speech of the heart: now it is the heart that God requires, together with the tongue, not the lips alone: my sonne (saith God) give me thy heart [o]: for I care not for those who draw neere unto me with their lippes, if their hearts be far from me [p]. m Ezra 9. 6. & Dan. 9. 3.

n Esa. 66. 2
o Pro. 23. 26.
p Mark. 7. 6.

Secondly, our Religion doth consist Deuouendo, in vowing and solemnely promising something unto God; and this perfects and finishes τὸ μετανοεῖν this true change and renovation of the mind.

Quest. 11 Hence it may bee inquired, What it is, that must bee vowed or solemnly Promised unto God?

Answ. I answer two things, First to forsake sin for ever. Secondly, to obey God in newnesse of life all our dayes.

First, we must promise unto the Lord, to abstaine from sinne for tearme of life: and if hee will be pleased to pardon our former sinnes, that wee will offend him no more: This is true repentance, praeteritis plangere, & plangenda non iterare (so Ambrose,) or non perpetrare, (so Gregory) to bemoane and lament our by-past sinnes, and never to iterate, or againe commit those sins that are thus bewailed: yea without this forsaking of sin, there is no right repentance, and hence our Saviour exhorts unto this, goe thy waies and sinne no more [q]: yea this is the seale of God, by which we may know whether his stampe bee upon us or not [r], if we depart from iniquitie: yea without this forsaking of sin, we cannot please God; sinne pollutes, and therefore the vessell must bee purged from it, before God will come unto the heart [s]: and therefore unto true repentance these things are required. First, leave thy deare and beloved sinnes, those sinnes that hang so fast on, and cleave so fast too [t], for this is our warfare, these are our enemies, and therefore resist them euen unto blood [u]. Secondly, leave all sinnes: Many men are content to leave many sinnes, but not all; some seeme as little as Zoar did unto Lot [x], some are as precious and deare as Herodias was unto Herod [y]; but if wee desire truely to repent, and surely to receive pardon, wee must forsake all, both small and great, publike, and private, externall and internall, letting the time suffice us which is already past, to haue beene spent in sin [z], & while it is said to day, turne from whatsoever is evill, never to turne unto it any more: because this is our first promise and vow unto God.

u Heb. 12. 4.
x Gen. 19. 18.
z 1 Pet. 4. 3.

Secondly, we must solemnely vow and promise newnesse of life unto the Lord, that henceforth wee will serve him in new obedience, and an active life, all the dayes that we have to live: wee must bequeath and devote our selves wholy unto the Lord, as new creatures [a], and that for these three causes.

a 2 Cor. 5. 17.

First, because nothing else can assure us of eternall mercies, neither circumcision, nor uncircumcision, nor any thing else availing unto salvation but a new creature [b].

b Gal. 6. 15.

Secondly, because negative obedience doth not please God; nil agere est male agere, not to doe good, is to doe evill: if the husbandman sowe not good seede, tares will come up, though he sowe them not.

c Rom. 6. 4. 19. 22.

Thirdly, because these two are alwaies coupled by the blessed Spirit, to shew that they should never bee separated in us: David that Kingly Prophet, exhorteth us to eschew evill & to doe good [c]. The Prophet Esai of Kingly race, adviseth us to cease to doe evill, and to learne to doe well [d]. So Saint Paul intreateth, that we would not be conformed to this world, but transformed, by the renewing of our mind [e], and afterwards, abhorre that which is evill, and cleave to that which is good [f]: and againe, we must walke honestly, not dishonestly: we must put off the old man, and put on the new [g]. Thus to forsake sin, and to obey God, are alwaies united by the spirit of God; to teach us that although they are two distinct things, as are heate and light in the fire, yet they cannot truely and really bee separated one from the other, any more then these, which are the inseparable properties of the fire.

Observ.

Quest. 12 Heere it may bee demanded, Wherein doth this our new obedience consist?

Answ. I answer, in these three things. First, in the workes of sanctity towards God, by purging the inward man from prophanesse, and all love of sin: by clensing the outward man from all prophanation of the name, worship, and day of the Lord: by having our inward man filled with holy 60 holy thoughts, desires, purposes, and meditations, and our outward man abounding in the worke of the Lord. Secondly, in the workes of equity and uprightnesse towards man, as reverence towards superiours, love towards inferiours, truth, justice, and love towards equalls, mercy towards offenders, charity towards the poore, and such like. Thirdly, in the workes of sobriety, not giving our selves unto pride, or a high conceit of our selves; nor unto the contempt of others, nor unto prodigality, or drunkennesse, or gluttony, or fornication and uncleanenesse: but unto humility, moderation, temperance, sobriety, and urbanity towards all, as becomes new men in Christ Jesus. Thus much for the second part of our Resolution, consisting in promises and vowes made unto the Lord.

Thirdly, our Resolution consists in Imploratione, in imploring the ayde and assistance of God against sinne. This is not an essentiall part of repentance, although it be a necessary part, in regard of the weaknesse of our nature, we not being able either to leave sinne, or abstaine from sinne, or overcome sinne by our owne strength, and therefore our repentance is to be corroborated by invocating the divine helpe of God: hence it is that wee are commanded to pray continually [a], and always [b] to watch in prayer [c] and to be fervent in prayer [d] lest we enter into temptation [e]. Prayer unto God, being our onely Delphian sword, wherewith we defend our selves against all temptations. And thus much for the second generall part of Repentance, that is, Resolution.

Thirdly, the last part of Repentance is Execution, when a man labours faithfully to performe what hee hath promised and resolved. Hence a question will be asked. What is a man to performed for the finishing & perfecting of repentance?

Quest. 13

Answ. I answer, foure things, first, our repentance must be true, secondly, it must be timely, thirdly, it must be constant, fourthly, it must be cresceent.

Quest. 14 First, our repentance must be true, not false: It may here be asked, when is our repentance true?

Answ. I answer, then onely, when a man beginnes seriously to obey God, both with a negative and an affirmative obedience, that is carefully to performe whatsoever God requires of us to doe, and to shun and avoid whatsoever he forbids us, as appeares thus: first, this is the beginning and end of all [f]. Secondly this is that, which makes us truely happy: so saith our Saviour, if ye obey my words, happy are ye [g] and his Apostle, that man which is a doer of the law, shall bee blessed in his deed [h].

f Eccles. 12 13.
g Iohn 13. 17.
h Jam. 1. 25.

Thirdly, the end of all both legall and evangelicall precepts, is that wee might glorifie the Lord, which is done by obedience, as wee see by our Saviours command, Let your light so shine before men, that they seeing your good workes may glorifie your heavenly Father [i]. Fourthly, we are called unto obedience, and the worke of the Lord: to be labourers, and not idle, in the Lords Vineyeard [k].

i Matth. 5. 16.
k Matth. 20. 1. 2.

Fifthly, without this serious and sincere obedience, all other things are nothing: that is neither 1. the compunction of the heart, without the obedience of the heart and life, is pleasing unto God; for this was in Balthazar, His knees smote one against the other, and his heart was troubled [l]: this was in Esau, he wept sore [m] yet obtained no mercy [n] because obedience was wanting.

l Daniel 5.
n Heb. 12. 17.

II. Neither the confession of the tongue is acceptable unto God without service in the life: for Cain could confesse his sinnes to be great [o], and Saul acknowledge his iniquity unto the Prophet with a peccavi [p] I have sinned: yea Iudas doth confesse his particular transgression, for which he is sorry in these words, I have sinned in betraying of innocent blood [q]: but yet none of these received either benefit or comfort by this their confession, because it was not accompanyed with obedience.

o Gen. 4. 13.
q Matth. 27. 4.

III. The externall humiliation of the body availes nothing without this neither: for Ahab humbled himselfe in dust and ashes [r], and yet was slaine not long after [s]. IV. Affection unto religion without zealous obedience is not gratefull unto God: for Agrippa was halfe perswaded to become a Christian [t] and Herod in practise as well as affection was halfe a Christian, for he heares Iohn Baptist gladly, and doth many things, and abstaines from some sinnes [u] like the stony ground that sends forth a blade and grasse [x] yet all this profits them not, so long as true repentance and sincere obedience is wanting in them. And thus our repentance must bee true.

t Act. 26.
x Matth. 13.

Secondly, our repentance must be timely and mature, begunne betimes without procrastination or delay, while it is said to day, while we have life, while we have hope in regard of Gods gracious invitations: remembring that repentance is not in our power, wee cannot turne unto God when we will: yea the longer wee delay it, the more unfit we are to performe it, Nam qui non hodiè, cras minus aptus erit, he that is not in fit case to repent him to day, will be more unfit to morrow; and therefore call upon God, while thou mayest be heard, approach unto him while the doore is open [y].

y Matth.

Obiect. It may here be objected, Deliberandum est diu, quod statuendum est semel: nothing is to bee done rashly, and that which is but once to be done, had neede be undertaken with a great deale of deliberation: festina lentè, make not too much haste, is a good rule. Relapses are dangerous, and therfore men had neede beforehand to beware: sat citò si sat bene, if we repent truely at any time, we repent soone enough: a King must not wage warre with a Potent Foe, but upon mature deliberation, neither is a man to lay the foundation of a building, untill seriously in his thought hee have considered how he shall be able to reare up the edifice: and therefore Repentance being a weighty worke of great importance, it is not so suddenly to be undertaken.

Answ. 1. I answer first, there is a great difference betweene Deliberation and Delay; the latter feares and neglects, the former considers, consults, and then speedily effects, and undertakes. Second-

Secondly, deliberation concerning repentance may be two fold. First, an poenitendum, whether thou must or ought, or shalt repent or not? now this is not to bee doubted of, and therefore there needs no deliberation (but rather a quick and speedie determination) in the particular, because without repentance there is no hope of mercy, or remission, or eternall salvation.

Secondly, quomodo poenitendum? the second deliberation is how we must repent? and this is twofold. 1. First, quibus viribus, by whose power thou must repent? there is no neede of deliberation heere, neither art thou at all to doubt of this, because all sinners must acknowledge these two things: first, that of themselves they have no power to repent, and this is necessary to bee confessed, least otherwise they presume that they can repent when they will, and therefore may procrastinate the worke. Secondly, that repentance is wrought in them by God alone, who is able to convert, when and whom he pleases: this wee must undoubtedly acknowledge also, least otherwise the sight of our sins, and the sense of our owne insufficiencies cause us to despaire: thus the Prophet (praying for the people) frames his petition, turne thou us oh Lord unto thee, and then we shall be turned [a]; as if he should say, we are not able of our selves to repent, and therefore if thou (oh Lord) leave us unto our selves, we shall never be converted: but thou art able to worke true repentance in our hearts, and therefore if thou wilt bee pleased to take the worke in hand, then wee are certainely assured that we shall be truely turned. 2. Secondly, quibus laboribus? wee must consider what is required unto true repentance; and here onely Deliberation is seasonable and needfull, for this is indeede seriously to be considered of: wee must observe the requisite conditions unto conversion, that we may be the more careful stare pollicitis, to performe our promises, and to keepe the conditions required of us. The conditions of this obligation made betweene God & us in Repentance are these. First to denie our selves, and confesse our selves wholy & only subject to the wil & command of the Lord. Secondly, to take up our crosse of what nature or kinde soever, that is, patiently to endure, and undergoe all afflictions that the Lord shall please to exercise us with all, whether in body, or goods, or good name. Thirdly, not to esteeme our lives deare unto us, when God calls for them, whether by a naturall, or a violent death. Fourthly, to persevere in the service of the Lord unto our lives end. Fiftly, to oppose our selves unto Sathan, the world, and the flesh, and to strive against all sin, alwaies, even unto blood [b]. And thus therefore I conclude this objection; the Thesis is to bee granted that we must repent, and that by and by without delay: the Hypothesis is to be considered and meditated of, but ut munaris, non ut cunctaris, that is, thou must not so deliberate upon the worke that thou delay it, but so seriously consider of it, that thou mayest the more carefully arme thy selfe, both to overcome all impediments that might hinder thee from the perfecting of it, and also to accomplish what the Lord expects from thee, and what thou hast resolved to put in execution. And thus our repentance must be mature and timely, as well as true.

[b] Heb. 12. 4.

Thirdly, our repentance must be constant, for it is not true, except it endure unto the end, and therefore we must be perseverant [c].

[c] Ephes 6. 18.

Heere a question may bee made, why must our repentance bee perpetuall for terme of life? Quest. 15

I answer, First, because otherwise it shall not be crowned with a crowne of glory [d]; finis coronat opus, the end proves the truth of the work, and therfore hee that lookes backe [e], and proves retrograde is not worthy of this reward [f]. Answ. 1.

[e] Luk. 9. 62.

Secondly, because it is dangerous to relapse, such being threatned to be cut off [g], and to be so severely punished, that it had beene better for them not to have repented at all [h]; because they grow worse after their relapse [i], seven spirits worse then the first, entring into their hearts, and because there remaines nothing but a horrible expectation unto such, as fall backe after repentance [k]. Answ. 2.

[h] Matth. 47.

[i] Heb. 10. 26.

It may here prudently bee demanded, how may we bee corroborated and enabled to continue in this renovation and repentance unto the end? Quest. 16

I answer, by a carefull observation of these two things, to wit, first, the difficulty; secondly, the remedy. Answ.

First, we are to marke and observe, difficultatem perseverandi, how difficult and hard a thing it is to persevere in this negative and affirmative obedience, which true repentance requires of us, because our enemies are many and mighty, which herein continually oppose us. Our first enemy is the Divell, who is, I. A strong enemy, a strong man armed [a]; yea, a roaring Lion [b], that is bold and couragious, and dare affront the stoutest Christian champion, none being so good, that they shall escape his temptations, as wee may see by divers examples; hee tempted David (2. Sam. 11.) hee assaults Iob, (chap. 1.) hee sifts Peter, (Luke 22. 31.) hee buffets Paul, 2. Corinth. 12. 8.) hee accuses the godly, hee persecutes the woman, though shee bee the spouse of Christ, (Apocalyps. 12. 4.) he contends with Michael, (Revelat. 12. 7.) yea so insolent is hee, and overweening of his owne strength, that hee dared to assault Christ himselfe, (Matth. 4.) although he were God: all which shewes plainly unto us, that the Divell is a strong adversarie. II. He is a craftie enemy, and as subtile as strong, being able to transforme himselfe into an Angell of light [c]; and will fit his temptations according to our tempers: if wee bee young, hee will embolden us to sinne; if wee bee old, hee will make us blush to blame or condemne our former lives: If we be young, hee will shew us pleasures; if we be old, he will shew us profit: if we be young, he will make us delay to amend; if wee bee old, he will make us so froward, that wee shall not endure to bee reproved: if wee bee prophane, hee will make us secure, if we be religious, hee will strive to make us

62 us proud or superstitious, or hypocriticall: thus cunningly, and craftily, applying himselfe to every mans disposition, and naturall constitution, as the fisher fits his bait according to the fish hee angles for, and according to the month hee angles in: as Paul became all things to all men, that he might win some, so Sathan also becomes all things to all men, that he may wound some.

Our second enemy is the World, tempting us by allurements, which are but the Divels baits: yea many are the occasions unto evill, which are objected unto us by the world, in every action, in every place.

Our third enemy is the Flesh, which rebells in us, like an in-bred traytor, labouring to destroy us. And therefore considering, that these three strong, subtile, and malicious enemies, labour daily, with all their strength and might, to retaine us in the chaines of sinne, and in the service of Satan; and to detaine us from serving the Lord, in true obedience, wee may safely conclude, that it is a very difficult, and hard thing to persevere and continue unto the end in true repentance.

Secondly, together with the observation of the Difficultie, must goe along the Remedy; because, although it be hard, yet it is not impossible, as appeares by the daily perseverance of the Saints unto the end. Now the remedy is, to warre against these enemies, to put on the whole armour of a Christian [d], and to fight a good fight of faith [e].

Quest. 17 Hence it may be demanded, What is the armour which wee must use for the overcomming of our spirituall adversaries?

Answ. 1. I answer, First, arme thy selfe with this constant resolution, that nothing shall separate thee from the love, service, and obedience of God, neither life nor death, neither Angels, Principalities, nor Powers, nor any thing else.

Answ. 2. Secondly, bee watchfull, stand upon thy watch-tower, that so thou mayest foresee, and learne to prevent the deceits of Satan, the allurements of the world, and the rebellions of thine owne nature, labouring to subdue and tame them by sobrietie and watchfulnesse [f].

f 1 Pet. 5. 9.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, pray continually, that God would give thee strength to withstand the assaults of Satan, and enable thee to trample them under thy feet [g]: yea, that the Lord himselfe would be pleased to bee thy protector and defender, delivering thee both from evill, and that evill one.

g Rom. 16. 20.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, labour for a true and lively faith, whereby thou mayest bee enabled to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked [h]. And thus our repentance must be True, and Timelie, and Constant. The last followes.

h Ephes. 6. 16.

Fourthly, our Repentance must bee Crescens, encreasing; we must labour, that we may daily grow up and increase more and more in Repentance, grace being given unto us, not to hide it in a napkin, but to profit withall [i], that from babes we may grow up to men of ripe yeares [k].

i 1 Cor. 12. 7.
k 1 Pet. 2. 2.

Here it may be asked, quatenus, quando desistendum? how long must we labour to increase? when must a period bee put to this augmentation? when must wee stand still, not striving to grow any more? every living thing hath a time of growth, and when it comes to its maturitie, and height, then it growes no more: therefore which is our non ultra, when we must grow and increase no longer? Quest. 18

Answ. I answer, Never in this life, because so long as we are here, we must stilll grow up and encrease more and more [a], that is, labour that wee may bee absolute and perfect men in Christ Jesus [b], which we cannot be, so long as wee are in the body, because wee carry continually a body of sinne about us [c], we must endevour to bee as perfect as our Master [d], yea, as our Father [e], which wee can never bee, because wee are imperfect, both knowing, obeying, believing, and loving onely in part [f], and therefore so long as we live, wee must labour to grow up unto perfection.

§. 4. For the kingdome of heaven is at hand.] It may here be questioned, what kingdome is here spoken of? Sect. 4. Quest. 1.

Answ. I answer, Not the eternall kingdome of the other world, nor the terrene kingdome of the Jewes; but the comming of the Gospell, or the kingdome of grace, by the comming of Christ: so that the sence is, the Church of the old Testament is now abolished, and the Church of the New Testament is ready to take place, by Christs comming, and therefore repent.

Quest. 2. It may be asked againe, Why is it called the Kingdome of Heaven?

Answ. I answer, for these two causes, the first is negative, and belongs unto the Jewes, lest that they should any longer expect an earthly kingdome: they thought, that when Christ came, they should be made free from their Roman bondage, as the Samaritane woman sayd, when the Messias comes, restaurabit omnia, hee will restore all things [g]; but Christ doth contradict this, positively affirming, that his kingdome is not of this world [h].

g Ioh. 4. 25.
h Ioh. 18. 36.

The second cause is affirmative, and belongs unto us, that we might know the state and dignitie of the Evangelicall Church: as if holy John here would say, I call you not unto the Roman, or Chaldean, or Egyptian, or Assyrian, or Persian Kingdome: I invite you not unto a fraile, wavering, earthly, mortall, and momentary Kingdome; but unto a cœlestiall, the Kingdome of heaven: Teaching us, that the Church of Christ is an heavenly Kingdome: it is thus called by the Evangelist elsewhere, the kingdome of heaven is like unto a man, which sowed good seed in his field [i]. And againe, the kingdome of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder [k]. And againe, he that is least in the kingdome of heaven, is greater than Iohn Baptist [l]. Observ.

k Matth. 20. 1.
l Matth. 11. 11.

Here a doubt may arise. Quest. 3.

How doth it appeare, that the Gospell of Christ is an heavenly kingdome, seeing it is in and upon the earth?

Answ. I answer, It appeares to be such three manner of of wayes. First, by the King thereof. Secondly, by the People thereof. Thirdly, by the state of the Kingdome.

First, the Gospell appeares to be an heavenly Kingdome, Rege, by the King thereof, which is Christ an heavenly King [m].

[m] Esa. 9. 6. 7. Zach. 9. 9. Heb. 1. 8. & 2. 9.

Secondly, the Gospell appeares to be an heavenly kingdome, Plebe, by the People, because the subjects hereof ought to bee heavenly, according to that of the Apostle, the Christians conversation should bee in heaven [n], and that in a double regard, both extra, and intus, in the life, and in the heart. First, extra, in the outward man, our life must bee pure and Angelicall, immaculate, and unblameable in the sight of the world [o]. Secondly, intus, in the heart, and inward man, and that in a two-fold respect, both, I. in the judgement, the vaile being taken away from our mindes, and understandings [p], wee hereby being made more able to discerne betweene those things that differ, not being now children in understanding; but men [q]. And, II. in the affections, when they are set upon those things that are above, not upon those things that are beneath [r], hungring and longing in our soules, to bee made partakers of them, rather than all temporall treasures: with Saint Paul, desiring to bee dissolved [s], that we may bee clothed with our house, which is in heaven [t]. Thus the Subjects of this kingdome should learne and labour to know what is good and heavenly, to love what is good and heavenly, to doe what is good and heavenly, because they are subjects of a kingdome which is heavenly.

[t] 2 Cor. 5. 2.

Thirdly, the Gospell appears to be an Heavenly kingdom, ex regni statu, by the state of the kingdome that is first by the present state thereof, because now it is spiritually governed, by the holy Spirit, & the Ministers of the Gospel: & secondly by the future estate thereof, because it leads and brings unto heaven, and the heavenly kingdome, to that immortall inheritance, and eternall happinesse which wee cannot bee deprived of [u]. And for these causes and considerations, it is most aptly called the Kingdome of heaven.

[u] Luk. 12. 32. and 1 Pet. 1. 4.

Sect. 5. Quest. §. 5. Is at hand.] It may here bee demanded, how doth this kingdome approach?

Answ. 1. I answer first, negatively, not by removeall, or change of place, or by any mutation in God: this kingdome doth not come from some remote place, nearer now unto them then it was, or from the Lord who is now of another minde, then hee was.

Answ. 2. Secondly, affirmatively, it drawes nigh unto them by the manifestation thereof by Christ: Observ. Teaching us, that the preaching of the Gospell doth bring the kingdome of God unto us: Whence it is called the Gospell of the kingdome. Mat. 4. 23. and 9. 35. and Mark. 1. 14. and that in a double regard. First because it is the means of regeneration: Wee being begot by this incorruptible seed, the Word of God [b] and without holynesse and purity the fruits of this regeneration there is no salvation [c]: secondly, because it begets faith, for that comes by hearing, and hearing by the word [d] and without this faith we cannot please God [e].

§. 1. VERS. 3. For this is hee that was spoken of by the Prophet Esaias, saying, the voice of one crying in the Wilderneſſe, prepare yee the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. Sect. 1.

§. 1. Prepare ye the way.] What need is there now of preparation, seeing that Christ is already come into the world, neither is there any further expectation of him untill the day of judgement? Vers. 3. Quest. 1.

Answ. 1. I answer first, Christ is not to bee expected Corporally, but Spiritually, for although hee bee in heaven, where hee shall remaine untill the last day, when hee comes unto judgement, yet notwithstanding he comes daily unto us, both by his word and by his Spirit, seeking an habitation and dwelling with us: I stand at the doore and knocke (saith Christ) to see if any will open unto me, that I may come in to him, and sup with him [f]. And therefore seeing that hee thus comes unto us, it is necessary, that we should prepare to entertaine him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there is great need that wee should prepare to meet and receive Christ, in regard of our naturall condition, which is this, that unlesse wee bee totally changed, wee can have no communion either with God, or our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, for hee is Righteousnesse it selfe, Truth it selfe, Wisedome it selfe, Goodnesse it selfe, Holynesse it selfe, yea Perfection it selfe: but we are transgressours, lyers, foolish, prophane, wicked, yea altogether sinfull, and therefore before there can be any cõmunion betweene our Christ and us, there must be a change wrought in us; wherefore it is necessary that wee should prepare and purge both our hearts and lives, that so he may be pleased in mercy to come unto us.

Quest. 2. Secondly it may be demanded wherein doth this preparation consist?

Answ. I answer, from the Prophet, Every valley must be exalted, and every mountaine and hill bee made low: and the crooked paths must bee made straight, and the rough places plain [g]. That is first, we must prepare to meete Christ by the valleys, that is by humiliation, for the conscience of sinners being wounded are so depressed with a true sense of their sinnes, that they dare not lift up their eyes unto heaven, as wee see in the Publican [h] and unto such unworthy ones in their own conceit, Christ hath promised to come, and to exalt these lowly valleys. Secondly, wee must prepare to meete Christ, by laying low the mountaines and hills: these high places that are to be levelled are either those that are 1. proud by nature, or 2. that abound in honour and riches, and in all affluence in worldly things, by which they grow haughty, exalting themselves, contemning others, and trusting in this lofty condition and aboundance: or 3. those that are transported with a perswasion of their owne righteousnesse, as though they stood in no need of 64 of divine mercy : theſe are dangerous hills, and therefore they muſt bee made low, that is wee muſt 1. be humble in our ſelves and towards all. 2. Not truſt in any arme of fleſh or worldly thing whatſoever. 3. Not place any confidence in our owne merits, or righteouſneſſe at all, but have our affiance onely in the mercies of God through the merits and righteouſneſſe of Chriſt Jeſus, and this is our ſecond preparation.

Thirdly, wee muſt prepare to meete Chriſt, by making crooked wayes ſtraight ; by crooked pathes are meant all tranſgreſſions on the right hand, as Hereſies, errours, ſuperſtitions, hypocryſie and the like ; theſe muſt all bee rectified, that is, reduced unto the rule of God, and the Goſpell of Chriſt, hee being the way, the truth, and the life ; and his word the true way unto life, and the moſt perfect rule of truth. Fourthly, wee muſt prepare to meete Chriſt, by making rough places plaine : by theſe rugged places are meant all errours on the left hand, as impiety, injuſtice, intemperance, and all other vices and obliquities of the life, which being walked in caſts a man headlong into deſtruction. And therefore all theſe muſt be left, before Chriſt will come unto us.

Queſt. 3. Thirdly, it may be doubted, by whoſe labour and miniſtery is this preparation wrought ?

Anſw. By the Miniſtery of the Miniſters of the word of God, as in this verſe, it is by the voice of the cryer [a] the word being the meanes of regeneration, and the ſeed of faith : and therefore all the Miniſters of the word of God, ſhould be induſtrious herein, labouring to bring the people of God, firſt to a true ſenſe of their ſinnes, and ſorrow for them. Secondly, to true humility, mortification, ſelfe denyall, and a ſure confidence in the onely mercyes of God, and merits, and righteouſneſſe of Chriſt. Thirdly, to reduce them from all hypocriſie, ſuperſtition, hereſies, and errours. Fourthly, to reforme and reclaime them from all ſinnes, vices, and enormities whatſoever.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Make his pathes ſtraight.] Pathes τρίβους, Here it may be demanded how theſe two τρίβους and ὁδοὺς pathes and wayes are diſtinguiſhed ?

Queſt.

Anſw. I anſwer, two manner of wayes, firſt, according to the uſe, wayes are greater, pathes are leſſer : to teach us that we muſt not onely abſtaine from great ſinnes, but alſo from ſmall, and that we muſt not ſerve God for the moſt part, but altogether : The Lord will either have the whole heart or none at all, he will not devide with Sathan : and therefore they are much to blame, that excuſe their ſinnes, with ſaying they are but paths, not wayes ; they doe not give themſelves wholy to ſinne, for their tranſgreſſions are but ſmall : thus the Uſurer excuſeth his unwarranted trade, becauſe he takes not above eight in the hundred, and never takes the extremity of a forfeiture : the ſwearer excuſeth himſelfe, becauſe he ſweareth nothing but truth, the wine-bibber will ſay, it is true he drunke hard, but yet he was not drunken, for he knew well enough what he ſaid and did : theſe excuſes may be alleadged, but they will not be admitted, for they will not excuſe us unto God : becauſe he requires that both paths and way ſhould be prepared. Secondly, theſe two paths and wayes may be diſtinguiſhed according to the grammatical ſenſe or derivation : ὁδὸς, a way comes from εἶμι, to go ; τρίβος a path comes from τρίβω, to tread or uſe, or goe often a troden or beaten path, much uſed : teaching us that our hearts ſhould not onely be viæ but ſemitæ not wayes wherein God ſomtimes walks, but paths wherein he may walke continually ; that is religion muſt have his continuall reſidence in the heart and ſoule, without any diſpenſation at all. The occaſions of the exerciſe of religion are alwayes given, and therefore if the heart be true they will be alwayes taken, and exerciſes of religion frequently practiſed : and not like ſome, who never thinke of God or religion, but upon the Lords day.

Obſerv.

Queſt. Here it may be asked what is to be rectified ?

Anſw. I anſwer, Saint Luke ſhewes that there are foure things to bee made ſtraight [b] Valleyes, Mountaines, Crooked and ſharpe wayes : ſome thing hath beene ſpoken of theſe before §. 1. I adde a word or two. firſt Valleyes φάραγξ, Præcipitium, this ſignifies a vacuite of grace : theſe valleyes are to be filled, and this emptineſſe to be repleniſhed and enriched with the grace of Gods Spirit [c].

[c] Apoc. 3. 15.

Secondly, Mountaines ὄρος, and βουνὸς, ſummitas & clivus, which ſignifies humane pride, and is to be humbled, as aforeſaid §. 1. Thirdly, crooked wayes, σκολιὰ, tortuoſa, which ſignifies an obſtinacy in ſinning ; and this path muſt bee made εὐθεῖα, right and ſtraight, that is, our ſteppes muſt beee reduced into the wayes of God, and therein muſt we walke with all humble ſubmiſſion night and day. Fourthly, ſharpe wayes, τραχεῖα, ſalebroſa, this is taken either 1. for ſinne, in generall : or 2. for contention which breakes the bond of peace, and rends the ſeamleſſe coate of Chriſt, or 3. for the thorns of worldly cares & coveteouſnes ; and theſe are to be made ſmooth, i. e. ſin is to be left, contention to be laid aſide, and the love of the world to be mortified in us.

Verſ. 4. §. 1. VERS. 4. And the ſame Iohn had his raiment of camels haire, and a leatherne girdle about his loines, and his meate was locuſts and wilde honey.

Sect. 1. §. 1. His meate was wilde honey.] The Papiſts object this place to prove that Iohn was an Eremite, Iohn Baptiſt lived in the deſart, fared courſely, and was barely apparelled, he eat locuſts (a courſe kind of diet) and wilde honey, and wore a garment of Camels haire, and therefore he was a true paterne of a right Eremite.

Object. 1 [d] Bellar. de Monach. lib. 2. cap. 39.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, Iohns life was not ſo auſtere as they make it : for the place where he lived was not ſo ſolitary, but that there were villages and houſes not farre off, as it may appeare by the peoples reſorting unto him : his diet alſo in eating locuſts, and wild honey was uſuall in that countrey.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, we denie not but Iohn lived an auſtere life, becauſe hee was a preacher of repentance.

tance, and had a singular office to prepare men for the comming of Christ: therefore his calling being extraordinary, he cannot bee an author of an ordinary calling among Christians.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, seeing Christ came eating and drinking, lived among men, and was apparelled as others were, why should Christians rather chuse to imitate the Baptist, then our Saviour Christ, whose life and doctrine is for our imitation.

Object. 2. Secondly, they object this place to prove, that the sufferings and obedience of the Saints, are laid up for Church treasure [b]. Iohn (say they) was of a most innocent life, and was subject scarce to the least sin, and therefore hee had no neede of his fasting, austere life, imprisonment, death, to satisfie for himselfe: and therefore these remaine for the satisfaction of others.

Answ. 1. We answer First, that certainely Iohn was an holy man, and endued with great grace, yet not without his sins and corruptions; and therefore he himselfe confesseth, that he had neede to be baptized of Christ, which was for remission of sins.

Answ. 2. Secondly, his afflictions were not laid upon him as punishments for sin (we confesse) but as Gods loving corrections to exercise his faith, and prepare him for his Kingdome: as the Prophet David acknowledgeth that his vertues were encreased by Gods gracious correcting admonitions [c].

[c] Psa. 119. 67.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wee must needes conclude with the Apostle, of Iohn, and of all others (excepting Christ that did no sinne) that God hath shut all under unbeleefe, to have mercy on all; and therefore none hath either suffered more then their sins deserved, or done more good then was their duty to doe.

Obiect. 3 Thirdly, they hence object againe, that a difference of meats is necessarily to be made upon some dayes, that is, that it is not onely lawfull to abstaine from some meats, at some times (which wee willingly grant) but that it is a sinne to eate some sorts of meats and not others, at some time (which wee deny,) and they endeavour to prove from this verse, thus arguing.

The life of Iohn Baptist was a continuall fasting, he not onely abstaining from dainties in generall, but in speciall from all meats and drinkes whatsoever, except Locust and wilde hony, in this verse.

Answ. 1. I answer first, Iohns fasting is not described in these words, neither is it true, that his whole life was a continuall fasting: but onely here is expressed his extraordinary austerity from sundry dainties, so long as he preached in the wildernesse: for Saint Matthew saith plainely here ἡ τροφὴ αὐτοῦ alimentum ejus, or esca ejus, his foode, or his meat was Locust and wild honey, which phrase signifyes not fasting, but rather feeding.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the consequence is nought, Iohn did thus, therefore wee must doe thus, is a palpable non sequitur; for this was peculiar unto Iohn in regard of his peculiar and extraordinary calling.

Thirdly, Iohn abstaines from divers meats (we grant) but that hee was forbidden them as unlawfull to use, wee deny, and leave unto the Papists to prove. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, these words (his foode was locusts and wild honey) doth not signifie that hee never did eat any thing else besides these, or that he eat these onely upon Wednesdayes and Frydayes, but that this was his ordinary foode for the most part: for though some Papists denie that ever hee eat bread, yet some others make no great scruple to grant it. Answ. 4.

§. 2. His rayment was of Camels haire.] Was Iohn clothed with camels skins? Sect. 2. Quest. 1.

I answer no, but with an usuall course sort of garment made of Camels haire, which they were wont to weare that dwelt in mountanous places, and did not much frequent cities. Answ.

Why did Iohn who was Christs forerunner goe thus poorely and country-like attyred? Quest. 2.

Because, he would shew hereby, that although his calling were great, gracious, and extraordinary, yet he did not affect worldly honours, externall pompe, or outward splendor. Answ.

Whether is there any analogie or resemblance betweene John and the Camell, whose haire hee weares? Quest. 3.

I answer, there is, for first, the Camell by nature is ordained unto labour, that is, to carry men and burthens, and is endued with strength to undergoe it; so Iohn was called and appointed by God to sustaine great labour, and to serve men by preaching unto them, and baptizing of them. Answ.

Secondly, the Camel is neither armed with sharpe nailes, nor teeth, wherewith hee might hurt men, but is an harmelesse creature: so Iohn came not to injure or damage any, but onely to prepare them for the receiving of Christ. Answ. 2.

Was there any resemblance betweene Iohn and his garment? Quest. 4.

I answer, there was, for garments made of Camels haire, seemed more unseemely and base in outward shew, then other garments, but yet were more durable, and lasted longer: so Iohns doctrine seemed not so splendidious at first view, as the doctrine of the Scribes and Pharisees, but yet it was firme and perpetuall. Answ.

§. 3. His foode was Locusts.] What were these Locusts? Sect. 3. Quest.

First, some say they were the tops of certaine hearbs, which are called ἀκρίδες; as Zaga Zabo an Æthiopike Bishop, thinketh, that John lived only of hearbs. Answ. 1.

Secondly, some say that they were certaine Crab-fishes, which the fishermen cast upon the shore, out of Iordane, as uncleane meat: but it is not like that John would eat any meat uncleane by the law. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, Epiphanius (lib. contra Ebionitas) saith, that some Jewes would have it ἐγκρὶς which signifyeth certaine pleasant confections made of hony: but this is not the truth neither, for Johns foode was a course kind of meate as followeth by and by. Answ. 3.

66 Obiect. 1. Some obiect that the Text in this verse is certainely corrupted, because it is not probable, that John eat those creatures, that are called Locusts.

Answ. I answer indeed some thinke it incredible that John should thus feede, and therfore suppose the place to have beene corrupted by the writers fault, by some slippe setting downe ἀκρίδας for ἀχερδάς, that is Locusts in stead of wild choake peares: others thinke this to have beene the mistake, ἀκρίδας Locusts, for ἐχερδάς crab-fishes: But what neede is there of this niceneſſe, seeing by Moses law they were allowed to eate of Locusts, called Arbeh for the multitude of them [a].

Obiect. 2. Some obiect againe, although it were lawfull to eat Locusts, yet it is not likely John did, because it was a fruitlesse, and an unholsome foode, for they first afford no nourishment or very small unto the body: Pliny writeth, that they which did usually eat Locusts lived but forty yeares [a]: and Galen writeth, that the birds called Seleucidæ in Asia, doe voide the Locusts whole, which they had eaten, and seeme to bee little nourished thereby.

[a] Plin. lib. 6. cap 30.

Secondly, Locusts are unwholsome foode (according to the opinion of some) the eating thereof making men leane, swart coloured, short lived, and full of lice [b].

Answ. I answer, it is not likely that either Locusts did afford so small nourishment to nature, or were so unholsome as these authors affirme; for First, Galen upon Hippocrates his Aphorismes [c], avoucheth that Locusts eaten, have great force to nourish. Secondly, Pliny saith [d] that among the Parthians they were counted a pleasant meat, and were very usually eaten. Thirdly, Dioscorides [e] saith, that the people called Alphei did ordinarily eat of Locusts, although they had store of other meat, which argues that they were neither fruitlesse nor obnoxious to the feeders upon them. Fourthly, Strabo [f] maketh mention of a certain people that lived wholy of them; and therefore it is not likely that they were unholsome. Fiftly, Bellonius [g], from the report of some authors testifieth, that in Africa they were eaten as dainties, not for Physicke, but even for nourishment; thereby proving it a thing not incredible, that John Baptist should eat Locusts. Sixtly, Diodorus Siculus, most fully of all other [h] declareth this, telling us of certaine Æthiopians called ἀκριδοφάγοι, that is Locust eaters, who neither eat fish, nor cattle, but onely Locusts continually: which at the spring time of the yeare they get in great abundance, and salt them up to preserve them for meat. Seventhly, it is not likely, that the Lord would have prescribed any unholsome meat unto his owne people, as hee did these Locusts [i]. Eightly and lastly, this may be granted, that Locusts were a base & course kinde of meat, used onely of the vulgar sort, because it was a foode common and easie to bee had, as learned Beza sheweth [k].

Obiect. 3. Some Jewes obiect, that the Locusts was appointed to be eaten by the Hebrewes, in remembrance of the plague brought upon Egypt by the Locusts, and therefore it was not onely eaten of the vulgar sort: But this is but one of their fancies and idle conceits, and therefore needs no confutation. Answ.

VERS. 5. Then went out to him Hierusalem and all Iudea, and all the region round about Iordan. Vers. 5.

Iohn Preached, and they go out to heare him preach: his preaching is not in vaine, although it be in the wildernesse, for many runne unto it and are wonne by it.

It may here be demanded, Why is the preaching of the word alwaies effectuall? Quest. 1.

I answer first, because it is Gods owne ordinance, or the ordinary meanes appointed by God, for the bringing of sinners home unto him: hence it is called a fire, because it melts the leaden and dull heart, and warmes the cold heart: it is called a hammer, because it breakes in peeces the flinty and hard heart [l], it is called a seede, because it begetteth us unto God [m], it is called a sword, because it divides betweene the affections and sinne, striving to divorce us from sinne, and to estrange our hearts from all iniquity [n]; and thus it comes to bee so effectuall, whereſoever it comes. Answ. 1.

[n] Heb. 4. 12.

Secondly, as it is Gods ordinance, so the Lord gives strength unto this his ordinance, for the performing of the former effects, in those that receive it: whence, by the Apostle, it is called, the power of God unto salvation [a]. Answ. 2.

[a] Rom. 1. 16.

Thirdly, God hath some elect servants every where, and therefore the word is never ineffectuall: hee had seven thousand that the Prophet saw not [b]: and hence the word of God is not confined unto any one place [c]; yea, even in superstitious and idolatrous Athens, some are converted by preaching, Acts 17. 32. Answ. 3.

[b] 1 King. 19. 18.
[c] 2 Tim. 2 9.

It may further bee asked, Who they were, that went forth to Iohns preaching? Quest. 2.

I answer, the common sort, and Publicans, and Soldiers, and the like, Matth. 15. 30. Mark. 18. 1. Luk. 5. 1. & 12. 1. & 3. 10. 12. 14. Answ.

Why are the Plebeians more prone and ready to embrace the Gospell, than the Governours, Scribes, and Pharisees? Quest. 3.

I answer, The causes hereof are, either first in regard of God, because hee hath chosen the meane ones of the world, to confound the mightie [d]: Or, secondly, in regard of us, and that in a double respect. I. Because they that are lesse wise, are more docible, and willing to be taught. II. Because they that are high and exalted in the world, for the most part, are so proud, that they contemne to bee taught. Answ.

VERS. 6. And were baptized of him in Iordan, confessing their sinnes. Vers. 6.

Whether are infants to be baptized, or not? for it seemes that Iohn baptized none, but such as could come unto him, and confesse their sinnes, which argues both more yeares and discretion, than infants have. Sect. 1. Quest. 1.

I answer, That although the Anabaptists deny it, without just cause, yet wee affirme it for these reasons: First, because they have the Answ.

thing, therefore it is reaſon they ſhould have the ſigne: the children of the faithfull are within the covenant, & therefore the ſeale of the covenant, belongs unto them [e].

[e] 1 Cor. 7. 14.

Secondly, Chriſt loves them, and bleſſes them [f], and is angry with his Apoſtles who would have kept them from him, and therefore they are to bee admitted unto this holy Sacrament, leaſt otherwiſe we provoke the Lord unto anger againſt us.

[f] Matth. 10. 14.

Thirdly, Baptiſme is the ordinary entrance into Noahs arke, the ſymboll and meanes of ſalvation, and type of the Church of Chriſt: and therfore it were a deede very uncharitable to exclude them from it.

Fourthly, it was prefigured by Circumciſion; and therefore belongs unto infants now as well, as that did then.

Queſt. 2. Whether is Baptiſme neceſſary unto ſalvation or not? it ſeemes it is, becauſe they flocke ſo unto the Baptiſt to be baptized.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, it is not abſolutely neceſſarie, neceſſariũ eſt quod non poteſt ſe aliter habere (ſaith Ariſtotle) that is called abſolutely neceſſary unto a thing, without which it cannot be, and thus the Baptiſme of the Spirit is neceſſary, becauſe without that we cannot be ſaved [g], but the Baptiſme of water is not thus neceſſary, becauſe children may bee ſaved without it. Circumciſion was not before the eighth day, and yet certainely many dyed before that time, all which we muſt not exclude from heaven and eternall happines: Abraham was juſtified before hee was circumciſed [h], and therefore the lacke of that Sacrament ſhould not have debarred him from perpetuall peace, if he had dyed without it. Iob (as I conceive) was not circumciſed at all, and yet none (I hope) will deny ſalvation unto him, conſidering that rare teſtimony that God gave him; that hee was a perfect and upright man, one that feared God, and eſchewed evill; not having his fellow upon earth, and holding faſt his integritie even in the midſt of his tryals, & Sathans aſſaults [i]. In the primitive Church they Baptized onely twice in the yeare, at Eaſter and Pentecoſt, before which times came about, it cannot be denied, but many were taken away by death; which the Church would never have permitted, if they had beene of this beleefe, that without Baptiſme there had beene no ſalvation: And therefore theſe things conſidered, our Church doth not hold it of abſolute neceſſity unto eternall life.

[g] Ioh. 3. 5.

[h] Rom. 4. 11.

[i] Iob. 1. 18. and 2. 3.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, there is a reſpective neceſſity, and thus Baptiſme is neceſſary unto ſalvation, becauſe it is the onely ordinary remedy for the purging away of our originall corruption: it is the ordinary dore into the Arke, and admiſſion into the Church, and therefore the neglect of it is lethall and mortall, that is, to the party that dies without it, if of yeares of diſcretion; but if an infant, then onely unto the parent, as ſhall bee ſhewed (God willing) more largely elſewhere.

Queſt. 3. It may here bee yet further asked, Whether are the Ceremonies and rites uſed in Baptiſme, neceſſary unto the eſſence of the Sacrament or not?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer, no; the people here are Baptized in Jordane, and Philip doth baptize the Eunuch in a river [k], which is not according to the manner uſed now with us.

[k] Acts 8. 36.

Anſw. 2. Secondly I anſwer, that there are three things in this Sacrament. Firſt, the action commanded, and that is the waſhing with water, which belongs ad eſſe ſacramenti, and is ſo neceſſary, that without it there is no ſacrament. Secondly, the convenient & fitting circumſtances, they belong ad bene eſſe ſacramenti, to the decencie of the Sacrament. Thirdly, there are ſuperſtitious rites, and theſe are to be aboliſhed.

Queſt. 4. Which are theſe ſuperſtitious rites, that are to be aboliſhed?

Anſw. I anſwer, ſome of thoſe rites which are uſed at this day by the Papiſts, contrary to the inſtitution of Chriſt and practiſe of his Apoſtles.

Queſt. 5. It may be doubted here, if our ceremonies uſed in Baptiſme bee not ſuperſtious alſo, and therefore to be aboliſhed: for we have our Font, our Surplice, and the Croſſe uſed in Baptiſme alſo, as well as the Papiſts?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, ſome ceremonies are neceſſary for ornaments ſake, as the Surplice and the Font, and Saint Paul deſires, that all things may be done decently and in order.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe ceremonies that offend may be taken away, but yet by the Magiſtrate, not by a private humour or perſon, as Hezechias did the Serpent, when it was abuſed unto Idolatry [l].

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, no ceremonies uſed in or by our Church, either of the Croſſe or Surplice are of the eſſence of the Sacrament, or ſo thought to be, all thoſe things being held by us adiaphorall.

Obiect. It may here bee objected, why do our Canons then enjoyne a Font in the Church, and the Surplice and Croſſe to bee uſed in Baptiſme?

Anſw. I anſwer, not for neceſſity, but for uniformity, leaſt that our Church ſhould bee rent by breaches and diviſions: But of this more fully elſewhere.

Queſt. 6. How many ſorts of Baptiſmes are there?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome [a] anſwer, that there are eight kinds of baptiſme; the firſt is the Deluge, the ſecond was the paſſage of the Iſraelites over the Red Sea: the third was, the legall waſhings commanded unto the Jewes under the law: the fourth is the Baptiſme of Iohn: the fift is the Baptiſme of Chriſt, that is, that baptiſme which Chriſt daigned to receive from Iohn, ſixtly, the baptiſme of repentance, or penitentiall teares; ſeventhly, the baptiſme of blood or martyrdome, and the eighth of fire and the ſpirit.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, others [b] ſay there are five ſorts of baptiſme; for Damaſcens three firſt they comprehend under one, which they call baptiſmum figurativum, typicall baptiſme: and the baptiſme which Iohn gave, and Chriſt received, are both one. The firſt then of theſe five kinds (according to Carthaſian) is figurative baptiſme, ſuch

[b] Diou. Carthuſ.

68 ſuch was the paſſage of the Iſraelites over the Red Sea, and their corporall waſhings, lotions, and purifications in and by water, according to the Moſaicall law.

The ſecond he calls preparatorium preparatorie baptiſme, this was (ſaith he) the baptiſme of Iohn which made way for, or uſhered in the baptiſme of Chriſt. The third is called purgativum, purifying baptiſme, whereby we are regenerated by water and the holy Spirit; and purged from all our ſinnes. The fourth is called ſupererogativum, a ſupererogatory baptime, which is the baptiſme of blood and martyrdome: the fift is quotidianum, a continuall baptiſme and that is of teares and godly ſorrow for our ſinnes.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, others [c] ſay that there is but onely one baptiſme properly ſo called, which is celebrated in water, with a certaine and determinate forme of words preſcribed by our Saviour unto his Apoſtles, Goe (ſaith he) and teach all nations baptiſing them in the name of the Father, of the Sonne, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

[c] T. Aquin

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, becauſe wee have elſe where to ſpeake of the parts of baptiſme largely, I reſolve this queſtion briefly with the Apoſtle: The like figure whereunto even baptiſme doth now ſave us, (not the putting away of the filth of the fleſh, but the anſwer of a good conſcience towards God) by the reſurrection of Ieſus Chriſt [d]. In which words are clearly expreſſed a double baptiſme, externall and internall, a waſhing with water, and with the Spirit of God.

[d] 1 Pet. 3. 21.

Dionyſius Carthuſian in his ſecond anſwer to the former queſtion, ſaith, Iohns baptiſme was but a Preparatorie Baptiſme, not the ſame with Chriſts; and becauſe we deny this, Bellarmine [e] takes the quarrell in hand, and undertakes to prove it thus: The baptiſme of Iohn had not the invocation of the Trinity, as the baptiſme of Chriſt hath, therefore it is not the ſame.

[e] Bellar. li. 1. de bapt. cap. 20.

Obiect. 2.

Anſw. 1. Wee anſwer firſt, that there was the preſence and invocation of the Trinity in the baptiſme of Iohn: as appeares thus; Chriſt came unto Iohn to be baptiſed, God the Father ſpake from Heaven, God the Sonne was in the water, and God the Holy Ghoſt deſcended in the likeneſſe of a Dove, ſo plainey elſe where [f] Iohn himſelfe ſaith, He that ſent me; to baptiſe with water (here is the authority of God the Father in Iohns baptiſme) ſaid unto me: upon whom thou ſhalt ſee the Spirit come downe, hee it is that baptiſeth with the Holy Ghoſt: Here is the name and authority of God the Sonne and God the Holy Ghoſt.

[f] Ioh. 1. 33

Anſw. 2. Secondly, to wound them with an arrow out of their own quiver; the Maſter of the ſentences is quite againſt Bellarmine [g], Tunc invocato nomine Trinitatis inſtitutus eſt in Iordane baptiſmus, &c. Then in Iordan the name of the Trinity beeing invocated, baptiſme was inſtituted, when the myſterie of the Trinity appeared.

[g] Lib. 4. diſt. 3. g.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, Iohn uſed the ſame forme in baptiſing, which the Apoſtles did; they baptiſed in the name of the Lord Jeſus [h], and ſo did Iohn [i] and Saint Ambroſe [k] affirmeth that Iohn baptiſed in the name of Chriſt: and therefore it is not unlike, but that Iohn baptiſed in the name of the Trinity, as the Apoſtles did: for although the name of Jeſus onely be expreſſed, yet thereby is ſignified the end & ſcope of baptiſme for remiſſion of ſinnes, not an exact and preciſe forme of baptiſme.

[h] Act. 2. 38
[i] Acts 19. 4.
[k] Li. 1. de ſpirit. ca. 3.

Queſt. 7. Whether doe the Miniſters in baptiſme conferre grace upon the parties baptiſed? or whether are they givers of heavenly gifts in baptiſme or no.

Anſw. I anſwer, the Sacraments are holy in themſelves, and have not their holineſſe from men: and it is not the Miniſter of baptiſme, but the bleſſed Trinity, that in and by baptiſme doth worke faith and conferre grace upon the children of God. That it is God, and not man that workes grace and conferres heavenly gifts upon thoſe that are baptiſed, appeares by theſe arguments. Firſt, becauſe a divine gift cannot bee given by man, neither can any waſh away the ſpots, ſtaines, and pollutions of the mind, but onely he that made the mind.

Secondly, becauſe the Prophets ever and anon prove that it is God that waſheth us, and not man: Waſh me throughly from mine iniquity, and cleanſe thou me from my ſinnes [a], and againe; purge me with hyſſope, and I ſhall be cleane, waſh me, and I ſhall be whiter then ſnow: Thus David [b]. Againe the Prophet Eſay deſireth, that the Lord would waſh away the filth of the daughter of Zion, and purge away the blood of Ieruſalem [c].

[c] Iſa. 4. 4.

Thirdly, becauſe Chriſt ſaith plainely, that it is he (that is hee alone) that gives that water (that is ſpirituall grace and life) Whereof who ſo drinks ſhall thirſt no more for ever [d].

[d] Ioh. 4.

As the Dyer by the touching onely of the cloth cannot give a colour unto it, ſo neither the Miniſter of the baptiſme by himſelfe, without the operation of the Bleſſed Trinity, in that holy ordinance can give any divine grace, or heavenly tincture unto the ſoule

Again, if the Church of God be a Vineyard, then the Miniſters are but tillers, and it is God that is the Lord and Maſter of the familie, and therefore all ſpirituall gifts are given by him.

Laſtly becauſe (as one ſaith [e].) Saint Paul ſhewes, that this whole Sacrament of baptiſme doth belong unto God, while hee ſaith, I have planted, and Apollos watered, that is I have made one of a pagana κατηχούμενον, from a meere heathen that had no knowledge of God, I have brought him to ſome underſtanding of him, and of the principles of religion: and Apollos he hath baptiſed him that I have thus taught and inſtructed: but it is the Lord onely that muſt cauſe to grow and encreaſe what I have thus planted and Apollos watered [f].

[f] 1 Cor. 3 6.

§. 2. Confeſſing their ſinnes.] The Papiſts Sect. 2. object this place to prove their auricular confeſſion; becauſe (ſay they.) [g] Iohn did not induce the people to a generall acknowledgement onely, that they were ſinners, but alſo to utter every man his particular ſinnes.

[g] Rhemiſt Obiect.

To this we anſwer firſt of all there is no mention made, that this confeſſion was of every one apart, of every particular fault they had committed, and that ſecretly in Saint Iohns eare. Anſw. 1.

Secondly

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is contrary to the nature of the meeting, which is publike, where corner and ſecret exerciſes have no place.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if the Papiſts will ground their auricular confeſſion upon this place, then they muſt have it but once, and that before Baptiſme: not yeerely, and that before the Lords Supper.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it is unpoſſible, not onely for every one of the people to make recitall of their particular ſinnes particularly, which were both infinite and in part unknowne: but alſo for Iohn alone to heare all thoſe, which they could have made confeſſion of, eſpecially never having before made confeſſion of their ſinnes in the whole courſe of their life [b].

[b] Sic Cartwright. ſ. Matth. 3, 6 where this is amplified.

Queſt. 1. It may bee demanded, What confeſſion of their ſinnes they made?

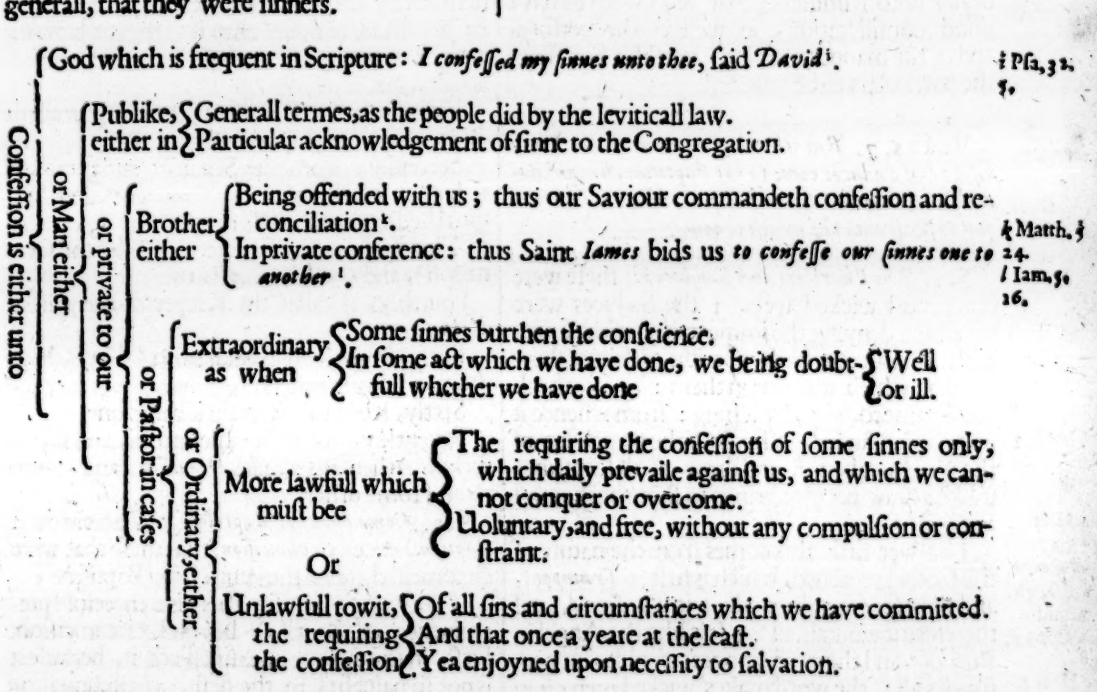
Answ. 1. Firſt, ſome ſay that they confeſſed onely in generall, that they were ſinners.

Secondly, we may ſay, that they confeſſed particularly theſe ſinnes unto Iohn, wherewith their conſciences were moſt preſſed, that ſo they might injoy the greater good by his miniſtry, and be delivered from thoſe their iniquities. Answ. 2.

Queſt. 2. It is queſtioned ſometimes amongſt Proteſtants, Whether wee bee not too remiſſe in exacting Confeſſion of ſinnes, as well as the Papiſts are too ſtrict?

Answ. For anſwer hereunto it is fit firſt to agree upon the termes, to wit, 1 what is meant by confeſſion. 2 what is meant by Exacting. 3 what is meant by Proteſtants.

Firſt, conſider wee, what is meant by confeſſion: there are divers ſorts thereof, Biſhop Iewell hath three ſorts: and Chemnitius hath nine degrees; but we may thus plainely diſtinguiſh them.



[i] Pſa. 32. 5.

[k] Matth. 5 24.

[l] Iam. 5. 16.

Exaction may bee underſtood two waies. Firſt, of conſtraint, as of neceſsity. Secondly, of perſwaſion onely, as profitable.

Now this queſtion 1. is not of confeſſion to God: nor 2. Publickly to the congregation: 3. to one another: but 4. to the Paſtor onely: and 5. not that which is enforced of neceſsity, unto a particular enumeration of all acts and circumſtances; but that onely which is done by the Confitent willingly and freely; and by the Paſtor at the moſt, but perſwaded as profitable, not injoyned as ſimply neceſſary. And therefore I ſay, as that auricular, univerſall, generall, peremptory Confeſſion is juſtly condemned, and exploded by our Church (as ſhall be ſhewed elſe where:) ſo of the other there may bee godly uſe, as ſhall be proved in another place.

Thirdly, conſider that Proteſtants may bee taken two manner of waies: Firſt, for private Miniſters in the practiſe of their preaching: here I confeſſe ingenuouſly, and am verily perſwaded, that the holy and ſober uſe of confeſſing (upon divers weighty occaſions) might by Gods bleſſing be the inſtrument of much good among his people (as ſhall God willing elſe where bee proved:) this caution or admonition obſerved, that a thing which may be either perniciouſly or profitably uſed (as confeſſion of ſinnes to the Paſtor may) ſhould neither be too farre preſſed, or too wholy neglected, according the ſaying of Charles the Emperour. Confeſſio neque nimis laxanda, neque nimis aſtringenda.

Secondly, by Proteſtants may be meant the doctrine of our Church: and in this ſenſe Proteſtants are not too remiſſe in the doctrine of confeſſion of ſins; for our ever precious Iewell ſaith, private confeſſion (abuſes ſet apart) wee condemne not: Biſhop Morton (a preſent principall pillar of our Church) allowes it alſo, ſo it be free and not exacted [a]: and Chemnitius [b] ſaith plainely. Ea quæ conſcientiam gravant, exponere conſulit eccleſiæ noſtræ inſtructionis & conſolationis gratiâ: that is, our Church doth adviſe men to acknowledge thoſe ſinnes that trouble and oppreſſe preſſe their conſciences, if they deſire either counſell or conſolation [bb]: yea we may make our adverſaries our judges in this particular, for Bellarmine himſelfe [c] confeſſeth, that our men, (naming Chemnitius, Melancthon, and Calvin) allow of confeſſion.

Laſtly, our Communion booke (in the end of the ſecond exhortation unto the Lords Supper) ſaith, if there bee any that through the ſight of their ſins cannot quiet their owne conſcience, but require further comfort or counſell, then let him come to mee, or ſome other Miniſter of Gods word, and open his griefe, &c.

And in the viſitation of the ſick, the Rubrique ſaith, the ſicke perſon ſhall make a ſpeciall confeſſion, if he feele his conſcience troubled with any weighty matter. For concluſion of this queſtion, as our Church allowes of private confeſſion of ſins unto Miniſters; ſo it behooveth to have good conſideration, as well of the perſons, and of the manner of doing, as of the fitneſſe of the particulars to be revealed.

Verſ. 7. VERS. 7. But when he ſaw many of the Phariſees and Saduces come to his Baptiſme, he ſaid unto them, O Generation of Vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come.

Sect. 1. §. 1. The Phariſees and Sadduces: theſe were both moſt wicked ſects. 1 the Saduces were prophane denying the immortality of the ſoule. 2. the Phariſees were hypocrites, making a ſhew of that which was not in them: and yet both theſe come to Iohns Preaching: from whence it Queſt. 1. may be demanded, Why doth the preaching of the word awaken all, and draw of all ſorts unto it, like a draw net that brings to ſhore both good and bad [a]?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, this comes from the nature of the Goſpel preached, which is firſt a Trumpet [b], and therefore awakens all. 2 it is a ſword, and therefore it wounds all [c]. 3 It is like the Angel in Bethesda, and therefore moves, troubles, & perſwades all: the word makes wicked men often ſigh and tremble in the hearing of it, and hence it workes ſome effect or other (for the moſt part)

Anſw. 2. upon all.

Secondly, this comes from the inſtability of our nature, and moveableneſſe of our diſpoſition: eſt natura hominum novitatis avida, we are naturally like the ſand in the water, mooved and ſtirred with every wave: like reedes ſhaken with the wind: noveltie often makes us runne unto the word, as the Sadduces and Phariſees here, we being naturally like the Athenians that deſire to heare new things, having itching eares.

[c] Heb. 4. 12.

Obiect. But againſt this it bee objected, The word (though preached) profits none but the faithfull, becauſe except it be mixt with faith it availes not [e].

[d] Ioh. 5. 24.

[e] Heb. 4. 2.

Anſw. I anſwer, certainely the word preached profits not all, but yet it moves all: the ſeed works ſomething in the ſtony and thorny ground, as well as in the good ground, although not ſo much nor ſo profitably: the water being moved and troubled, the clay and ſand ariſes, although preſently that which is heavie ſinkes downe againe to the bottome: Thus, many come unto Chriſt [f], but for a diverſe end, firſt ſome for novelties ſake, that they may ſee him, becauſe they heare rare things of him: Secondly, ſome that they may ſee his miracles and heare him preach. Thirdly, ſome that they may be fed by him: Fourthly, ſome that they may be cured by him: Fiftly, but very few that they might heare his word, to keepe and obſerve it. And thus many come unto the word for divers ends, and are ſometimes awakened by it, although the moſt part fall to the ſleepe of ſinne againe.

[f] Luk. 5. 1. and 12. 1.

Queſt. 2. Why is the comming of the prophane Sadduces and the hypocriticall Phariſees unto Iohn, here mentioned?

Anſw. Obſerv. To teach us that there is no order or calling ſo deſperately wicked, but the Goſpel calles and gathers ſome of them unto it: the truth of this anſwer appeares by an Induction of divers examples, viz.

Firſt, from the Phariſees; the Goſpel calleth Nicodemus [g] and Gamaleel [h].

[g] Ioh. 3. 1.

[h] Act. 5. 34.

Secondly, from the Senators and great and rich men, it calls Ioſeph of Arimathea [i] and Sergius the Proconſul. Acts 13.

[i] Matth. 27. 57

Thirdly, from the ſouldiers; it calles the Centurion [k], and Cornelius, Acts 10.

[k] Matth. 8. 5. 8. 13.

Fourthly, it calles the Keeper of the priſon. Acts 16.

Fiftly, from the harlots, it calles Mary Magdalen and divers others.

Sixtly, from the theeves, it calles one.

Seventhly, from the Idolatrous, and ſuperſtitious Athenians it calles Dioniſius, and Damaris and ſome others [l].

[l] Acts 17. 34.

Sect. 2. Queſt. §. 2. Come unto his Baptiſme] Wherein doth Baptiſme excell circumciſion, that theſe that were circumciſed, runne thus unto Iohns Baptiſme?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer, ſome [m] ſay, there is a threefold preeminence of Baptiſme beyond circumciſion. First, in the facilitie or eaſineſſe of it, becauſe it is not ſo painefull to the fleſh, as circumciſion was. Secondly, in the univerſality and liberty: for Baptiſme is free for both ſexes, for all Nations, that profeſſe Chriſt at all times: whereas circumciſion belonged onely unto the Iſraelites, and to males, and was tyed to the eighth day. Thirdly, in the efficacy, becauſe baptiſme abſolveth a man from all ſinne, and the puniſhment thereof.

Sect. 3. Queſt. 1. §. 3. Oh generation of Vipers.] Why doth Saint Iohn call the Phariſes and Saduces Vipers?

Anſw. 1. First, ſome ſay, for their ingratitude; it being the nature of the Viper to eate the bowels of his damme: thus our Saviour blameth them for their unthankefulneſſe unto the Prophets of the Lord that were ſent unto them, Oh Serpents, and generations of Vipers, how can ye eſcape the condemnation of hell [b]? But this doth not ſeeme to be the reaſon of this phraſe, in this verſe.

[b] Matth. 23. 33.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, as the Viper hath his teeth buried in his gummes [c], ſo that one would thinke it were a harmeleſſe beaſt, and could not bite; ſo

[c] Plin. lib. 11. cap. 37.

alſo had theſe deceitfull hypocrites their ſecret corners and conveiances, wherein they ſo cunningly couched their wickedneſſe, that they were taken of all other to be the moſt innocent.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe their malice was of a venemous nature: Pliny ſaith, immedicabile venenum, there is no antidote to expell the poyſon of a Viper, nor medicine to cure him, whome it hath ſtung; and therefore the inhabitants of Melita [d] 1 attribute murther unto Paul, they ſaid, he was a murtherer, becauſe the Viper faſtened on his hand. 2 they ſay vengeance will not ſuffer him to live, becauſe now there was no hope to eſcape death, being thus ſtung. 3 although hee had throwne the Uiper into the fire, yet they expected when he ſhould have ſwolne, and fallen downe dead ſuddenly; as if it were in vaine to uſe any meanes to prevent the venome of this ſerpent. 4 when they ſaw he had no harme, they ſaid hee was a God and not a man: thus mortall was the venome and poyſon of a Uiper eſteemed: And thus Saint Iohn by this Phraſe ſhewes unto the Phariſees and Sadduces, that by nature they were Uiperlike having firſt no good thing in them at all any more then the Uiper: but ſecondly, that they had in them the gall of bitterneſſe, and an incurable evill.

d Act 28. 4.5.6.

Queſt. 2. How did Iohn know what theſe Phariſees and Sadduces were, that he paſſeth this ſharpe cenſure upon them?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer Firſt, ſome ſay by their habite (as the Monkes are knowne) and thus our Saviour ſaith that they be knowne by their Phylacteries [e].

e Muſcul. f Matth. 23.4.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, others ſay that Iohn knew it by their by-paſt converſation; but this is not likely, becauſe Iohn was in the wilderneſſe, and therefore how could hee know what their life had beene?

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, others ſay, that Iohn knew it by asking the people what they were: but it is not likely, that upon the report of the common multitude, Iohn would thus bitterly have reproved them.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, Iohn knew by the revelation of the Spirit of God: thus Calvin. ſup.

Queſt. 3. If Iohn did not certainely of himſelfe know what they were, why doth he ſo quickly reprehend them? or why doth he thus aſtoniſh or affright them?

Anſw. I anſwer, becauſe the Holy Ghoſt had taught him, that they ſtood in neede of reprehenſion.

Queſt. 4. Is it lawfull for Miniſters to reproove their hearers?

Anſw. I anſwer it is, for Saint Paul commands Timothie, to rebuke them that ſinne [g].

g 1 Tim. 5.20.

Queſt. 5. Why muſt ſinners be reprooved by Miniſters?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, becauſe it ſhewes their zeale towards God in not reſpecting man more then the Lord.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe they are Chyrurgeons; ſanus non eget medico, the whole needeth not the Phyſitian, but the ſicke party; the wounded ſtands in neede of a Chyrurgeon, and where the wound is feſtered, there is neede of corraſives.

How farre may Miniſters reproove thoſe that ſinne? 71

Queſt. 6. I anſwer Firſt, it hath beene lawfull to reproove them by name; thus Paul reproved many, as for example, Hymeneus, 1 Tim. 1. 20. Philetus, 2 Tim. 2. 17. Phygellus and Hermogenes. 2 Tim. 1. 15. Alexander, 2 Tim. 4. 14. and the inceſtuous perſon. 1 Cor. 5. But our Canons now forbid this.

Anſw. 1.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, it hath beene lawfull to reproove great men by their names: thus Elijah reproves Ahab, ſaying, is it thou that troubleſt Iſrael, and thy fathers houſe [h]: thus Nathan reproves David, ſaying plainely unto him, thou art the man. 2 Sam. 12. 7. thus Chriſt calles Herod Fox. Luke 13. 32. But theſe reprooſes were extraordinary, and therefore as extraordinary examples are not to be imitated.

h 1 King. 18. 18.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, it is lawfull for Miniſters to reproove their people, and that without feare of their frownes or anger; becauſe the Lord bidds them lift up their voices, and tell his people of their ſins [i], and he is able to defend them.

i Eſa. 58. 1

Queſt. 7. What ſinners are Miniſters moſt ſharpely to reprehend?

Anſw. I anſwer, Hypocrites and ſuch as goe about to juſtifie themſelves: as the Scribes, Iohn 9. 41. and the Phariſees and the Sadduces in this verſe.

Queſt. 8. Why are theſe more ſharpely to be reproved then others, ſeeing they ſeeme in the eye of man better then others?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer Firſt, becauſe they ſinne more hainouſly then others, for they lye againſt God, as Ananias did, [a] they ſo long deceive men with their falſe ſhowes and outward appearances, that at length they thinke they can deceive God himſelfe.

a Acts 5.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe they are not moved with generall reprehenſions or comminations: when the Lord threatens the world, they take no notice of it, as not at all concerning them, thinking themſelves to be juſt and good, and therefore excluded from thoſe meanes [b]; wherefore it is neceſſary that ſuch either be privatly admoniſhed or particularly reproved.

b Ioh. 9. 41.

VERS. 8. Bring forth therefore fruits meets for repentance. Verſ. 8.

This verſe is like Golias ſword, ſometimes it fights for us, ſometimes it ſeemes to fight againſt us, for Firſt the Papiſts object this place to prove, that wee may ſatisfie the wrath of God for the puniſhment due unto ſinne arguing thus, Bring forth fruits worthy of repentance: here Saint Iohn preacheth ſatisfaction by doing worthie fruits of penance, as faſting, prayer, almes and the like. Obiect. 1

To this we anſwer firſt, fruits worthy of repentance, are no ſatisfaction for ſinne, or the puniſhment thereof, but onely arguments of true repentance, or effects, not any formall parts thereof. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, in this place mention is made of everlaſting deſtruction, verſe 10. every tree that bringeth Anſw. 2.

bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewen downe, and caſt into the fire: wherefore if by worthy workes, they underſtand ſatisfactory workes, then wil it follow, that ſatisfaction may be made, not only for temporall, but for eternall puniſhment.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, this place proves not their poſition, for Bellarmine ſayth, wee [c] may ſatisfie for the temporall puniſhment of ſinne, ex propriis, of our owne, ad æqualitatem, to an equalitie, ex condigno, worthily: Now this verſe neither proveth equalitie nor condignitie, nor a propertie of our own ſatisfaction; which all three are againſt the Scripture: For, I. there is no equalitie, we cannot anſwer God one of a thouſand [c]. II. There is no propertie [d], If thou haſt received it, why rejoyceſt thou, as though thou hadſt not received it? III. There is no condignitie [e]: when wee have done all that is commanded, we are but unprofitable ſervants.

[d] 1 Cor. 4.7.
[e] Luk. 17. 10.

Obiect. 2 As the Papiſts object this verſe for ſatisfaction, ſo wee object againſt it: They ſay, that Purgatory paines may bee redeemed by the good workes of this life: wee affirme the contrary from theſe words, Bring forth worthy fruits of repentance: by theſe workes teſtifying repentance, men doe flye from the wrath to come, verſ. 7. and the tree that bringeth not forth theſe fruits, is caſt into the fire, verſ. 10. This is the everlaſting wrath of God, & a fire, which wee doe not ſatisfie for, but prevent by theſe fruits. ſo theſe are workes to be performed by the living, they pertaine not unto the dead: they prevent everlaſting deſtruction through faith in Chriſt, for the which they themſelves confeſſe, our workes doe not ſatisfie.

Queſt. 1 The Papiſts may here demand of us, whether there bee no uſe of good workes? for it ſeemes by that which hath beene ſpoken, that wee are enemies to good workes, and friends to licentiouſneſſe.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt, that in repentãce we are to bring forth outward fruits worthy amendment of life.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, repentance it ſelfe is in the heart, and therefore muſt bee teſtified in all manner of good workes, the principall whereof are, I. To endevour daily to renounce and leave all ſinnes: and, II. in all things to doe the will of God.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, wee are not patrones of licentiouſneſſe, or enemies of good works: for we maintaine a threefold profitable and neceſſarie uſe of them, viz. both in reſpect of God, of Man, of our ſelves.

First, we ſay, good workes are neceſſarie to bee done in regard of God, and that in theſe reſpects, First, that his commandements may be obeyed, and that his will may be done: for the will of God is, that we ſhould be holy, that is, abſtaine from ſinne, and doe that which is good [f]. Secondly, that hereby wee may ſhew our ſelves to be obedient children to God our Father: in doing that which hee bids us, in eſchewing that which he forbids us [g]. Thirdly, that thus wee may ſhew our ſelves thankfull unto God for our redemption by Chriſt; hee redeeming us for this end, that wee might ſerve him in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe [h]. Fourthly, leſt otherwiſe we grieve the Spirit of God, which wee are preadmoniſhed carefully to take heed of [i] and rather to endevour to walke according to the direction of the ſame [k]. Fiftly, that God, by our good workes, may bee glorified [l]. Sixtly, that wee may bee good followers of God [m], thus imitating him in holineſſe and uprightneſſe [n].

[g] 1 Pet. 1. 14.
[h] Luk. 1. 74.75.
[i] Eph. 4.30
[k] Gal. 5. 22.
[l] Matth. 5. 16.
[m] Epheſ. 5 1.
[n] 1 Pet. 1. 15.

Secondly, we ſay good workes are to be done in regard of Men, and that in theſe reſpects, First, that our neighbour may bee helped in worldly things [o], thus the workes of righteouſneſſe, mercie, pitty, and charitie are to bee performed, becauſe our brethren are helped and comforted by them in outward things.

[o] Luk. 6. 38.

Secondly, that thus by our example of holineſſe, hee may be won unto godlineſſe [a]. Thirdly, that we may prevent in our ſelves the giving of offence [b] wee muſt bee carefull not to give offence unto any, which is done by a conſtant courſe of uprightneſſe and holineſſe: yea by doing good, the mouth of the enemy is ſtopped.

[a] 1 Pet. 2. 12.
[b] 1 Cor. 10. 32.

Thirdly, and laſtly, wee ſay, good workes are neceſſary in regard of our ſelves, and that in theſe reſpects.

First, that hereby wee may ſhew our ſelves to be new creatures [c] for with ſuch, old things are left, and all things are become new. Secondly, that thus we may walke as the children of light [d].

[c] 2 Cor 5. 17.
[d] Epheſ. 5. 8.

Thirdly, that hereby wee may have ſome aſſurance of our faith, and of our ſalvation: for holineſſe is the way to heaven [e] and faith is ſhewed by works [f] that is, a dead and counterfeit faith is diſcerned from a true, onely by true holineſſe and uprightneſſe in our lives and converſations.

[e] 2 Pet. 1. 8. 10.
[f] Iam. 2. 17 18.

Fourthly, that thus faith and the gifts of God may bee exerciſed and continued unto the end [g], wee muſt labour daily to exerciſe the grace of God in us, that ſo it may daily grow ſtronger in us.

[g] 2 Tim: 1. 6.

Fiftly, that the puniſhments of ſinne both temporall, and eternall, may be prevented: the Lord hath threatned that if we breake his ſtatutes and keepe not his commandements, that then hee will viſit our ſins with the rod, and our iniquity with ſtripes [h], and therefore to avoid theſe heavy puniſhments, it is requiſite that wee labour to abound in good workes.

[h] Pſa. 89: 31.32.

Sixtly, that the reward may bee obtained, which GOD freely in mercy hath promiſed to men for their good workes [i] let us (ſaith the Apoſtle) not bee weary in well doing: for in due ſeaſon we ſhall reape if wee faint not: good workes having a promiſe both of this life and of the life to come [k].

[i] Gal. 6. 9.
[k] 1. Tim. 4. 8.

It may from this verſe be further demanded, what worthineſſe is this that S[t]. Iohn here perſwades unto Queſt. 2.

For the reſolving of this queſtion, obſerve that there is a double worthineſſe. First, an exact proportion and adequate worthineſſe of a thing: when a man is in every reſpect worthy of that which he doth enjoy: Saint Iohn ſpeakes not of this. Secondly, worthineſſe ſometimes ſignifies Anſw.

a certaine conveniency and decency, which takes away repugnancy but doth not inferre absolute condignity, or worthinesse: and thus it is taken in this verse, Bring forth fruits ἀξίους τῆς μετανοίας, that is, convenient, befitting, and beseeming (not contradicting or repugning) repentance which yee professe: as if Saint Iohn would say unto them, you seeme to repent and to be sorry for your former sins, learne therefore hereafter so to live, as becomes those that do truely repent indeed.

VERS. 9. And thinke not to say within your selves, wee have Abraham to our Father, for I say unto you that God is able of these stones, to raise up children unto Abraham.

Vers. 9.

Obiect. The Jewes here object unto Iohn, either wee are the children of Abraham, or none are. To this the Baptist answers, Deus potest, that God can raise up children unto Abraham even of stones: and therfore there is no such necessity, that they must needs be the sonnes of Abraham.

Answ.

God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

Quest. 1. WHat is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. I answer first, they may be understood literally, thus, that God Almighty who created all things by his word, can procreate and raise up even of stones righteous men, who should bee the spirituall children of Abraham, and so more true and more noble sons than they were, who were his naturall children, but not spirituall.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this may be understood Metaphorically, thus, that the Lord can raise up faithfull children unto Abraham, even of the Gentiles; who although for the hardnesse of their hearts and stolidity, and grosse idolatry they are called stones, yet the mercy of God can make them holy and spirituall men, and consequently worthy to be called the children of Abraham.

Quest. 2. It may hence yet be asked, how many wayes God doth produce and make man?

Answ. I answer five. First, hee makes man without man or woman, and thus he made Adam. Secondly, he makes man of man, without woman, thus he made Evah. Thirdly, he makes man of woman, whithout man, and thus hee made Christ. Fourthly, he makes man of man and woman, according to the common course of nature, and thus hee makes all us the naturall sonnes of Adam. Fiftly, Deus potest, God could make children and sonnes even of stones, as in this verse.

Vers. 11. §. VERS. 11. I indeed baptise you with water unto repentance, but he that commeth after mee is mightier then I, whose shooes I am not worthy to beare, he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire.

Sect. 1. §. 1. The Papists say, the baptisme of Iohn was of another kind then Christs baptisme was[a], and they prove it from this verse thus, Iohn himselfe saith, I baptize you with water, but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost. Therefore Iohns Baptisme and Christs was not all one. Iohns baptisme not giving the Holy Ghost as Christs did. 73

[a] Bellar. li. de bapt. ca. 10. 21. Obiect. 1

Answ. We answer, Iohn speaketh not of divers baptismes, but of divers operations and ministeries, in one and the same baptisme: for Iohn as all other Ministers doe, did but give water: and Christ co-operating and working together with them giveth the Holy Ghost.

Obiect. 2. But they object againe; Iohn doth not say, Christ doth baptize with the holy Ghost, but he shall baptize; therefore Christ did not baptize together with Iohn by his Spirit[b].

[b] Bellar. cap. 21.

Answ. We answer, as Iohn here speaketh of Christ in the future tense, so the same Iohn speaketh elsewhere of Christ in the present tense[c] 1. saying, this is he, which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost; therefore, Christ did both then baptize with his Spirit, & afterwards also more manifestly, when the gifts of the spirit began to be shed forth more plentifully upon men. 2. The same Iohn speaking of Christ, saith, Behold the Lambe of God, that taketh away the sinnes of the world[d], hee even then when Iohn baptized, did take away sinnes. 3. Iohn testifieth of Christ, that of his fulnesse wee have all received[e], and therfore even then Christ baptized with the Spirit, which was signified by receiving of his fulnesse.

[c] Ioh. 1. 33.

[e] Ioh. 1. 16.

Obiect. 3 Against these three proofes they object three things: First, that Christ is said to baptize with the Spirit, not that then he baptized, but to signifie that when he baptized, he should not onely baptize with water, but with the Spirit.

Answ. 1. To this we answer first, if Christ then onely began to baptize with the Spirit, when he baptized with water; it would follow, that hee never baptized with the Spirit; for it is certaine that he baptized not with water[f], as S. Iohn the Evangelist saith, that Iesus himselfe baptized not, but onely his Disciples.

[f] Ioh. 4. 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that Christ at that instant baptized with the Spirit, is evident from Iohns words[g], Hee that sent mee to baptize, said unto mee, upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit come downe, &c. that is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost: Christ then immediatly, at the comming down of the Spirit, baptized with the Spirit: unlesse they will say he received the Spirit in vaine.

[g] Ioh. 1. 33.

Obiect. 4 Against the second proofe they object, Christ did not then take away sinnes, but it is signified, that afterwards by his death hee should take away the sinnes of the world.

Answ. To this wee answer, that it is very grosse and absurde to say that Christ did not take away the sinnes of the world before his death: for the Prophet David saith[h], Blessed are they whose sins are forgiven: whence it is plaine, that even under the law by faith in Christ to come, they found remission of sinnes.

And thus much for the resolution of their objections.

Quest. 1. It may now bee questioned, how doth it appeare that Iohns baptisme was the same with Christ?

Answ. I answer, by these reasons. The first is taken ab absurdo, because a threefold absurdity would follow follow from the deniall of it. First, this would give occasion to the Anabaptists more to enforce their doctrine of Rebaptization. Secondly, if Iohns baptisme were onely a preparation unto another baptisme, why then was it not received by all men? Thirdly, if it were onely for the sanctifying and consecrating of the water, why was any more baptized then Christ? for he was baptized for this end to sanctifie this ordinance; as followes verse. 16.

The second reason is, because the Baptist baptizeth unto the remission of sinnes[f], and there is no remission sealed unto us, but onely by the Sacraments of Christ; and therefore it was the same baptisme. f Mark. 1. 14.

The third reason is, because Iohns baptisme was the Sacrament of his doctrine: and therefore if his doctrine were the Gospel, then his baptisme was the Sacrament of the Gospell, and so the same with Christ.

The fourth reason is, because otherwise Christ and his Apostles were not rightly baptized: for Christ was himselfe baptized of the Baptist, ver. 16. and the Apostles were not baptised of Christ, because he baptised none, and therefore it is most probable that the most of them (at the least) if not all were also by Iohn baptised.

The fift reason is, because Christ was circumcised and baptised, that he might be united both to the Church of the Jewes, & of the Christians, by the Sacraments of them both, that is, to the Jewes by circumcision, to the Christians by Baptisme; but if Iohns baptisme were not the same with the baptisme of the Christian Churches, then Christ was not thereby united unto them.

The sixt reason is, because there is but one Baptisme[a], and therefore Iohns was the same with the baptisme of Christ. a Ephes. 4. 5.

The seventh reason is, because we are all baptised into one body[b], and therefore those that were baptised by Iohn, were united unto Christ. b 1 Cor. 12. 13.

The eight reason is, because Iohns baptisme was from heaven[c]. c Matth. 21. 25. & Ioh. 1. 33.

The ninth reason is, because Christ permits Iohn still to baptise after he was baptised, and begun to preach[d]. d Ioh. 3. 23.

The tenth reason is, because Apollos learned the way of Christ, and yet was not rebaptised; as the Holy Ghost saith of him, he was instructed in the way of the Lord, he was fervent in spirit, he was diligent in preaching Christ, and yet knew onely the Baptisme of Iohn[e]. And thus although the Papists say, that the baptisme of Iohn did conduce nothing at all, either unto repentance or the remission of sinnes, being onely a preparation unto another baptisme: yet I hope by that which hath beene spoken, the contrary will evidently appeare to any indifferent Reader. e Act. 18. 25.

Obiect. 6 They object further for the proofe hereof, that those who were baptised unto Iohns baptisme were againe rebaptised[f]: and therefore Iohns baptisme is not the same with Christs. We shall consider (God willing) more amply of that place when we come unto it; in the meane time. f Acts 19 4, 5.

I answer, first, that all those that were baptised unto Iohns baptisme were not rebaptised, as appeares by Apollos named before. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the difference here was in the graces not as yet received, but now given: not by a new Baptisme, but by the imposition of hands onely, which the Papists themselves call Confirmation. Answ. 2.

It may be hence farther demanded, is there no difference at all betweene the Baptisme of Iohn and Christ? Quest. 2.

I answer first, some state this difference betwixt them, that Iohn baptised unto Christ who was shortly to be revealed; we now the Ministers of Christ baptise unto Christ already revealed. Answ. 1.

Secondly, some state this difference, that Iohn baptised onely in the name of the Messias, not of the Trinity, but this is uncertaine. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, the true difference is twofold, first, betweene the Persons, the Messias, and the Minister; Iohn was but Christs forerunner, Christ was the true Messias; and therefore they differed in their person, as do the Master and the servant. Secondly, betweene the Sacrament externall and internall, and this is the principall thing that Iohn meanes in this verse, when he saith, I baptize with water, but Christ with the Holy Ghost, that is, I am not the author of this Sacrament, but onely a servant appointed to celebrate it: My part is to administer water, and the outward ordinance, but it is Christ onely that gives grace. For the full understanding whereof, observe that the scope of the Baptist in this place (I baptise with water) is twofold. First generall. Secondly, particular. First, Iohns generall scope hereby was, to remove the admiration of the people from himselfe unto Christ: Teaching us that in the undertaking and administration of the Sacraments, wee must looke unto Christ: and that for these two causes. First, because hee that in the Sacraments lookes no further then man, doth much derogate from the dignity of the Sacrament. Secondly, because he that lookes not unto Christ in the Sacrament, is unworthy of that blessing which is expected and desired in the administration of the Sacrament. Answ. 3. Observ.

Secondly, Iohns particular scope hereby was this, to shew that his Baptisme had no efficacie, nor power in it from him at all, but onely from Christ.

§ 2. Whose shooes I am not worthy to beare.] Here is an excellent pateme of true humility in the Baptist, who although hee were the greatest of the sons of men[m], yet he thinks himself unworthy (not as the Proverbe is to carrie his books after him, but) to carry his shooes, or to untie them. Teaching us that humility becomes the chiefest of the Saints; and the best of Gods children: we must preferre one before another[a], we must not minde high things, but condescend to men of low estate[b], we must be lowly and meeke[c], in humility of minde esteeming others better then our selves[d]. Sect. 2. m Matth. 11. 11. Observa. a Rom. 12 10. b Rom. 12 16. c Eph 4. 2 d Phil. 2. 3

Why should we thus labour to be humble? Quest. 1.

I answer first, because thus we shall shew our selves Answ. 1.

selves not to be of the world, or to bee contrary unto the world: the ordinary custome and practise of the world is for great ones to Lord it over the poore, but it shall not be so among you, saith our Saviour [e]: the Pharisees being proud, loved to be called Rabbi, but (saith Christ unto his Apostles) be not ye called Rabbi, for ye are brethren [f].

e Matth. 20 26.
f Matth. 23.7.8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because thus we shall shew our selves to be truely spirituall, & sanctified by the Spirit of grace, Saint Paul when he was a Pharisee was most strict [g], and in his life unblameable [h], but when he was a Christian, an Apostle of Christ, yea a Saint upon earth, then he thought himself the greatest of sinners.

g Acts 22. 3.
h Phil. 3. 6 8. &c.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because thus we shal shew our selves to bee imitators of the best; David was humble, his heart was not haughty, nor his eyes lofty; but his soule was as a weaned child [i]. The Blessed Virgin was lowly, & therefore God regarded her [k] yea Christ himselfe was humble, taking upon him the forme of a servant [l], and meek, commanding us to imitate him therein [m].

i Psa. 131. 1.2.
k Luk. 1. 48 52.
l Phil. 2. 7.
m Matth. 11. 29.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because there is nothing in us that we can justly be proud of; and therefore we should not be exalted or puft up by any vertues or graces: but remember alwayes these three things;

First, that whatsoever good is in us, is not of us, or from our selves, but from Christ from whom comes both the will and the deed [n]. Secondly, that the good that is in us is not according to the measure of that depth of obedience which we owe unto God; but comes farre short of what we ought to pay, and performe unto the Lord: and therefore we should not be proud of any thing we doe, but rather confesse, that wee are but unprofitable servants [o]. Thirdly, we must remember that all our honey is mingled with gall, our wine with water, our silver with drosse, our good with evill, our obedience mixed with many infirmities, because in many things (as S. Iames saith) we all sin: And therefore our blacke feete should more humble us, then our faire plumes pride us: the conscience of our sins should trouble us and deject us, not so much for feare of the anger of God, as through griefe of the offence committed against him.

n Phil. 2. 13.
o Luke 17. 10.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, we are Christians, and therefore our duty is to esteeme all as brethren in Christ, and in that regard equall as sonnes of one Father; and not to exalt our selves above any.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, because pride is from the Divell, this being his sinne which threw him from heaven into hell; and therefore when men strive for priority, precedency, and the like, they do imitate the Divell, not Christ.

Quest. 2. It may yet again be demanded, Is all humility good or acceptable, and approved by Christ?

Answ. I answer there is a two fold humility, first, Civill, secondly, Spirituall. First there is a Civil humility, and this is threefold, First, Vulpina a Fox-like humility, when men seeme humble that they may the better draw others into their net: this was in Absolon towards the people, that so he might steale away their hearts: this was likewise in Ioab towards Amasa; but is odious unto God in whom-soever it is. Secondly, Asinina, there is an Asse-like humilitie, arising from stoliditie, pusillanimitie, or cowardlinesse; because a man is faint-hearted, therefore he cannot raise up himselfe as others doe: for the most part, we see, that {He that wants a heart, is dejected / He that abounds in heart, is proud.

Now this humilitie is not praise-worthy neither, nor pleasing unto God, that arises onely from the faintnesse of the heart, the want, or defect of the spirits, or the cowardlinesse of the disposition.

Thirdly, Columbina, there is a Dove-like humilitie, which is in him, who neither is ignorant of himselfe, nor of his place, nor of his parts, nor of his right: neither seekes them; that is, although hee bee endued with many rare parts farre above many others, and in eminent place, yet vaunteth not himselfe, is not puffed up, doth not behave himselfe unseemly, seeketh not his owne, is not easily provoked [p], This humilitie is pleasing unto God, when found in the way of religion; but (although a rare morall vertue, yet) not acceptable, if not accompanied with saving grace.

p 1 Cor. 13. 4. 5.

Secondly, there is a Spirituall humilitie, and this is best of all, viz. when a man comparing himselfe with God, or with Christ, doth abhorre himselfe, as vile, considering that hee is but earth, as Iob layes his finger upon his mouth, and dares not speake unto the Lord, because hee is but dust and ashes [q]. But here observe two things, First, men doe easily confesse, that they are inferiour to God and Christ in generall: but yet in the meane time, cease not to rejoyce in themselues: as the proud Pharisee, that justified himselfe unto God [r]. Secondly, observe, that true spirituall humilitie consists in this, in ascribing all good things wholly unto God [s], that although formerly wee have thought our selves more worthy than others, more holy than others, much better than others, yet now wee see the hollownesse, vacuitie, and vanitie of our owne hearts, how that in us, that is, in our flesh, dwells no manner of thing that is good [b], wee not being able of our selves, to thinke a good thought [c], yea, whatsoever grace is bestowed upon us, comes from the meere favour and good will of God, according to that of the Apostle Christ is made unto us, Wisedome, Righteousnesse, Sanctification, and Redemption, that he which glorieth, might glorie in the Lord [d].

§. 3. He shall baptize you with the holy Ghost, and with fire.] That which Saint Iohn meanes figuratively, the Abyssini take literally; when they baptize their children, they power water upon them, and marke them with an hot Iron, as we doe our lambes. Sect. 3.

Obiect. The Papists object this verse for the proofe of Purgatorie, because this baptisme of fire, whereof mention is made in this verse, is Purgatorie fire.

Answ. 1. I answer first, the consequence is false, viz. mention is made of the Baptisme of fire, therefore fore there is a purgatorie fire: for this is a ridiculous conclusion.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Saint Matthew hath nothing at all which can be justly applyed unto Purgatorie fire.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we retort upon the Monkes the Argument thus; If the Baptisme of Fire, be Purgatorie fire (as the Monkes say) and Christ onely baptized with the baptisme of fire (as the Scripture here sayth) then it will follow, that we are purged onely by Christ, and that Christ onely is our Purgatorie: yea, Christ (I say) who hath vouchsafed in these last dayes to take the Fan of his Word in his hand, that he might purge the floore of his church, will divide the pure doctrine of his truth from the corrupt errours of men, and will burne the chaffe of Purgatory, Pardons, and the like corruptions of the church of Rome, with unquenchable fire[h].

[h] Sadeel. f. 262.

Vers. 12. VERS. 12. Which hath his Fan in his hand, and will make cleane his floore, and gather his Wheat into his garner, but will burne up the chaffe with unquenchable fire.

Sect. 1. §. 1. This verse is like unto a Cornu copia unto the Papists, serving them at many assayes, as we may perceive by the many severall erroneous tenents which they build upon it.

Obiect. 1 First, they object this place for the proofe of Purgatorie thus, by the Floore is meant Purgatorie; and by the Garner, Paradise: therefore it is plaine, that there is a Purgatorie.

Answ. I answer, Saint Iohn preacheth of repentance, and the purging away of sinne in this life; as the Ancients doe interpret the Floore of the church in this life, wherein there is both chaffe and wheate[i]: but of the true signification and exposition of this verse by and by.

Obiect. 2 Secondly, the Papists object this place to prove, that wicked men are true members of the church of Christ: the church here is compared to a Barne Floore, where there is both chaffe and corne: therefore wicked men are members of Christs church: Wee answere here first to the thing, then to the place objected.

Answ. 1. First, we answer to the matter, or substance of the objection (whether, and how wicked men are members of the church) by this distinction: wee distinguish betweene the true church of Christ but internall and invisible, which consists onely of the elect, and true believers: and the true church of Christ but externall, and visible, which hath many reprobates admixed with it. Now the internall and invisible church, is the church of Christ, in regard of the true faith, which the citizens are endued withall: and the externall and visible church, is the true church of Christ in regard of the profession of true religion maintained therein.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee answer to the place objected thus, By the church which is here compared to a Barne Floore, is understood the visible church, which is knowne by the publicke preaching of the word, & right administration of the Sacraments: and we deny not, but wicked men may bee in the church, but not of it: yea, they may be members of the visible church for a time, but cannot bee truely ingrafted into the body of Christ[a].

Obiect. 3 From this verse the Papists object againe, that true faith may bee separated from good workes, or the fruits of sanctification: Bellarmine frames his argument thus, In the church there is chaffe and wheat, that is, good and bad: and therefore there may bee faith without obedience: he proves the consequence thus, Those that are in the church are faithfull: now, if these become evill, or disobedient, then it followes necessarily, that faith (from whence they are called faithfull) with sin (from whence they are called wicked) may bee conjoyned and stand together.

Answ. 1. Wee answer hereunto first, the Argument is ἀπεσδόκητον, not concluding the thing denied: for the Cardinals consequence is onely, that faith may be conjoyned with sinne, that is, one and the same man may both bee a sinner, and a true believer; which wee deny not, but willingly grant, that the most faithfull are guilty of many sinnes: so that our assertion is this; As there is none so faithful, but that they have some sinne in them, so there is none that have true justifying faith in them, but they have also some good workes, and shew forth some fruits of sanctification in their lives and conversation; and this assertion the Jesuite doth not at all refute by this his argument.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the consequence is faultie, There are in the Church many wicked ones, altogether destitute of good workes: therefore true faith may be without any good workes: this is a grosse non sequitur, as will appeare first by the like argument, which I will frame thus. In the Barne floore is chaffe, altogether destitute and voyd of any good substance, or sustenance: therefore there is neitherany good substance, or sustenance in the wheat which is in the Barne floore. This argument Bellarmine himselfe will say, is an absurd one; and therefore he must give me leave to say as much of his, they being both cast in one mould. Secondly, the ill consequence of the argument appeares by this reason, because all those who are in the Church, have not that true & justifying faith (which is in controversie betwixt us and them) but onely a false faith, which consists either in an historicall assent, or an externall confession onely, which in no respect can be called justifying faith.

Sect. 2. Quest. § 2. He will purge his floore: What is understood by floore?

Answ. 1. First, some say, that by the floore is meant the hearts of men: but this is false.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say the Church of the Jewes, and the purging is referred to the reliques that are left therein, mentioned both by the Prophet and Apostle[a]; and of this opinion is both Musculus and Gualter upon these words.

[a] Esa. 10. 22. Rom. 9. 27

Answ. 3 Thirdly, some understand it of the whole Church, and so certainely it is to be understood, not not excluding the former exposition of the Judaicall Church.

Sect. 3. §. 3. whose Fan is in his hand.] What is understood by this Fan?

Quest.

Answ. 1. First, some understand it of the Gospel preached, which separates the rebellious from the righteous.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand it of affliction which tries hypocrites, as the fire doth mettall.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some understand it of the Spirit of Gods mouth. 2 Thes. 2. that is, his word: I thinke it is to bee understood of all, because both the word of God, and the rods of God (afflictions) do try what we are.

Sect. 4. §. 4. He will purge his floore.] What is meant Quest. 1. by this purging?

Answ. 1. First, some understand the hearts, because they are fanned by the word of God; first from all false and hereticall opinions. Secondly, from all wicked workes. Thirdly, from all foolish obedience and will worship.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand men, who are to be separated, either first in this life by the Gospel[b]: or secondly, in the life to come by vengeance and the eternall wrath of God. Certainely none of these are to bee excluded, because the words are indefinitely to be expounded. [b] Ioh. 8. 47. and 10. 26.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, for the full understanding of these words, he will purge his floore, wee must observe that the Phrase is figurative, or a similitude taken from the practise of husbandmen: As husbandmen fan the chaffe from the corne, gathering the corne into their garner, and burning up the chaffe: so God by his word and afflictions will purge his Church, separating the gold from the drosse, and the wheat from the chaffe, receiving the one (who approve themselves as gold tryed in the fornace) into everlasting mercies: and plunging the other, who had nothing but a meere outside of religion in them, into everburning Tophet. And thus by this Metaphore Saint Iohn shewes us, that the Church of God is like a fielde of wheat. Observ.

Quest. 2. Corne cannot grow without earth, and therefore it may bee here asked how many sorts of grounds there are in the world?

Answ. In the world there are 2 sorts of grounds, to wit either
- Wild, or unhusbanded, & that either
  - Barren, as the sand, that beares no fruit: these are Atheists.
  - Fruitfull & that
    - In evill fruits; these are first wicked: Secondly Idolaters.
    - In foolish workes, as idle flowers neither sweet not profitable; these are naturall Philosophers, & worldly wisemen.
- Enclosures or manured which is the Church whetin are
  - Tares, that is, wicked men in the Church.
  - Wheate wherein is
    - The stalke: these are proud men, or great ones in the Church.
    - The chaffe; these are Hypocrites, and formall professors.
    - The graine of wheat: and these onely are true members of the Church.

Quest. 3. It may here further bee demanded, wherein doth the Church of Christ resemble a field of wheat, or a corne field?

Answ. I answer in many things, to wit first, the husbandman only tills the field, it cannot till it selfe: so it is the Lord onely that rules the Church, and makes it by his tillage and manuring to bring forth fruit.

Secondly, the husbandman takes all the paines with his ground for the cornes sake, that hee may have bread: so the Lord hedgeth and husbandeth us, that we might be a new lumpe of unleavened bread unto himselfe. 1 Cor. 5. 7. 8.

Thirdly, the chaffe and the wheat spring both from one and the same seede: so 1. the same word of God begets both the righteous and hypocrites: and 2. both the true professors and orthodoxe, and heretikes and schismatikes, ground their opinions upon the word.

Fourthly, the chaffe though springing from the seede, shewes not the nature of the seede; but the graine of corne beares his forme, and shewes his nature: so hypocrites and heretikes, shew not the true, solide, and sincere fruit of the word, but like the Jewes, who were of the seede of Abraham: but did not the works of Abraham: So onely the true seede of Abraham shew forth the fruits of Abrahams faith.

Fiftly, the chaffe and the wheat are both nourished by one and the same juice, and humour, watered also with the same raine, and warmed with the same sunne: so hypocrites and the children of God, are made partakers of the same spirituall meat, and drinke[d], that is, they have both of them first the word of God, whereby they are informed in their judgement. Secondly, the motions of the Spirit of God, whereby their understandings are more enlightned: and thirdly, the holy Sacrament. [d] 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2, 3.

Sixtly, the wheat and chaffe doe both increase alike in the beginning, when they are but grasse, but by and by may easily bee distinguished: so beleevers and hypocrites for a time can hardly be distinguished, but after a time the true practitioner may be discerned from the formalist; if not here, yet certainely at the last day.

Seventhly, the eare, and stalke, and chaffe are profitable unto the corne, while it is growing: so hypocrites and wicked men, sometimes support, and sometimes comfort the children of God for a time.

Eightly, the greatest part of the corne which springs up in the field is straw and chaffe, and in regard of that there is but a little wheat: that is, the straw beares a greater stalke by much, then the wheat: so in the Church of Christ there are but a few good in comparison of the bad[a].

Ninthly, the chaffe and wheat are not separated untill they bee threshed: so hypocrites are discerned from true professors, when affliction or the fiery trial of persecution comes, which is here intimated by purging.

a Matth. 7. 13. 14. & 20. 16.

Quest. 4. How will God purge his floore?

Answ. I answer by fire: thus saith the Prophet, who shall abide his comming, for he is like a refiners fire[b]. And Saint Peter saith, God will try our faith with fire[c].

b Malach. 3. 2.

c 1 Pet. 1. 7.

Quest. 5. By what fire will the Lord purge his Church?

Answ. I answer, by a threefold fire, viz.

First by the fire of his word, I will make my word fire, and this people wood (saith the Lord) and it shall devoure them[d]: and againe, Is not my word as a fire saith the Lord? Ier. 23. 29.

d Ier. 5. 14.

Secondly, by the fire of affliction: thus the Apostle saith, the fire shall trie every mans worke of what sort it is[e]; that is, the fire of affliction, called by Saint Peter, the fiery triall[f].

e 1 Cor. 3. 13.

f 1 Pet. 4. 12.

Thirdly, by the fire of the last judgement; according unto that of the Prophet, Tophet is ordained of old, the pile thereof is fire and much wood[g], and thus our Saviour in his description of the last day, the wicked shall be cast into everlasting fire[h].

g Isa. 30. 33.

h Matth. 25.

Why doth Christ purge his Church by the fire of affliction?

Quest. 6.

I answer first, because he desires to have a pure Church, without spot or wrinkle. Eph. 5 25.

Answ. 1.

Secondly, because his Church doth continually gather soile: the body ever and anon stands in neede of purging: the orchard of pruning, the garden of weeding the field of cleansing: the materiall Temples of repairing; and the Church of purifying from her pollutions daily contracted.

Answ. 2.

How may wee know, whether wee bee wheat or chaffe, and consequently, whether wee shall be gathered into Gods garner, or burnt with unquenchable fire?

Quest. 7.

I answer by these markes. First, the wheat is not perceived when it is in the eare, it lurkes within, it boasteth not it selfe: and therefore we must labour to bee free of boasting, pride, vaine and Pharisaicall ostentation; for the wheat doth not so.

Answ.

Secondly, although outwardly it shewes not it selfe, yet within it is full of fine meale and flower; that is, faith and sanctification: so we must labour to bee full of good workes, and to grow and increase therein day by day[i].

i 1 Cor. 15. 58. and Col. 1. 10. and Iam. 3. 17.

Thirdly, the wheat is stable and solid, and being shaken goes to the bottome & abides there, and is not like chaffe blowne away: thus wee must bee rooted, grounded, and established, in the faith of Jesus Christ[k].

k Col. 1. 26. and 2. 7.

VERS. 13. In those dayes came Iesus from Galilee to Iordan, unto Iohn to bee baptized of him.

Vers. 13.

§. 1. In those dayes.] In what dayes or times was this comming of Christ?

Sect. 1.

Quest. 8. I answer, when Iohn was baptizing in Jordan, Mat. 1. 9. when the people were baptized, Luk. 3. 21. hee did not come before the Baptist, least he should have come in darkenesse and obscurity: neither long after him; but as the Sunne who rises when the day starre ascends, so when there were many gathered unto Johns preaching, and were baptized by him, then comes Christ.

Answ.

Why did Christ come at this time expressed in the former question, that is not, untill many were baptized by Iohn, and taught by his preaching.

Quest. 2.

I answer, for two causes, the first Allegoricall. The second Historicall.

Answ.

The fist cause hereof was Allegoricall, to teach us that Christ will not come unto us, untill a way bee made for his receiving by preaching and repentance: for first there is great neede of preparation, because if we be careleſſe to prepare the way for him, he will not come unto us. Secondly, this preparation is to bee made by repentance, that so our sinnes may bee blotted out; because hee will not come into a polluted soule[l]. Thirdly, the ordinary meanes of working repentance in the heart is the preaching of the word: as the Lord saith unto Ieremie, goe and preach these words unto the North, and say repent, &c.[m].

Observe.

l Acts 2. 38. and 3. 19.

m Ier. 3. 12. 13.

The second cause is Historicall, that Christ might bee made knowne and manifested to the whole people: that is, first, that all might see him. Secondly, that all might here the testimonies concerning him, viz. 1. the testimony of Iohn (I have neede to be baptized of thee.) 2. of the opening of the heavens: 3. of the Dove lighting upon him: 4. and of the voyce of God from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleased.

Thirdly, that all those who were not as yet baptized might the more readily embrace and receive it, seeing hee was baptized that had no evill in him at all.

§. 2. Came Iesus from Galilee.] Why was Christ and Iohn Baptist in two severall places?

Sect. 2. Quest. 1.

Answ. 1. I answer first, least they should seeme to have compacted together in what they did.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because Jordan was a type of Baptisme, as also the red sea was, 1 Cor. 10. 4.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the Prophets had thus foretold it, that Christ should be a Nazarite and a Galilean, but the Baptist should be brought up in Iudea.

Quest. 2. Why doth the Master come unto the servant? it had beene more fit that Iohn should have come unto Christ, than the Messias unto the Messenger.

Answ. 1. I answer first, Christ doth this that he might teach us humility: as hee washed his Apostles feet afterwards for that end. Iohn 13. 14.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that hee might teach us, that the meanes of salvation are not to bee neglected by any, but sought for by the best.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this Christ did for the greater dignitie of the Sacrament, that therein we may not respect man but God.

Sect. 3. §. 3. To bee Baptized of him.] Why was Christ

Christ Baptized, seeing he was that Lambe unspotted?

Answ. 1. I answer first, that he might fulfill all righteousnesse, (as in the next verse) that as hee was borne for us, so he would also be baptized for us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to seale up his fellowship with us, that in nothing he might be unlike unto his brethren, but onely in sinne.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ was baptized that hee might be fitted for that worke and function, which hee was now shortly to undertake, to wit, the Observ. preaching of his Gospel: teaching us, that none must intrude themselves into the worke of the Ministrie, untill they bee prepared by the Spirit, and called as Aaron was: for all things should be done according to our callings, which are termed vocations, quia vocamur non quia intrudimus, because we are called thereunto, and not because we intrude our selves thereinto.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, that he might confirme the Sacrament of Baptisme (by receiving it himselfe) and that two manner of waies. First, externally, by approving of that of Iohns; and therefore although the Papists doe extenuate it, yet wee [a] Joh. 4. 2. date affirme that either Christ and his Apostles were baptized by John or by none[a]; And Secondly, Internally, by his flesh sanctifying of Jordan, and all other waters for this purpose appointed; confirming also the efficacy of the Sacrament by the presence of the blessed Spirit. Christ was baptized, ut nobis secundæ nativitatis [b] Bedas. consecraret lavacrum[b]: that he might sanctifie for us the laver of regeneration or of the new birth. Lavatus est Christus flumine Iordani non [c] Ambros. in Luk. 3. mundari volens sed mundare[c], Christ was baptized in Jordan, not that therewith he might bee cleansed, but that he might consecrate it for us, [d] 1 Cor. 12. 13. as an effectuall signe of admission into the Church: for wee are baptized into one body[d], [e] Gal. 3. 27. yea by baptisme we put on Christ[e].

Quest. 2. It may hence bee demanded, What benefits have the members of Christ by baptisme?

Answ. 1. I answer first, thereby they receive remission and pardon of their sinnes, Acts 2. 38. and hence it is called the seale of the righteousnesse of faith, Rom. 4. 11.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they gaine hereby regeneration. John 3. 5. whence it is called the laver of regeneration. Tit. 3. 5. In the new birth there are two things, both which are attributed unto Baptisme; First mortification and a dying to sinne: according to the Apostle Saint Paul, as many as were baptized [f] Rom. 6. 3. 4. into Christ, were baptized into his death[f], and [g] Colos. 2. 12. therefore wee are buried with him by Baptisme into death[g].

Secondly, vivification or a living unto God: Be baptized (saith Saint Peter) and ye shall receive [h] Acts 2. 38. the gift of the holy Ghost[h], and else where it is said, that by the washing of water he hath sanctified and cleansed his Church.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, they gaine hereby eternall salvation: [i] Mark. 16. 16. for he that beleeves and is baptized, shall be saved[i], Baptisme being typified by Noahs Arke, wherein he and his were saved. 1 Pet. 3. 20. 21.

VERS. 14. But Iohn forbad him, saying, I have needs to bee baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? Vers. 14.

§. 1. Whether did John well in forbidding Christ to come unto his baptisme or no? Sect. 1. Quest. 1.

Answ. I answer, No; it was necessary that Christ should be baptised, as it is shewed in the former question; and therefore John erred in thus prohibiting of him.

Obiect. But it may be objected, Johns intent was good in his forbidding of Christ, and therefore it is too rash a censure to say that hee erred herein.

Answ. I answer, there may be a good intention in an evill action: and that first because oftentimes our intentions proceede from our affections, not from our judgements: and secondly, because our judgements are frequently corrupted, when they are not regulated and informed by the word of God.

Quest. 2. It may here further be doubted, if John erred in forbidding of Christ, why was Christ then (who neither could erre in himselfe, nor can love error in another) baptized by him?

Answ. I answer, to teach us that the Sacrament is lawfull, although celebrated by a weake and infirme Minister: John here confesseth that hee had neede to be baptized of Christ, and erreth in denying Baptisme unto him, and yet he baptizeth Christ with a true and lawfull Baptisme: the reason hereof is because the Sacraments are not to bee esteemed according to the dignitie of man, but according to the promise of God: for the better understanding whereof observe, that in the Minister administring the Sacrament there are two things to be considered, viz. First, his calling unto the Ministry: this is diligently to be marked, because otherwise his preaching is not Gods message, nor his administration of the Sacrament lawfull: but unto such it may be said as the evill spirit said to the sonnes of Sceva, Iesus I know, and Paul I know, but what are yee[a]? [a] Acts 19. 15. Secondly, his personall dignity, this is not to be regarded: as appeares I. by our Saviour, who denounceth many woes against the Scribes and Pharisees, and yet in that same Chapter admonisheth his owne Apostles, to observe and doe whatsoever they bid them, because they sit in Moses chaire[b]. II. Against the Papists our Church af- [b] Matth. 23. 2. 3. firmes, that the efficacy of the Sacrament doth neither depend upon the intention of the Minister, nor upon the sanctity and purity of his person: and therefore they are to bee reproved, that refuse to communicate with a weake and infirme Minister: Paul knowes that some preach Christ of envie, and yet he doth not forbid them[c]. But here observe a distinction neces- [c] Phil. 1. sary to be knowne.

Some refuse a { Prophane and wicked Minister / Simple and unlearned Minister } either as { Unlawfull, these erre as appeares by that which hath beene already said. / Inconvenient: and this is not condemned, if choise may be had: that is, although the Minister bee neither endued with piety nor such parts and abilities as some are, yet this doth not prove his Ministerie unlawfull: but if it be in a mans choyce to dwell and settle himselfe where he pleaseth, then it is commendable for him to seate himselfe under a pious, painefull, and prudent Pastour.

Sect. 2. §. 2. I have neede to be Baptized of thee.] We may observe hence, that Iohn doth acknowledge Christ to bee not onely a Prophet, but also the Messias, because to him hee attributes the baptisme of the Spirit.

Quest. 1. How did Iohn know this?

Answ. I answer he did not know it of himselfe, but the Spirit of God taught it unto him.

Quest. 2. Why doth Iohn confesse this his unworthinesse, seeing that amongst the sonnes of men there were none greater then himselfe [d]?

[d] Matth. 11. 11.

Answ. I answer, this he did that he might give the greater honour unto Christ: Teaching us that it is the part of good and godly Ministers, not to seeke their owne vaine praise, but the honour and glory of Christ: thus did Paul when he said unto the Corinthians, was Paul crucified for you[e]? and againe, let the Lord be true, but all men lyers[f]; yea to doe otherwise, viz. to preach a mans selfe, and to labour to draw Disciples after him, is a brand or marke of a false Apostle. And therefore the Papists shew what they are, that so insolently derogate from Christ. First, in the merit of workes. Secondly, in preferring the Popes pardons before the blood of Christ. Thirdly, in preferring their owne lawes and ordinances before the lawes and institutions of Christ: as I. uncleane single life before holy marriage, although Christs owne Apostle have said, It is better to marry then to burne.

Observ.

II. In denying the Cup in the Sacrament to the laicks, although Christ commanded both bread and wine to be used.

III. In worshipping of Images against the second commandement; and the like.

Vers. 15. VERSE 15. And Iesus answering, said unto him, suffer it to bee so now: for thus it becommeth us to fulfill all righteousnesse: then hee suffered him.

Sect. 1. §. 1. It becommeth us to fulfill all righteousnesse.

Quest. 1. What is meant here by righteousnesse?

Answ. I answer, our Saviour understands hereby the obedience of the law of God: because that is true righteousnesse, to fulfill the commandement of the Lord.

Quest. 2. What doth our Saviour meane in saying, it becommeth, or it is necessary: was the Sacrament of Baptisme necessary for Christ?

Answ. 1. I answer First, it was necessary in regard of the originall of it, the commandement of God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it was necessary in regard of one end of Baptisme, to wit, the admission into the Church; because Christ came that he might be made the head of his Church.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it was necessary in regard of another end of Baptisme, that is, the remission of sinnes: for although it was not necessary that Christ should be Baptized in regard of himselfe, seeing hee had no sinne in himselfe to bee forgiven or pardoned; yet it was necessary in regard of us, because hee carried our sinnes: and therefore he was Baptized, to seale unto his children the remission and forgivenesse of them.

Quest. 3. What doth Christ meane by all righteousnesse?

Answ. I answer, he meanes, that religion is to be observed as well in small as in great: or that all the commandements of God are to be observed, whether great or small: because in the law of God, first there is nothing false or untrue: or secondly, frivolous and neede-lesse: or thirdly, commanded onely pro forma, for fashion sake: but all the precepts of the word are infallibly true in themselves: necessary and of importance unto us: and commanded by God to bee observed, and that seriously, as appeares by the promises and threatnings annexed thereunto.

Quest. 4. But it may here be demanded; Are not those who are so strict and precise, and curious to fulfill all righteousnesse, to bee blamed and condemned as Puritanes?

Answ. 1. I answer first, certainely they that are curious, precise and strict in externis in outward rites and ceremonies stumble in plaine way, and see but a very little at high noone.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those that separate themselves by an opinion of puritie in themselves, are plaine Novatians, and no better then proud Pharisees.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but those that desire to bee strict in the obedience of God, and endeavour thereunto, because they never can serve him too much, or obey him enough: these are to be commended, encouraged, and imitated, because they imitate Christ herein who was carefull to fulfill all righteousnesse.

Sect. 2. Argum. §. 2. And he suffered him.] We produce this place to prove, that Johns Baptisme differed not from the Baptisme of Christ, arguing thus: If the Baptisme instituted by Christ were another Baptisme, then Johns was, and yet he himselfe was Baptized of Iohn: then it would follow that wee are Baptized now with another Baptisme, then Christ himselfe was, for he received Iohns Baptisme: but this were very absurd to say, that there is not the same Baptisme of the head and members of Christ and his Church: therefore Iohns Baptisme is all one with Christs.

Object. Bellarmine answereth hereunto, that it was more convenient for Christ to receive Iohns Baptisme then his owne, least he should have beene thought himselfe to stand in neede of regeneration.

Answ. 1 To this wee answer First, Iohn also Baptized for the remission of sinnes: therefore if there had beene any such danger, Christ might have beene thought to neede remission of sinnes, by receiving Iohns Baptisme.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ was not Baptized for any cause simply in himselfe, but to give an example unto us: for so it became him to fulfill all righteousnesse:

consusse: not to prescribe lawes to others, whereof hee had not beene the first practiser himselfe.

Vers. 16. VERS. 16. And Iesus when he was Baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and loe, the Heavens were opened unto him, and hee saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him.

Sect. 1. §. 1. And loe, the heavens were opened unto him:] How were the heavens opened?

Quest. 1.

b Hier. f. Answ. 1. First, some say, non reseratione sed oculis fidei[b], that they were opened to the eyes of faith, that hee might see thereby into heaven, as Stephen did Acts 7. but not truely and really opened.

Answ. 2. c Gualt. f. Secondly, others say the contraty[c], that they were truely opened; first, because John, and (as is probable) those that were with him saw them opened: secondly, because this was done for their sakes that beleeved not, that they might beleeve; and therefore it was seene with the eyes of the body, not of the mind.

Answ. 3. d Calvin. Thirdly, others[d] to whom I rather subscribe and assent; answer, wee heare that the heavens were opened, and therefore wee beleeve it; but we heare not how they were opened, and therefore we leave to inquire after it, as not much tending unto edification.

Quest. 2. Why were the heavens opened?

Answ. 1. First, some say this was an Allegory unto us, and they Allegorize it thus: Heaven is taken for the Scriptures, which were now more plaine and perspicuous then before Christ came[e]. Againe, as many see heaven which see not God, so many carnall eyes see the Scriptures, which see not Christ[f].

e Oper. imperf. sup.

f Gualt. f. Answ. 2. Secondly, the heavens were opened Tropologicè, to shew 1. that heaven is opened unto us by the Baptisme of the Spirit: or 2. that heaven is opened unto all those that are spirituall: for, for this cause are all graces given unto us, that wee may be made partakers of the kingdome of heaven.

Quest. 3. What graces are given unto us by the Spirit for the obtaining of heaven?

Answ. 1. I answer First, the grace of light, knowledge and illumination, by which we are enabled to understand those things that concerne the glory of God and our owne salvation[g].

g 1 Cor. 2. 14. 15.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the grace of faith, whereby we confidently beleeve, heaven to bee our lot and inheritance.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the grace of piety and holinesse, whereby we are reclaimed from sinne, called unto heaven, and commanded no longer to have commerce or fellowship with the world: and therefore let us labour that we may be made spirituall, and that wee may bee Baptized with the Holy Ghost; that so wee may partake of this light of understanding, this hope of heaven, and this purity of life.

Sect. 2. Obiect. §. 2. And the Spirit of God descended like a Dove.] The Rhemists[h] and Bellarmine produce this place to prove that it is lawfull to paint the Blessed Trinity, viz. God the Father, like an old man with the world in his hand; Christ as hee walked upon the earth; the Holy Ghost in likenesse of a Dove: Arguing thus, To paint the Trinity, or any one of them, as they appeared visibly, is no more inconvenient, then it was undecent for them so to appeare.

h Cl. Act. 17. Sect. 5.

Answ. 1. Wee answer First, this doth flatly controle and contradict the word of God, which simply forbiddeth any similitude to bee made of things in heaven or in earth to worship God by, in the second commandement.

Answ. 2. Secondly, God expressly declareth, that hee would not appeare in any visible shape when he gave the law, least the people should abuse that shape to make an Jmage of God after it[a].

a Deut. 4. 15.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the argument followeth not: for God saw it was convenient sometimes by visible signes to appeare unto men, and yet seeth it to be inconvenient for pictures to bee made to resemble him by: for else hee would never have forbidden it.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, though the argument be admitted, yet seeing now that all such visible apparitions of the Trinitie are ceased, all such visible pictures likewise should be out of use.

Answ. 5. b Willet. Synops. f. 457. Fiftly, if when such apparitions were seene, yet no such images were tolerated, how much lesse are they lawfull now, all such visions being long agoe determined[b].

Quest. 1. Why did the Holy Ghost descend?

Answ. 1. I answer First, for the dignitie of the person baptized: Christ was God, and therefore God the Holy Ghost comes to witnesse his baptisme.

Answ. 2. Secondly to shew the nature of Christs Kingdome, that it was not earthly, and therefore hee was not annointed with oile but heavenly and spirituall, therefore he was annointed by the Holy Ghost.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, to shew the nature of Christs office: or that ἐνεργεία, and powerfull operation and working of Christ in the hearts of men.

Observ. Teaching us, that whosoever are Christs are made partakers of the Spirit of God[c]. Hence the Spirit is called 1 Arrha, an earnest[d]. 2 a seale. Ephes. 1. 13. and 4. 30. 3 an holy action, 1 Iohn 2. 20. 27. And therefore whatsoever wee be in other things, if we be Christs, we are happie and blessed: if we be poore, yet God will love us, if we be simple God will teach us: if we be infants God will increase us unto maturity and ripenes: and in the meane time ordaine praise unto himselfe out of the mouthes of babes and sucklings: if we have beene sinners, he will passe by our former sinnes[e], and give his Spirit unto us, if wee belong unto Christ.

e Act. 17. 30.

Quest. 2. Whether did the Holy Ghost here make use of a naturall Dove, or onely (as the Angels were wont to appeare) did shew himselfe in the shape of a Dove.

Answ. 1. I answer First, the phrase seemes to imply the latter ὡσεὶ περιστερὰν like a Dove, and so also Mar. 1. 10. and σωματικῷ εἴδει ἐπ' αὐτὸν, in a bodily shape like a Dove upon him, saith Saint Luke[f].

f Luk. 3. 22.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Calvin warily and wisely dares conclude nothing: and doth advise us not to sift it 82 too narrowly, and therefore I leave it.

Queſt. 3. Why doth the Holy Ghoſt deſcend in the ſhape of a Dove?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer, for three cauſes, Firſt for the fulfilling of the Type: Secondly, for the expreſſing of the nature of Chriſt. Thirdly, for our imitation.

Firſt, the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon Chriſt in the ſhape of a Dove, for the fulfilling of the type; becauſe the Dove was the meſſenger of peace in times paſt unto Noah[g]: and Plutarch and Coelius Rhod. affirmes that it was alſo to Deucalion: the Holy Ghoſt hereby teaching us, that Chriſt came, that he might reconcile us unto God, according to the teſtimony of the Apoſtle, wee have peace towards God through Ieſus Chriſt our Lord[h]; and againe, when we were enemies, we were reconciled unto God, by the death of his Sonne[i].

[g] Gen 8. 11.

[h] Rom. 5. 1.

[i] Rom. 5. 10. and 2 Cor. 5. 19. 20.

What neceſſity was there of this Doves comming?

Queſt. 4. I anſwer, the neceſſity appeares thus.

Anſw. Firſt, the world was now overwhelmed with ſinne, as formerly with a deluge of water.

Secondly, Chriſt comes to cure this deluge, to dry up this water, and to take away our ſins; whence he is called the Lambe of God which taketh away the ſinnes of the world[k].

[k] Iohn 1.

Thirdly, and therefore moſt fitly comes this dove at this time: that as Noahs Dove came with an olive branch[l], as a token of peace: ſo the holy Spirit in the likeneſſe of a Dove, is a ſigne of that peace and reconciliation which is wrought by Chriſt betweene our God and us.

Queſt. 5. All are not reconciled unto God by Chriſt, and therefore what muſt we doe to be aſſured of our Particular peace and atonement with our Father whom we have offended?

Anſw. I anſwer, meditate ſeriouſly, and frequently upon theſe things: firſt, remember that we are all ſinners, loſt in Adam[m], and that in many things we all ſin daily: and he is a lyer who ſaith otherwiſe[n].

[m] Rom. 5. 12.

[n] 1 Ioh. 1. 8.

Secondly, remember that by ſinne wee are guilty of death, death having paſſed upon all for ſinne[o]

[o] Rom. 5. 12.

Thirdly, meditate what death wee are liable unto? it is not the effuſion of our blood; not a depriving of us of ſenſe: not ſuch a ſorrow as wee can underſtand or conceive of: not ſuch a torment of the mind, as we know or have felt: not a torture which ſhall have an end: but torments which are perpetuall, from which we ſhal never have eaſe; torments wch are eternall, from which we ſhall neve have end. Tormentsthat are intollerable which ſhall never be endured with any patience, and yet muſt be endured with exceſſive paine: torments that are ſo unſpeakeable, that the heart is not able to conceive, nor the tongue to expreſſe them.

Fourthly, remember there is no way, meanes, or remedy to avoide this death, but onely by Chriſt: he being our onely Mediator, and our alone Saviour, Act 4. 12.

Fiftly, remember this Mediator and Bleſſed Peace-maker hath beene long offerd unto us, long deſpiſed by us: call to minde how often our eares have heard, what it is that God requires of us, if we deſire to be made partakers of Chriſt, & how we have altogether neglected to obey it.

Sixtly, remember it may bee for any thing thou knoweſt to the contrary, that thy glaſſe is runne, thy thread drawne out, thy life at his period, and therefore vel nunc aut nunquam, thou muſt either lay hold upon Chriſt now or never.

Sevently, remember that although the date of thy life be longer, yet thou knoweſt not whether ever the Lord will call upon thee, or offer Chriſt unto thee any more: it may bee his next meſſage will be, to ſend ſouldiers to kill thee for thy contempt[a]. Conſider thou haſt ſinned, and God hath admoniſhed thee: thou haſt heard his admonitions, and yet not taken warning by them: hee doth ſtill hold forth his white flag offering peace unto thee in & by Chriſt, & thou yet neglects it: And therefore doe no longer preſume but feare, laying hold upon Chriſt, and accepting the conditions of peace, leaſt that the day of ſalvation become unto thee the day of vengeance. Thus much for the firſt generall cauſe, why the Holy Ghoſt deſcended in the likneſſe of a Dove.

[a] Matth. 22. 7.

Secondly, the Holy Ghoſt deſcended in the ſhape of a Dove, for the expreſſing of the nature of Chriſt, and the meekeneſſe of our Mediator: who although unto his enemies he be a Lyon[b], ruling them with an iron ſcepter[c]; yet to his children he is mild and meeke, not calling them ſervants, but friends: but of this copiouſly afterwards. Matth. 11. 29.

Anſw. 2.

[b] Apoc. 5. 5.

[c] Pſal. 2. 9.

Thirdly, this the Holy Spirit did for our imitation: teaching us, that our lives ſhould bee Dove-like. The nature of Doves and wherein they are to be imitated, followes Matth. 10. 16, I will here therefore briefely reſolve two ſhort queſtions.

Obſerv. 3

Why muſt we be like Doves?

Queſt. 6. I anſwer Firſt, becauſe humilitie and godly ſimplicity are moſt pleaſing and acceptable ſacrifices unto God: as we may ſee typified in the Dove, and in the manifold uſe of it in the old law: Abraham muſt offer a Dove, Gen. 15. 9. and the people of Iſrael muſt offer Doves for a burnt offering, Levit. 1. 14. and for a treſpaſſe offering, Leviticus 5. 7. and 12. 8. and for purging from leproſie, Levit. 14. 22. a menſtruis, Levit. 15. 14. and to purge him that had touched the dead, Numb. 6. 10.

Anſw. 1

Secondly, becauſe the Church of Chriſt is reſembled unto a Dove: reade theſe places. Cant. 1. 14. and 2. 14. and 4. 1. and 5. 3.

Anſw. 2.

Wherein muſt we be like Doves?

Queſt. 7. I anſwer our manners, or our lives muſt bee like theirs: writers here obſerve many things: Gualter ſaith, the Dove is a moſt innocent creature, free from fraud, wanting gall, and entirely loving his mate. Others[d] ſay, the Dove hath no bill to hurt; no talents to teare, and builds in the holes of the rocke; ſeeing others wander, doth reduce and bring them home; remaines alwaies neare to the rivers; inſtead of ſinging, ſets forth a mournefull note: flyes in flockes; and feedes upon no uncleane or impure foode.

Others

[e] Hier. ſ. Others ſay [e], the Dove is the meſſenger of peace, the type of ſimplicitie, pure by nature, fruitfull in young ones, unmindfull of injuries, naturally fearfull, and ſeldome ſecure or ſafe, but when ſhe is in the hole of the Rocke. Theſe properties of the Dove, the Reader may eaſily apply unto himſelfe: but if any deſire my aſſiſtance for the true illuſtration of them, I referre him to chapter 10. verſ. 16.

Verſ. 17. VERS. 17. And loe, a voyce from heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleaſed.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Chriſt is the Sonne of God according to
- His Deitie alwayes: for there can be no moment of time imagined, when Chriſt was not thus the Sonne of God: he being in this regard coequall with the Father, and coeternall [f].
- His humane nature, and that either
  - By Predeſtination: and thus Chriſt was the Sonne of God from the beginning of the world: read for the proofe hereof, 2. Tim. 1.9. Titus 1.1,2. and 1. Pet. 1. 20. Or,

    - The myſterie is revealed, Rom. 16. 25. Eph. 3.9. Coloſſ. 1.26.
    - He is given unto the world, Pſ. 2.7. Act. 13.33

[f] Symb. Athanaſ.

The ſenſe then of theſe words is, This is the man whom I have begotten, that hee might bee the Sonne which was of old time promiſed: or this man now by Iohn baptized, is the promiſed Sonne of God, which is given for ſinners, that they by him might bee adopted into the fellowſhip of the Sonnes of God [g].

[g] Gal. 4.4 5. Eph. 1.5. 1 Ioh. 5. 20.

Queſt. 2. How are we by this onely begotten Sonne of God, made Gods children?

Answ. 1. I anſwer, Firſt, by faith, according to Saint Paul, Yee are all the children of God, by faith in Chriſt Ieſus, Gal. 3. 26.

Answ. 2. Secondly, by a ſpirituall life; For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the ſonnes of God: and by that ſpirit are inabled to cry, Abba Father, Rom. 8. 14. 15. Theſe two are the principall wayes, whereby we are made the children of God: but under theſe, more are included, viz. theſe which follow.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by going out from our ſinnes, and wholly leaving them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, by ſinceritie, puritie, and integritie of life and converſation, according to the Apoſtles advice unto the Philippians, Bee blameleſſe and harmleſſe as the ſonnes of God, without rebuke [h].

[h] Phil. 2. 15.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, By love & charitie; thus ſayth our Saviour, Love your Neighbour, yea your Enemy, that yee may bee the children of your Father which is in heaven [i].

[i] Matth. 5. 43. 45.

Sect. 2. Queſt. §. 2. ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα, in whom I am well pleaſed. What ſignifies εὐδόκησα?

Answ. 1. First, δοκέω ſignifies to thinke, whence εὐδοκέω is, to thinke well of: and thus Cyprian, (lib. 1. Teſtim. adv. Iud.) expounds theſe words, Thou art my well-beloved Sonne, whom I think well of: But this interpretation is not ſo fit, and therefore I leave it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, εὐδοκέω ſignifies to approve of.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, to love, and to be well-affected towards one.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it ſignifies complacere, and acquieſcere, to pleaſe and to delight in: and theſe ſignifications are found in prophane authours, and therefore we muſt goe a little further.

Fiftly, although this word εὐδοκέω be a Greek word, yet it hath its ſignification not from the Greeke, but from the Hebrew: for this verſe, Matth. 3. 17. is taken from Eſa. 42. 1. Behold my ſervant whom I uphold, mine elect, in whom (Ratſah naphſhi) Ratſah is rendred by the 70. εὐδόκησεν, and by Hierom. complacere, to pleaſe very well: but properly, it ſignifies placare, to appeaſe, pacifie, and reconcile, according to the Prophet [a], Ratſitha Iehovah artſecu, &c. O Lord, thou art pacified and reconciled unto thy people: for thou haſt forgiven their iniquitie, and covered their ſinne: ſo here εὐδόκησα ſignifies not onely acquieſcere, to delight in; or unicè amare, to love above all other; or beneſentire, to think wel of; or approbare, to well approve of, or complacere, to pleaſe exceedingly: But thou art my dearly beloved Sonne, in quo complacui, & placatus ſum, that is, firſt, in whom I am well pleaſed with for thy ſelfe: and ſecondly, for whoſe ſake I am quieted and attoned unto thoſe that belong unto thee. And this doth agree to the Sacerdotall office of Chriſt, as a Prieſt by offering ſacrifice for us, to reconcile us unto God, who by ſinne were become his enemies, and odious unto him.

Answ. 5.

Obiect. 1. It may here be objected, If God were pleaſed with mankinde in the creation, and angry with him in the fall, & again reconciled unto him by Chriſt, then God is mutable, which is contrary to thoſe Scriptures which affirme, that he is is not like man, that he ſhould repent, or change his mind [b], yea that in him there is no ſhadow of mutation [c].

[b] 1 Sam. 15. 29. [c] Iames 1. 17.

Answ. 1. I anſwer, Firſt, the will of God is the ſame which alwayes it was, to wit, to repaire and reſtore thoſe that were fallen by the death of Chriſt: and this will of God was the cauſe of the Decree of Election and reconciliation: for theſe words, Wee are reconciled by the death of Chriſt, unto God, are not thus to bee underſtood (quaſi jam amare incipiat, quos ante oderat, ſed diligenti reconciliamur, cum quo tamen inimicitias priùs habuimus [d]; as though the Lord now began to love thoſe whom formerly he hated, but that we are reconciled unto God, who loved us, with whom wee have had ſarres: for [d] Auguſt. ſ. Iohn.

84 God by sending of Christ, doth commend and prove his love unto us[e]; and therefore he did not hate the elect before Christ came, as we shall see by and by.

[e] Rom. 5. 8. and 1 Ioh. 4. 9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I answer, that betweene God and sinne, there is continuall and implacable hatred; and therefore hee hates sinners, and will not heare them[f], yea if they repent not, hee will reward their sinne with death[g]; and not pardon their sinne, untill they are reconciled unto him by the sufferings of Christ.

[g] Rom. 6. 23.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, there is a difference betweene Love and Reconciliation; hee loved his from the beginning, but was not reconciled untill their sinnes were satisfied for: when we hated God, and all goodnesse, the Lord loved us after a wonderfull manner: Novit enim in unoquoque & odisse quod feceramus, & amare quod fecerat[h], the Lord knowes how to distinguish betweene what wee have done, and what hee hath done; and to hate that which is evil in us, and wrought by us, and to love that which is his owne worke.

[h] Augustin. in Ioh.

Object. 2. Feuardentius (pag. 469.) holds, that Christ had no sence or feeling of his Fathers wrath in his soule (contrary to the tenet of our church) and proves it from this verse thus: Christ was alwayes the beloved Sonne of God, as it is in this verse, therefore God did not change, in turning his love into hatred.

Answ. I answer, Gods temporall wrath upon Christ, doth not either change or discontinue his everlasting love: for God was never angry with Christs person, (that being alwayes innocent) but onely with our sinnes which were layd upon him; for a father may love his childe, and yet hate his faults, yea correct his vices.

§. 3. In whom I am well pleased.] Is God well pleased with none but Christ? Sect. 3. Quest.

First, certainly the Lord was well pleased with many, as with Henoch, Noah, Abraham, Moses, David, &c. Answ. 1.

Secondly, God sayth unto none of them thus, as hee doth unto Christ: because hee was well pleased with them onely in and for Christs sake, but with Christ for his owne sake. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, this therefore is uttered by the Lord from heaven in a double regard, I. First, in regard of Christ, lest we should thinke, that hee were extruded by his Father in anger, and shut out of heaven, as Adam was expulsed the earthly paradise, and Lucifer the heavenly: and this seemes to have beene objected unto Christ by the Iewes, when they sayd, hee trusted in God, let him deliver him now, if hee will have him: for hee sayd, I am the Sonne of God[i]: Teaching us, that Christ was made Man, not through the anger of God towards himselfe; but through the love of God towards us[k]. II. Secondly, in respect of us; because first, of old God was angry with us for our sinnes[l]: but secondly, now hee is reconciled unto us by Christ[m]. Answ. 3.

CHAPTER IV.

Vers. 1. VERS. 1. Then was JESUS led up of the spirit into the wildernesse, to bee tempted of the Divell.

Sect. 1. THEN.] When was this this, that Iesus was led aside of the Spirit? Quest. 1.

Answ. I answer, presently after the Spirit had descended upon him.

Quest. 2. VVhy was Christ so suddenly led aside of the Spirit to be tempted?

Answ. 1. I answer, First, this was done either in regard of Christ, or in regard of us. I. In regard of Christ, that hee might finish the worke for which hee was sent: Here observe, Christ was sent to bee baptized with a five-fold baptisme. First, the Baptisme of the Word[a], hee was taught and instructed in his minoritie. Secondly, the Baptisme of Water[b]. Thirdly, the Baptisme of the Spirit, which was fulfilled when the holy Ghost descended upon him. Fourthly, the Baptisme of Fire, that is, of Temptation[c]. Fiftly, the Baptisme of Death, as our Saviour saith, I have a baptisme to bee baptized with, and how am I straightned untill it be accomplished[d]! Christ already had undergone three of these, the Baptisme of the Word, Water; and Spirit; and therefore hee doth out of hand undertake the fourth, that he may be prepared for the fift.

[a] Ioh. 15. 3.
[b] Matth. 3. 17.
[c] Psal. 66. 10. 12.
[d] Luk. 12. 50.

Secondly, this was done in regard of us, to teach us, that after the purpose of a new life, our temptations and trials will bee multiplied; as soone as Christ is baptized, hee is led aside to bee tempted; and thus when we, by the Baptisme of the Spirit, have put on Christ, with a full purpose and resolution to leave sinne, and to live as becomes new creatures, and the members of Christ, wee must then expect more temptations and trials, than formerly wee underwent: as soone as the Husbandman sowes corne, the enemie sowes tares[e]: as soone as Elijah was called to his office, hee is called to suffer[f]: and so also the Patriarches[g]. Answ. 2. Observ.

[f] 1 King. 19. 3.
[g] Heb. 11. 38.

VVhence comes it, that our trials and temptations are encreased, after the resolution of newnesse of life? Quest. 3.

First, this comes from God, who hath not given us armour and weapons in vaine: when by the baptisme of the Spirit wee have put on Christ, wee have put on armour of proofe against sinne and Sathan. Now the Lord armes us with this harnesse, not that we should be idle, but Answ. 1.

but that we ſhould fight the battels of the Lord manfully, againſt Sinne, Satan, the World, and the Fleſh; becauſe theſe are enemies unto Chriſt, whoſe colours we beare, under whoſe banner wee fight, and whoſe Souldiers we are. A valiant Champion is not armed from head to foot, to ſit at home, or reſt him upon the bed of eaſe, but that he may be prepared for the battell: ſo the Lord firſt armes us, and then brings us into the liſts.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this comes from the Devill, becauſe after the Baptiſme of the Spirit (wherein wee have renounced Sathan) hee lookes upon us as enemies, and eſteemes us his adverſaries (no longer as ſervants and friends) and therefore doth oppoſe us manibus pedibuſque, with all his might, and the utmoſt of his ſtrength. While we were his vaſſailes he kept us in peace[h] but when once we have entred into a league and covenant with Chriſt, then he doth reſiſt us with all his policie, power, craft, ſubtilty, and ſtrength.

[h] Luk. 11. 21.

Obiect. If it be thus, that our temptations and trialls encreaſe after the purpoſe of leading a new life, then it is good to procraſtinate our converſion, and to put it off till the laſt, that ſo our conflict may be the ſhorter.

Anſw. 1. To this I anſwer, Firſt, woe bee unto him that doth the worke of the Lord negligently[i].

[i] Ier. 48. 10.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, we muſt goe when God calls, not being hindred by any lets or dangers that may befall us[k].

[k] Acts 22. 16.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, God requires in our obedience of him two things

The firſt is chereſulneſſe, readineſſe, willingneſſe; now procraſtination and delay, argues unwillingneſſe in us: when a man delayes to doe that which God requires, it is a ſigne that hee hath no ſtomacke thereunto.

The ſecond is, feare and an awfull reſpect of his ſacred Majeſtie: for the Lord requires that wee ſhould ſerve him with feare[l], now delay argues a direct neglect of God; hee that deferres from day to day, to do that which God ſtrictly commands him, doth plainely teſtifie that hee doth not feare nor care at all to offend God. And therefore let us labour by and by to put on Chriſt in newneſſe of life, meditating continually of theſe five things.

Firſt remember the neceſſity of the worke; how neceſſary it is that thou ſhouldeſt leade a new life: it is the end of thy creation, it is the only way unto ſalvation; and therefore what will it profit thee to gaine the whole woild and looſe thy ſoule?

Secondly, remember the Lords acceptation, ſo thou ſhalt pleaſe the Lord, and otherwiſe thou canſt not: we ſtudy often, yea upon every occaſion to pleaſe great ones, but wee ſhould rather ſtudy to pleaſe the Lord, who is a King of Kings, and a Lord of Lords.

Thirdly, remember the danger of neglect; it is no leſſe then the perdition of thy ſoule, to deferre to put on Chriſt by the Baptiſme of the Spirit; for if once thy day be paſt, and Gods appointed time be neglected, be ſure the doore will be ſhut againſt thee, and thou damned to the pit of hell.

Fourthly, remember how long thou haſt already neglected to ſerve the Lord in newneſſe of life: how often with the crowe thou haſt cryed, cras cras, to morrow to morrow thou wilt ſerve and obey him; how long like a bad debtor thou haſt put off God from day to day, from yeare to yeare, yea all thy life time untill this preſent houre.

Fiftly, remember how little time remaines behind, and how uncertaine thy life is: that the remembrance hereof may make thee the more carefull by and by to purpoſe, reſolve, and endeavour to give thy ſelfe wholy up unto the ſervice of the Lord, in new obedience, and true ſanctification, although preſently hereupon thou be led aſide by the Spirit to be tempted of the devill, as Chriſt here was.

Queſt. 4. Why doth God permit us to be more tempted after we have purpoſed to leade new lives, and to live wholy unto him, then we are before?

Anſw. I anſwer for theſe cauſes; Firſt, that Sathan might be the more confounded, knowing that now we have left him, and forſaken his ſervice.

Secondly, that we might be the more comforted in knowing, that God hath enriched us with gifts and graces, becauſe otherwiſe the devill would never be ſo hoſtile againſt us. The children of God in theſe temptations may thus argue with themſelves; if God had not beſtowed new graces upon us, the devill would not thus warre againſt us (for he keepes his owne in peace[a]) and if the Lord had not endued us with new ſtrength, we could never have held out ſo long againſt the ſtrong temptations of Sathan; but long ere this had beene overcome.

[a] Luk. 11. 21.

Thirdly, that wee might acknowledge the ſtrength that God hath girded us withall, and uſe it, that by the uſe and exerciſe thereof it may encreaſe, and we be made ſtronger and ſtronger for the worke of the Lord.

Fourthly, that we might be held in æquilibrio in an equall ballance: when the ballance is unequall one ſcale is carried up, and the other down: ſo when wee are burdened with afflictions and temptations, and not ſenſible of the grace of God ſuſtaining and upholding us, wee are with the weight of our burthen preſſed downe to the ground: On the contrary when we looke with a ſtill ſight upon the gifts and graces, which God hath beſtowed upon us, and whereby wee excell many others, and are not ſenſible of any temptations or tryals in us or upon us, then wee are exalted and lifted up: And therefore becauſe the Lord would have us kept in an equall ballance, and neither raiſed up too high with the ſight of our gifts; nor depreſſed too low with the ſenſe of our afflictions, he doth ballaſte both the ſcales; the one with grace and ſtrength, the other with temptations and tryals, externall and internall.

§. 2. Then was Iеſus led aſide, &c.] Why was Chriſt tempted of the devill? Sect. 2. Queſt. 1.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, this was that in all things hee might bee like like unto his brethren. Hebrewes 4.15.

*Anſw.*2. Secondly, this was that hee might deſtroy the workes of Sathan, 1 Iohn 3.8.

*Anſw.*3. Thirdly, he was tempted, that hee might bee the more fit, and able to helpe and ſuccour them that are tempted, *Heb.*2.18.

*Anſw.*4. Fourthly, to teach us that our faith muſt bee approved by temptations and tryals. 1 *Pet.*1.6.7. Hence a ſecond queſtion may be propounded, which is this.

*Queſt.*2. How or whereby may we be ſuſtained in the houre of temptation, that our faith may bee approved?

Anſw. I anſwer, by a frequent ruminating upon theſe Meditations; Firſt remember all the children of God are made partakers of afflictions, and therfore none ſhould refuſe to beare them, but the remembrance hereof ſhould rather make us endure them the better: this meditation Saint Peter commends unto the Jewes in theſe words, Thinke it not ſtrange concerning the fiery triall, as though ſome ſtrange thing had happened unto you[b].

[b] 1 Pet.4.12.

Secondly, remember God hath promiſed to free us from our afflictions & our temptatiõs in his due time: this is alſo S^t. Peters encouragemẽt; bee of good cheere (ſaith he) for the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations[c].

[c] 2 Pet.2.9.

Thirdly, remember God hath enabled and enriched us to endure theſe tryals with patience and contentation: affording that internall conſolation unto us, that we can rejoyce in tribulations[d], and not feare them at all[e].

[e] Apoc.2.10.

Fourthly, remember God hath promiſed to reward us, if courageouſly we reſiſt temptation, and conſtantly endure tribulation: thus our Saviour encouraged his Apoſtles, when he ſaid, yee are they which continued with me in my temptations: and therefore I appoint unto you a kingdome[f]: yea ſo ſure were the Apoſtles of the accompliſhment of this, that Saint Iames dares pronounce that man happie that endureth temptation; and alſo promiſeth him a crowne of life[g].

[g] Iam.1.12.

Fifthly, remember Chriſt himſelfe was tempted and tried, ſhall not we therefore bee content to beare the crowne of thornes? If wee ſuffer with him, we ſhall be glorified with him[h]; and therefore let us with Ieſus endure the croſſe and deſpiſe the ſhame, for the joy that is ſet before us[i]. He ſuffered for our ſinnes, and therefore we may well ſuffer for our owne: hee was tempted for us, and therefore wee ſhould the more patiently undergoe temptation in our ſelves and for our ſelves.

[h] Rom.8.17.

[i] Heb.12.2.

*Queſt.*3. Why doth Chriſt goe unto Sathan, and not rather the devill come unto him?

*Anſw.*1. First, ſome ſay becauſe Sathan durſt not goe unto him[k]; but the devill dare doe any thing, and therefore I cannot imagine this to have been the reaſon hereof.

[k] Chryſoſt. ſuper.

*Anſw.*2. Secondly, Chriſt did this, leaſt that Sathan ſhould thinke, that by his owne power, policy, and craft, he had met with him; or our Saviour doth goe himſelfe unto him, leaſt that the devill ſhould thinke that Chriſt did avoid him and ſtrive to eſcape him.

*Anſw.*3. Thirdly, ſome ſay this was done leaſt God ſhould ſeeme to have beene rather an Actor then a Permitter of Sathans ſinnes in tempting Chriſt: Now how God is the author of temptation, and not of ſinne ſhall bee ſhewed afterwards.

*Anſw.*4. Fourthly, the place where Iohn and the people were, was not a fit place to be tempted in, and therefore Chriſt goes into the wilderneſſe to bee tempted of the devill, as followeth in the next words.

*Sect.*3. §. 3. That he might be tempted of the Devill.] What doth Tentare (to tempt) ſignifie?

*Queſt.*1. I anſwer πειράζω come from πεῖρα which ſignifies firſt an endeavour. Secondly, a tryall, Thirdly, deceit and craft: and hence πειράζω ſignifies to endeavour, to try, and to deceive. Tentare (I ſay) firſt ſignifies to endeavour or to try in generall: thus Ahaz ſaith, I will not aske, neither will I tempt the Lord[a]; that is, I will not trie, neither make experiment by any ſigne, what the Lord will doe for me. Secondly, it ſignifies to prove and try faith theologically, and thus ſome[b] underſtand the word in this place: But God in this ſenſe doth often tempt us, trying our faith, as he did the faith of Abraham, in commanding him to offer up the promiſed ſeede; and therefore I dare not thus underſtand the word.

Anſw. [a] Eſa.7.12.

[b] Gualt.ſ.

Thirdly, Tentare ſignifies to allure unto ſinne; and thus tempting is properly taken in this place: for tento comes from tendo, tempting, is as much as endeavoring to entrap or enſnare: and in this ſenſe Saint Iames prohibites any man to ſay, that he is tempted of God, for in this ſenſe God tempts no man[c].

[c] Iam.1.13.

*Queſt.*2. How could Chriſt bee tempted? for to bee tempted argues infirmity, and an inclination unto ſinne.

*Anſw.*1. I anſwer firſt, it became Chriſt to put on our infirmities, and to bee tempted, but without ſinne.

*Anſw.*2. Secondly, it is no more oppoſite unto his glory, or leſſe beſeeming the Majeſty of Chriſt to be tempted, then it was to take our natures upon him, and to ſubmit himſelfe to the forme of a ſervant[d].

[d] Phil.2.7

*Anſw.*3. Thirdly, whatſoever Chriſt in his nature did, was done for us, not for himſelfe: he was tempted for us, not for himſelfe: he was contemned, mocked, ſcourged, and all for us, and therefore it argues no infirmity or inclination in Chriſt unto ſinne at all, to be aſſaulted by Sathan.

*Queſt.*3. Whether may temptation bee without ſinne or not?

*Anſw.*1. I anſwer firſt, Chriſt was tempted in whom was no ſinne. *Heb.*4.15.

*Anſw.*2. Secondly, Temptation is (as was ſaid before) an endeavour to allure us unto ſinne: and therefore it is not a ſinne to bee tempted, or to ſuffer temptation, but to be overcome by temptation. For the cleare underſtanding hereof obſerve two things.

First,

First, temptation is said to be without sin either
- Imputatiue, by way of imputation, because the fault is remitted, (as Austin saith, non sit reus, sed ei non imputetur) and the sinne shall not be laid unto the offenders charge.
- Reverâ, in very deede, because there is no fault nor guilt in it at all: and thus the temptation of Christ was without sinne.

Secondly, obserue againe, Temptation hath a double originall, or beginning, viz. either first ab extra, from without; or secondly, ab intra from within.

First, there is a temptation which hath his beginning, ab extrâ, from without, when neither the minde, nor thought, nor delight, nor affections, nor meditations, nor suggestions goe along with the temptations; but the soule or the party tempted is meerely passiue.

And thus tempteth
- Man often; as the wife of Potiphar thus tempteth Ioseph many a time [e], and Iob also is thus tempted by his wife [f], and the three children were thus tempted by Nebuchadnezzar unto Idolatry [g]. And thus often one man tempts another unto that wch he hath not so much as a thought of, or any love unto at all.
- Sathan, but scarce at any time: for when hee tempteth, for the most part he exciteth and enflameth our concupiscence, wch being stirred up, becomes an active instrument within us unto evill, and consequently is sinne, as followes in the next particular.

Now this temptation is sinne
- In the party tempting. Not
- In the person tempted.

[e] Gen. 39. 7.
[f] Iob. 2. 9.
[g] Dan. 3. 15.

Secondly, there is a temptation which hath his beginning ab intrâ, from within, when a man is tempted and allured by his owne innate corruption, and this is sinne: according to Saint Iames, every man is tempted when he is drawne aside of his owne lust, and enticed [h]: and therefore the Papists are to blame who deny our first concupiscence to be sinne.

[h] Iam. 1. 14. and Rom. 7. 7.

Herethey object, there is a double concupiscence, viz. First, where there is no assent of the Mind and Will at all: Secondly, where the Will and Mind consents; now this second is sinne, but not the first. Obiect. 1

I answer, the first is a lesse sinne, but yet it is sinne nevertheless, because it is a corruption, and evill. Answ.

They object againe, this first concupiscence is so farre from being sinne unto us, that it is a praise and commendation unto us: so to resist it that not so much as our Mindes assent thereunto: but herein we can say as Paul did, It is no more I, but sinne that dwells in me [i]. Obiect. 2 [i] Rom. 7. 17. 20.

I answer, certainely it is commendable to resist the first motions of sinne and gratefull unto God: but yet because there two things that concurre herein, we must distinguish betweene Suggestion, and Reluctation: now if Reluctation bee good, then must Suggestion needes be evill: for that is the nature of concupiscence [k]. And herein is the difference betweene our temptations and Christs: First in us wee have naturally these things. 1 Suggestion and Concupiscence: 2 Meditation or a ruminating of this wicked suggestion. 3 Delectation or a delighting in these wicked thoughts, &c. Answ. [k] Iam. 1. 14

Secondly, in Christ, there is 1 no Delectation in any wicked thing. 2 there is no meditation or rumination of any wicked thing, but by and by hee repels and beates it backe; yea 3 in him there is no evill concupiscence at all, but all his temptations were ab extrâ from without.

Why would Christ be tempted? Quest. 4

I answer first, the generall cause hereof are Answ.

Either in respect of
- Himselfe, to shew his Deity and power in conquering Sathan.
- Us and that either
  - To overcome and put our enemies to flight: which otherwise would have beene difficult, yea impossible for us to have done.
  - Or
  - To teach us these 3 things, to wit
    - First the nature of temptation: that it is not a signe of the anger of God, 1 because it may be without sin, as was shewed in the former question, and 2 because Christ was tempted, with whom God was not angry.
    - Secondly, the nature of the tempter, that is,
      - First his Malice, hee is our enemie, as followeth afterwards.
      - Secondly, his weakenesse, that now being conquered by Christ, he may bee overcome of those who are Christs.
      - Thirdly, the manner of overcomming him; and that is by the word of God, as followes by and by.
    - Thirdly, the readinesse of his helpe and assistance: for hee was tempted, that hee might be able to succour those that are tempted [l]. [l] Heb. 2. 18

88

Secondly, the principall and particular causes why Christ was tempted were these two; First, to shew us the hostility of Sathan. Secondly, the victory of Christ.

Answ. 2.

First, the Hostility of Sathan appeares in this, that he tempts all Gods children, and dares give the onset unto the best of them.

Quest. 5. Here it may bee demanded, What shall wee thinke then of those that are not tempted?

Answ. I answer, we may safely thinke, that neither God cares for them, because hee doth not exercise them: neither the devill feares them because he meddles not with them. As in a Commonwealth it is an argument of a traitor, to bee beloved of the enemie; so in the Church of God those whom the devill spares, may justly bee suspected of disloyalty towards their heavenly Soveraigne.

Quest. 6. How may wee know who are tempted, and who are not?

Answ. I answer, by these markes. First, he that sinnes with greedinesse, Ephes. 4.19. is not tempted: he unto whom sinne is pleasant, and to wallow in the puddle of iniquitie, is delectable, is not tempted, because he runnes headlong of himselfe, unto wickednesse and sinne. Secondly, those that are puft up with an hypocriticall pride, thinking themselves to be Saints, because they seeme so unto men, are assaulted with a strong temptation, which prevailes against them: yet they cannot bee called Souldiers, because they fight not, neither struggle against this temptation; but willingly give way unto it. Thirdly, those that desire to serve God, but doe it negligently, being neither wary, nor circumspect in their lives and actions, but are tempted by pride, anger, the cares of the world, and too great a presumption of the mercies of God, and yet see none of these things in themselves, because they doe not carefully watch over their wayes, these fight not lawfully [m], according to the Apostles opinion, who sayth, If a man also strive for masteries, yet hee is not crowned, except hee strive lawfully. Fourthly, hee, that faithfully devotes himselfe unto the Lord, but is not able to doe or eschew what hee should, complaining continually with Saint Paul, that the good which he would doe, hee cannot, and the evill which hee would not doe, hee daily commits [n], because the flesh wrastles, and strives, and struggles against him [o] so strongly, that in the anguish of his heart hee cries out, O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver mee? [p] And with that holy Apostle being pressed with the burden of sinne, and the weight of some present and strong temptation, prayes thrice, that is, many times, that the buffets of Sathan may bee taken away from him [q], and strength of grace given unto him, whereby hee may be able to quell and subdue all his corruptions. Although this man to himselfe seeme a miserable man, yet to mee hee seemes a very happy, and blessed man; because, I. God by thus exercising of him, shewes, that hee loves him: and, II. The Divell by these strong assaults, shewes that he fears (maugre all his might) hee shall loose him.

m 2 Tim. 2.5.

n Rom. 7. 18.

o Gal. 5. 17.

p Rom. 7. 24.

q 2 Cor. 12.8.

Secondly, the other principall and particular cause, why Christ was tempted, was to shew the power of Christ in the victory and conquest of Sathan; according to Saint Paul: And having spoyled Principalities and Powers, hee made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in it [r], that is, in the Crosse.

r Col. 2. 15.

It may here be asked, What did Christ triumph over? Quest. 7.

Answ. I answer, First, over our sinnes, and guiltinesse, so that now sinne shall have no more dominion over us [s]. Secondly, he triumphed over death, O death, I will be thy death, O grave, I will be thy destruction, sayd the Prophet of Christ [t], to whom the Apostle agrees in these words, Christ hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light [u]. Thirdly, hee triumphed over Sathan, not onely in his resurrection, but also in his temptations, the Divell being alwayes put to the worst. Hence wee see, that the Divels could not goe into the Herd of swine, untill Christ gave them leave: thus also the unnamed Authour of the Hebrewes sayth, That Christ came to destroy him that had the power of death, that is the Divell [x], and Saint Iohn [y] testifieth, that for this purpose the Sonne of God was manifested, that hee might destroy the workes of the Divell. And thus Christ triumphed over Sathan in this place.

§. 4. Of the Divell.] Are all temptations from the Divell? Sect. 4. Quest. 1

Answ. I answer, temptations are two fold: viz. First Divine, whereby God tempts man. Secondly, Diabolicall, whereby the Divell tempts man. First there are Divine temptations, whereby God tempts man.

How doth God tempt man? Quest. 2.

Answ. I answer, God tempts and tryes two things in man. viz. First, his Faith, whether hee be firme therein or not; and this God doth by false Prophets, false miracles, false Apostles, and persecutions. Read for the proofe hereof these places. Deut. 13. 3. Mat. 24. 24. Secondly, God tempts or tryes mans obedience; whether he will continue in the service of the Lord or no: Now this the Lord doth sometimes by grievous and heavy commands; thus he tempts Abraham by that heart-wounding message (every word whereof was a sword in his bowels) Take thy sonne, thy onely sonne Isaac, whom thou loveſt, and goe offer him up unto me [a]. Thus the Lord tries Gideon, whether he dare with onely three hundred men bid battle against the Host of the Midianites and the Amalekites [b], and thus he tempted Iob, to see if he would continue in his integrity.

a Gen. 22. 2.3.

b Iudg. 7. 7.

Secondly, there are Diabolicall temptations, whereby the Divell tries us. Quest. 3.

How doth the Divell tempt man? Answ.

I answer by these wayes and meanes: First, sometimes he calls the truth of Gods Precepts in question, that wee might give the lesse credite thereunto, and the more unto him: And thus he tempted Evah, Yea shall not dye at all, but shall be like God [c] knowing good and evill. A.

c Gen. 3.4.

Secondly, sometimes hee calls the truth of Gods

Gods promises and threatnings in question, because often they that doe ill succeed well; the Prophet gives us a president of this in the perverse Jewes. Yee have said, it is in vaine to serve the Lord, and unprofitable to keepe his ordinances; yea the proud are happy, they that worke wickednesse are set up, and they that tempt God are even delivered[d]. This is the divells malice thus to tempt us, that so wee might the lesse care for, or feare, or regard, either the consolations, or comminations of the word.

[d] Malach. 3.14. 15.

Thirdly, sometimes he makes the word of God seeme hard unto us, that so, although wee assent unto the truth of it, yet we cannot consent unto the practise of it; because it is displeasing to our nature, or contrary to our disposition, or requires more paines then we can endure to take; and this made the Jewes cry out upon the doctrine of Christ, because it was a hard saying (not a false saying) and they could not endure it (not, they could not lawfully obey it) and therefore they reject both Doctor and Doctrine[e], Preacher and Sermon.

[e] Ioh. 6. 60.

Fourthly, sometimes the Divell teacheth us to abuse Scripture unto the patronage of impiety, and thus he abuseth it himselfe in this Chapter, labouring by the false alleadging of Scripture to perswade Christ to tempt Gods providence: thus he teacheth others to abuse the parable of the talents unto Usury; and those words, the Sabbath was made for man, unto the prophanation of the Sabbath; arguing thus from thence, It was made for man, therefore if man have any occasions, he may ride his journeyes, or may buy and sell upon that day.

Fiftly, somtimes the divell propounds the inticements of the world unto us, thereby frequently bewitching and insnaring of us. Sixtly, sometimes he spurres forward the desires of our nature and flesh, and enflames our appetites unto unlawfull lusts and delights.

Seventhly, sometimes he urges the examples of wicked men unto us, that thereby we might be the more emboldened to sinne, by their president and paterne.

Lastly, sometimes he tempts us by others, exasperating the world against us by hatred, or derision, or contempt, or persecution, or wicked counsell, or the like.

Vers. 2. VERS. 2. And when he had fasted fourty dayes, and fourty nights, he was afterwards an hungred.

Quest. 1. Why did Christ fast?

Answ. I answer, in, or for a double respect, viz. first, in regard of his office and calling, which he was to undertake, Secondly, in respect of his temptation, which he was to undergoe.

First, Christ fasted in regard of his function which he was to undertake, that he might bee the better prepared for it: this reason is given by some, but I omitt it, because the text seemes to point at the next.

Secondly, Christ fasted in regard of his temptation, which he was to undergoe, that he might be prepared thereunto.

How many sorts of fasts are there? 89

Quest. 2. I answer five, First, there is a necessary fast, when men abstaine because they have nothing to eate. Secondly, there is a naturall fast, this is a voluntary abstinence, because a man is not hungry: and this is occasioned two severall waies. 1 from the naturall constitution of the body; and thus Hippocrates saith, senes facilius jejunant, old men are easily perswaded to fast. 2 from some sicknesse, which hath taken away the appetite, and made all meat loathsome unto the stomach. Thirdly, there is a civill fast, which is two fold, either 1 commanded by the Magistrate for some civill end, as victory or the like: thus Saul commands the people to fast untill night, least otherwise they should have beene hindred from the pursuite of their enemies. Or 2 this fast is undertaken without a command for some civill respect, that so nothing may hinder the intended purpose: thus certaine Jewes vow, they will fast, untill they have killed Paul[a].

Answ.

[a] Acts 23. 12.

Fourthly, there is a miraculous fast: such was the fast of Moses upon the mount. Exod. 34.28. and of Elias in the wildernesse, 1 King. 19. 8. and of Christ in this place. This fast is supra nos, not to be imitated, but admired by us; and therefore although it be the fast here expressed, yet I passe by it also, and onely enlarge the next. Fiftly, there is a religious fast, instituted for a religious end; and of this onely something amply.

Quest. 3. How manifold is this religious fast?

Answ. I answer, the religious fast is diversly divided. First, in respect of the mooving causes thereof, into an ordinary and an extraordinary fast.

Secondly, in respect of the authority, into a voluntary, and an injoyned or commanded fast.

Thirdly, in respect of the persons fasting, into a publicke and a private fast.

Fourthly, in respect of the duration or continuance thereof, into an absolute and a respective fast. All these I let slip in this place.

Fiftly, a religious fast is divided, first into a false fast. Secondly, into a true fast.

First, there is a false religious, or a Popish fast, which is an Idoll of the true, and obtruded upon the Church by the devill, for the deceiving of men: which is not onely unprofitable unto the Agents, but also displeasing unto God, yea provoking his Majesty against us, as may appeare by these places of Scripture, Esa. 58. Ier. 14. 12. Zach. 7.5. Matt. 6.16.

Quest. 4. Wherein doth this false fast of the Papists consist?

Answ. For the true resolving of this doubt, wee must observe a threefold errour, First in the Merit of their fast. Secondly, in the Object of their fast. Thirdly, in the Adjuncts thereof.

First, the first errour in the false fast observable, is in the Merit thereof: and that first because they expect a merit or a deserved reward for it, as it is a good worke: but yet this is not all, for they expect the same for every good work they doe, whatsoever it be.

Secondly, there is another fault here in the merit, and that is this, they thinke an outward 90 fasting it selfe a good worke: or that the abstinence from flesh onely, or the outward works of fasting is in it selfe pleasing unto God. But to eate, or to abstaine from meat, is an indifferent thing, and therefore the outward worke is not acceptable unto the Lord.

Quest. 5. Is not fasting a good worke?

Answ. 1. I answer first, some workes are good in themselves, in bloc, as the obedience unto the Commandements of the Lord, which is alwaies to be performed, they being good, yea the rule of goodnesse: fasting is not such a good worke.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some workes are good by consequence in obliquo, when they are not commanded for themselves, but as helpes unto some other good workes: such a worke is fasting, enjoyned for some other workes sake, as followeth afterwards.

Secondly, the second errour in the Papists fast shewes it selfe in the Object thereof.

Quest. 6. How doe the Romanists erre in the Object of their fast?

Answ. I answer they erre both in the { Excesse, that is in the difference of meates; and in a generall prohibition of flesh. / Defect, in approving and allowing of dainties and delights both in { First, Quality. / Secondly, Quantity.

First, they erre in a generall abstinence from some certaine meats onely: that this is an errour, appeares thus, First, the true fast ought to bee a totall abstinence (for the time of the continuance of the fast) from all meats whatsoever: as may appeare by the Jewes fast [c], and Ninivehes fast [d], who forbad the tasting of water: except necessity urge and inforce the contrary; and that either I. by reason of the weakenesse of the person fasting: or II. by reason of the extension or length of the time fasted.

Secondly, for these causes amongst the Ancients, the Respective fast was more frequent then the Absolute; wherein they did eat something, and that with some choise making, or difference.

Thirdly, they did make no choice of meats, or put a difference in meates according to the kinds of them, as though there were a holinesse in meats; for they knew that all the creatures of God were lawfull in themselves to be used, and are made unlawfull unto us in these regards (to which the Papists themselves subscribe) viz. First, in respect of the body: those meates, which overthrow the health of the body are not to be eaten. Or secondly, in respect of the substance or estate; those dainties which cannot be had without exhausting of the treasure, or profuse wasting of the estate, or diminishing of our charity, and liberality unto the poore; are not to be procured but forborne. Or thirdly, in respect of the Magistrate; those meates which are prohibited by superiours for some civill end, are to be abstained from, and the Magistrate to be obeyed by vertue of the fift Commandement: but this belongs not unto the eye of the conscience, neither makes us fear or tremble, to touch, taste, or handle [a], that which the civill Magistrate for a politique end hath forbidden. Or, Fourthly, in respect of Charitie, if a Christian brother be offended, wee must abstaine, after Saint Pauls president, who had rather eate no flesh so long as he lives, than doe it with offence unto others [b]. But this is in respect of weake brethren, who are not throughly instructed, not of obstinate persons, who refuse to be otherwise taught. Or, V. in respect of the Soule, those meats which inflame, excite, and provoke unto lust, are to bee avoyded: and this respect is truly religious. I conclude therefore, that thus to forbeare some meats, is warrantable, and commendable, because the end of fasting, is to helpe and further the soule unto the performance of spirituall duties: wherefore those dainties, and Cates, which corroborate evill concupiscence, are to bee layd aside: And in these regards (as was sayd before) the Papists, with us, acknowledge that lawfull meates become unlawfull. But in making a distinction, or difference of meates, we and they disagree in two things, viz. First, in Lege, in the law of Fasting. Secondly, in Praxi, in the practise of fasting.

[b] 1 Cor. 8. 13.

First, we and the Papists differ in the law of fasting: Here observe, First, the Thesis, or the generall law, that we should fast, is prescribed in the word of God. Secondly, the Hypothesis, or particular law, how we should fast, (that is, upon what dayes, or how long, or from what meat we should abstaine) is not found amongst the Fathers: nusquam invenio, sayd Augustine [c], the manner how wee should fast, I cannot finde prescribed. So Primasius [d], quomodo unusquisque, &c. How every man is bound to fast, I cannot by the Fathers expresse: quum praeceptum nemo ostendere potest, perspicuum est, Apostolos permisisse liberum, sayd Socrates [e], seeing that none can produce a precept for fasting, it is apparent that the Apostles left it free. And the first Lawgiver, or Lawmaker for fasting, was Montanus the hereticke, whom Apollonius taxeth for it [f]. Now the Papists prescribe a law of fasting, upon paine of damnation; but we deny any such positive law to be given by God.

[c] Aug. ad Casulan. epist. 86.
[d] Rom. 14.
[e] Soc. 5. 21.
[f] Euseb. 5. 17.

Secondly, wee and the Papists differ in praxi, in the practise of fasting: for first, they will eate of some kinde of meats, not of others. Secondly, they abstaine from some meats, propter genera; we, propter operationem: they abstaine from some meat merely for the kinde of it; but we, not for the kinde thereof, but for the operation thereof: they abstaine from flesh, because flesh; not because it kindles the flame and fire of lust: for they eate and drinke those things that are more provoking thereunto, than flesh is; and therefore their fasting is superstitious, as followes in the next. Thus the Papists erre in the object of their fast, in the Excesse: consider wee now, how they erre in the Defect, and that first in the qualitie: secondly, in the quantitie.

First, they doe not forbid the delights of meats, if so be they be fish, but thinke all dainties, ties, and daintinesse of lawfull meates (that is, any thing but flesh, and that which comes thereof) lawfull, wee hold the contrary, laying downe our opinion in this plaine proposition: In fasting, wee must abstaine from all delicates and dainties: Or, a fast celebrated with dainties, is an hypocriticall fast. For the proofe whereof, observe these particulars. First, Daniel fasting, abstaines from these three things [g], First, pleasant bread: secondly, flesh: thirdly, wine: so others when they fasted, ate nothing but hearbs [h], and Iohn Baptist, Locusts, a course food, as was shewed before. Saint Matthew onely roots and hearbs [i]; and Saint Peter for the most part pulse. (Nazien. orat. de amore paup.) Secondly, all the Ancients in their fasts, abstained from wine. Timothy forbare wine [k], and Saint Iames abstained from flesh and wine [l]. Thirdly, the Fathers abstained in their fasts, from all strong drinke: thus also did Iohn Baptist, who dranke neither wine nor strong drinke [m]. k 1 Tim. 5.

m Luk. 1. 15.

Thirdly, these two, strong drinke, and dainties, the Fathers reprove in fasting. Read Aug. de Mor. Eccles. 2. 13. and Hier. ad Nepot. And therefore wee may safely say, that Papists are enemies unto fasting in their practise, that place it in junkets and dainties: affirming first, that it is the kindes of flesh, and that which proceeds from flesh, which is onely forbidden in fasting, not any sorts of fish. Secondly, they forbid not wine in their fasts to be drunke: yea, Bellarmine [n] disputes the necessitie of wine in fasting, because their regions and countries are cold. And Hallensis saith, that it is necessary they should drinke wine with fish [o]. Where it is not unworthy observation, that when wee accuse the Romanists for their Stewes, which are openly maintained, permitted, and tollerated, in mysticall Babylon; Harding answers, their countreyes are hot: and therefore if Brothell-houses were not suffered, the people would fall either to Sodomie, or bestialitie, or incest, or rapes, or adulteries: but when wee blame them for the use of wine in their fasts, then Bellarmine tells us, the countries are cold, and therefore both their stomacks and healths require it.

n De bon. oper. 2. 5. Sect. ad illam.
o Chemni. p. 4. 117. 6

3^dly, their daily practise shews, that in their fasts, they allow of all dainties, fruits, wines, sweete meates, and all kind of banqueting stuffes, and therefore there is no great feare, that their fasting will empaire their health, except it be with surfeiting upon their delicates.

Obiect. But they will here object, all Papists doe not thus.

Answ. I answer, we grant it, for some cannot by reason of their poverty: some doe not, because of some vow they have made to the contrary, and some amongst them perchance doe it not, for conscience sake, which we commend.

Thus we see how the Papists in their fasts erre in qualitate, in the quality of meates: we now proceed to shew their failing in quantitate, in the quantity: And for the clearer opening hereof, I lay downe this proposition: In the Popish fasts, abstinendum a quali, non a quanto: they must abstaine altogether from meate held by them unlawfull, but the immoderate use of those which are allowed, violates not their fast: that is one bite of flesh, or one spoonfull of broth wherein flesh hath beene boiled, disanulls their fast; but to eate fish, or drinke wine though unto the stretching out of the belly doth not breake their fast at all. Thus Alex. Hales [a] saith, Excessus in quanto non solvit ieiunium: Excesse in the quantity of the meate eaten violates not the fast: And Bellarmine [b] traceth the same path almost in the same words, Immoderatus usus piscium nulla lege ieiunij prohibetur, an immoderate use of fish is forbidden by no law of fasting. For the finishing therefore of this particular, I conclude: First, the Papists are enemies and opposite unto Antiquitie in their fasting, as appeares thus. First, they now use wine, which the Fathers did not. II. They now use Dinners ordinarily, which were seldome (or rather never) used by them, that is, the Ancients in their solemne fast dayes. III. The Papists exceed in their eating, but the Fathers were very sparing in that, which they did eate upon those dayes; and therefore howsoever they brag of Antiquitie, yet they have not so much as a shadow of the customes of the Ancients in their fasts.

b Bell. de bon. oper. 2. 4. Sect. quare.

Secondly, the Papists are enemies unto true Fasts, as appeares thus: In a true Fast there should bee an abstinence, I. from flesh, II. From wine and sweet wine. III. From strong drinke. IV. From dainties. V. From an excessive and immoderate use of any meat or drinke. Now they onely observe the first, that is, forbeare flesh: why? that they may stuffe themselves with fish, or better dainties.

Thus wee have shewed how the Papists erre both in the Merit, and Obiect of their Fast. It now remaines to shew, how thirdly they erre in the omission of the adjuncts of a Fast, they onely observing the bodily exercise, which profits nothing [c]; their fasts not being accompanied with those holy duties, which they ought to performe: neither such an abstinence as may helpe them to a religious performance of those pious duties, which God requires of them. But the truth of this will most clearly appeare in the sequent particular, wherein we have to explaine the nature of a true Fast, the false and hypocriticall being thus briefly runne over.

c 1 Tim. 4. πρὸς ὀλίγον.

Secondly, there is a true Fast, which is pleasing unto God; wherein many things are observable.

Quest. What is this true Fast? Quest. 7.

Answ. I answer, It is described thus: Fasting is a forsaking, and refusing of all those things, which are pleasing and delightfull unto our natures, accompanied with humiliation, and sorrow of the minde, that thereby wee may obtaine divine clemencie, or mercie, and favour from God [d]. Answ.

d Muscul. f.

Whence it appeares, that it is not an outward action only, as some would have it: for qui in sola abstinentia collocat, maximè vituperat [e]; hee that placeth fasting in a bare abstinence from meat, doth most of all disgrace it. As the keeping of the Sabbath is not onely to forbeare working,

e Chrysost. f.

but to serve God in his Temple: so fasting requires something else than a mere forsaking of meat, it being a mixt action.

Quest. 8. What actions are required unto a true Fast?

Answ. I answer, the actions are of three sorts, to wit, either first, externall; or secondly, mixt: or thirdly, internall.

First, there are externall actions required unto a true Fast, viz. First, an abstinence from meat, wherein three things are to bee considered. first, the time, or continuance of this abstinence, ut duret jejunium quousque durat exercitium[f], this abstinence from meat must be continued, so long as the time set apart for fasting doth endure. Secondly, the quantity, if any thing be received within that time, it must bee very sparingly taken, that is, neither, I. too much of any thing; neither, II. too often[g], but first, one refection, or refreshing onely; secondly, a supper, not a dinner. Thirdly, the qualitie, all daintie things that day must bee omitted, that is, both gorgeous attire, and dainty food. And this abstinence of meat is the first externall action.

[f] Calvin. [g] P. Mart.

Secondly, the second externall action required in a true Fast, is a cessation from labour, and our daily and ordinary imployments.

Thirdly, reconciliation with our brethren: for all jarres, contentions, strifes, and debate, are then to bee layd aside, lest otherwise wee doe as the Jewes did, Fast with debate[h], Carnem non comedit, sed comedit fratrem, thou wilt not touch flesh, but thou wilt bite and devoure thy brother, even upon the fast day, sayd Saint Basil. apud Anthon. S. de Iejun.

[h] Esa. 58. 4

Fourthly, an other externall action required unto a true Fast, is Almes, and that which wee spare from our selves, to spend upon the poore: This is the fast that I have required, saith the Lord, to deale thy bread to the hungry, and to cover the naked[i].

[i] Esa. 58. 7

Secondly, unto a true Fast are required mixt actions, which are partly externall, and partly internall, viz. First, Mourning and sorrow, as wee may see in all these examples: the Israelites being twice overcome by the Benjamites, they fast and weepe[k]: the people of Israel being gathered together to Mizpeh, weep and fast[l]. Read also these places, 2. Chron. 20. 3. Nehem. 9. 2. Joel. 1. 14. 15. and 2. 13. where wee shall see, that fasting is stil accompanied with sighes & teares; godly sorrow being the true way unto repentance, never to bee repented of[m]. Secondly, Prayer unto God, is to be adjoyned unto true fasting, read all the former places, and thereunto adde these; Jonah 3. 8. Nehem. 1. 4. Luk. 2. 37. Acts 13. 3. and 14. 23. In all which wee shall see this practise observed. Now in prayer must bee these three things. First, the confession of our merit, that wee have deserved the severest of Gods judgements for our sinnes. Secondly, the begging of pardon for those sinnes, which we have committed, and for which wee have deserved these plagues. Thirdly, the deprecating of those judgements which wee have justly deserved for our iniquities. And all these are to bee uttered with strong cries unto the Lord. Now these two, Mourning and Prayer, are called mixt actions justly, because the sorrow of the heart is expressed by the sadnesse of the countenance; and the desires of the soule are made knowne by the words of the tongue; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

[k] Iudg. 20 26. [l] 1 Sam. 7. 6. [m] 2 Cor. 7 10.

Thirdly, there are internall actions required vnto a religious Fast, viz. First, humiliation, Rend your hearts (sayth the Prophet) in your fasts[n], and not your garments; where hee doth not prohibite outward mourning, but doth exhort to adde thereunto internall humiliation, and the sorrow of heart.

[n] Ioel. 2. 13.

Secondly, preparation unto prayer, to wit, I. Meditation, and examination of the conscience. II. Repentance, as in Ninives fast, every man was charged to turne from his wicked weyes[o], and to the Jewes God gives the same lesson, in their fasts, to loose the bands of wickednesse[p].

[o] Ionz. 3. 8. [p] Esa. 58. 6

So that hence wee may learne, which is a compleat fast, and wherein it consists, viz.

First, an abstinence from meate for the time of the fast, as farre as thy strength and health will permit. Secondly, and from all mirth and delight. And thirdly, from all labour and work, that thou mayest the better intend spirituall duties. Fourthly, that which is saved in thy family that day by thy fasting, give it unto the poore. Fiftly, examine thy heart and life, and meditate vpon thy sinnes. Sixtly, repent thee seriously, and solidly of all thy sinnes, purposing not onely to leave them for ever, but also to loath them with a perfect hatred. 7ly, go unto the house of God, and there implore the throne of grace, that God would graciously bee pleased, I. to enable thee to serve him aright, to worship him with spirituall worship, & to obey his word, which either by reading, or preaching, is taught unto thee. II. That hee would worke true repentance in thy heart, turning thee from sinne unto himselfe. III. That hee would bee pleased to bestow upon thee that grace, for which thou fastest, whether it be the enjoying of some blessing, as yet wanting, or the removing of some judgement which lies upon thee.

Quest. 9. What is the use or end of this true religious fast?

Answ. I answer, either first Ordinarie, or secondly, Extraordinarie.

First, the ordinary end of fasting is two-fold; First, to subdue the flesh, I beate my body (saith Paul) and (by fasting) bring it into subjection[q]: whence wee may observe, that there is often need of fasting, because Sathan is strong, and we are but weake; and therefore those that are tempted, must pray against temptation; and if prayer prevaile not, then fast; if the buffet of Sathan yet remaine, then persevere in fasting: for God will come at the last, as hee did unto the Israelites; who, although they were twice overthrowne, yet continuing in prayer and fasting, at last they give the Benjamites a mortall overthrow[r]: yea untill God give us victory over thoſe corruptions wᶜʰ ſtruggle againſt us, his grace ſhall ſuſtaine and ſupport us [f], if wee but perſevere in faſting and prayer.

[f] 2 Cor. 12. 9.

Secondly, the other ordinary end of faſting, is to corroborate and ſtrengthen the Spirit; Firſt unto Prayer [t]. Secondly, unto ſpirituall Meditations. Thirdly, unto the hearing of the word of God. Prayer is the end of faſting, and faſting is the meanes unto prayer; and therefore it doth not conſiſt in an abſtinence from meate onely, but thereunto is to bee added prayer, and pious meditations, and the hearing of the word (if it may bee had) that the Lord may vouchſafe to heare and helpe us, in that which we deſire.

[t] Dan. 9. 3.

Secondly the extraordinary end of faſting, is either for —

- The removing of evils, & that either from
  - Our ſelves, which are either
    - Temporall, and that is either
      - That we might be humbled, if the evill bee paſt already.
      - That wee might be freed, if the evill bee either
        - Preſent upon us. Or,
        - Threatned to bee brought upon us. Or
        - Hanging over our heads, and feared by us.
    - Spirituall, that is, the perill, danger, and pollution of ſin.
  - Others, and that
    - Temporall; Or,
    - Spirituall.
- The procuring of good things, wᶜʰ are either
  - Civill
  - Religious, and that either
    - The remembrance of thoſe things which are by-paſt. Or,
    - The corroboration of thoſe things which are deſired, viz.
      - Of the preaching of the word.
      - Of the adminiſtration of holy things.

That this may be the better underſtood, we will explaine it more particularly.

Evils are either
- Temporall,
- Or,
- Spirituall.

Temporall evils are removed from us by faſting, two manner of wayes,
- Humiliando,
- Liberando.

} Noſmet.

Firſt, by humbling of our ſelves truely, if the evils be by-paſt: and this is performed, and practiſed for a double end. The firſt is Religious, and this is two-fold. I. That the ſinne may not bee layd unto our charge: thus a Father ought to humble himſelfe for ſome notorious offence committed by his childe. II. That the remembrance of ſinne may bee the more deeply imprinted in the minde, and wee learne thereby to hate it ſo much the more. Thus we may conceive that David faſted, when the young man brought him word that he had ſlaine Saul: For firſt, it is ſayd, David faſted, and mourned, and then hee ſayd unto the man, how waſt thou not afraid to ſtretch forth thy hand againſt the Lords anoynted [a]? This pious Prince hereby ſhewing, both his ſorrow for the fact, and his deteſtation of it.

[a] 2 Sam. 1. 12. 14.

The ſecond end is Civill, to wit, that wee may condole with thoſe that are afflicted, or mourne for thoſe that are dead: Thus the men of Iabeſh Gilead faſted for the death of Saul, and Ionathan his ſonne [b]; but ne quid nimis, this mourning muſt be moderate.

[b] 1 Sam. 31. 13.

Secondly, temporall evils are removed from us, Liberando noſmet, and that three manner of wayes; either firſt by removing the evill which is preſent: or ſecondly, by with-holding the evil which is threatned: or thirdly, by averting that evill which we feare, although it be not particularly threatned. Firſt, ſometimes ſome temporall evill lyes upon us, as Famine, Plague, the Sword, and the like. Now theſe are to be removed (according to Gods owne ordinance) by faſting, as may be proved by all thoſe Scriptures mentioned before. And thus the Pope himſelfe adviſed [c]. Si evenerit fames, peſtis, deprecemur Dominum jejuniis, eleemoſynis & obſecrationibus: that is, if dearth or peſtilence afflict us, we muſt give our ſelves to almeſdeeds, prayer and faſting for the removall of them. When the Citie Hippo, wherein Saint Auguſtine was, was by the Vandals beſieged, he gave himſelfe frequently to faſting and prayer [d].

[d] Poſſidonius c. 29.

Secondly, ſometimes God threatens, for ſin, to bring ſome temporall judgement: and one principall remedy to with-hold it, is faſting: and therefore David, when God had menaced the childe with death, hee gives himſelfe to faſting [e]. Thus God having threatned the Ninivites (by Ionah) to deſtroy them within fourtie dayes, they prevent it by faſting [f].

[e] 2 Sam. 12. 16.

[f] Ionah. 3. 5. 6.

Thirdly, ſometimes our ſinnes committed, and Gods threatnings againſt ſinne in generall, makes us to feare ſome particular judgement, or temporall evill, although the Lord have not definitely threatned it: now one chiefe remedy to remove theſe evils (which hang over our heads, of which we have ſome cauſe to feare) is faſting. Thus King Iehoſhaphat being afraid of the children of Moab and Ammon, that came againſt him, proclaimed a faſt throughout all Iudah [g]. So Ezra being in feare of the enemy that lay in his way, proclaimed a faſt [h]. And the Jewes being afraid of Hamans decree, proclaimed a faſt [i], and were delivered.

[i] Heſt 4. 16.

Seventhly, there are spirituall evils, to wit, our sinnes, hardnesse of heart, obstinacy, and the like; which are removed by repentance, prayer, & fasting: for the proofe hereof reade these places. 1 Sam. 7.6. Nehem. 9.1. &c. Ioel 2.12. &c. And this is the chiefest end of fasting, that our prayers might be corroborated and strengthned for the appeasing of God, who is angry with us for our sinnes; and for the purging of our soules by repentance; for both which, the prayer of him that fasts aright, is very prevalent, and of great efficacy.

Thus we see, how temporall and spirituall evills may be removed from our selves: we may now, in a word, consider how profitable fasting is, for the removing of evils from others: and that first Temporall, thus Nehemiah fasts for the removeall of the miseries which were in Ierusalem [k], and David for the afflictions of his neighbours [l].

[k] Nehem. 1.4. [l] Psa. 35. 13.

Secondly, Spirituall; thus Daniel fasts for the pardon of Israels sinnes [m].

[m] Dan. 9.3

As wee fast for the removeall of evils both Temporal and Spirituall, both from our selves & others; so also for the procuring of good things, whether they be I. Civill; or II. Spirituall.

First, sometimes wee fast for the obtaining of some civill or politique blessing, as for example, either 1 that just judgement may bee administred, thus wicked Iezabel upon an hypocriticall pretence, commands a fast to be celebrated, when Naboth was falsly to bee accused [a]. Or 2 that Parliaments may succeed to the good of the commonwealth, to the furtherance of religion, and to the glory of God. Or 3 that victory may be obtained in warre: thus Saul commanded the people to fast until the evening, least that the pursuit of their enemies had beene hindred [b].

Secondly, sometimes wee fast for the obtaining of some Spirituall blessing, or grace, which we desire; to wit, first the preaching of the word; thus the Apostles fasted, that the Gospel might be by the mercies of God, the more published [f]. Saint Peter being to contend with Simon Magus before the Emperour, the Church in Rome did fast for his good successe [g]. Saint Iohn refused to write against Ebion the Heretike, except the whole Church would fast [h].

[f] Acts 13. 2. [g] Aug. Epist. ad Casulan. [h] Hierom. prolog. s. Matth.

Secondly, we fast for the helping and furthering of the celebration of holy duties: thus the Apostles when they ordaine Pastors and Elders fast [i], that the duties which are required of them, and which they are to administer, may bee performed in the evidence of the Spirit. And therefore fasting were requisite, and very convenient, first for Ministers in the preparatiō unto the Lords day, that their prayers unto God might bee the more effectuall for assistance in delivering of his word. And secondly, for people, that they might the more earnestly implore the ayd of God in the hearing of his word. And thirdly for Fathers and Godfathers, the day before the Baptizing of the infant, that their prayers may bee the more fervent unto God for the infant, that it may be baptized with water, and with the holy Spirit.

And fourthly, it is requisite for all the day before the celebration of the Lords Supper; because the worke which is to bee performed is great, and of much weight (being a covenant or contract betweene God and us) and because the benefit is great if worthily performed; therefore it should not be undertaken without the preparation of fasting and prayer. A man that is to come into great bonds, is very wary (before hee signes and seales them) to overlooke carefully all the writings, to consider throughly of the purchase, to enquire diligently into his owne abilities, about the performance of the obligation, to consult seriously with others of the title, whether that be good? and not rashly to doe any thing. Thus should every one doe before the receiving of the Lords Supper, carefully remembring these foure things. First, it may be that which thou art about to doe, will tend to thy condemnation and destruction: for he that eates and drinkes unworthily, eates and drinkes his owne damnation [k]. [k] 1 Cor. 11.13.

Secondly, remember, that the condition of this obligation made betwixt God and thee, is the delivering up of thy sinnes: and therefore how canst thou performe covenants with the Lord, if thou knowest not what thy sinnes are, nor where they are, nor wherein thou offendest? which things are very hardly knowne without prayer, fasting, meditation, and examining of our waies, workes, words, and thoughts. Thirdly, remember, it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the living God [a], because he is a consuming fire [b]: And therefore what will become of thee, if thou hold not touch with him, and be very carefull, exactly to performe covenant. And Fourthly remember, that these things considered, thou hadst better neglect all things (when thou art to come unto the Lords Table) then thy preparation thereunto: And therefore the day before thou commest thither, give thy selfe to examination, meditation, supplication and fasting. For the better taking up and understanding of this, observe that there is a threefold fast; I. There is Iejunium publicum, a publike and generall fast: this is not altogether so convenient for our examination and preparation unto the Lords Supper, but yet were fit enough, if authority should enjoyne it. II. There is Iejunium privatum, a private and particular fast, this is requisite for every man before hee comes to partake this holy Sacramēt. III. There is private-publicum jejunium, private-publike fast, and that is, when a Father of a Family sets the day of preparation unto the holy Communion apart, both for himselfe, and all those within his gates, who are to communicate, that so he may the better examine, how they are fitted, and not suffer them to runne into the danger of eternall death, by unworthy receiving.

Quest. 10 The last question here will bee, Why wee must fast?

Answ. 1, To which I answer first, because it is profitable, and that in a threefold regard, first to the Body; secondly to the Minde; thirdly, to the Soule.

First, fasting is profitable unto the Body, because cause

cauſe it encreaſeth and continueth health: the Fathers before the flood ate onely hearbs, and fruits, and roots, and were long livers; the Eſſei were very temperate, and lived untill they were very old [c], yea experience teacheth us that cattle are more healthfull, then men, becauſe they will not eat to exceſſe (except it bee a dog) but onely for the ſatisfying of nature.

[c] Hiſt. Scolaſt.

Secondly, faſting is profitable for the Mind, as appeares by theſe three things. I. it inlightens the underſtanding. II. it ſtrengthens the Minde unto prayer. III. it availes unto Faith.

Firſt, faſting cleares the eyes of the Mind, a man is more apt and better able to underſtand, when he is faſting then when he is full, as may be proved by theſe foure reaſons.

The firſt is Naturall, the mind followes the temperature of the body; now faſting begets more pure Spirits, feaſting more troubled and groſſe: hence we ſay, Aurora Muſis ſemper amica meis, it is the beſt ſtudying in the fore-noone.

The ſecond is Civill, the minde diſtracted by no employments, can diſcerne of a thing more clearely, and quietly; now (as was ſaid before) when we faſt, we muſt forbeare our ordinary and painefull callings, that wee may the better give our ſelves to the examination of our ſelves and ſinnes, and therefore faſting helpes the Mind to underſtand.

The third is Spirituall, becauſe our affections are not then inflamed with the fire of concupiſcence and luſt (as in feaſting) neither is our judgment ſo corrupt; but we can more clearely diſcerne of the nature of ſinne, and vertue.

The fourth is Celeſtiall, becauſe God gives grace to thoſe that faſt aright, as Daniel when he faſted, ſaw viſions. And therefore if they bee any thing difficult, which we cannot underſtand, we muſt ſharpen the Minde upon the whetſtone of Faſting; yea if we be weake in grace, and deſire to be ſtrengthned, let us give our ſelves to thoſe prevalent meanes of faſting and prayer.

Secondly, faſting ſtrengthens the Mind unto prayer, wherefore the Apoſtle conjoynes them [d]. And therefore when upon any extraordinary occaſion we deſire that our prayers might prevaile with God, wee muſt ſtrengthen them with faſting.

[d] 1 Cor. 7. 5.

Thirdly, faſting availes unto faith: reade Matthew 17.19.20.21. where our bleſſed Saviour himſelfe expreſſly layeth downe this double concluſion unto his Apoſtles, firſt that they cannot caſt out divels without faith; and ſecondly, that this faith cannot be had, without faſting and prayer.

Fourthly, faſting is profitable for the Soule in theſe regards. Firſt, it obtaines pardon and forgiveneſſe of ſinne at Gods hands, as we ſee in the Ninivites faſt [e], for although faſting and humiliation be not a ſatisfaction for ſinne, yet it is a teſtimony of ſincerity, that we both abhorre our by-paſt ſinnes, and deſire to leave them. Secondly, faſting weakens the power and rebellion of the fleſh, and doth with more eaſe withſtand the aſſaults of Sathan, yea overcome him. Thus we ſee that faſting is profitable.

Secondly, we muſt faſt becauſe it is neceſſary, and that in theſe two regards: firſt, becauſe it is commanded; for the proofe hereof reade theſe Scriptures, Levit. 16.29 and 23. 27. and Numb. 29.7. and 30. 14. and Ioel 1.14. and 2. 15. and Matt. 6.16. and 9.15. In all which places we are commanded to humble our ſelves by faſting, and therefore it is neceſſary that ſometimes we ſhould faſt. Secondly faſting is a part of Gods worſhip: and therefore the Phariſee, boaſting of his ſervice, amongſt other duties, reckons up faſting [a]: And thus Anna is ſaid to worſhip God by faſting and prayer [b]; and thus Paul would have all good widowes doe [c], that is, a pure and abſolute faſt, accompanied with prayer, repentance, and other holy duties, is a part of Gods worſhip, and therefore unto the Soule of him that faſts, is very profitable.

[a] Luk. 18. 11. [b] Luk. 2. 37. [c] 1 Tim. 5. 5.

Thirdly, we muſt faſt, becauſe we have ſuch worthy preſidents in this duty of faſting; who are worthy herein of our imitation: wee reade in holy writ, of the faſts of Iſrael, Ioſaphat, Ezra, Nehemiah, Heſter, Mordecai, David, Ieremie, Paul, yea (in this verſe) Chriſt himſelfe. And therfore there is great reaſon, that ſometimes we ſhould faſt, ſeeing it is both profitable and neceſſary, and hath beene practiſed by ſuch bright and cleare lights.

VERS. 3. Then the tempter came unto him, and ſaid, If thou be the Sonne of God, command that theſe ſtones be made bread.

Verſ. 3.

§. 1. Tunc, then, as Saint Luke hath it, Luke 4. 3. that is, after the forty dayes faſt was finiſhed; and after Chriſt began to bee an hungred.

Sect. 1.

What did Chriſt in the wilderneſſe all theſe fortie dayes?

Queſt. 1.

To this I anſwer; firſt, this is a curious queſtion, like unto that propounded by one unto Saint Auguſtine: What did God, before the creation of the world, to whom hee anſwered, that he made hell for ſuch curious ones.

Anſw. 1.

Secondly, it is likely, yea moſt certaine, that he ſpent that time in prayer, and in ſpirituall exerciſes.

Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, ſome [d] ſay, that in thoſe forty dayes, Chriſt paſſed quite through the Deſart of Arabia Petrea, and went unto the mount Olivet, where the law was given, that there hee might begin the conflict with Sathan.

Anſw. 3. [d] Bunting.

Fourthly, in that time he was tempted by the devill in the wilderneſſe: thus ſaith this our Evangeliſt verſe 1. Ieſus was led into the wilderneſſe to be tempted of the devill. And Saint Marke plainely, Ieſus was there in the wilderneſſe forty dayes tempted of Sathan [e].

Anſw. 4. [e] Mark. 1. 13.

Hence ariſeth a ſecond quære, How doth Saint Matthew agree with himſelfe, and with his fellow Evangeliſt Saint Marke, for Matthew Chapter 4 verſe 1 ſaith, Ieſus was led aſide into the wilderneſſe, to be tempted of the devill: and Saint Marke ſaith, Ieſus was there in the wilderneſſe tempted, &c. But Saint Luke, Chapter 4. 3. and

Queſt. 2.

96 and Saint Matthew in this third verse in sense saith, Tunc, then (when Christs 40. dayes fast was finished) came the tempter unto him.

Answ. 1. First, some say that Saint Marke did not think that Christ was tempted before the fortie dayes were expired, but afterwards: but this me thinks can scarcely agree with the word there used πειραζόμενος, (although reverend Beza be of this mind) because it is not a participle of the preterr-tense; and besides it doth denote the place where he was first assaulted by Sathan, rather then the time when he began to be tempted.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ was tempted first by Sathan in the wildernesse (as Saint Marke saith) but not with these temptations mentioned by Saint Matthew in this place, till after the 40. dayes were finished [f], but because some yet may doubt, how the Evangelists agree, Saint Luke saying, that Christ was forty dayes tempted of the devill in the wilderneſſe [g]; and Saint Matthew implying in this verse, that the devill came not unto Christ, untill after the expiration of the fortie dayes?

[g] Luk. 4. 1. 2.

Answ. 3. Answer therefore; Thirdly, that Sathan came first secretly unto Christ (as he doth usually unto us) tempting him by invisible temptations, as Saint Marke 1. 13. and Saint Luke 4. 2. meanes: but after the 40. dayes were ended, he comes visibly unto him, tempting him with those temptations which are expressed by Saint Matthew in this Chapter.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Then the tempter came unto him:] The devill comes armed against Christ with a threefold dart; the first is of the belly or gluttony; the second of fame and credit; the third of gaine and profit. The I. is the concupiscence of the flesh: the II. is the pride of life: the III. is the lust of the eyes.

Sathans first temptation is in the desires of the belly, which is both most present (because meat must be had) and most powerfull and strong, because venter non habet aures, the belly will take no denyall, but like the horsleeches daughter cryes, give, give: where wee may observe how he begins with the second Adam, as he did with the first, at the Belly.

Quest. It may here be demanded: If the desires of the stomack and appetite be evill, how then are they in Christ? (for he was hungry) If they bee lawfull, why then doth not Christ satisfie them by making stones bread?

Answ. The desires of the belly are not evill in themselves, but yet often perswade unto evill, not onely unto excesse of meate and drinke, but also unto thefts, the use of unlawfull meanes, disobedience, diffidence, and the like; and therefore they must bee borne, not obeyed, tolerated, but not fulfilled.

Sect. 3. §. 3. If thou be the sonne of God:] Why doth Quest. 1. the devill say, if thou be the sonne of God?

Answ. 1. First some say because he doubted whether [h] Chrysost. sup. hee were or not: for first, hee knew the Angels message unto Mary, Luke 1. and unto the shepheards Luke 2. and the journey of the Wise-men, the disputation and determination of the Doctors, the testimonies given of him in his Baptisme, both by the dove alighting upon him, and of Iohn, and of the voice of God from heaven; and therefore hee thought that he was the Sonne of God. But secondly, on the other side he saw him poore, and perceived him to bee hungry, and therefore doubting whether he were or not, he saith, If thou be the Sonne of God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the devill did this, because he would have Christ to distrust God: for although hee tēpt him to turne stones into bread, yet he tempteth him not therein directly unto Gluttony, but unto a greater sinne, that is to distrust in his Father, and to doubt whether he were the Sonne of God or not; seeing that having fasted now so long, and being at the present hungry, yet nothing was provided for him: Teaching us that Observ. Sathan doth endeavour to induce us unto a diffidence of the love of God.

Quest. 2. How doth the devill tempt us hereunto?

Answ. 1. First, sometimes by our selves, making us call the love of God in question, and consequently to distrust of his helpe and assistance: Iob in those words, although the Lord kill me yet will I trust in him [a]; seemes to imply that he feares God will kill him. Thus David cryes out my God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me [b].

[b] Psa. 22. 1. 2 and 88. 1. 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sometimes the devill tempts us hereunto by others, using them as instruments to dissuade us from our confidence & assurance in God. Thus Iob was tempted by his wife when she said unto him, Doest thou still retaine thine integritie? curse God and die [c]. Thus David was tempted, many saying unto him that there was no helpe for him in his God [d]: yea the heathen reproaching him, and saying, where is now thy God [e]; Thus Senacherib tempteth Hezekiah to distrust God, Esa. 36. 7. 10. 15. 18.

[c] Iob. 2. 9.

[e] Psa. 115. 2.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Command that these stones be made bread.] What is meant by these words?

Quest. 1. First, some say they have an Allegoricall sense

Answ. 1. which is this, If thou be Christ the Son of God, then change these stones (that is the Gentiles) into bread, that is the children of Abraham.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the scope of the words is Historicall, and the sense is, because thou hungrest for bread, and hast it not, shew therefore thy power by making unto thy selfe bread of these stones.

Quest. 2. Seeing the action, the devill perswades unto is lawfull, why doth not Christ doe it? that it was a lawfull thing, appeares thus, I. because God oftentimes miraculously hath asswaged the hunger and thirst of his people, hee brought water out of the stony rocke for his children the Israelites; and out of the jaw bone of an Asse, for the refreshing of Sampson; he fed Elias with Crowes and with meate from heaven: he satisfied hungry Israel with Manna; and Christ with bread and fish. Iohn 21. 19.

II. Because Christ himselfe else where doth as much, as the devill here tempts him unto; for he changeth water into wine [f], and therefore why not stones into bread?

[f] Ioh. 2. 7.

Christ

Christ would not doe this both for the
- Counseller; he would not believe, or obey the Divell.
- Counsell; and that both in
  - Generall, because that which may bee lawfull in Thesi, in regard of the substance, may be unlawfull in Hypothesi, in the circumstances thereof.
  - Particular, and that both because
    - Hee was not led aside by the Spirit into the wildernesse, to worke miracles, or to demonstrate his Deity, but his humanitie rather.
    - His hunger was to bee overcome by suffering, not by eating.

Christ would not turne stones into bread, because he would not obey or believe the Counseller that gave the advice: Teaching us, that wee must not trust, or give credit unto Sathan: and hence it was that Christ would not suffer the Divels to beare witnesse of him, but rebukes them, when they acknowledge him[g], neither would Paul brooke it, that the mayd possessed with the Divell, should testifie of him, that hee was the servant of the true God[h].

Observ.

g Mark. 1. 34. & Luk. 4. 41.

h Act. 16. 18.

Quest. 3. Why may we not believe, or give credit unto the Divell, who sometimes speakes truth, as is apparent in the places even now alledged?

Answ. 1. First, because he hath no calling hereunto, either to bear witnesse of Christ, or of his Apostles, or to teach and instruct us, or to doe good unto us by any counsell or advice. God makes the good Angels ministring Spirits for the comfort of his children[i], but not the evill Angels; never making use of them, except first it bee to, or for the destruction of some, as Christ suffers them to goe into the Herd of Swine, who thereupon were drowned: yea hence the eternall fire of hell is called the condemnation of the Divell (in Scripture) because the Lord useth him as an instrument, to torment those that would not obey him.

i Heb. 1. 7.

Or secondly, the Lord makes use of Sathan to delude and deceive those that are obstinate in wickednesse; thus the Divell deceived Achab[k], and[l] doth daily Antichrist and his followers[l].

k 1 King. 22. 21.

l 2. Thess. 2. 11.

Or thirdly, the Lord makes use of the Divell for the tryall of his children: thus hee suffers him to tempt holy David, to see whether he would number the people, or not[m]. Thus he suffers him to try whether holy Iob will continue in his integritie, notwithstanding his stupendious afflictions[n]. Thus hee sifts Peter, Luk. 22. 31. and buffets Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 7. Thus the Lord useth him alwayes as an enemie, never as a counseller to advise, or a Doctor to teach and instruct; and therefore we must never beleeve him, but alwayes suspect him.

n Iob. 1. & 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee must not believe the Divell, because hee is but a Lying Spirit, (1. King. 22. 21.) an old liar, and the Father of lies[o], who is craftie to deceive, being able to transforme himselfe into an Angell of light[p]. And whatsoever he doth, or sayth, he doth it, that he may deceive.

o Ioh. 8. 44

p 2 Cor. 11. 14.

Quest. 4. How doth the Divell deceive men, that wee may learne to avoyd his slights and subtilties?

Answ. 1. First, sometimes the Divell deceives bona data, by giving good things unto us, that thus hee may the more speedily gaine us unto himselfe: he promiseth temporall gaine unto us, that hee might gaine our pretious soules: dat ut in mundo, ne detenmr in cœlo[a]: hee doth enrich us with earthly blessings, lest wee should bee enriched with heavenly mercies: he oftentimes cures bodies, that he may kill soules.

a Chrysost.

Answ. 2. Secondly, sometimes the Divell deceives, vera dicendo, by speaking the truth: thus hee deluded the Pharisees by a false collection, hee taught them, that they must love their brethren and friends; and this was a truth taken from the law[b]: but from that ground, by the rule of contraries, he teacheth them to hate their enemies[c], and this was contrary unto the Law. The Sabbath must bee kept and observed; so sayth the Law, Exod. 20. therefore the workes of mercie must not bee done upon that day: this is the Divels deduction. Blasphemy it is to make a man equall unto God, this is truth; but that Christ was a blasphemer, because he made himselfe equall with God, was one of the Divels slanders[d]. Sathan is said to be a lyer from the beginning, because he began with the first man at this weapon: Yee shall know good and evill, (sayth Sathan) therefore yee shall bee like God himselfe: this was a lying conclusion. And therefore as Aristotle was wont to say of a lyer, so sayth Chrysostome of the Divell, Non credendum Satanæ, licet verum dicat, trust him not, though he speake the truth; but learne to stop our eares against all his enchanting perswasions, that although hee charme never so wisely, yet we may be like deafe Adders, not listening at all to his bewitching songs.

b Lev. 19. 18.

c Matth. 5. 43.

d Ioh. 5. 18

Quest. 5. How doth the Divel come unto us, how doth he give counsell or advice unto us: for no such thing appeares at all?

Answ. I answer, Hee doth not come unto us, or perswade us visibly, but by Instruments, by his enticements, which are either externall, or internall. First, the Divell hath externall allurements to entice us by; as for example, one hath lost a Gold Ring, or a Silver Spoone; another hath his sonne sicke, or his horse or hogge sick: here the Divell perswades to goe unto a Witch, who can helpe the sicke, and restore the thing lost; but let us remember, that there is a God in Israel, and therefore let us give our selves unto him, and seeke ayd and succour of him, and not from the Divell.

Secondly, the Divell hath internall enticements, to allure us: viz. First our owne evill concupiscence, so long as sinne is pleading unto us and therefore let us fight against this lust, which which warres against our soule[a]. Secondly, our owne wisedome; for reason dictates and teaches many things unto us, contrary unto Gods word, yea often times those things which are not false principles, but false consequences from true antecedents; as for example, the Sabbath was made for man, therefore man may lawfully breake the Sabbath. By lying we may helpe our brethren, or save our selves from danger, therefore it is lawfull to lye in such a case. Usury is profitable for a Common-wealth, therefore it is by no meanes to bee abolished. Thus as Christ can bring light out of darknesse, and good out of evill: so the Divell can sucke evill from good, and, with the Spider, change wholsome juice into mortall poyson.

a 1 Pet. 2. 11.

Secondly, Christ would not turne Stones into Bread, because the counsell given was inconvenient, and therefore though the thing in it selfe might have been done, yet in regard of the circumstances, it might become unlawfull: Teaching us, that that thing, which is lawfull in generall, may in the circumstances be unlawfull. It was lawfull for the Israelites to offer sacrifice unto God, and yet some circumstances made their sacrifices execrable and abominable unto him[f]. It was allowed also unto them by God, to celebrate some feast dayes, and yet some circumstances there were in the celebration of their feasts, which made the Lord openly protest against them[g]. It is lawfull for Christians to eate flesh, but if it doe offend a weake brother, it becomes unlawfull unto us to doe it, if it be in our power or choyce to doe it, or not to doe it.

g Esa 1. 13. 14. Amos 5. 21.

Observ. 2

Quest. 6. How, or by what means can lawfull things become unlawfull?

Answ. Because even lawfull things are to bee moderated according to a three-fold rule: and therefore when they erre from any of them, they become unlawfull. The first rule is faith: wherein two things are required, I. That the thing which is done bee good, not a thing which is forbidden by the Law. And, II. that it be done well, sincerely[b], discreetly, with a good intent, &c.

The second rule is Charitie, wee must not offend a brother for whom Christ died, by that which we doe.

The third rule is decencie or comelinesse, which is described by the holy Scriptures in three words. The first is κρίνατε, Comely[c]. Judge you (saith the Apostle) if it be comely for a woman to pray uncovered. Wherein hee teacheth us to doe those things which becometh us, and our profession, we being called unto a holy calling[i], and women must doe the workes which become women professing the Gospell[k]. And Titus must speake those things which become sound Doctrine[l]; which places teach us, that wee must not onely doe those things which are good, but also which are comely, and beseeming us.

b 1 Cor. 11 13.

i Eph. 5. 3.

k 1 Tim. 2. 10.

l Tit. 2. 1.

The second word is εὐσχημόνως καὶ κατὰ τάξιν: let all things be done εὐσχημόνως καὶ κατὰ τάξιν, decently & in order[c], for it is a cause of rejoycing unto the righteous to see this, as Saint Paul said, I rejoyce beholding your order[d]. And thus things lawfull in themselves may become unlawfull unto us, if either first wee doe them not well for the manner of them, but for some base or by end; or if secondly we offend our brethren when we need not by any impulsive command; or thirdly, when we doe those things which are undecent, uncomely, disorderly, or not beseeming our places, or persons, or professions. And therefore it is not sufficient to say (as some doe) this is not a sinne; for although it be not in the substance, yet it may be so unto thee, in regard of the circumstances thereof; wherefore we must examine our actions by these three rules, Faith, Charity, Decency. First, examine what thou dost by the rule of Faith; and herein observe these two things { An Bonum sit. / An Benè fiat.

c 1 Cor. 14. 40.

d Col. 2. 5.

First examine, whether that which thou dost be good or not, & that out of thine own knowledge, for nothing must be done with a doubting faith[e] for that pollutes and defiles the conscience[f]. And therefore remember, if it be not certaine, that thou maist lawfully do that w^ch thou desirest, it is most certain thou maist lawfully abstain from doing it: as for example; if thou be not certainly assured of the lawfulnes of Usury, or of recreations, upon the Sabbath day, or of going to law with thy brother; thou maist be assured that it is lawfull to abstain from these; and therefore rather forbeare that which is certainely lawfull; then doe that which is disputable, controverted, and consequently uncertainely lawfull. Secondly, examine, whether that which thou dost bee well done or not; And herein search into these two things, I. In generall, if thou dost it Sincerè, with a sincere heart. Deus remunerat adverbia[g], God doth not alwayes reward Bonum a thing which is good for the substance of it, or good materially; but alwayes, bene, that which is formally good, done well, and with a sincere heart. If a Justice of Peace, or a Judge upon the Bench, execute Justice, with anger, or hatred or revenge; it is bonum, a good thing to execute just judgment, but not bene thus to execute it. If an hypocrite pray, that hee may the better devour widowes houses; this prayer shall not be rewarded, because although to pray bee bonum, yet thus to pray is not bene.

e Rom. 14. 22. 24

f 1 Cor. 8. 7.

g Bern.

II. In particular, examine if thou dost that which thou dost Securè safely; to wit, if thou dost not tempt God in the doing thereof, by approching too neare the gates of sinne. There are certaine cords of vanity, which draw on iniquity as with cart-ropes[h] from which all ought to abstain, but principally those that are infirme and weake; and it becomes every particular person, to acknowledge his infirmities, and consequently to avoid all the occasions of sinne.

h Esa 5. 18.

Secondly, examine what thou dost, by the rule of Charity; and here three things are to be enquired which warres against our soule[a]. Secondly, our owne wisedome; for reason dictates and teaches many things unto us, contrary unto Gods word, yea often times those things which are not false principles, but false consequences from true antecedents; as for example, the Sabbath was made for man, therefore man may lawfully breake the Sabbath. It is lawfull for Christians to eate flesh, but if it doe offend a weake brother, it becomes unlawfull unto us to doe it, if it be in our power or choyce to doe it, or not to doe it.

Quest. 6. How, or by what meanes can lawfull things become unlawfull?

Answ. Because even lawfull things are to bee moderated according to a three-fold rule: and therefore when they erre from any of them, they become unlawfull. The first rule is faith: wherein two things are required, I. That the thing which is done bee good, not a thing which is forbidden by the Law. And Titus must speake those things which become sound Doctrine[l]; which places teach us, that wee must not onely doe those things which are good, but also which are comely, and beseeming us.

The second word is εὐσχημόνως καὶ κατὰ τάξιν: let all things be done εὐσχημόνως καὶ κατὰ τάξιν, decently & in order[c], for it is a cause of rejoycing unto the righteous to see this, as Saint Paul said, I rejoyce beholding your order[d]. And therefore remember, if it be not certaine, that thou maist lawfully do that w^ch thou desirest, it is most certain thou maist lawfully abstain from doing it: as for example; if thou be not certainly assured of the lawfulnes of Usury, or of recreations, upon the Sabbath day, or of going to law with thy brother; thou maist be assured that it is lawfull to abstain from these; and therefore rather forbeare that which is certainely lawfull; then doe that which is disputable, controverted, and consequently uncertainely lawfull. Secondly, examine, whether that which thou dost bee well done or not; And herein search into these two things, I. In generall, if thou dost it Sincerè, with a sincere heart. Deus remunerat adverbia[g], God doth not alwayes reward Bonum a thing which is good for the substance of it, or good materially; but alwayes, bene, that which is formally good, done well, and with a sincere heart. If a Justice of Peace, or a Judge upon the Bench, execute Justice, with anger, or hatred or revenge; it is bonum, a good thing to execute just judgment, but not bene thus to execute it. If an hypocrite pray, that hee may the better devour widowes houses; this prayer shall not be rewarded, because although to pray bee bonum, yet thus to pray is not bene.

II. In particular, examine if thou dost that which thou dost Securè safely; to wit, if thou dost not tempt God in the doing thereof, by approching too neare the gates of sinne. There are certaine cords of vanity, which draw on iniquity as with cart-ropes[h] from which all ought to abstain, but principally those that are infirme and weake; and it becomes every particular person, to acknowledge his infirmities, and consequently to avoid all the occasions of sinne.

Secondly, examine what thou dost, by the rule of Charity; and here three things are to be enquired quired into. First, Verum ad perniciem, will not this which thou doſt tend to the deſtruction of thy brothers ſoule ? Doſt thou not lay a ſtumbling blocke in his way [i], and ſo become the occaſioner of his fall [k] : Thou knoweſt (or at leaſt thinkeſt) that to be lawfull which thou doſt ; but another is not certaine, that it is lawfull, and yet doth it becauſe of thy example, whence thou becomeſt a murderer unto thy brother [l].

i Rom. 14. 13.
k 1 Cor. 8. 9. 10
l Rom. 14. 15. & 1 Cor. 8. 11.

Secondly examine, utrum ad ſcandalum, will not this which thou doſt offend thy brother ? This thou muſt be very carefull of, To give no offence either to the Iew, or to the Greeke, or to the Church of God [m].

m 1 Cor. 10. 32. & 8. laſt verſ. and Rom. 14. 20.

Thirdly, Verum ad damnum ; will not this which thou doſt tend to thy brothers damage and loſſe ? A man muſt not burne his own houſe, that his neighbours may be fired alſo.

Thirdly, examine what thou doſt by the law of Decency, whether it becomes thee to doe it, or not, either in regard of thy perſon or place ? As for example, Firſt, doth it beſeeme thee as thou art a Chriſtian, and a profeſſor of the Goſpell : Stems ſprung from princely ſtockes ſhould not beare any baſe fruit ; Kings Sonnes ſhould not like poore boyes take in the Chanells ; and true Chriſtians who are the children of God ſhould not doe any baſe or unbeſeeming thing, applying themſelves to gather the thicke clay of this world together, but ſhould have their affections heightned and exalted unto heavenly things.

Secondly, doth that, which thou doſt, become thee, as thou art a Magiſtrate ; thou art called to governe others, and therefore thou muſt be magnanimous, grave, and unblameable. Thirdly, or as thou a Paſtour ; ſound doctrine becomes ſuch, and not fables or needleſſe trifles. Fourthly, or as thou art a Father of a family ; thou governeſt privately others, and therefore thou muſt ſo governe thy ſelfe, that thou give no evill example to thy Children or Servants. Fifthly, or as thou art a wife, a child or a ſervant ; thou muſt be ſubject, and obedient. Sixtly, or as thou art an old man, thou muſt be an example of gravity, ſobriety, and piety unto others, and not wanton, or light, or vaine, making thy ſelfe by that meanes, either a reproach or a laughing ſtocke unto others. Whoſoever in that which he doth, tranſgreſſeth either the law of Charity, Faith, or Decency, is condemned by the Apoſtle. Rom. 14. 1 Cor. 8.

Obiect. Some here obiect, if circumſtances may make a good thing evill, then a good intention will juſtifie an evill action, by the rule of contraries ; for contrariorum eadem eſt ratio.

Anſw. The reaſon here is not alike, as appeares thus, Firſt, a pari from the like inſtance, the touch of a polluted thing (under the leviticall law) polluted the toucher, but the touch of a ſanctified or holy thing did not ſanctifie the perſon touching it [b].

b Hag. 2. 13.

Secondly ratione, by this reaſon, becauſe Bonum a good thing is a poſitive word, not a comparative, and therefore is to bee predicated abſolutely, not relatively or comparatively : but Malum an evill thing, is a privative word, contradictory to Bonum good : Bonum quod omnino bonum, et Malum quod aliqua parte malum : that is called good which is altogether & in every reſpect good, but that is called evill, which is in any regard, or in any part thereof evill : as for example, that is called wholſome which is altogether ſuch, but that is called unwholſome, which is ſo only in part. A ſpoonefull of poyſon wil ſpoyle and infect a whole flagon of wine, but a ſpoonefull of wine will not purge from all infection, and harme, a pot of poyſon : yea whether wine be powred into the poyſon, or poyſon into the wine, both are alike mortall.

Thus wee have ſeene how that Chriſt would not turne ſtones into bread, becauſe hee would not obey or beleeve the Counſellar (the devill) as alſo becauſe that, which was lawfull in generall might prove ſinfull in the circumſtances : I proceede therefore to the next.

Chriſt would not change ſtones into bread, becauſe hee was not led aſide of the Spirit in the wildernesſe to worke miracles : he had a calling to helpe others by his miracles, but not himſelfe in this place : to teach us that wee muſt not undertake or enterpriſe any thing without a calling : but of this befor, and therefore I omit it, comming unto the laſt particular, which is this.

Chriſt would not command the ſtones to bee made bread, becauſe Sathan and his hunger was to be overcome by patience and quiet ſuffering, not by ſignes and miracles [c] ; teaching us hereby to depend upon the ordinaris meanes, not upon miracles : or in thoſe things, wherein we are deſtitute of ordinary meanes, we muſt be patient, and contented, becauſe this is the object of patience.

c Chryſoſt. ſup. Obſerv. 3.

Queſt. Why may we not have recourſe to indirect meanes (when direct and lawfull are wanting) for the relieving of our neceſſity and ſupplying of our wants ?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe it is the decree of God thus to try thee : nothing can come unto thee without the divine and ſpeciall providence of God, and therefore thou muſt doe as David did, who durſt not avenge himſelfe upon Shemei, becauſe God bad him curſe and revile him [d] ; remembring alſo that thou art called to ſuffer [e], and therefore thou muſt not labour to remove away thy ſufferings by unlawfull meanes.

d 2 Sam. 16. 10.
e Phil. 1. 29.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe the uſe of the meanes altereth nothing : the neglect of lawfull meanes accuſeth thee, but it doth not change the decree of God [f] : And therefore ſeeing wee cannot reſiſt the will of God, or make void his immutable decree by any thing we doe, wee ſhould not at any time, or upon any occaſion fly unto the uſe of unlawfull meanes.

f Acts 3. 18

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we are never deſtitute of lawfull meanes, and therefore never ſhould uſe unlawfull : to ſay that in our neceſſities, dangers, diſtreſſes, and ſtreights we are deprived of lawfull meanes, were to ſay, that God were unfaithfull in his promiſes, who hath ſaid, I will never faile thee, I

will

100 will never forsake thee; and therefore this is not so much as to be whispered. For the confirming of the truth of this answer, obserue, that in all our necessities we haue a double helpe, or meanes to vse and fly vnto for succour.

First, fasting and prayer which is a very forcible and effectuall remedy, against either temporall or spirituall dangers and evils.

Secondly, hope of the divine ayd and assistance of God; and that both in rewarding thy sufferings hereafter, and in enabling thee here to undergoe what he layes upon thee, and in his due time removing the evill from thee [g].

g 1 Cor. 10. 13.

Quest. 8. Is it never necessary to vse vnlawfull meanes?

Answ. I answer, No, for the clearing whereof obserue, that there is a threefold necessity; First, Necessitas rerum, a necessitie of riches, or an estate, or of the things of this world: thus tradesmen say, they cannot liue and gaine, except they deceiue, and lye: thus poore men say, they must steale and pilfer, otherwise they and their little ones must starve: but these must know that there is no necessity of sinning: better gaine little, then loose the soule; better starve then steale.

Secondly, there is Necessitas vitæ, a necessitie of life: Thus some, if their children be sicke, repaire to the wisards and witches: thus subjects rebell against tyrants, persecuting both their persons and profession: but those must remember, that their children had better dye, then liue by the devils helpe: and these must know, that they owe obedience vnto superiours, either active or passive, and to rebell is contrary to the practise of the primitive Church [a]. Certainely, it is lawfull to rise vp against, and withstand invaders (as the Machabees did) but not against lawfull Kings, though they, forgetting the office of Kings should tyrannize over their subjects.

a Lege Apolog. Iustin. & Tertul.

Thirdly, there is Necessitas animæ, a necessitie of the soule, to preserve it from sinne; or to free it from concupiscence: Thus Lucretia murthered her selfe, because Tarquin had rauished her: and some kill themselves rather then they will be deflowred: But these must remember, that they pollute the soule by one sinne, while they shunne the pollution of another: yea it is themselves that contaminate their soules which were not defiled by an others fault: it was no sinne in Lucretia to bee forced violently against her will, (for that was Tarquins fault that rauished her, and in him a hainous sinne) but it was in her a notorious sinne, to kill her selfe. To conclude, Vincit qui patitur, affliction is to bee borne, temptations are to be withstood, I. by prayer. II. by watchfulnesse in them, and against them. III. by hope and expectation of the divine helpe and assistance of God: but IV. never by the vse of wicked or indirect meanes.

VERS. 4. But he answered and said, it is written, Man shall not liue by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Vers. 4.

§. 1. It is written.] Christ fights against Sathan onely with the sword of the Spirit, the word of God, and all the dartes hee throwes at him, are fetched out from the quiver of the Scriptures. Sect. 1.

Why did Christ this? Quest. 1.

I answer First, because this is the best and most powerfull weapon: as God is stronger in himselfe then Sathan, so his word is most operative against Sathan: it is the sword of the Spirit [b], able both to defend us, & offend our enemy [c], it being the sword of Gods mouth, 2 Thes. 2. able to confound the adversary thereof, and make the obedient thereunto wise unto salvation. Answ. 1.

b Ephes. 6. 17.
c Heb. 1. 3.

Secondly, Christ did this, to teach us, that nothing doth captivate an evill conscience, or subdue evill concupiscence sooner then the word of God: it being a sharpe two edged sword [d]; Adam had figleaves to cover his shame, and never was truely awakened, untill the word of the Lord comes unto him saying, Adam where art thou [e]? Answ. 2.

d Heb. 4. 12.

Who in such like cases vse any other weapons? Quest. 2.

I answer, there are divers that vse other meanes then the word of God against Sathans assaults, viz. First, some fight against him with the wisedome of the flesh; they dare not assent either for losse of goods, or reputation amongst men or the like; this weapon is a traytor, and will at length consent unto Sathan, and fight against him that useth it: yea the devill is wiser and more crafty then men, and therefore humane wisedome will never conquer him. Answ.

Secondly, some perswade themselves, that they can drive away the devill by their exorcismes, conjurations or the like. Thus the Papists use these remedies against the devill. I. their sacramentall consecrated wafer cakes. II. holy water. III. the sound of consecrated belles. IV. the signe of the crosse. V. the Gospel of Saint Iohn hung about their neckes. VI. the name of God, or of Christ. VII. verses, per crucis hoc signũ, &c. and divers other ridiculous things, which are too fooliish or frivolous to overcome or expell Sathan: the divell seemes to feare these, but hee doth but faine, that he may deceive the users of them; for it is onely the word of God, that hee feares, the weapons wherewithall our Saviour foiles him.

But the Papists may here object, it is the word of God which they use; Saint Iohns Gospel, and the name of God, &c. are the word of God, and therefore a warrantable remedy against the devill. Obiect. 1

The word of God profits us, if we use it aright, that is,

First, it profits not, being barely pronounced with the lipps, or carried about us: as we may see by the sonnes of Scheva [g], they adiure the devill by Jesus, whom the Apostle preached, but hee obeyes them not, but woundes them to their hurt. Answ.

g Act. 19.

Secondly, it profits, when it is applyed by faith; for thus this strong man is overcome [h].

h 1 Pet. 5. 9.

Who are enemyes unto this weapon of the

the word of God?

Answ. 1. First, those that forbid the translation of the Scripture into the vulgar tongue, which may be understood.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those that prohibit the reading of the word of God; because ignorance thereof will not condemne them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those that applaud ignorance of the Scriptures, as the mother of devotion, and to be preferred before the knowledge thereof. These are refractory unto the Lords injunction, who commands them to bee read and taught even in private families [i], and to bee diligently studyed night and day [k], and to be read to all the people, as Iosias did [l], and Nehemias also, Chapter 8. These are contrary to Christs practise here, and to his precept else-where, commanding to search the Scriptures [m]. These are not like those noble Bereans, whom Saint Paul commends, that turned over their bookes, to see whether the Apostle taught them according to the Scriptures or not [n].

[i] Deut 6. 7. 8.
[k] Psal. 1. 2
[l] 2 Chron. 34. 30.
[m] Iohn 5. 39.
[n] Act. 17. 11.

Obiect. 2 But here the Papists object, the Scriptures are perillous and full of danger to him that reads them, because they are difficult to be understood, and being misunderstood, they leade unto errour.

Answ. 1. First, if holy writ be dangerous to be read, so are also humane writings; they being indeed full of errours, as we may see in the writings of Origen.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the whole Scripture is not difficult to be understood, and consequently not dangerous to be read: there are depths, where an Elephant may swimme, and shallow places, where a Lambe may wade over: yea all necessary truths are plainely expressed.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, let it bee granted, that they are hard, and dangerous, to him that throughly understands them not, yet they must not therfore be taken away, because they are necessary darts, yea, the principall darts against Sathan. Yea why doth the Church of Rome thus prohibite the Scriptures? because they are dangerous, that is, because there is indeede great feare and danger, that the reading of this divine truth will detect, and lay open the Popish errours, which they cannot endure should be disclosed.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, I answer, to the question propounded, they are enemies (or at least not friends) unto this weapons of the word, that spend time unwillingly in the reading and hearing of it: that can spend three houres in the hearing of a Comedy with more delight, then one in the hearing of a Sermon or in reading the Scriptures; not because a play is better, but for one of these causes, either First because thine eyes are blind, and understanding so obscure, that thou canst not understand, or perceive those spirituall truths, which are specified in the Scripture [o]. Or secondly, because although thou understandest, what thou heareſt and readest, yet thou lovest the world better then God; thy body better then thy soule, and thy pleasure, more then thy eternall blisse. Or thirdly, this is because thou canst not brooke or endure the reproofes of the word of God: it doth not praise thee, but blame thee, and therefore thou hatest it, as Ahab did Michaiah. But thou must consider, that if thou wouldest not sinne, the Minister would not reprehend thee for sinne; and if thou wouldst abound in good workes, hee would praise thee: In the meane time he must take care of thee, and not bee wanting in reproofes, untill thou bee reformed; because that is the profitable balme, to cure thy sick soule. And therefore, heare, reade, learne, and obey the word, yea labour, that thou mayest be rich in the knowledge thereof [p], that so thou mayest be made wise unto salvation, and surely armed against all the fiery darts of Sathan.

[o] 1 Cor. 2 14.

§. 2. Man lives not by bread alone:] Sathan enquires here whether Christ be the Son of God or not; why then doth Christ answer concerning men, Man lives not by bread alone?

Sect. 2. Quest.

Answ. 1. First, that he might shew that he was a man, and obliged to humane obedience: obedientia ejus, obedientia hominis [q], the obedience of Christ, was the obedience of man.

[q] Chrysost

Answ. 2. Secondly, that hee might teach us that his answer doth belong unto us: for first, if hee had changed the stones into bread, what had that beene to us? Or secondly, if hee had said, that he being God, had no neede of bread; neither had this belonged at all unto us. But thirdly, when he answers what man must doe, he doth thereby propound an institution or instruction for us.

Sect. 3. §. 3. But by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God:] that is, by any thing, that God in his good pleasure wils to be our foode: or by any thing else besides bread, whatsoever God shall thinke good.

Obser. 1. Hence observe two things; First; things in respect of being must have dependance on the will of God, or on themselves, or one some other: I. if they depend upon themselves for their beeing, they are Gods: II. if they depend on any other thing without, and besides God, that thing then is God also: these two being absurd and neare blasphemy, it remaines, III. that all things and acts in the world, as acts considered, have their being by a dependance upon God, as on the highest cause.

Obser. 2. Secondly, observe God is not tyed to the second ordinary causes, but hee can doe that without them, which hee can doe with them, as appeares in these particulars. First, God sometimes works without meanes at all, as in the first creation of the Chaos; and in Christs healing many diseases.

Secondly, God sometimes workes with ordinary, but those weake and insufficient meanes in the order of nature: thus Asa beleeves, that it is nothing with God to helpe, whether with many, or with them that have no power [r]; yea examples we have hereof in the booke of God, as when the figges healed Hezekiahs sore [s]; when Iacobs rods, made the sheepe bring forth party-coloured lambes. Gen. 30. 37. 38. when the wind brought quailes. Exod. 16. 30. &c. when Gideons 300. souldiers got the victory [t], and Ionathan and his man. 1 Sam. 14. 6. when Elijah went in the strength of his meat forty dayes [u]. All these were

[s] 2 King. 20. 7.
[t] Iudg. 7. 22.
[u] 1 King. 19. 8.

102 were wrought by ordinary meanes, but the meanes in themselves were altogether ineffectuall for the effecting of such great workes, as these were.

Thirdly, God sometimes workes by meanes altogether unusuall and unwonted, such as was Manna in the Desart: so without the Sunne he caused light to shine forth, either out of the whole Chaos, or els out of the element of fire, at the first creation: so without raine at the same time, the earth was fruitfull: And thus with the noyse of Rammes-hornes the walles of Iericho fell downe.

Fourthly, God sometimes workes with quite contrary meanes: as Christ healed the blind mans eyes with clay and spittle [a], and Ionas is saved by being in the whales belly [b].

[a] Ioh. 9. 6. 7.
[b] Iona. 2. 10.

Vers. 5. VERS. 5. Then the devill taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the Temple.

Sect. 1. Quest. §. 1. Then the devill taketh him up:] It is questioned here, how the devill tooke him up, whether it were first truly, or in a vision? or secondly, visibly or invisibly? or thirdly, violently, or willingly? and Musculus thinkes, that these things are not curiously to be enquired or searched out: yet (I hope) we may safely answer;

Answ. 1 First, that the devill tooke up Christ really and truely; for what neede we deny this, seeing the affirmation thereof is not contrary to the analogy of faith? yea to deny it, were to change the truth of the Scriptures into figures, as did Origen in times past, and the Anabaptists at this day.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if it bee objected, how could the devill take up Christ invisibly? Chrysostom (oper. imperf.) answers, that it was easie for him to doe it by the power of Christ: for if Habakkuck could be transported from Iudea into Babylon, and seene of none, then why not Christ?

Answ. 3. Thirdly, there is no question but this was done willingly, for it was not in the devils power to draw him against his will. Cum audis ductum, ne cogita potentiam Sathanæ, sed patientiam Christi: in Domino non infirmitas sed patientia; in Sathana non virtus sed superbia [c]: when thou heares, that Christ was taken up by Sathan, thinke not of the power of the devill, but of the patience of Christ, for in him is no weakenesse but patience; and in the devill no power but pride, who thought that he did this by his owne power, because Christ did not resist him at all herein.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Into the holy Citie.] What Citie was this? Jerusalem. Luke 4. 9.

Quest. 1. Why did not the Divell rather take him up into some high Cliffe, or Rocke in the Desart?

Answ. Because he despaired to prevaile against him, or overcome him in a solitarie place; and therefore now he will tempt him unto vaine-glory, which men are more apt unto.

Quest. 2. Was this Citie holy?

Answ. I answer, it was called the holy Citie; but it was nothing lesse; for it was at this time a most corrupt place: Teaching us, that the Church, (although she want not her spots, yet) is called holy. Observ.

Quest. 4. Why is the Church called holy, when shee is polluted and stained?

Answ. 1. First, because shee is consecrated to holy uses; the name of God is called upon there; the Oracles of God are taught there [d], and religion is professed there, wherefore she is called holy [e].

[d] Rom. 3. 2.
[e] Dan. 9. 24.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because she ought to bee such, the members of the Church should be holy, as their Father is holy, 1 Pet. 1. 15.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because God accepts of our weake, and imperfect obedience (if so be it be sincere) as though it were holy, not imputing our sinnes and infirmities unto us.

Vers. 6. VERS. 6. And sayth unto him, If thou bee the Sonne of God, cast thy selfe downe: for it is written, he shall give his Angels charge concerning thee, and in their hands they shall beare thee up, lest at any time, thou dash thy foot against a stone.

Sect. 1. §. 1. If thou bee the Sonne of God.] Before (verse 3.) the Divell seemes to doubt, whether Christ were God, or not; and therefore that he may be the better resolved, hee tempts Christ to turne stones into bread. Now he tempts Christ to demonstrate unto others his Deitie, by casting himselfe downe headlong: as if hee would say, I see thou art secure and safe, and canst not be harmed, because the Angels have the charge of thee, to keepe thee; but the inhabitants of Ierusalem know it not, and therefore cast thy selfe headlong, and wee will all, without any further question, beleeve that thou art the Sonne of God. Where wee see before he tempted him unto Diffidencie, and distrust, and would have had Christ to make triall, whether he were the Sonne of God, or not: now hee tempts him to Confidence and assurance, the opposite of diffidence, that because he is certainly the Sonne of God, hee may therefore safely throw himselfe from the pinnacle, for he cannot be endangered thereby.

Quest. Why doth Sathan allure us unto contraries, from diffidencie unto an unwarrantable confidence?

Answ. 1. First, not because hee is opposite unto himselfe; but because hee endeavours one and the same thing by contrary meanes, his craft more clearly shining forth hereby.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because vice is not onely opposite unto vertue; but also unto the contrary vice.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because often our mindes change, which being observed by Sathan, hee changeth his bait: For first, sometimes we delight in the vanities of youth, and sometimes in the impieties of old age. Secondly, sometimes wee care not for our sinnes, that is, feare them not: sometimes we are driven to despaire with the sight of them. Thirdly, sometimes wee neglect pietie; and are carelesse of the practise of it: sometimes times we are puſt up, and grow proud of our performances. Thus as Polypus, for his owne advantage, can take upon him the colour of a fiſh, or of a rocke, ſo this enemy of mankinde, Polypus and Proteus like, can change himſelfe into every ſhape, and ſute himſelfe unto every diſpoſition.

Sect. 2. Object. §. 2. For it is written.] The Papiſts object this place for the proofe of the neceſſity of humane traditions, Heretikes, and the Divell pretend Scripture for their errours; and therefore we muſt not adhere onely unto the Scriptures, but beſides them, we muſt have the traditions of the Church.

Anſw. We admit the antecedent, but deny the conſequent; for when Sathan abuſes Scripture, that he may the better prevail againſt Chriſt, our Saviour doth not forſake the word, and flye unto Traditions, but ſtill uſeth this weapon, untill hee have conquered his enemy the divell. The divell objecting here, it is written, &c. Chriſt doth not anſwer him, Traditum eſt, but Scriptum eſt, it is written, and not delivered by tradition: And therefore by our Saviours example we are not to leave the Scriptures, but cleave the more cloſe unto them, becauſe the divell and wicked men abuſe them.

It is written.] The Divell uſeth no Scripture, Obſerv. 1 that wee finde before this, but now when hee findes himſelfe wounded, and driven backe with this weapon, he labours to wreſt it to his wicked purpoſe: Teaching us that it is a divelliſh thing to defend ſin, by Scripture: For Firſt, the divell doth not apply himſelf to the ſenſe of that Scripture, which he alleadgeth, but wickedly wreſts the words to his owne purpoſe.

Secondly, he repaires not unto the Scripture; untill he be ſo ſtraightned, that he knowes not how otherwiſe to unwind himſelfe. Thus oftentimes doe wicked men, pervert the ſenſe of the ſcripture, when otherwiſe they cannot maintain their practiſes. Thirdly, to patroniſe and defend ſinne, by the word of God, is to make God a patron and defender of ſinne, which is a monſtrous impiety.

Queſt. 1. How can ſinne be defended by the Scripture, ſeeing it is a continued doctrine according to holineſſe?

Anſw. It is eaſie to bee done by abuſing, wreſting, and corrupting of it; as the Spider can draw, and ſucke poyſon from the moſt ſweet and Obſerv. 2 wholeſome Flowers. Teaching us, that ſatanicall men from the ſacred fountaines of Scriptures, can find out and invent arguments againſt religion; becauſe although they be the foundation of truth, yet theſe men build ſtraw and ſtubble upon them: Wee are ſaved by grace (ſaid the bleſſed Apoſtle [a]) therefore we may ſinne that grace may abound, ſay theſe wicked ones [b].

[b] Rom. 6. 1. 2.

Queſt. 2. Ex veris nil niſi verum, from true propoſitions, nothing can follow but a true concluſion; how then can wicked men from this fountaine of truth, draw arguments for the maintenance of errours?

Anſw. This may bee done three manner of wayes, Firſt, falsò citando, by corrupting and falſe citing of them, and this is done one of theſe two waies, either firſt Addendo, by adding to the word of God as Evah ſaid, forte, leſt perhaps ye die, whereas God had ſaid Morte morieris, poſitively, thou ſhalt die the death. Thus the Phariſees, adde unto the word of God; the law ſaith, thou ſhalt love thy neighbour; therefore (ſay they) thou ſhalt hate thy enemy. Or Secondly, this is done Omittendo, by omitting ſome thing, as the Divell doth here, It is written (ſaith he) God will give his Angels charge to keepe thee, that thou daſh not thy foote againſt a ſtone; but he leaves out the maine thing, [c] Pſa. 91. 11. in vijs tuis [c] to keepe thee in thy wayes, now hee tempted Chriſt to an unwarrantable tempting of Gods providence, and therefore would have had him thus to goe out of his way, wherefore fraudulently, he keepes backe that particular, in thy wayes.

Secondly, this may be done, falsò explicando, by a wrong ſenſe and interpretation; or by a falſe explication of the words. Thus Uſurers abuſe the parable of the talents; and Papiſts falſly explicate theſe Scriptures; He gave to every man a penny, Mat. 20. And he ſhall not come out untill he have paid the uttermoſt Farthing. And behold here are two ſwords. And avoid an heretike, and divers others, of which (God aſſiſting me) in their proper places.

Thirdly, this is done falsò applicando, by a falſe application of the Scripture, or by a wrong deduction, by a begging of the queſtion: Thus the Papiſts abuſe Daniel, God is called by him, the Ancient of dayes, therefore they may paint him like an old man: the Jewes ſay, it is blaſphemy for man to equall himſelfe with God, therefore Chriſt blaſphemes: Who can reckon up the genealogie of the Meſſias, but they can reckon up Chriſts (as Matthew and Luke doe) both by Joſeph and Mary, and therefore he is not the Meſſias. Thus errours may be built upon the Scripture by a falſe application of them. And therefore we had need be very wary, and cautelous, both how we read and heare, and expound, and apply the Scriptures; and when any falſe teachers, or Sathan, or our owne corrupt heart would teach us to finde out Scripture for the ſtrengthning or maintaining of ſinne, or errour, let us ſay as old Iſaac ſaid, this is Iacobs ſmooth voice, but Eſaus rough hands; The words are Gods, but this ſenſe, explication, and application is the Divells.

Sect. 3. §. 3. He will give his Angells charge over thee, &c.] The Divells ſcope is here, to draw Chriſt unto preſumption, and he endeavours it by faire gloſſes, and ſweete blandiſhments, viz. Firſt (ſaith he) there is no danger in the thing at all, neither any cauſe of feare, for thou ſhalt be kept and preſerved by the Angells. Yea, Secondly, thou maiſt be aſſured of it, for Deus juſſit, God hath commanded his Angels concerning thee, and therefore they dare not but looke carefully unto thee; wherefore mitte te deorſum, caſt thy ſelfe downe. From whence wee may obſerve, Obſerv. that the Divell makes all ſinne to appeare beautifull to our ſight, and ſweete to our taſt, like the forbidden apple, which was faire, to looke upon on, and good for food, and the end was good also being knowledge and honour[a]. Hence unlawfull delights are called the pleasures of sinne, because sinne seemes full of pleasure and delight; the divell is a subtle fowler, that deceives us with his sweete musicke; and like the Panther hides his devouring jawes, letting us see nothing but a faire, delectable and sweet smelling skin; he can cry like a Crocodile, untill he have drawne us out of our way; he will embrace us with a Ioabs arme, and salute us with a Iudases kisse; yea his care is not to terrifie us, but to allure us.

a Gen. 3. 4. 5.

Quest. How doth the Divell allure and intice us?

Answ. By these two wayes and meanes: First, by propounding unto us the sweetnesse of sin, hee makes sinne seeme sweet to every sinner: Drunkennesse seems sweet to the drunkard although it be hurtfull to the body, to the estate, to the reputation and credit. Adultery seemes delightfull, although it be the cause of bastards, ignominy, disgrace, and most loathsome diseases: lying, bragging, boasting, dissembling please many a man, although others deride them, and flout them for it, and will not believe them; yea swearing and blaspheming, although it be neither any way pleasing or profitable, yet our corrupt nature delights too much in it, as appeares by the too frequent use of it: and therefore let us not be deluded with an outward shew, but remember that although the face seemes faire, yet it is but painted, and if the vizard were taken of, sin would appeare out of measure sinfull; though the Cup seeme of Gold, yet the draught therein is poyson, the wayes of sinne being death[b], and no better then Circes cup, which of men will make us beasts; and therefore let us withstand all the temptations of Sathan, with the consideration of the end of sinne.

b Rom. 6. 23.

Secondly, the divell deludes and deceives us, by making us to presume of pardon; hee tells us, Si quoties peccant homines sua fulmina mittat, if God were as severe as some make him, none could be saved; but he is not ready to punish, but rather to pardon; hee will accept of us at any time, though at the last gaspe, as he did the thiefe upon the crosse: yea if we wil believe him, he wil tell us, that wee need not feare though our sinnes be great, for great Saints have beene as great sinners as wee are: David was an adulterer; Noah a drunkard; Lot an incestuous person, yea Christ came to save sinners; and therefore thou maist presume of pardon: But we must remember, that Christ came to save onely penitent sinners, not impenitent: there were many theeves, adulterers, drunkards, incestuous persons, &c. whereof were saved, vel duo, vel nemo, very few; there were many widowes in Israel, but the Prophet was sent to none, but to her alone of Sarepta. Why did Christ save one theefe upon the Crosse? Because none should despaire of mercy, upon the condition of true repentance. Why did Christ save but onely one, (that we read of) at lifes last period? Because he would have none to presume of mercy, and to procrastinate their repentance.

VERS. 7. Iesus said unto him, It is written againe, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Vers. 7.

§. 1. It is written againe.] Is the Scripture contrary to it selfe, or one place therein unto another, that our Saviour saith, it is written againe? Sect. 1. Quest. 1.

Answ. No: but our Lord hereby shewes, that the Divell concludes falsly, because hee gives the sense contrary to another Scripture: Teaching two things hereby unto us, first, that from the Scriptures by a false collection, and deduction, may bee drawne things contrary unto religion: but of this in the former verse. Secondly, that is not the true sense of any Scripture, which doth thwart and crosse, or contradict any other Scripture; and therefore the true sense of the word is to be drawne from the same harmony; God is not mutable[c], neither are his words our words[d], and therefore his words remaine the same for ever[e], one sentence of Scripture is not contrary to another, but they all make up one truth, and all proceede from one mouth, which cannot faile. Truth is one, immutable, and constant, and can never become a lye, or false: but the word is truth; sanctifie them Father with thy truth: what is that? thy word is (not true onely, but) Truth[f].

f Ioh. 17. 17.

It is written againe.] Sathan abuseth Scripture, (and as it were prophanes it) yet Christ notwithstanding this, gives it not over; but keepes him close to his guard, with this Sword of the Spirit in his mouth, and hand, Scriptum est, it is written: Teaching us, that we must never depart from the use of the Scriptures, we must never forsake this weapon. Obser. 3.

Here divers questions will be made.

What is the Scripture, the use whereof wee must never forbeare? Quest. 2.

It is the word of God written by the Prophets and Apostles, being dictated unto them by the divine inspiration of the Spirit of God[a]. The words of the Prophets and Apostles, were the words of God: hence ever and anone they say, Thus saith the Lord, because the Lord spake in and by them. The Papists believe the Scriptures to bee the word of God, and prove it too, but by an argument, which the Philosopher will not approve of, viz. Probatione circulari, treading out this truth like a horse in a mill, in this manner; The Scripture is the word of God, because the Church teacheth us so: the testimonie of the Church they thinke infallible, because it is guided by the Spirit of God: they are sure it is guided by the Spirit of God, because the Scripture sayth so[b], and thus they run at the ring, ending where they began. Answ.

a 2 Pet. 1. 19. 20.

b Ioh. 16. 13.

If the Scripture bee not knowne to bee the word of God, but by the testimony of the Church, then how is it knowne to be such? Quest. 3.

For answer hereunto, I referre the Reader to the first question of this booke, Pag. 1. onely adding one answer more to those many: It appeares that the Scriptures are the word of God, by comparing of them with all other bookes, writings, Answ.

writings, and writers: for the amplifying whereof, take notice of three ſorts of Bookes; under one of which frankes, all ſorts of bookes and writings may bee included, viz. Firſt, Humane Secondly, Eccleſiaſticall. Thirdly, Divine.

Firſt, Humane bookes are bookes written by men (either in the Church of God, or out of it) of humane things, as Philoſophicall Bookes, or Rhetoricall bookes, or Politicall bookes, or bookes of any other humane Art or Science. Theſe are not divine bookes, but humane, not the bookes of God, but the writings of men, having both the matter, manner, method, and ſtile from men: And therefore theſe are not authenticall bookes, in all things to be beleeved, which they affirme.

Secondly, Eccleſiaſtical bookes are thoſe which are written by holy (or at leaſt learned) men, in the Church, containing divine things: Now theſe writings are to be admitted, and are called the word of God, as farre as they ſympathize, conſent, and agree with the word of God: but they are not authenticall of themſelves, but as they depend upon the Scripture, and ſpeake her true language. Theſe writings, I ſay, are ἀξιόπιστοι, non αὐτόπιστοι, worthy to be beleeved, but not of themſelves to bee beleeved, nor any further than they accord with the word of God.

Thirdly, Divine bookes are the bookes of God, written by the Prophets and Apoſtles; which bookes are the word of God, the Prophets and Apoſtles being onely inſtruments (Pen-men thereof) and the holy Ghoſt the Dictator, who endites unto them, both the matter, and manner, and the very words: and therefore is called aright the word of God, and are αὐτόπιστοι, of themſelves to be beleeved, becauſe the writers were θεόπνευστοι, and θεοδίδακτοι, inſpired, taught, and directed by the Lord of glory, and Spirit of truth in the writing of them. And thus comparing the word of God with all other writings, we finde that there are none to bee equalled for excellency, truth, purity, and infallibility thereunto; and therefore great neceſſity there is to adhere unto them.

Obiect. 1. The Anabaptiſts object, that the Scriptures are not now neceſſary, becauſe God made many promiſes that under the Goſpell all ſhould be taught of God; and that he would write his law in their inward man, and they ſhould heare a voice behind them ſaying, this is the way, walke in it[c].

Ier. 31. 34. Joh. 6. 35. Heb. 8. 11.

Anſw. These words are not to be underſtood ſimply but comparatively, that there ſhall bee greater knowledge under the New Teſtament; then was under the Old; according to the ſaying of the Prophet, the earth ſhall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, (that is in the times and places of the Goſpell) as the waters cover the Sea[d].

d Iſai. 11. 9.

Queſt. 4. Why muſt wee never depart from the uſe of the Scriptures, but (with our Saviour here) alwayes ſhield our ſelves with this buckler Scriptum eſt, it is written?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe there is a ſweete conſent, harmony, and concord in the whole Scripture: Divina enim lectiones ita ſibi connectuntur tanquam una ſit lectio, quia omnes ex uno ore procedunt[e]. All the Divine precepts of the word of God, are ſo linked together, as though they were but one onely heavenly lecture, becauſe all of them proceeded from one bleſſed and celeſtiall mouth. 105

e Auguſt.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe the Scriptures are more excellent then all other writings whatſoever, and more abounding with Grace, Vertue, and Piety. Quicquid in Scriptura docetur, veritas, quicquid præcipitur, bonitas, quicquid promittitur, felicitas[f]. That is, the Scripture teacheth nothing but truth, commandeth nothing but goodneſſe, promiſeth unto us all happineſſe. Alia ſcripturæ ſi quam veritatem docent, non ſine contagione erroris eſt; ſi quam bonitatem commendare videantur, vel malitiæ mixta eſt (ut non ſit pura) vel ſine cognitione vel dilectione Dei, ut non ſit perfecta. That is, if other writings teach any truth, yet it is not without the contagion and taint of error; if they ſeeme to commend any good thing, it is either mixed with malice, and ſo not pure; or without the knowledge, or love of God, and ſo not perfect. Tota Scriptura eſt convivium ſapientiæ, ſinguli libri ſingula ſunt fercula[g], the whole Scripture is a banquet of wiſedome, and every ſeverall booke a dainty diſh; and therefore great reaſon there is, that we ſhould cleave cloſe unto them.

f Hugo Card.

g Ambroſ.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, of all writings the Scriptures are moſt true, and therefore we muſt never give over the uſe of them. Pope Pius himſelfe ſaid, Reſiſtendum eſt quibuſcunque in faciem, ſive Paulus, ſive Petrus ſit, qui ad veritatem Evangelii non ambulant[h]. He is to be reſiſted to his face that walkes not (both in practiſe and opinion) according to the truth of the Goſpell, though it were Peter or Paul themſelves. The Prince of Anhault tearmed the Scriptures, the ſwathling bands, wherein Chriſt was wrapped that is the containers and includers of truth it ſelfe. Therefore we muſt never forſake them.

h Abbas Urſperg. geneſis.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, there is nothing more profitable either for the unregenerate, or for the regenerate, and therefore to bee adhered unto by all, becauſe under thoſe two all are included.

Firſt, it is profitable for thoſe that are not regenerated and as yet borne anew unto God, and that in theſe regards. Firſt, the word of God breakes the hard heart: Is not my word (ſaith the Lord) like a hammer, that breaketh the Rocke in pieces[i]. Secondly, the word of God gives ſight to the blind eyes[k]; Behold (ſaith God unto Paul) I have ſent thee to open their eyes, and to turne them from darkeneſſe unto light[l]. Thirdly, it is profitable for ſuch, to bring them from the power of Satan, unto God[m]. Fourthly, it is profitable unto them, for the pardon of their ſinnes, and ſpirituall adoption into the fellowſhip of ſonnes[n]. Fiftly, it is profitable to convince them of their ſinnes[o].

m Act. 26. 18. n Act. 26. 18.
o 1 Cor. 14. 24.

Secondly, it is profitable for thoſe that are regenerated, in theſe reſpects. Firſt, the Scriptures protect and defend them againſt the temptations of Satan; they are a ſhield unto them that put their truſt in God [p], yea they are the ſpirituall ſword, which ſerves both for offence and defence [q].

[p] Pro. 30. 5.
[q] Epheſ. 6. 17.

Secondly, by the Scripture the underſtanding of Gods children is more and more enlightned [r]. Thirdly, their affections are thereby more and more enflamed: Did not our hearts burne within us (ſaid the two Diſciples) while he opened unto us the Scriptures [ſ]. Fourthly, the word of God doth purge us from our guylt: Now ye are cleane through the word, that I have ſpoken unto you [t].

[r] Pſal. 19. 8, 9.
[t] Ioh. 15. 3.

Fiftly, the Scriptures are profitable unto the righteous, to arm them againſt afflictions, & to comfort them in ſorrow [u]. Sixtly, they ſtrengthen them unto patience in all croſſes whatſoever [x].

[u] Rom. 15 4.
[x] Rom. 15 4.

Fiftly, the word of God is the guid, convoy, and directer of the ſoule, and therefore cannot be forſaken without inevitable danger of erring, the word of the Lod is right [y], that is, regula recti, the rule of truth and uprightneſſe; yea thereby the ſervants of God are forewarned, that is adviſed, preadmoniſhed, and forearmed againſt the aſſaults of Satan [z]. The word of God is a light unto our feete, and a lampe unto our pathes [a]. And therefore we muſt not ſeeke unto them that have familiar ſpirits, but ſeeke the Lord, in the law and in his teſtimonies [b]. And therefore ſeeing the word of God is the conducter of the ſoule, wee muſt take heed, that we never forſake, or let goe out of our hands this weapon of the Scriptures.

Queſt. 5. It is here demanded, what word of God it is that is the directer of the ſoule? for it is controverted both by the Papiſts and Anabaptiſts, who like Sampſons Foxes [c], meet in the tailes both of them oppoſing us and the truth; but their heads are diametrally oppoſite one to the other, as appeares by a double quære.

[c] Iudg. 15 4.

Queſt. 6. Firſt, what word of God is the rule to walke by?

Anſw. 1. To this firſt, they both anſwer, not the Scripture alone.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Papiſts ſay, beſides the Scriptures there are ἄγραφα, traditions, which are the rule of the life alſo.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, the Anabaptiſts cry downe their traditions, and advance ἐνθουσιάματα, their enthuſiaſmes, and revelations, which we are rather to be regulated by, then by the written word of God.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, we ſay, that it is the written word onely, that is the rule of the life, and directer of the ſoule, and neither unwritten traditions, nor unwarranted revelations: If wee believe not Moſes and the Prophets, wee will believe nothing, ſaith our Saviour [d], becauſe the Scriptures were written, that we might believe, and believing, bee ſaved [e], and therefore ſaving faith is built upon the Scriptures only, and neither upon traditions nor enthuſiaſmes: yea it is onely the Scriptures that are truely profitable for all ſorts of men, as was ſhewed in the former queſtion, anſwer 4. yea they are able to make us wiſe unto ſalvation, and perfect men in Chriſt Jeſus [f], and therefore are the onely loadſtone of our life.

[d] Luk. 16 29.
[e] 1 Ioh. 20. 31.
[f] 2 Tim. 3 15.

Queſt. 7. Secondly, who ſhall expound the word of God which is the ſoules conduct?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, here they both anſwer, that the Scriptures muſt not expound themſelves; they muſt not be both a Judge and a Partie.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Papiſts, ſay the Church muſt interpret the Scriptures, that is, that Church which is built in the Popes breſt, infallibility lying and reſiding onely in him.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the Anabaptiſts ſay, the Holy Spirit in them is the interpreter of the word; that is, their revelations are all divine truthes, and to be obeyed, and admitted as oracles from heaven.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, we ſay the holy Scriptures interpret themſelves: quod in uno difficile, aliàs aptius, that which is more difficult in one place, is eaſier in another [a]. And therefore I conclude, that the holy Scripture is that Lucifer, or day ſtarre, that directs the ſoule unto Chriſt: for the Father ſends us unto the Sonne, commanding us to heare him: the Sonne ſends us unto the word, bidding us ſearch that diligently [b], the ſcripture is able to make us perfect: the Apoſtles taught the whole Counſell of God [c], and yet they teach nothing beſides Moſes and the Scriptures: And therfore how injurious unto the ſoules of Men are Papiſts, that robbe the people of this light, and debarre them from the Scriptures: Theſe are builders τῦ βαβελ, of Babell, indeede they ſpeake a tongue which the people cannot underſtand, for they muſt not enjoy it, or bee ſuffered to reade it in the vulgar tongue. Theſe make the Scriptures like the Shew bread, which none were to touch but the Prieſts alone. Theſe are like the ſpyes ſent to Canaan, they bring evill reports of the word of God: telling the people the beauty of it, but withall the difficulty to bee ſuch, as they can never overcome, and therefore it boots them not reade them.

[b] Ioh. 5. 39.
[c] Acts 20. 20. 20. 27.

Obiect. 2

To this I anſwer, Firſt Chryſoſtome oppoſes the Apoſtles to the Philoſophers, and Rhetoritians, becauſe theſe were very obſcure and hard to be underſtood; but the Scriptures are plaine, and may be conceived (at leaſt the precepts and inſtructions thereof) by the diligent reading of them, Chryſoſt. hom. 3. de Lazaro. Anſw. 1

Secondly, if the divine Scriptures be obſcure, humane writings are no leſſe: yea where ſhall we meet with certainty and infallibility, but onely in the word? Can we have it in the Fathers? they have their nevi and blemiſhes: yea Auguſtine and Hierom confeſſe, that they may erre; and therefore would have none to ſubſcribe to their opinions further, then they go according to the word of God. Anſw. 2.

Can we find infallibility in the Councels? they have erred, as may bee ſhewed largely, both out of Biſhop Iewell, Doctor Whitakers, Doctor Willet, Chamierus, and divers others. Can we finde certainty amongſt the Popiſh writers? leaſt of all, they jarring like an inſtrument wholy out of tune. Thomas againſt Scotus, Catharinus againſt Cajetane, Whatſon againſt Perſons, Bellarmine (in ſomethings) almoſt contrary to them all; and therefore if obſcurity and difficulty bee a ſufficient ent rampire to keepe us from reading the Scriptures; by the same reason we are debarred from reading Philosophers, Rhetoritians, Fathers, Schoolemen, Popish writers, yea all writings and bookes in any sort materiall or necessary to bee studied, because they all in many things are difficult and obscure to the understanding, and the Scripture is no more.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those things that are obscure in the word of God, may bee explained by more easy and cleare places, as was said before.

Answ. 4. e August. li 1. de doct. Christ. Fourthly, the Father saith [e], Christum Dominum obscurasse Scripturas, quo his major haberetur reverentia & autoritas; quæ communia sunt vilescunt, rara verò & difficilia cum pretio admirantur, that is, Christ our Lord in his infinite wisedome hath made the Scriptures something difficult, not that men might forbeare to reade or study them, but that they might hold them in greater authority, price, and reverence; for naturally we contemne those things, that are plaine and facile unto the understanding; but those things which are rare and difficult, we most admire and more highly value.

Obiect. 3 They object againe, The tree is knowne by his fruit, and the cause conjectured by the effect; and therefore it is neither requisite nor good for people, to reade the Scriptures in the vulgar tongue.

They proove the consequence thus, the Scripture read by those that are ignorant, is the cause of all errours and heresies: usus Scripturarum, est causa omnium hæreseon [f], the vulgar use of the Scriptures is the ground of all errours. Audenter dicimus, nullam hæresin esse, quæ non occasionem in Scripturâ [g], I dare boldly say (a bold speech indeede) that there hath no heresie sprung up in the Church, but it was occasioned by the word of God. An Italian Bishop dehorted the people from reading the scriptures, ne fiant hæretici [h], least it should make them damned Heretiques.

f Alphons. de Castro:

g Cens. Colon.

h Clem. Espens f. Tit. 1.

Answ. 1. To this we answer; First, the Scriptures may occasion errours either By containing that which is false, and erroneous; but this the Papists say not. Or By a misunderstanding, or wrong interpretation thereof; but this is not the fault of the Scriptures, but the malice, perverseneſſe, or ignorance of men.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if a wolfe should cloth himselfe in a sheepes skin, the sheepe must not therefore cast off his skinne, as Saint Augustine saith; the Bees must not forsake the sweet flowers, because the spider extracts poyson from them: Christ doth not (here) forbeare the use of Scriptures, because the devill abuses them: some men wickedly abuse Wine unto drunkennesse; Meat unto gluttony; Marriage unto coveteousnesse and adultery; Magistracy unto Tyranny: Must therefore Wine, Meat, Wedlocke, Magistracy, be prohibited, and cryed downe as unlawfull? I hope they will not; and therefore let them consider how little reason they have upon the like grounds, or insequent, or ilsequent consequences to forbid the reading of the Scriptures unto the laity in the vulgar tongue.

Answ. 3. 3. They permit worse and more pernitious things unto the common people; and therefore why not the Scriptures, though they were dangerous as they say? First, the Popish Clergy allow the Laity to reade other bookes which may occasion errours as well as the Scripture; yea containing errours (which the word of God doth not) as Iustinus, Irenæus, Origen, who were Chiliastes, Tertullian and Cyprian who were Montanists: these they permit, only the Scriptures they prohibit: why? because there is a greater enmity betwixt the Scriptures and the Papists, then there is betweene these Fathers and the Papists: the Fathers in somethings have erred greatly, the Papists in many things doe erre grossely, but the Scripture in nothing at all, it being the touchstone of truth, and the hammer of errours to breake them and dissolve them in peeces: and therefore as great opposition and enmity there is betweene the Papists and Scriptures, as is betweene truth and errour, life and death.

Secondly, the Priests allow the people to reade lascivious and wanton bookes, which may and doe infect them: why then not the Scriptures which is immaculate? it is an inhumane thing, yea an argument of small love, to permit them to wallow in stincking puddles, or to drink unwholsome, yea venomous waters; and onely prohibite pure streames, yea the water of life unto them. Si manifestum infidelitatis signum sit, aliquid scriptorum rejecere vel non scriptorum inducere; quid dicemus de lasciva præferentibus [a]? that is, if it be a manifest signe of infidelity, either to reject & refuse any part of holy writ, or to induce into the Canon of faith, that which is not divine scripture; what shall we say then of those who preferre lascivious and wanton bookes or toyes, before the word of God?

a Basil. tract. de vera fide.

Answ. 4. Fourthly and lastly, the objection is apparantly false; for first it is not the Scripture, but the ignorance of the Scripture that is the cause of errours and heresies [b]; which truthes we learne even from Truths lips, ye erre (saith Christ) not knowing the Scriptures [c], where wee see plainely the cause and the effect; the effect is error (yee erre) the cause of their errour is ignorance of the word of God, ye know not the Scriptures, therefore ye erre: It is not then without great cause, that the Holy Ghost cals the Pope ὁ ἀντικείμενος, the adversary, that thus dares in his Tenets oppose Christ himselfe to the face.

b Chrysost. f. col. 3. & c Mat. 22. 29.

Secondly, the Scriptures reproove heresies and errours, and therfore there is no likelyhood, that they in themselves should bee the cause of them [d].

Thirdly, there is nothing else worthy of credit besides the Scriptures: other writings being as chaffe, this as wheate [e], whence the Fathers [f] said, quod de scripturis sacris authoritatem non habet eadem facilitate contemnitur quâ probatur: those writing or opinions which are not confirmed by the holy Scripture, are easilyer contemned then confirmed, better rejected then received. Inter

Amongſt a thouſand talents of ſecular ſentences, a man ſhall ſcarce finde a hundred pence (yea not ten halfe pence) of ſpirituall coyne. Now if there be this immenſe diſproportion betweene holy Writ, and all other writings; there is then a great impudencie in thoſe that ſhall caſt this aſperſion upon them to be the cauſes of hereſies, and conſequently forbid the reading and ſtudying of them.

g Caſſ. l. Matth. 1.

Fourthly, the Scriptures are given us by God, to be our ſpirituall armour and weapons [h], Num in bellum ſine iis? quomodo ſervaremur[i]; and therefore if wee ſhould enter into the Liſts againſt our ſpirituall enemies without theſe, how could wee poſſibly eſcape their hands, or retire with ſafetie and freedome? they therefore that prohibite the common people the uſe, benefite, and knowledge of the written Word of God, doe certainly not deſire, that they ſhould bee the free men of Jeſus Chriſt, enabled manfully and victoriouſly to fight the battles of the Lord againſt Sinne and Sathan; but rather deſire and endeavour that they may bee overcome by Sathan, and retained in his captivitie and ſlaverie for ever, to the eternall deſtruction both of body and ſoule.

Sect. 2. §. Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God]. This place is taken either from Deut. 6. 16. or from Exod. 17. 7. or from Numb. 21. 5. which place is repeated Pſal. 106. 14.

Queſt. 1. — What is meant by tempting?

Anſw. I anſwer, Tentare, to tempt, is to enquire after ſome thing by ſome ſigne; or an endeavour to try, or to make triall of ſomething. And thus firſt man is tempted, and that either, I. by God, when he proves tis, as he did the Iſraelites, Iob, and Abraham, Geneſ. 22. Or, II. by Sathan, when he tries if he can deceive and delude man, by cauſing him to fall.

Secondly, thus God is tempted by man, when we make triall of his power, or of his truth; either in his threatnings, or promiſes: and this is the temptation here ſpoken of.

Queſt. 2. How doe wee tempt God?

Anſw. 1. I anſwer, Firſt, wee tempt him pie, piouſly, and warrantably, and that foure manner of wayes, viz.

Firſt, when wee tempt him by repentance, that is, having by our ſins provoked God unto anger, we repent and turne from them, to try whether the Lord will avert his judgements, or not. This is a warrantable tempting of God: for we have a command for it from him: Prove me now herewith, ſayth the Lord, and try if I doe not bleſſe you[a].

a Malach. 3. 10.

Secondly, when wee tempt him by prayer and faſting: Thus the King of Niniveh by a publick edict, ſanctified a faſt upon this ground, Who can tell, whether God will repent, and turne from his fierce anger, that wee periſh not[b]; as if hee ſhould ſay, we will try God, if hee will, by this meanes be appeaſed towards us. As the former tryall was commanded by God, ſo this is commended by him: and therefore muſt needs bee both warrantable and religious.

b Ionæ 3. 9

Thirdly, when wee tempt God by patience and dependance: thus the three children ſay unto the King, We know our God is able to deliver us; but if not, wee are ready to ſuffer for him[c], that is, we know, God is able, if hee pleaſe, to free us from thy hands; but wee know not whether hee will doe it, or not; yet by patience and confidence, we will try, what hee will be pleaſed to doe with us.

c Dan. 3. 17.

Fourthly, when wee tempt or try God by ſome eſpeciall command from him: that is, when the Lord ſhall bid us try him by any ſigne wee will, whether hee will doe, what hee hath promiſed unto us, or not: it is warrantable then to tempt him; yea not to do it, is blame-worthy. Thus God commands Ahaz to try him, by aſking what ſigne he will: and reproves him, becauſe he ſayth, I will not tempt the Lord[d]. This verſe ſpeakes not of this pious tempting and proving of God.

d Iſa. 7. 11 12.

Secondly, wee tempt God impiè, impiouſly and unwarrantably, Mala tentatio eſt ſigna petere, non ad ſalutem, ſed experientiam[e]: the wicked tempting of God, is to deſire a ſigne from him, not for our good, but onely out of an incredulous curioſitie to make tryall what he can doe. Mala tentatio eſt de Dei potentia, ſapientia, voluntate, (non neceſſariò) periculum facere[f]: the prohibited tempting of God, is, to make tryall of his power, wiſedome, and will, when by no neceſſitie we are compelled, or urged thereunto. Nulla cauſa Chriſto, ſe precipitandi, niſi experientia; ergo fuiſſet tentare Deum[g]. There was no cauſe at all, why Chriſt ſhould caſt himſelfe headlong from the pinnacle, except it were to make an experiment of Gods power, which was to tempt God unwarrantably; and therefore hee will not doe it, but anſwers, It is written againe, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

How doe wee tempt God wickedly and unwarrantably? Queſt. 3.

Firſt ſome [h] ſay, We tempt God two manner of wayes; to wit, Firſt, when we deſire and expect ſomething to bee done for us, and unto us; but in the meane time neglect the neceſſary and lawfull meanes for the obtaining thereof in naturall things, as when a man expects life, but refuſes meat; or health, but refuſes medicines and Phyſicke: or in ſupernaturall things, when a man deſires grace on earth, and glory in heaven; but in the meane time neglects the Word, Prayer, Sacraments, and the other meanes appoynted by God for the procuring thereof. Secondly, when any doe expoſe themſelves unto danger, without any urgent neceſſitie, from which there is no probabilitie, ſcarce poſſibilitie that they can be delivered, except God miraculouſly do it. Thus in naturall things, men ſometimes through a deſire of vain-glory, contemne death, and caſt themſelves (in nature) into inevitable dangers: Thus in ſpirituall things, men often runne into the occaſions and provocations of ſinne, as though they would dare the Divell to overcome them if he can. Now of this more by and by.

h Ameſius med. Theol. f. 318. Sect. 10.

Secondly,

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say [a], GOD is tempted 3 manner of wayes, viz.

a P. Mart. 2.4. Sect. 54.

- First, when we have meanes for the obtaining of our desires, but use them not; because we desire more gallant meanes, that is, either to be helped without meanes, or by meanes extraordinary: thus the Divell here tempts Christ to doe, not to goe downe, but to cast himselfe headlong.
- Secondly, when wee want means, wherein is a double fault, viz.
  - First, because wee will not patiently expect and awayt the Lords leasure.
  - Secondly, because wee prescribe unto God, either the - Time, as Ozias perswaded his brethren to endure five dayes, and if within that time God did not succour them, he would surrender the Citie [b]. b Iudith 7 30. 31.
    - Manner, when we are not contented either with
      - An ordinarie blessing, but wee desire greater, although prohibited unto us: thus Eve tempts God, that she may obtaine a greater measure of knowledge: and Rachel is not content, so long as she is deprived of issue [c]. c Gen. 30. 1.
      - An ordinary obedience, but tempt God, by imposing heavier things upon our selves, than the Lord requires of us, as the Israelites doe [d]. d Act. 15. 20.
- Thirdly, when obstinately and contumaciously wee provoke God unto anger against us, by our sinnes; Shall we (sayth the Apostle) provoke or tempt God unto jealousie, as though wee were stronger thanhe? that is, doe it not, for his jealousie burnes like fire [e]. e 1 Cor. 10 22.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we tempt God two maner of wayes, viz. either in his

- Threatnings, to see whether God { Can, or Will, } avenge himselfe upon us, according to his comminations.
- Promises, which sometimes wee
  - Beleeve not at all, by a distrust { Of the Doctrine; that is, of the Gospell, and the truth of God. / Of the practise; that is, of the protection, or providence of God.
  - Beleeve too much and either { Adde some circumstances out of our braine, Or, Neglect the meanes appoynted by God to bee used.

First, we tempt God in his threatnings, when notwithstanding them, wee continue in our sinnes: How long will yee provoke mee, sayth the Lord) unto anger, with your wickednesse [f]? Herein we tempt God three wayes, to wit, First, wee try, whether God can avenge himselfe, as hee hath threatned: thus Pharaoh sayth, who is the Lord, that I should obey him? I know him not, neither will I let Israel goe [g]. As if he would say, for this once I will try, what hee can doe unto mee for my disobedience of him. Thus Nebuchadnezzar, being not obeyed by the three children, in his fury, sayth, Who is that God that can deliver you out of my hands? that is, I will try whether your God can prevaile against me, or not [h].

f Numb. 14. 11.

h Dan. 3. 15.

Secondly, we try whether God can see what wickednesse wee commit, or not: They encourage themselves (sayth the Psalmist) in an evill matter: they commune of laying snares privily, and say, who shall see them [i]? yea more Atheistically they else-where say, [k] The Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Iacob regard it: as though they would say, they doe not beleeve that God can see, what they secretly doe, and therefore they will put it to the tryall, whether hee can, or not.

i Psal. 64. 5.

k Psal. 94. 7.

Thirdly, wee try, whether God will avenge himselfe or not upon us: often we perswade our selves, God sees us, and is able to punish us, and yet doubting whether he will or not, wickedly try it. These things hast thou done, and I kept silence (sayth God) wherefore thou thoughtest, that I was altogether such a one as thy selfe, &c. [l] that is, thou thoughtest that I loved sinne, and favoured it, as thou thy selfe doest; and because I did not speedily avenge my selfe upon thee, therefore thou thoughtest I would not punish thy impietie at all. It is very full of perill to tempt God any of these wayes.

l Psal. 50. 21.

Secondly, wee tempt God in his promises, when wee doe not beleeve the Doctrine, or scope of the Doctrine, or the promise that is made therein unto us: Now it is a dangerous and heavie temptation not to beleeve the bare word of God, without some ocular signe: Thus the Israelites tempted the Lord, saying; Is the Lord among us, or not [m]; that is, wee will not beleeve hee is, except miraculously he provide water for us, Thus the Jewes blasphemously mocke Christ, saying, Come downe from the crosse (upon which thou hangest, and unto which thou art nayled) and we will beleeve thee [n], otherwise wee will not, although God from Heaven hath pronounced thee to bee his Sonne. Hence our Saviour reproves the Jewes, because (not content with the infallible word of truth)

m Exod. 17. 7.

n Matth. 27. 42.

they seeke and demand a signe[b]; the word being given us for the rule of our lives.

[o] Luk. 11, 16. and Ioh. 6. 30.

Thirdly, wee tempt God in his promises, when wee doe not beleeve the promise of grace, of mercie, of protection, or providence which is made unto us: that is, when wee distrust of the successe or event, we tempt God impiously: this God blames in his people, Yee say, it is in vaine to serve the Lord[p]; that is, it matters not whether we serve him, or serve him not, all is one: for he will not bee appeased, or reconciled unto us, doe what wee can. God commands us to use the meanes both in naturall and spirituall dangers, and evils; and hee promises to blesse those meanes unto us, as farre as may stand for his glory and our good: and therefore for us to use the meanes (hereby doing our part) and to distrust the event and successe (which is Gods part) is to tempt him. This was the Jewes fault, Can God (say they) provide a Table in the wildernesse, and meat in the desart[a]? That which God requires (herein) of us, is this, if any lawfull meanes may bee used, use them to the uttermost; but leave the successe unto God: if there bee no meanes in our power to use, then cast our selves wholly upon God, with boldnesse of confidence, as Saint Paul did, Having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you[b].

[p] Malac. 3. 14.

[b] Phil. 2. 25.

Fourthly, we tempt God in his promises, when we believe too much; that is, hope and expect for more then is promised; for to believe those things which God hath not promised, is to tempt God, or to desire, beg, or pray for more, then God hath made any promise to grant, is to tempt him,

Every petition powred forth, must bee in Faith[c], which Faith is built upon the Word, that is, the promises[d], which promises are onely to be found in the Scripture[e]. And therefore we must not desire or expect more, then the word of God doth warrant or promise unto us: Carefully herein observing these three particulars. viz.

[c] Iam. 1. 6.

[d] Rom. 10 17.

[e] 2 Cor. 7. 1.

First, God onely promises unto us Generalia, generall things; as, I will be their God[f], and I will be thy exceeding great reward[g], and whom I once love, I love unto the end[h].

[f] 2 Cor. 6. 16.

[g] Gen. 17. 1.

[h] Ioh. 13. 1

Secondly, when God promiseth unto us Particularia, particular things, they are made upon some condition: Thus God promised that those that trusted in him, their life should be given them, as a prey in all places[i], and yet holy Zachary was slaine, Mat. 23. and Kingly Esaias was dissected with a saw; and therefore particular promises belong unto particular persons, and are made unto them upon some condition or other, which they must carefully observe, if they desire the blessing promised.

[i] Ier. 39. 18. and 45. 5.

Thirdly, we must therefore content our selves with generalls; that God will one way or other, by some blessing or other, make good his promises unto us, & either bestow some temporall blessing upon us, or free us from evils; or give us peace of conscience, or sustaine us by his grace, or strength of the Spirit.

It may by way of doubting be demanded, how wee can believe too much, or expect for more then is promised? Quest. 4.

I answer first, this is done two manner of wayes, First, by prescribing unto the Almighty a time of Mercy; this we must not doe, but wait, and expect the times and seasons of the Lord, who hath appointed times for all his purposes. And therefore wee must not bee impatient, or weary, or murmure at the Lords delay; but expect patiently the Lords leasure: & the time will come when wee shall say, surely there is a reward for the righteous[k]. First, is thy affliction heavy to be borne; then remember, sorrow may indure for a night, but joy comes in the morning: as thou maist perceive by many examples; Iobs affliction was great, yet it was shortly turned into prosperity, and all temporall affluence, the danger of Daniel and the three Children was extraordinary, yet God preserves the one in the Lyons den, and the other in the fiery Fornace; and delivers both the one and the other, in his appointed time. Ionahs danger was great, to be first swallowed by the sea, then by the Whale, yet in Gods due time hee is brought safe on shore. And therefore whatsoever thy affliction be, yet beare it, waiting patiently the Lords leasure for deliverance from it. Answ. 1.

Secondly, is thy innocency, and good name questioned and scandalized, and the false aspersions cast upon thee believed by others, yet murmure not; the Lord in his appointed season will cause thy innocency to shine and breake forth as the Sonne out of the clouds. Thus Davids innocency doth shew it selfe, at length towards Saul, and Mephibosheths towards David. 2 Sam. 19.

Thirdly; whatsoever thy griefe or paine bee, yet be not too hasty with God; Canis festinans edit cæcos catulos, the hasty bitch brings forth blind puppyes, and therefore, festina lentè, bee not impatient of delay, but stay the Lords leasure. The bond is not due, untill the day appointed, and so long as thou art not delivered, Gods limited day is not come, and therefore tempt not God by prescribing unto him a time, but seeing the times are decreed by him, for the accomplishing of his promises, let us patiently depend upon him, untill his mercy appeare towards us.

Secondly, this is done by prescribing unto the Almighty a measure of Mercy, and that either in temporall things, or in spirituall. Answ. 2.

First in spirituall things, by binding heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne[a] upon our owne backes, or upon others; this is to tempt God[b], yea to take away that Christian liberty from us, which we are called unto, and enjoy by the Gospell: of this sort are the Monasticall vowes, of poverty, single life, the observation of dayes, meats, and the like, which God requires not of us, and therefore in these we should remember these two things. First, Religion is burden enough for thee, if it bee rightly understood, professed and practised; and therefore there is no need to adde hereunto, for want of imploy-imployment, things not injoyned by the Lord. Secondly, thou knoweſt not thy owne ſtrength, thou art not ſure in thine owne mind, whether thou ſhalt be able, rightly to undergoe and performe theſe vowes or not: whether the love of the world, or the luſt of the fleſh be ſo thorowly mortified and crucified in thee, that they will never rebell, or make head againſt thee: and therefore take heed, that by ſuch yowes we doe not deprive our ſelves of thoſe lawfull remedies, which God hath appointed againſt ſuch ſinnes, for this is to tempt God, and to endanger our ſelves to be tempted by the divell [c], wherefore we muſt not cauſe our ſoules to ſinne [d].

c 1 Cor. 7. 5. 37.
d Eccleſ. 5. 5.

Secondly, in temporall things; by expecting or deſiring greater things then God hath as yet given, not contented with what is given: Rachel enjoyed health, the comfort of friends, and the company of a religious husband; but all theſe afford her no comfort, but except ſhe have children, ſhe ſhal die for ſorrow [e], Naaman comes to the Prophet to be cured, but once purpoſed to go away uncured, rather then be healed, by ſo contemptible a meanes, as the waſhing in Iordan [f], The Iſraelites firſt long for bread, but afterwards when they have it, they loath it, and luſt for fleſh [g], wherefore they are ſaid to tempt God. And therefore we muſt learne alwayes to be contented with our preſent portion, not tempting God; but remember, he knowes and ſees our neceſſities as well as our ſelves, hee knowes our ſtrength, and what may be good for us, better then we our ſelves, he ſees what the event will be, and will order and diſpoſe it to our good. The children of God may very well be contented to want all things, when God hath promiſed to care for them, and prohibited them to care at all, for the end, or ſucceſſe [h], becauſe although we might have what we deſire, yet we know not what the event will prove, as for example.

e Gen. 30. 1.
f 2 King. 5. 11.
g Numb. 11. 4. &c. and 21. 5.
h 1 Pet. 5. 6.

Firſt, wouldeſt thou deſire children, as Rachel did? It may be firſt, they would draw thy love from God, if not in toto, yet in tanto, thou wouldeſt ſo delight in them, that thou wouldeſt not rejoyce thy ſelf ſo much in God as thou diddeſt before.

Or Secondly, it may be, if children were given or granted unto thee, they would prove, diſobedient, ſtubborne, rebellious, prophane, traytors, theeves, heretikes, or ſuch diſſolute prodigals, that thou wouldeſt wiſh them dead, and bleſſe the wombe that never bare, in regard of thy unhappy ſelfe.

Secondly, wouldeſt thou wiſh riches, little doſt thou know what danger they may bring thee into; they draw many from Chriſt, as we ſee in the young man, who had beene a happy man, if hee had not beene a rich man [i]. Riches are often ordained for the deſtruction of the owner; as one ſaith [k], the poore Indians had beene happy, if their countrey had not afforded gold, for auri ſacra fames, the inſatiable deſire of gold made the cruell Spanyards unſatiable in the ſhedding of blood: as that authour, in an aſſembly of the Royall Counſell of the Judges, (with many learned Divines & Lawyers) called by the King, ſpake with beſt caution (being affronted by Sepulveda) avouching, that the Spaniards had ſlaine and deſtroyed in the ſeverall Ilands, where they came above twenty Millions [l].

i Matth. 19. 22.
k Barth. Caſa. Spaniſh cruelt.
l Pag. 132.

Thirdly, wouldeſt thou wiſh honour? It is a moſt dangerous temptation; Honores mutant mores, honours change diſpoſitions, and good manners: Stephen Gardiner, and Bonner were never perſecuters, until they were made Biſhops, Saul was puer bona indole, a youth of good hope and towardneſſe untill he was advanced unto a Kingdome: The number of thoſe, who have been made worſe by honours, is like the number of blacke Swallowes; but of thoſe who have beene made better thereby, is like the number of blacke Swans.

Fourthly, wouldeſt thou wiſh health, and quiet eaſe; freedome from ſickeneſſe, affliction, miſery, injuries, wrongs, and the like? Thou little knoweſt how profitable phyſicke for the ſoule, theſe bodily afflictions are, although for the preſent they be not joyous but grievous [m]. And therefore tempt not God in luſting for that which thou wanteſt, but be joyfully, and thankfully contented with that lot and portion, which thou haſt in temporall things.

m Heb. 12. 11.

Fiftly, and laſtly, we tempt God in his promiſes, by beleeving too much, when we expect to enjoy what we deſire, although we neglect the uſe of thoſe lawfull meanes, which God hath allowed and commanded us to uſe. This is the ſinne, which the Divell here tempts Chriſt unto, and which we, with Chriſt, muſt carefully avoyd, not preſuming either of the providence, or protection of God, without a warrant, and a word of promiſe from him. Here then two things are to be eſchewed; Firſt, Neemedia prætereamus, that we doe not omit lawfull meanes: thus although Iacob had a promiſe to prevaile, and finde mercie at his brothers Eſaus hands, yet hee ſends gifts unto him, which in him was a lawfull meanes. Hezekias had a promiſe of a longer life, and yet he uſeth the meanes to preſerve it. And therefore, Firſt, they are to blame, that neglect to be providently carefull for themſelves, or their families: yea, they are worſe than infidels. But ſuch will ſay, God will provide. I anſwer, God hath provided and done this already; for he hath given unto thee either ſome ſubſtance to employ, and improve, or ſome wiſdome, and underſtanding; or ſome ſtrength and ability to worke, and imploy thy ſelfe: and therefore thou ſhalt give an account unto God of this talent given unto thee by him. Secondly, they are to blame that neglect ſpirituall meanes, as the hearing and reading of the word of God, prayer, the Sacraments, mutuall pious conference, and the like. Theſe will ſay, we are not called. I anſwer, you muſt not expect to be called ſedentes, but ſtudentes, not when you are idle, but when you are imployed in the outward work of the Lord: when the Eunuch was reading the Scriptures, then God ſends an Expoſitor unto him, to cleare his doubts. Thoſe that would bee healed healed did wait at the lake of Bethesda, & those that would be hired, must attend in the market place. Thirdly, they are to blame, that neglect the health of the body, or the preservation of their life; as first, those that wil not defend themselves, or stand upon their guard, when they are assaulted, as the Macchabees did. Secondly, those that neglect medicines and physick in sickenesse, why hath God given herbes, and medicines, and the Art of Physicke, but to be used?

Thirdly, those that will not for their healths sake eat those meats, which are good and wholsome, the learned Papists allow those that are weake and sicke, upon weighty occasion and urgent necessity to eate flesh, or broath wherein flesh hath beene boyled, upon a Friday or a fasting day; and yet there are some so ignorantly superstitious, that they will rather wholly overthrow their healths, yea indanger their life, then doe it. Thus much for the first thing to bee avoided.

Secondly, the other thing to be avoided is, Ne in pericula nos conijciamus, that wee doe not cast our selves into unwarranted, and unnecessary dangers. This is the very sinne that Christ is here tempted unto, to hope for mercy, which was not promised unto him: Thus the Israelites presume to go up to the hill against the word of God, and are therefore slaine by the Amalekites[a], and therefore we must not thus tempt the Lord, by intruding our selves into any dangers, beyond our callings, either in generall, as we are Christians, or in our particular callings.

Quest. 5. Why must we not tempt the Lord?

Answ. 1. First, because we are not stronger then he is. 1 Cor. 10. 22.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because those that did tempt him, were destroyed of the destroyer. 1 Cor. 10. 10.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, because it is displeasing unto God, and provokes him unto anger against us.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because it makes God turne blessings into curses, & to give us those things, which with murmuring wee tempt him to give, in anger; thus hee gave the Israelites Quailes and Manna, but leanenesse in their soules.

Psa. 106. 14.

Vers. 10. VERS. 10. Then saith Iesus unto him, get thee hence Sathan, for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him onely shalt thou serve.

Sect. 1. § 1. Abi, get thee hence.] Some here observe a difference, betweene ὕπαγε here used to the divell, and ὀπίσω used to Saint Peter, Matth. 16. 23. But this observation is not worth observing, because Saint Luke Chap. 4. Vers. 8. useth the same phrase to Satan, which he doth unto Peter. The meaning is this; cease satan, desist, tempt no more, but submit thy selfe.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Get thee hence Satan.] Why doth Christ

Quest. 1. now use the divell so rigorously and severely.

Answ. I answer, Christ did this in a threefold respect. viz. First, in respect of himselfe. Secondly, in respect of Sathan. Thirdly, in respect of sinne.

First, Christ now handles satan severely and with power, in respect of himselfe; that hee might shew, that he was all this while tempted willingly, and not by the will of satan; and that satan can tempt him no longer, then he pleaseth, that we hence might reape comfort in temptations.

It may here be demanded.

Quest. 2. Are all temptations directed, and ordered by Christ?

Answ. The temptations of the faithfull are guided and disposed by Christ, who will not suffer them to be tempted above their strength[a]; he is alwayes present with his children, and alwayes watchfull over them; and therefore they shall not be tempted further, then he pleases.

[a] 1 Cor. 10 13.

Quest. 3. Why are the temptations of the righteous guided and ordered by Christ?

Answ. 1. First, that we might learne hence, that we are not tempted at the divells pleasure, neither can he sift us when he will: but onely goe as farre as God gives leave, and assault when Christ permits, as we see in Iob. 1. 12. and 2. 6. and 38. 11.

Answ. 2 Secondly, that wee might learne hence, that we are not suffered to be tempted, that we might be harmed, or killed, but onely for these good and profitable ends. First, that we might be proved and tried[b], that our faith may thereby the better appeare[c]. Or Secondly, that we might be the more confirmed in the assurance of our Adoption, Regeneration, or future Glory, for 1. they are bastards, and no sonnes, that are not tempted, afflicted, and tryed[d]. 2. There is no participation of Christ, without partaking of his sufferings and tryalls[e]. 3. There is no assurance, that we shall be glorified with him, except we suffer temptation and tribulation with him[f]. Or, Thirdly, that we might be instructed, and weaned from sinne: thus the Lord afflicted Israel[g], or that thereby we may be preserved from sin, which we are otherwise like to fall into, and thus, lest Paul should be puft up by aboundance of revelations, a temptation and buffet of satan was sent unto him[h].

[f] Rom. 8. 17.
[h] 2 Cor. 12. 7.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ directing all our afflictions and temptations unto these ends, hath a care, least any thing should hurt us; yea hence he doth mitigate & moderate our afflictions according to the saying of the Father[i], si longa, levis, si magna, brevis: if long, it is the lighter, if strong, it is so much the shorter: as we see in Gods message, unto David, whether he would chuse 7. yeares famine, or 3. moneths flight, his enemyes pursuing him, or 3. dayes Pestilence[k].

[k] 2 Sam. 24. 13.

Quest. 4. Are all that are tempted regenerated and united unto Christ, and adopted into the fellowship of the sonnes of God, as was affirmed in the former question?

Answ. 1. First, there is a double temptation, in regard of the temptation it selfe. viz. 1. Temporall afflictions. 2. Spirituall opposition unto sinne, both which are incident unto the wicked, as well as the righteous.

Answ. 2 Secondly, there is a twofold temptation in regard of the person tempting, to wit first, a temptation of sathan unto sinne, secondly, of God unto repentance.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, to speake properly, Sathan suos non tentat

tentat sed imperat: the devill tempts, oppoſes, and aſſaults the righteous; but he commands the wicked to obey, not tempting them: for thoſe that are his, are not ſhaken and aſſaulted with a violent oppoſition unto ſinne, but ſinne of themſelves daily, and are allured unto iniquity by the devill willingly.

Answ. 4.

Fourthly, temptation is a ſigne of filiation, when we warre againſt Sathan, and ſtruggle againſt ſinne. More particularly, examine theſe foure things, for the triall of our adoption and regeneration.

Firſt, doſt thou ex animo, from thy ſoule deſire to glorifie thy God in thy life and converſation? Secondly doſt thou with thy ſoule grieve, that thou doſt by thy daily ſinnes diſpleaſe and diſhonour thy God? Thirdly, art thou watchfull and carefull to prevent all ſinne, yea the very occaſions and provocations thereunto? Fourthly, when thou art aſſaulted, doſt thou pro viribus, with all thy might and ſtrength withſtand the temptations of Sathan, fighting even unto blood, reſiſting and ſtriving againſt ſinne? Hee that findes theſe things in him may be comfortably aſſured, that he is Athleta Chriſti, the Lords Souldier, fighting under his banner, who hath renounced the ſervice of Sathan, and will rather die in battell, then be (by ſinne) brought into ſubjection unto him againe. Thus wee have heard the firſt generall reaſon, why Chriſt doth thus anſwer the devill; Get thee hence Sathan:

Answ. 2.

I come now to the ſecond.

Secondly, Chriſt did this in reſpect of ſathan, becauſe now he palpably reveales himſelfe to be oppoſite to God. Quæ hactenus levia, contemptu facilia[a], his other temptations were more triviall and contemptible: this more inſolent and impudent; and therefore Chriſt will ſuffer him no longer, but quels him, and drives him away, as he will alſo at the laſt all wicked men, that oppoſe him.

[a] Aretius ſ.

Queſt. 5.

Who oppoſe Chriſt?

Answ.

I anſwer Firſt, thoſe that ſtrive to ſtop the mouth of conſcience, and to extinguiſh the motions of the Spirit. Secondly, thoſe that contemne, deſpiſe, or ſleight the word of God; that are neither affected with joy, nor ſorrow, nor ſhame, in the preaching and publiſhing either mercies or judgements, promiſes or threatnings. Thirdly, thoſe that deſpiſe the counſell and advice that is given unto them, either by friends or Miniſters: who will doe all their will, let all the world ſay what they will. This is for men to be Gods unto themſelves, to be ruled by their owne wils, and guided by their owne hearts luſts: but take heede, for howſoever Chriſt may for a while permit thee as he doth the devill here, yet at the laſt (if thou continue thus to oppoſe him by an obſtinacy and wilfulneſſe in ſin) thou ſhalt heare from him that thundring voice, which will make thee quake and tremble, Get thee hence thou wicked wretch into everlaſting fire.

Answ. 3.

Thirdly, Chriſt did this in reſpect of the ſin that the devill tempted unto, which was the prophanation of the glory of God: and therefore when he harpes upon this ſtring, Chriſt will endure neither him nor his muſicke any longer, but preſently ſtops his mouth with an Abi, Get thee hence.

§. 3. Get thee hence ſathan.] Why doth Chriſt name the divell now (calling him ſathan) which he had not as yet done.

Sect. 3. Queſt. 1.

Firſt, Chriſt calleth him Sathan, that he might the more confound him; as if hee would ſay, thou boaſteſt thy ſelfe as if thou wert a God, and hadſt al the world in thy power to diſpoſe of at thy pleaſure, but cacodæmon es, thou art no other then a wicked divell.

Answ. 1.

Secondly, Chriſt calles him Satan, that hee might the more corroborate and ſtrengthen himſelfe to reſiſt him: as if he would ſay, when I remember, that all theſe temptations come from ſathan, then I cannot but hate them the more deadly, and reſiſt them the more manfully: Thou ſeemeſt (ſaith our Saviour implicitely) to bee my friend, and to deſire my advancemẽt, & to make me the ſole Monarch of all the world, but aliud ſimulas fronte, aliud es pectore, whatſoever outwardly thou ſeemeſt, yet thou art neither better nor worſe then a divell, a deſtroyer, the enemy of mankind, and therefore Abi, Get thee hence ſathan:

Answ. 2.

Teaching us hereby, That the beſt remedy againſt ſinne and the temptations thereunto, is to remember that they come from ſathan our grand enemie: as for example, Firſt anger, it comes from the divell[b]. Secondly, brawles and contemions or jarres are hatched in hell[c]. Thirdly, lying, and Fourthly cruelty, ſpring from the ſame originall, for the devill was a lyer and a murtherer from the beginning[d]. Fiftly, & ſic de cæteris, we may ſay the ſame of all ſinnes, they being the devils workes[e].

Obſer.

[d] John 8. 44.
[e] 1 John 3.8.

Why will this remembrance or conſideration, that the temptations unto ſinne come from ſathan bee a meanes to preſerve us from ſinne?

Queſt. 2.

Becauſe as ſoone as ever we call this to minde, we conclude, firſt that it is vanity which he perſwades unto, having onely a ſhew of pleaſure or profit, but indeede none at all, being no other, then ſweet poyſon. Secondly, wee conclude hence, that it is filthy, polluted, and uncleane, if the devill perſwades unto it: ſuch as the cauſe is, ſuch is the effect, from a filthy ſtincking puddle, cannot iſſue pure and wholſome water; no more from an uncleane divel, can any pure thing be derived. Thirdly, we conclude, mors in olla, that there is danger and death in it, if the devill tempt unto it: becauſe he is our enemie[f], and therefore his counſell muſt needs be pernitious: he is a lyer, and a murtherer, and therefore death is the doome of him, that beleeves his lies.

Answ.

[f] Matth. 13.25.

§. 4. For it is written,] We ſee, Chriſt here makes the Scripture his firſt and laſt argument, the fortreſſe, which hee will not forſake nor bee beaten from.

Sect. 4.

Why doth not Chriſt anſwer the devill otherwiſe? for being moved with leaſings, and provoked by his bold inſolences, he might have anſwered. Firſt, doſt thou ſpeake true ſathan in what thou promiſeſt, wouldeſt thou indeede

Queſt. 1.

114 give me what thou sayest, if I should fall downe and worship thee? or dost thou promise that, which thou meanest not to performe? Secondly, though thou hast a desire to bee as good as thy word, whether art thou able or not? is the whole world thine to dispose of at thy pleasure? Thirdly, suppose all this world were thine to give me, couldest thou thereby make mee greater, or more happy then I am already? Fourthly, canst thou perswade thy selfe, or imagine, that I can bee moved or enticed at all with the possessions and preferments of the world? Christ (I say) might thus have taken off Sathan, but he doth not, but onely puts him in minde of his duty; Anſw. It is written, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God: And that for these causes, First, that he may teach us his Modesty, he doth not complaine of these injuries and injurious speeches of Sathan unto him.

Secondly, that he may teach us his meekenes, he doth not by way of recrimination reproach Satan.

Thirdly, that hee may teach us his carefulnesse to obey his Father; seeing hee neither proves nor affirmes any thing from himselfe, or his owne will, but all from the rule of obedience, the word of God. Obſerv. And Fourthly, his answer being necessary, modest, and directly pertinent to the question; doth teach us thereby, that Christians answers should be meeke, and ad rem, gentle, and punctuall unto the thing demanded. First, they must bee meeke and gentle: let all bitternesse of speech (saith Saint Paul) be put away from you[a]. And againe, lay aside all evill speakings[b]. Secondly, they must be ad rem, pertinent unto the question, and the thing in hand: let your speech (saith the Apostle) be alwaies with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know, how ye ought to answer every man. Colos. 4. 6.

[b] 1 Pet. 2. 1.

Queſt. 2. Why must wee be thus carefull of our answers?

Anſw. 1. First, because wee ought to bee imitators of God: who hath made or done nothing in vaine, there is nothing idle in nature, there is not a vaine or needlesse word in all the Scriptures: we therefore in all our answers should labour to imitate God herein, by striving that they may Anſw. 2. be concise, weighty, and to the purpose.

Secondly, idle words in interrogatories, or harsh answers beget jarres, and contentions, and bitter brawlings; and therefore our answers must Sect. 5. be meeke.

Obiect. 1 [c] Bellar. l. 4. de Euch. Cap. 29. §. 5. Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God:] The Papists [c] object this place for the adoration of the Eucharist: God is verily, and truely to be worshipped; as in this verse, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God: But Christ in the Eucharist is very God: therefore verily in the Eucharist to Anſw. 1. be worshipped.

First, we may easily grant the whole argument as framed by the Cardinall, that Christ is in the Eucharist to be adored; and so hee is also in Baptisme, and in the word preached, as the [d] 1 Cor. 14. 24. Apostle sheweth plainely [d], If all propheſie, and there come in one who believeth not, &c. the secrets of his heart are made manifest, and hee will fall downe on his face and worship God, and say plainely; that God is in you indeede. So wee also, though we utterly deny that the Eucharist is to bee adored, yet we worship Christ in the Eucharist, saying, we praise thee, we blesse thee, we worship thee, we glorifie thee, &c. Anſw. 2.

Secondly, wee may deny the argument, as framed by the Cardinall, it being a false Syllogisme: the Minor proposition not following from the Major, according to the rules of Art. God is verily and truely to bee worshipped, (this is most true) But Christ in the Eucharist is very God, saith Bellarmine; whereas he should have assumed thus, if hee would have proved any thing: But the Eucharist is very God, which is blasphemy to say. Anſw. 3.

Thirdly, though we should grant the body of Christ to be verily present in the Eucharist, yet it is the not the body of Christ God. Anſw. 4.

Fourthly, there are the formes of bread and wine remaining still, which being creatures and not hypostatically joyned to the person of Christ, cannot without great perill of idolatry be adored. Anſw. 5

Fiftly, to put all out of doubt, Christs flesh is not bodily present, neither can they ever be able to prove it: and therefore they have no colour or ground at all for this their adoration of the elements.

Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God.] These words we see are here alleadged by our Saviour against Sathan, who had tempted him to fall downe and adore him: wherefore by this text all falling downe and prostrating of our selves before any creature to adore it, is forbidden, without which submissive gesture, not the meanest kind of religious worship can be exhibited unto any: from whence we collect this conclu- Argum. sion, that no religious worship, properly, or improperly, accidentally, of of it selfe, or any other kind of way, belongeth unto Images: but that to God onely wise, immortall, invisible, all religious worship is onely due. Obiect. 2

Bellarmine answers hereunto, that this place is to be understood of a certaine kind of religious worship, which is onely proper unto God. Anſw.

All religious worship is forbidden in this place to be given to any but unto God: for Sathan did not tempt Christ to worship him as God, but onely to fall downe and worship him: he asked onely of him προσκύνησιν, a certaine inclination of the body, which Christ denyed, as being onely proper to God. Sect. 6.

§. 6. And him onely shalt thou serve.] Solum Queſt. onely, or alone, is not in Deut. 6. 16. Why doth our Saviour here adde it, or alleadge it?

First, to teach us that all precepts enjoyning the Anſw. 1. worship and service of God include the force of this particle, Alone [a].

[a] Perkins.

Secondly, Sathan doth not prohibite Christ Anſw. 2. the worship of God, but onely perswades him to adde the worship of him thereunto, that is, to worship both God and him, wherfore our Saviour well and properly answers by adding Solum, alone; teaching us that God is not rightly worshipped, except he be onely worshipped: or the worship of the creature, is contrary to the worship worshippe of the Creator: that is not onely the internall affection, and worshippe of the heart (which is forbidden in the first commandement) but also the externall worshippe of the body, forbidden in the second commandement, non incurvabis, nec coles, thou shalt not bow downe unto, nor worshippe any other thing besides the Lord. The word which the devill useth verse 9. is προσκύνησις, which belongs unto the outward worshippe of the body; and is derived either from προσκυνὴς, to be vaine-glorious, or one that loves glory: or from προσκύσσω. I incline my selfe: or from κύω. I kisse (as the Papists doe the Popes feete) or from κυνη a hat, and so προσκύνησις, signifies a mooving of the hat: Now all spirituall worshippe both externall and internall is the Lords prerogative, and peculiar unto him alone; and therefore hee is not truely worshipped, except onely worshipped.

VERS. 12. Now when Iesus had heard, that John was cast into prison, hee departed into Galilee. Vers.12.

Quest. Why did Christ depart from Iudea into Galilee?

Answ.1. Many causes may be rendred hereof; First, some say he did this, as he was one of Iohns auditors; and therefore John being taken away, Observ.1 hee would abide here no longer: Teaching us, that the godly will rather change their habitations, and places of abode, then be deprived of the ministrie of the word. But this was not the cause of Christs departure, and therefore I prosecute it no further.

Answ.2. Secondly, some say, Christ did this, as he was God, to revenge Johns imprisonment, by taking away his grace and gracious presence from those, that had persecuted John his messenger and Obser.2. forerunner: Teaching us, that God will bee avenged of those that oppresse and persecute his Ministers; but this was not the cause neither of Christs departure, and therefore I leave it.

Answ.3. Thirdly, Christ did this, as hee was a Man; flying from that imminent danger, wherein hee Obser.3. was, teaching us that it is lawfull for us to flye persecution, or any danger that hangs over our heads: observing these cautions.

First, if our calling will suffer it; here it is more lawfull for people to flye from those cities, that are infected with the plague, then for Ministers: because the calling of the one will rather permit it, then the calling of the other. Secondly, if our flight or departure may be without the offence of the weake: those that professe to have a sure trust and confidence, and affiance in the providence and protection of God, doe often give a great scandall to those that are infirme, by their fearefulnes and speedy departure, upon any conjecture, suspition, or probability of danger. Thirdly, if our life (preserved by departure and flight) may bring more glory to God, and more benefit unto his Church; then our death, it is lawfull to depart.

Answ.4. Fourthly, Beza denies that Christ fled. First, because ἀνεχώρησεν, signifies redijt; non discessit, hee returned, not hee departed. Secondly, because the place, hee went unto was lesse safe then this from whence he departed; Galilee beeing under the jurisdiction of Herod Antipas, which Iudea was not. Wherefore hee answers, that Christ returned into Galilee, that hee might succeede unto Iohn (who was now shut up in prison) in the Evangelicall office, and preaching of the Gospel. 115

VERS. 13. And leaving Nazareth, hee came and dwelt in Capernaum, &c. Vers.13.

Quest. Why doth Christ leave Nazareth?

Answ.1. First, because it was lesse safe, say some: But this was not the reason of it, for first, when Ioseph was afraid to goe into Iudea, he turned aside into Nazareth, Matth. 2.23. which was in Galilee, verse 22. yea secondly, Capernaum was the more famous place, and therefore the more dangerous.

Answ.2. Secondly, Christ left Nazareth, because hee was there unworthily handled: for first, his word was there contemned and despised: hence it is said, that he did not many mighty workes there, because of their unbeleefe [d]. Secondly, he had violence there offered unto him, for they rose up against him, and thrust him out of the city, and led him out unto the edge of of the hill, that they might cast him downe headlong [e].

d Matth. 13.58. Marke 6. 4.5. e. Luke 4. 29.

VERS. 14. That it might bee fulfilled, which was spoken by Esaias the Prophet, saying. Vers.14.

§. 1. Vt impleretur, that it might be fulfilled: Christ left Nazareth, and came to Capernaum, for another cause, then the accomplishing of this propheste: to wit first, because Iohn was cast into prison: and secondly, because the Nazarens were ungratefull unto him, in not beleeving either him or his doctrine; how then saith Saint Matthew, that he did this, That the saying of Isaias might be fulfilled? Sect.1. Object.

Answ. I answer, Christ did depart from Nazareth for the forenamed causes, but yet God doth direct this his departure unto a further end; to wit, that, which is mentioned here by the Evangelist, the accomplishing of the prediction: Teaching Observ. us, that those things which proceede frō second causes, are ordained by the providence of God unto a higher end. Ioseph was sold wickedly, and maliciously by his brethren, but the Lord ordered it for good both to him and them [a]. The raine-bow proceedes from naturall causes, but yet God hath ordained it as a signe, or a memorandum of his promises [b]. Christ was slaine by the Jewes out of malice, and yet did no more then was preordained by God [c]. For first in him we live, and move, and have our being [d]. Secondly, he is not an idle spectator (as some of the Philosophers in their idle speculations imagined) of the passages of the world, but his providence doth begin every motion or action. Yea thirdly, unto what end God at first intended a-116 ny thing, unto that ſame end, he doth at laſt diſpoſe of it.

Sect. 2. Queſt. §. 2. That it might be fulfilled, which was written by Iſaias the Prophet ſaying.] How is this Prophecie fulfilled?

Anſw. I anſwer, in that thoſe that ſate in darkeneſſe, Eſai 9. 1. enjoy light, by the preaching of the Goſpel of Chriſt. Eſai. 9. 2.

Verſ. 16. VERS. 16. The people which ſate in darkeneſſe, ſaw a great light; and to them which ſate in the region and ſhadow of death, light is ſprung up.

Sect. 1. Queſt. Anſw. §. 1. The people which ſate in darkeneſſe:] Who were in darkeneſſe before Chriſt came?

All the world, not ſome few of the Gentiles or Jewes onely, but all men by nature without Chriſt, were under darkeneſſe and death. The truth of this anſwer will appeare particularly thus.

First, all men without Chriſt are ſubject to death: all have ſinned, and come ſhort of the glory of God [c], all men have ſinned, and therefore death hath paſſed upon all men [f]: who cannot bee freed from this ſpirituall death, or made partakers of the life of grace, but onely by Chriſt [g].

c Rom. 3. 23. f Rom. 5. 12. g Rom. 8. 2, 3.

Secondly, all men without Chriſt are in blindneſſe and darkeneſſe: no man is borne learned, neither can we without Chriſt learne or underſtand any thing that is good: ſpirituall things are ſpiritually underſtood, and the naturall man cannot aright conceive them, or take them up [h], by reaſon of his naturall and innate blindneſſe.

h 1 Cor. 2. 14.

Thirdly, this blindneſſe and ignorance ſhewes it ſelfe in the Gentiles two ſeverall waies, viz.

First, in their Idols, which they honored and held as Gods; when ye knew not God, ye did ſervice unto them, which by nature are no Gods, ſaid the Apoſtle [i], yea they made Gods of birds, foure-footed beaſts, and creeping things [k], yea ſo palpable was their blindneſſe, that they made a God of the devill: the things (ſaith Saint Paul) which the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice to devils, not to God [l]. Secondly, the blindneſſe of the Gentiles ſhewes it ſelfe in their horrid worſhip or ſervice of their Gods: for firſt they had a Barbarous worſhip, as appeares in their Bacchanalia, which were celebrated with drunkenneſſe, brawles, madneſſe, and the like.

i Gal. 4. 8. k Rom. 1. 23. l 1 Cor. 10. 20.

Secondly, they had a filthy, obſcene, and uncleane worſhip, which was celebrated with fornication and adultery: thus Priapus was worſhipped: and thus amongſt ſome of them, the Bride muſt be deflowred by the Prieſt, before ſhe was given unto her husband.

Thirdly, they had a cruell worſhip, which was celebrated by murther; their ſacrifices being of humane fleſh, thus the Gothes ſacrificed often men to their Idols: and the Carthaginians to Saturne.

Fourthly, this blindneſſe and ignorance ſhewes it ſelfe in the Jewes, who firſt offered up their children to divels. Reade Pſal. 106. 36. 2 King. 16. 3. and 17. 27. Secondly, made unto themſelves divers Idols, worſhipping them as gods as we may ſee in the calfe. Ex. 32. & 2 King. 17. 29. and Deut. 32. 17. and 2 Chron. 11. 15. And thus we ſee, how the whole world lyes in wickedneſſe without Chriſt [m], and therefore he came to deliver us from this ignorant and wicked world [n].

m 1 Ioh. 5. 19. n Gal. 1. 4

§. 2. That ſate in darkeneſſe.] To ſit, ſignifies three things; firſt, to delay, or procraſtinate: Thus the people of Iſrael ſay, why doe we ſit ſtill [b]. that is, why doe we deferre any longer.

Sect. 2. Expoſit. b Ier. 8. 14

Secondly, to love: thus David pronounceth him an happy man, that ſits not in the ſeate of the ſcornefull, that is, loves not their ſociety [c].

c Pſal. 1, 1.

Thirdly, it ſignifies to endure patiently, and contentedly; Sit thou ſilent, and get thee into darkeneſſe, oh daughter of the Caldeans: that is, be quietly contented with thy portion of affliction [d]. The meaning of this verſe then is; The Gentiles did love their ignorance, and moſt patiently did brooke it, procraſtinating and neglecting the remedies againſt it.

d Eſa 47. 5.

§. 3. They ſaw a great light:] What was this light?

Sect. 3. Queſt. 1. Anſw.

I anſwer, Chriſt; for hee was the onely light promiſed unto the world from eternity: or the remedy againſt the darkeneſſe of the world is in Chriſt alone.

How doth it appeare that Chriſt is this great light, that enlightens all the world?

Queſt. 2.

By the animadverſion or conſideration of theſe three dependent particulars, to wit.

Anſw.

First, the expectation of light and knowledge is from God: Thou art my lampe oh Lord (ſaid David) and the Lord will lighten my darkeneſſe [e], ſo againe, unto the upright there ariſeth light in darkeneſſe [f], that is from the Lord; and therefore Saint Iohn ſaith, God is light [g].

e 2 Sam. 22. 29. f Pſal. 112. 4. g 1 Iohn 1. 5.

Secondly, God from whom we expect light, promiſeth to impart it unto us by Chriſt: I will give (ſaith the Lord) a light to the Gentiles [h]: and againe, the Sunne of righteouſneſſe ſhall ariſe [i], to give light to them that ſit in darkeneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death [k].

h Eſa. 42. 6 & 49. 6. i Malach. 4. 2. k Luke 1. 79.

Thirdly, God hath performed his promiſe unto us, by giving of Chriſt, who is the life and light of men [l], yea the true promiſed light, which lighteneth every man that commeth into the world [m]. And leſt the world ſhould be ignorant of him, doth openly himſelfe profeſſe, that he is the light of the world [n], which is come for this cauſe into the world, that they that beleeve in him, ſhould not abide in darkeneſſe any longer [o], hee being the onely light of the world, ſo long as he was in the world [p]; and therefore it is manifeſtly apparent, that Chriſt was this great light.

l Ioh. 1. 4. m Ioh. 1. 9. n Ioh. 8. 12. o Ioh. 12. 46. p Ioh. 9. 5.

What manner of light was Chriſt? or what light doe we gaine or receive by Chriſt?

Queſt. 3.

First, there is a double light; First, the light of nature, which was in us in our firſt creation: but this is loſt by the fall of Adam.

Anſw. 1.

Secondly, there is the light of grace, a reparation of our former light loſt, which is our onely light; and this is the light, we enjoy by Chriſt: for he is the way, the truth and the life [q], hee was made unto us, wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification, and redemption [r]; yea all the promiſes of the Goſpel are yea and Amen unto us in Ieſus Chriſt [ſ].

q Iohn 14. 6. r 1 Cor. 1. 30. ſ 2 Cor. 1. 20.

Secondly

Answ. 2. Secondly, by this Light (Christ) wee gaine foure things; First, illumination of the understanding. Secondly, direction of life. Thirdly, peace & comfort of conscience. Fourthly, life eternall.

First, this light (Christ) doth enlighten our understandings, and encrease our knowledge.

Quest. 4. How doth Christ teach us, informe us, or illuminate our understandings?

Answ. 1. First, by his coming into the world: God, who in divers manners taught his people in times past, hath in these last dayes taught us by his Sonne[a], which is the light that shineth in darknes, the dawning of the day, yea the Day-starre that ariseth in our hearts[b].

[a] Heb. 1. 1. 2.
[b] 2 Pet. 1. 19.

Answ. 2 Secondly, Christ doth teach and instruct us in knowledge by the Ministerie of his word: the Angell doth not teach Cornelius, Acts 10. nor Christ Paul, Acts 9. but the Angell sends Cornelius unto Peter, to bee taught by him: and Christ directs Paul unto Ananias to bee instructed: because God hath now committed unto us, (the Ministers) the word of reconciliation[c].

[c] 2 Cor. 5. 19.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ doth teach us by his holy Spirit, enabling us thereby to call God Father[d].

[d] Rom. 8. 15. and Gal. 4. 6.

Secondly, this light is profitable unto us for the Direction of our life: and that in these foure regards: First, it shewes us our errours: All things that are reproved, are made manifest by the light, and whatsoever doth make manifest, is light[e]. This light is regula sui & obliqui, the rule of truth and falshood: in the night wee erre, and misse our way, but the day light shewes us our errours: and therefore wicked men hate the light: they therefore that know not themselves to bee sinners, and sinfull creatures, are not enlightned with this light; for it shewes our sinnes and errours unto us.

Secondly, this light doth enlighten the aire, or dispose the meanes of knowledge, both externall and internall; that is, thereby wee are inabled to reape benefite by the meanes, to obey those things which we know; God, by Christ, giving unto us both the will and the deed[f]. And therefore those that receive no benefite at all by the Ministerie of the Word, neither obey God, are not Christs.

[f] Phil. 2. 13.

Thirdly, this light expelles darknesse: as a candle doth presently enlighten the most darke room, & therefore those that yet remaine in the shadow of death, partake not Christ: those that bring forth no other fruit than the workes of darknesse, and sinne, doe not as yet enjoy this light.

Fourthly, this light directs our steppes in the wayes of God, unto that which is good: he is our Way, Light and Life[g]; Ambulare vis? Ego via. Falli non vis? Ego veritas. Mori non vis? Ego vita[h]. Wouldst thou walk? I am (saith Christ) the way. Wouldst thou not be deceived in thy walking? I am the truth. Wouldst thou not dye? I am the life. Thus Christ is our chiefest light, without which we erre, and by whom we may know how to moderate and direct our lives according to the will of God: And therefore those that desire to obey God aright, let them heare Christ, let them come unto the light, and let them learne the word: other teachers may lead us aside, but the word is a certaine guide, and they doe well that attend thereunto[i].

[g] Ioh. 1. 4.
[i] 2 Pet. 1. 20.

Thirdly, this light and bright Sunne cleares the heavens, and comforts the conscience: the Sunne comforts all creatures in a manner; and Christ is comfortable unto all his children: the message of the rising of this bright morning Starre, was newes of great joy[k]. When Christ comes unto Zacheus, he rejoyceth[l]; when this light shined in Samaria, there was great joy in that Citie[m], when the Eunuch was made partaker of Christ, hee goes home rejoycing[n]: When the Keeper of the prison was converted unto Christ, he rejoyced exceedingly[o].

[k] Luke 2. 10.
[m] Acts 8. 8
[n] Acts 8. 39.
[o] Acts 16. 34.

Quest. 5. Doe all rejoyce, that are made partakers of Christ?

Answ. They doe, except onely those that are as yet infirme, and weake; that is, First, those that are not as yet sure of it: Children have life long before they are apprehensive of it, and the babes of Christ are made partakers of him, before they certainly know it.

Secondly, those that have weake eyes, doe not rejoyce in the light of the Sunne; so those whose affections are yet captivated with the love of sinne (Iohn 3. 19.) or the love of the world, (1. Iohn, 2. 15.) doe not rejoyce in this light: And therefore those who thinke they enjoy Christ, and yet doe not rejoyce in the fruition of him, must know, that the reason is, because either they love some sinne, or the world too much.

Fourthly, this light is profitable for us unto eternall life: this is the end of all. The Sunne renewes the earth after winter is past: so after the winter of this life, this light will renue our dayes, by making us partakers of life everlasting: And therefore whosoever are destitute of light, are destitute of life: whosoever are without Christ, are without salvation.

Quest. 6. Who are without Christ?

Answ. 1. First, Heathens, and Infidels, who are extra Ecclesiam, both out of the visible and invisible Church.

Answ. 2 Secondly, Heretikes, who hold tenets that overthrow fundamentall truths.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, ignorant persons, who neither know the doctrine of faith, repentance, or obedience.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, prophane and wicked persons, who either obey not at all, or not with a true, and sincere heart: who either know their masters will, and doe it not; or may know their masters will, but will not.

The reader (perhaps) will thinke it necessary, that I should have shewne the meanes how this light may bee obtained; which I had indeed set downe; but that it followes more naturally in another place, and therefore now I omit it in this.

VERS. 17. From that time Iesus began to preach, and to say, Repent, for the Kingdome of Heaven is at hand. Vers. 17.

118

§. 1. From that time.] That is, after that Iohn was cast into prison. Hence two questions are made. Sect. 1.

Quest. 1. First, why did not Christ begin sooner than thus, to preach?

Answ. 1. First, some[a] say, because God would have it so, and we are not to enquire after any other reason. [a] Arctius.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some[b] answer, this Christ did in regard of his doctrine, because the Gospell was to bee preached, and published after the Law. Now Iohn preached the Law, and therefore Christ preacheth not, so long as Iohn continues preaching; but when hee is cast into prison, and debarred from preaching, then Christ beginnes. But I rather think, that Iohn preached the Gospell (though not perfectly) than the Law; because our Saviour sayth of him, that hee was the least in the kingdome of heaven[c], that is, in the Church of Christ, in the New Testament: and therefore if hee belonged to the Church of the Gospell, it is most likely that hee preached the Gospell, although not so clearly, as now it is taught; because Christ had not as then finished the worke of our redemption. [b] Hierom. sup. [c] Matth. 11. 11.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this was done in respect of Iohn Baptist, lest otherwise hee should have been thought rather Christs companion, than his fore-runner, if they had preached both together[d], yea, hence it was, that Iohn, while hee had libertie, onely preached, and baptized, but wrought no miracles[e], because hee would not bee thought to bee equall unto Christ, but onely one that made way for him. [d] Chrysost. sup. [e] Ioh. 10. 48.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, this was done in respect of Christ, lest that his preaching should be ἀμάρτυρον, without any witnesse[f], as the Jews falsly sayd to him, Thou beares witnesse of thy selfe, therefore thy testimony is nothing[g], that is, thy testimony is of small worth, if it bee confirmed onely by thy owne mouth. But this calumniation Christ proves false: Yee sent (sayth hee) unto Iohn, and he bare witnesse of mee[h]: yea Iohn plainly averres this, Yee your selves beare me witnesse, that I sayd, I am not the CHRIST, but that I am sent before him[i]. [f] Chrysost. sup. [g] Ioh. 8. 13. [h] Ioh. 5. 33. [i] Ioh. 3. 28

Answ. 5. Fiftly, this was done in regard of the common people, and that in a double respect, to wit,

First lest the people should have beene separated and sundred, some running after the one, some after the other, if they had both preached together.

Secondly, lest they should have been excused, in saying, they knew not who to follow; the one being after one manner, the other after another: that is, Christ more familiar, and Iohn more austere, as our Saviour sayth of himselfe, and Iohn.

Quest. 2. Secondly, why did Christ now preach, when Iohn was in prison?

Answ. 1. First, lest the preaching of Saint Iohn should not be confirmed. Thus Gualter sup.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ beginnes to preach the Gospell when Iohn was hindered, lest that the preaching thereof should cease[k], and this was the principall cause. [k] Gualt. sup.

Thirdly, Christ did this to teach us, that no power or policie of man, or Divell, can hinder the preaching of the word of God. Certainly, the Divell did excite and provoke Herod against Iohn Baptist, that hee might bee hindered from preaching, but he cannot prevaile: for Iohn being exstinct, behold, God stirres up another, and from that time Iesus began to preach. The Pharisees forbid the Apostles to preach, Acts 4. 21. and put them in prison for preaching, Act. 5. 18. but yet they cannot stop their mouthes. In the Judaicall Church, they slay the Prophets, but still God doth raise up others. In the Primitive Church, sanguis martyrum, semen Ecclesiæ, the persecution of the Christians, did spread the religion of Christ, more than otherwise it is likely would have been. The hand of man is too weak to hold Gods hand, or hinder his worke, and therefore so long as this world continues, God will have a Church upon earth, & in some place or other, some or other to preach his word. Answ. 3. Observ.

§. 2. Saying, Repent.] The Papists[l] affirme, that Contrition, which is joyned with an inward terrour of the minde, and proceedeth from the sight and consideration of our sinnes, doth not appertaine to the Law, but to the Gospell. They argue thus, Christ preached Repentance, to the which Contrition doth belong (Repent, for the Kingdome of God is at hand in this verse) but Christ was a Minister of the Gospell, not of the Law, and therefore Contrition belongeth to the Gospell, not to the Law. Sect. 2. [l] Bellar. de pœnit. l. 1. ca 2. Object.

First, Repentance hath part from the Law, part from the Gospell: from the Law it hath the sight of sinne, and terrour of the minde for the same; from the Gospell it hath hope and comfort, springing from faith in Christ: wherefore this reason sheweth not, that Repentance in every part thereof is of the Gospell. Answ. 1.

Secondly, though the Law and Gospell are in nature and property distinguished, yet they may be joyned in use: So Moses the Minister of the Law, may preach Christ, and Christ the Minister of the Gospell doth also establish the Law, and by the terrours of the Law, call men to the knowledge of their sinne, where Repentance beginneth. Answ. 2.

VERS. 18. And Iesus walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea (for they were fishers.) Vers. 18.

§. 1. And Iesus walking by the sea of Galilee.] We see the Apostles are not called by Man, but by Christ: Teaching us that the vocation of the Ministery is the ordinance of God: For First, he hath given them a calling, he gave (saith the Apostle) some Apostles, some Prophets, some Evangelists, some Pastours, and Teachers, for the worke of the Ministerie[a], and hath given unto the Ministers the Ministery, and word of reconciliation[b]. Secondly, hee hath given unto them spirituall weapons, which are mighty, through God, to pull downe strong holds[c]. Thirdly, hee hath given them power, making them able Ministers of the New Sect. 1. Obser. [a] Ephes. 4. 11. 12. [b] 2 Cor. 5. 18. 19. [c] 2 Cor. 10. 4.

New Testament, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit[c]. And therefore they that despise them (as Ministers) despise not men, but Christ.

[c] 2 Cor. 3. 6.

Quest. Who despise the vocation of Ministers?

Answ. 1. Obiect. 1. First, the Anabaptists contemne this ordinance, objecting, that Faith is the gift of God, Ephes. 2. 8. and it is he, that reveales divine truths unto men, Matth. 16, 17. Flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee (sayth Christ, that I am the true Messias) but the will of my Father, which is in heaven: yea, none can come unto God, by any meanes, except the Sonne bring him. Iohn 6. 44.

Answ. 1. First, by this reason wee should neither give fodder to the cattell, nor tillage and culture to the ground; because wee cannot cause our corne to grow, or our ground to bring forth, or our cattell to thrive, or live, by what we give them, but it is the blessing, and blessed providence of God, that doth all this.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we grant, that neither he that planteth, nor he that watereth, is any thing, 1 Corinth. 3. 7.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, yet the meanes must bee used, which God hath appointed, and which ordinarily hee works grace by; & that is the preaching of the word, by those who are lawfully called unto that function: for Faith comes by hearing, Rom. 10. 17. Yea, he gives men faith and power to believe by the preaching of the Apostles[e]; I pray not (sayth Christ) for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on mee through their word. And therefore the vocation of the Ministers is not to be contemned.

[e] Ioh. 17. 20.

Answ. 2. Obiect. 2. Secondly, the Separatists are despisers of this Ordinance of the Ministery; objecting, that our Church is impure, our societies polluted, and that our truths are mixed with errours.

Answ. There are two Churches, to wit, the one

- Dead, in the eye of the world, in which notwithstanding, are some alive in the eye of the Lord: thus there were seven thousand in Israel[f], though Elias saw none: and in Sardis there were a few names of those that were pure[g].
- Living, in the which some are dead notwithstanding: thus it was with the Church of Ephesus, Revelat. 2. 4. and with Pergamus, Revelat. 2, 14. and of Thyatira, Revelat. 2. 19, 20. Yea, even in the Church of the Corinthians, & the Galatians, when they were most pure, there was corruptions among them: and therefore it is unwarrantable to forsake our Church for the spots and corruptions of some.

[f] 1 King. 19. 18.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, prophane persons are contemners of this Ordinance of the Ministerie, either by disgracing it publickly, or deriding it privatly: but these must know, that they doe not deride men, but God.

Sect. 2. §. 2. By the Sea of Galilee.] This sea was the lake of Gennesareth, Luke 5. 1. neare unto Capernaum, where Christ first beganne to preach; and therefore it appeares to have been in the beginning of his preaching, and yet some are gained: Teaching us, that the preaching of the word is never barren or unfruitfull; but converts some whersoever it comes. Observ. 1

How comes it to passe, that the word of God never returnes in vaine? Quest.

First, because the Gospell is a seed, and alwayes some falles in good ground, Matth. 13. 5. It is a two edged sword, (Hebr. 4. 12.) and therefore wounds some, whersoever it is sent. Answ. 1

Secondly, the principall reason of this is, because God doth order and dispose the journeyes of his servants, and directs their preaching; and that two severall wayes, viz.

Answ. 2.

First, by hindring them from going to some places; thus God hindered Saint Paul from going to Rome[h], and hee was hindered also from going to Thessalonica[i]; yea directly forbidden by the holy Ghost, to goe either to Asia, or unto Bithynia[k].

[h] Rom. 1. 13. and 15. 22.
[k] Acts 16. 6. 7.

Secondly, Sometimes Ministers are called by God, from one place unto another; thus Saint Paul was called from Troas to Macedonia[l]. And hence it comes to passe, that whithersoever God sends his word, there hee doth call some by it; which may serve for the comfort and encouragement of the Ministers, to continue faithfull and painfull in their vocation, because so long as they continue and abide, they may hope, God hath some there to convert and turne unto him.

[l] Acts 16. 8. 9.

But some Ministers will obiect, their people are stubborne, rebellious, refractory, and doe not feare, neither care to heare, neither will obey, and therefore they may as well not preach at all, as to the walls, or to no purpose. Obiect.

First, be people never so wicked, yet Ministers must preach for their owne sakes, because thus they shall save their owne soules: If thou warne the wicked of his way, to turne from it: if hee doe not turne from his way, he shall die in his iniquity, but thou hast delivered thy soule[a]. Answ. 1.

[a] Ezech. 33. 9.

Secondly, Ministers must preach, though people will not obey; and that for the peoples sake: That they may know that there hath beene a Prophet among them[b]. Answ. 2.

[b] Ezech. 2. 5.

Thirdly, they must not forbeare to be instant in their calling, because God hath his, whersoever the Gospell is, to be called and united unto Christ in his due time; and therefore Ministers must let nothing be wanting in them, but doe their endeavour, & then leave the successe unto God, waiting his appointed time, for a blessing upon their labours. Answ. 3.

§. 3. He saw two brethren.] And afterwardes he met with the sonnes of Zebedee. Sect. 3.

Why is mention made here of their affinity, and kindred, that they were brethren? Quest. 1.

First, to teach us that the Ministry is a kinde of Fraternity, and therefore all Ministers should be one, first, in opinion, at least in fundamentall and necessary truths. Secondly, in mutuall love one of another. Thirdly, in care over and for their flockes. Fourthly, in the worke of preaching Answ. 1.

120 ching the message of the Lord.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to teach us, that Christ loves this brotherly concord and agreement.

Quest. 2. Why doth Christ thus love and delight to see brethren to dwell together in amity?

Answ. 1. First, because it is a good thing, whatsoever is good Christ loves, but for brethren to dwell together in unity is good[e], therefore Christ loves it.

e Psa. 133. 1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because God commands it: whatsoever God commands, Christ loves, but God commands this concord and brotherly amity, therefore Christ loves it. Love comes from God. 1 Ioh. 4. 7. and is both the new and old commandement. 1 Ioh. 2. 7. yea it is the fulfilling of the commandements. Rom. 13. 9.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because Christ himselfe hath commanded it. Whatsoever Christ doth command, he loves and delights to have obeyed, but Christ commands, that we should love one another, as brethren, therefore he rejoiceth when we doe so, this is my commandement (saith Christ) that ye love one another[d].

d Joh. 15. 12.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because we are brethren, that is, first, brethren among our selves, members of the same body. Rom. 12. 5. and 1 Cor. 12. 12. Secondly, we are the brethren of Christ (Mat. 12. 38. and Heb. 2. 17.) and therefore Christ loves to see us live as brethren.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, because this is the practise of the Church of Christ, the members of the Church, and professours of Christ, did live in unity, love, and concord, as one man, as we see by these Scriptures, Acts 1. 14. and 2. 44. 46. and 4. 32. they had their Agape, or love feasts, Jude. 12. vers. they had their kisse of love. 1 Pet. 5. 14. yea a holy kisse, as we see. Rom. 16. 16. and 1 Cor. 16. 20. and 2 Cor. 13. 12. and 1 Thes. 5. 26. All which shew their mutuall and reciprocall love, and endeared affection one towards another; which our Saviour loves to have us imitate.

Answ. 6 Sixtly, because it is an argument that wee are the Disciples of Christ, translated from death unto life, in whom God dwells, and purified by the Spirit of God. That which testifieth and approveth us to be the Disciples of Christ, purged by the Spirit, translated from death, and the Temples wherein God dwells, is pleasing and delightfull unto Christ; but to love the brethren with a pure heart fervently, doth argue us to be the Disciples of Christ (Ioh. 13. 35.) translated from death unto life (1 Ioh. 3. 14.) purified by the holy Spirit of God (1 Pet. 1. 22.) in whom God himselfe dwells and resides (1 Joh. 4. 12.) therefore it is gratefull and delightfull unto God.

Vers. 19. VERS. 19. And he saith unto them, follow mee; and I will make you fishers of men.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of this phrase, Fishers of men?

Answ. 1. First, sometimes the phrase is taken, in malam partem, in the worst sense: thus the Lord threatens his people for their Idolatry: Behold, I will send for many fishers, and they shall fish them[f].

f Jerem. 16. 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some times the phrase is taken in meliorem partem, in a good sense, thus the Lord shewing unto the Prophet[g], the vision of the holy waters sayth, And it shall come to passe that the fishers shall stand upon it.

g Ezech. 47. 10.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, the sense of the phrase here used, is, by an Allegory of fishing to shew forth the nature of the Ministry: In the alluision there are foure things observable. First, the Sea, that is, the World. Secondly, Fishes, that is, Men, not onely rich men, but all men. Thirdly, the Net is the Gospell, the kingdome of heaven (that is the Gospell) is like unto a Net, saith our Saviour, and therefore they are wicked fishers, who leaving this net, fish with other poysoned hookes; that is preach their owne inventions, errours, heresies, schismes, and the like. Fourthly, the Fishers are the Ministers.

Quest. 2. Why doth Christ speake unto these two Apostles in an Allegory, they being unlearned: was it, because he would not have them converted, as it is said else where, He taught the people in Parables, because they seeing see not, and hearing they heare not, neither doe they understand[a]?

a Matth. 13. 13.

Answ. 2. First, Christ did not use a figurative speach unto these two brethren, for this end, but because they being fishers, knew and understood best of all the Art of fishing; and therefore our Saviour teacheth unto them spirituall things by a naturall and familiar similitude, which they were well acquainted withall.

Answ. 2. Observ. Secondly, our Saviour useth this allegory, to teach us that the practise of Ministers using metaphors, or allegoryes, or similitudes, which the people understand is not to be disproved. As for example, first, sometimes we use the similitude of Fishers, that there are two Fishers, the first is Satan, whose baites is pleasure, and whose hooke and net is death, the second is the Apostles and Ministers of Christ, who labour to winne us unto him. Secondly, sometimes we use the similitude of Husband-men; that we are all barren by nature, untill the word be sowne in our hearts; that the earth must be tilled, the fallow ground broken up, the weeds and stones cast out, the field carefully watched, least tares encrease, and overspread the corne. Thirdly, sometimes we use Domestike examples, as the garden is to be hedged, digged, and attended, otherwise the hearbes will not prosper: Satan is a thiefe, and therefore we must be very watchfull, and keep the doore of our hearts fast locked and bolted against him, that we are but wild Olive trees, untill we are ingrafted into the true Olive Jesus Christ. Fourthly, sometimes we allude unto School-masters; that people, (like schollers) stand in need daily to be taught, and therefore they must not be trewants, neglecting knowledge, and trifling away their pretious time. Fiftly, sometimes we use the resemblance of Sheepheards; that we are wandring sheepe, & therfore we must be reduced unto the pleasant pastures againe, by the Sheepheard of our soule. Now whereunto serve all these: Certainely that all the people by these similitudes may the better understand the divine truthes delivered; which was the cause, why our Saviour useth this allegory allegory of Fishers in this verse.

Quest. 3. We have heard why our Saviour useth an allegoricall speech unto Simon and Andrew; It may now further be demanded, why he useth this allegory (of Fishing) unto them?

Answer. Because, this allusion doth most aptly denote unto us the office of Ministers: to wit, the Fishing and gaining of soules unto God. Malac. 4. 6. particularly observe. 121

That in fishing wee must consider both the

- Fish themselves, who
  - First would not bee catched or taken: but swimme away from the Net: so naturall and carnall men would not be wonne by the word of God; would not be taken captive by the Net of the Gospel.
  - Secondly, they are not taken by the hooke, except they bite, Oh Ierusalem, how gladly would I have gathered thee together, as a hen gathereth her chickings under her wings, but ye would not [b].
- Fishers, and that both in respect of the
  1. Knowledge, Fishers must know all shelves, and rockes, and shallowes, the ebbing and flowing of the sea: so Ministers must know how to direct in prosperity and adversity; how to steere aright course through the vices and heresies of the world: they must know the evills and remedies, that they may both save themselves, and those that heare them, and faile by their direction.
  2. Diligence and care required in them: wherein observe three things; First, Fishermen must observe the heavens, and the nature of the fishes: thus the Apostle saith, to the weake I became as weake, that I might gaine the weake: I am made all things to all men that I might by all meanes save some [a].

[b] Matth. 23. 37.

[a] 1 Cor. 9. 19. 20, 21, 22.

Secondly, they must endure cold and danger: Fishers must put to sea in winter as well as Sommer, exposing themselves to dangerous stormes which frequently assaile them in their calling: Thus the Apostles suffered hunger and thirst, and nakednesse, and colde, and buffeting, and persecuting [b].

Thirdly, Fishers worke continually, night and day, we have laboured all night (saith the Apostles) but have catched nothing [c].

[b] 1 Cor. 4. 11. and 2 Cor. 6. 8

[c] Luke 5. 5.

Fishes are not taken except they bite and eat the baite: and therefore First, recusants that will not come unto the word of God, can gaine nothing by it; Secondly, those amongst us, that like Martha are troubled about many things, preferring the cares of the world, before the cates of the word cannot be wonne by it. Thirdly, those that are present at the preaching of the word, but not attentive unto the word preached, reape no benefit by it, because they learne it not. Fourthly those that attend to the hearing of the word, but cannot intend the practise of the word, are not catched by it. Fishes are not taken by looking upon the bait, but by the eating thereof: so it is not speculation but practise, not knowledge, but active obedience that benefits our soules.

Fishers had neede know both shelves and shallow places: and therefore those that are ignorant of the nature of sinne, and grace; or that knowe not the evils and remedies of the disease and the cure, should not intrude themselves into this function, for they are unfit fishers of men.

Fishers observe the seasons, and the nature of the fishes for which they labour; so Ministers must first observe the heavens, the blasts of the Spirit, the zeale of the hearts, that is, the occasions offered unto us by the Lord of preaching the word: as Saint Paul saith, I came to Troas to preach Christs Gospel, and a doore was opened unto me of the Lord [g], that is, the Lord gave me liberty, opportunity or occasion with benefit and profit to preach the Gospel of Christ.

[g] 2 Cor. 2. 12.

Secondly, we are made all things to all men, we must apply our selves to all sorts of maladies, evils, diseases and sores: and that three manner of waies, viz. First, Opere, by preaching, and catechizing, examining, conferring, disputing, that the people may bee made perfect [h]. Secondly, Obiecto, by reprehending and reprooving whatsoever is amisse, whether drunkennesse, or adultery, or oppression, or blasphemy, or lying, or filthy speaking, or any sinne whatsoever. Thirdly, Modo, sometimes reprooving mildly, sometimes with feare, plucking them out of the fire [i]; sometimes with a rod, sometimes with the Spirit of meekenesse, reade 1 Cor. 4. 21. and conferr 1 Cor. 5. 3. 4. with 2 Cor. 2. 7. 8. and Gal. 3. 1. with 4. 12. 19. and Nehem. 5. 11. with verse 13. Neither must people thinke, that Ministers doe this in hatred, to the partie sinning, but that they might present them as chast virgins unto the Lord.

[i] Iude ver. 22, 23.

Fishers expose themselves to cold and danger in the discharging or executing of their callings; so doe Ministers; and therefore people first should thinke Ministers worthy of honour and reverence: yea secondly, of maintenance: yea thirdly, and principally be careful that they loose not their labour, that they fish not all night and catch nothing: that they rise early and goe late to bed, expose themselves to perills and dangers to no purpose, or benefit at all unto their people.

Fishers worke night and day: so Ministers must preach diligently, because all the names given unto them signifie labour and paines:

Whether the Church of God bee compared to a House: then wee are the builders thereof, 1 Cor. 3.10. Or Family: then wee are first, the Stewards to take care for the provision of all: [a] Secondly, Schoolemasters, to teach the children of and in the family: Thirdly, Physitions, to cure the maladies of the sicke in the house. Or Sheepefold, then we are the Sheepheards. Or Field; then we are, First the husbandmen, or tillers thereof [b]. Secondly, the planters and waterers [c]. Thirdly, the workers in the vineyard [d]. Or Sea: then we are, First the Pylots of the ship. Secondly, the Fishers in this Sea.

[a] 1 Cor. 4.1
[b] 1 Cor. 3.9
[c] 1 Cor. 3.6.
[d] Mat. 9. 38.

And thus we see by this Allegory of fishing, Christ doth to the life point out the office and vocation of Ministers.

Obiect. Against this it may be objected, the world is incredulous, stupide, dull, and wicked; therefore we shall gaine none, we shall catch nothing.

Answ. Thus the Apostles laboured all night, but caught nothing. Luke 5.5. but Christ commanding, and they obeying, they catch many. verse 6. and therefore our Saviour here saith, ego faciam, I will make you fishers of men: Teaching us hereby, that Christ will water and prosper the labours and endeavours of the Ministers: I will (saith he) be with you [e], and I will not forsake you [g], but will give an encrease unto your paines [h].

Obser. How doth Christ give a blessing to the labours of his servants the Preachers?

Quest. 4. By the Holy Spirit, which workes with the Answ. word effectually in the hearts of the hearers.

Vers. 21. VERS. 21. And going on from thence, hee saw other two brethren, Iames the sonne of Zebedee, and Iohn his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets: and he called them.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Hee saw two brethren in a ship.] In the Observ. Allegoricall sense of this verse, we may observe; That this world is like unto a Sea, and that in three regards; first, because in the sea, there is nothing but floods, tempests and stormes, no safety but on shore: So in the sea of this present wicked world, there is no peace, no rest, no safety, but rather danger and distresse. Secondly, in the sea, the greater fish devoure and prey upon the lesse; so in this world, the rich oppresse the poore, and the high the low. Thirdly, in the sea the Mariner is carried violently by the tempest, whether he should not: so in the world, by our headstrong and violent affections, we often are driven to the quick-sands of destruction.

Chrysostome answers, Non ut adjuvaret eos, sed ut solarentur illum, not that he might helpe them, but that they might obey, and comfort him: And this their love, and care, and duty towards their father is expressed here, by this our Evangelist for the imitation of children towards their parents. Quest. 1. Answ. Obser.

Why must children give obedience to their parents? Quest. 2.

Answ. 1. The first reason hereof is Temporall: children are heires of their fathers estates: they labour for them: sic vos non vobis, parents take care and paines for their children, therfore there is great reason that children should obey, respect, and reverence their parents.

Answ. 2. The second reason is Naturall, children have from parents, their life, their light, their body, their meat and maintenance, their education and the like; and therefore they owe all love, reverence and subjection unto them: yea they owe themselves, and whatsoever is theirs.

Answ. 3. The third reason is Spirituall; and this is twofold: First, because parents are the Image of God, the Lords substitutes and deputies. Secondly, because God commands children to obey their Parents, that is, both Father and Mother: Reade Exod. 20. 12. Levit. 19.3. and 23. 22. Ephes. 6.1.2.

Quest. 3. What doe children owe unto Parents?

Answ. Foure things, viz. First, Nutrimentum, sustenance, if fathers want it, and sonnes have it: Thus Ioseph tooke care to provide for his old Father, in the time of that long famine [i]; And therefore unnaturall are those men, who being rich suffer their parents to want.

[i] Gen. 45. 9, 10.

Secondly, Amorem, love: children whether they or their parents be rich or poore, they must love, and tenderly endeare their parents.

Thirdly, Reverentiam, reverence and respect: Non vultu ladendi [a], children must not wound their parents with darts of discontented countenances: for Qui torvo visu, elatis oculis, meretur supplicium [b]; he that beholds his Parents with a proud looke, or a sterne and grim eye, deserves to be punished. Solomon, when a King, honours his Mother Bathsheba: and Hester, when a Queene, her Uncle Mardochee; who in stead of a Father had brought her up. Hest. 2.7.

[a] Ambros. [b] Hierom.

Fourthly, Obedientiam, obedience and duty: for this obedience, I. God commands. Colos. 3. 20. II. God commends, where he findes it: as we see in the Rechabites. Ierem. 35. 18. and Prov. 15: 20. III. the contrary hereunto God threatens. Deut. 21. 20. and complaines of. Ezech. 22. 7. IV. the obedient unto parents, God comforts. Prover. 13.1.

Quest. 4. Is the cause of disobedience towards Parents, alwaies in the children?

Answ. Certainely the fault may be in parents, and often is,

First, by education either
- By not educating them civilly, but rudely and unmannerly, as many doe. Or
- By bringing them up unto drunkennesse, gaming, sports, and the like. Or
- By pampering them too much, or by beeing too much indulgent over the, not crossing them in their wills or desires, nor correcting them for their faults. Or

And that either

Secondly, by enriching themselves by wicked meanes, and so God in judgement giving them children, that shal prodigally scatter, what they impiously did gather: de malè quæsitis vix gaudet tertius hæres, evill gotten goods last not long; Fathers wickedly gather, and sonnes profusely spend, so that within a time, those goods are possessed and enjoyed by others.

Now although Parents thus may be the occasion of their childrens disobedience, yet this doth not excuse the undutifulnesse of the child, because their Fathers have not deserved it at their hands.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Mending their nets:] Why did some mend Nets, and some fish?

Quest. Answ. 1. First, some (Chrysost. oper. imperf.) say, forte it may be, because the one were more industrious, the other more slothfull: he dare not affirme this, no more will I, but barely leave it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say, perhaps that Peter onely fished, and Iohn mended the Nets.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this plainely demonstrates unto us their poverty; they were inforced to mend their old nets, because they could not buy new (thus Chrysost verus. [a] sup.) to teach us, That God makes choice of the poore of this world [b]. And therefore those that are poore must not bee dejected, as though they were lesse deare unto God: for first in Temporall things, they are more blessed, the little which the righteous man possesseth, being better then the riches of many wicked [c]. And secondly, in Spirituall things they are nearer unto God; and therefore better is the poore, that walketh in his uprightnesse, then the perverse rich man [d]: yea better is a poore and wise child, then an old and foolish King [e]. Wherefore poore men should not be discouraged nor dishartened, but remember that Christ for our sakes became poore [f]: and therefore none ought to thinke that they are lesse deare unto God, because they are not rich.

VERS. 22. And they immediately left the ship, and their Father and followed him. Vers. 22.

Christ first calles, and then they follow, they enter not into the function of the Ministrie, untill they bee called: Teaching us, that no calling (principally the Ecclesiasticall vocation of the Ministry) should bee undertaken, without a lawfull and warrantable call thereunto from God. Obser.

Why is no function to be undertaken without a calling? Quest.

Because we can doe nothing of our selves, and therefore if we desire to be blessed, or to prosper in what we undergoe, we had neede have a warrant for it from God. For first, none are borne learned or skilfull in any art or trade, and there is some skill required to the most inferiour callings. Answ.

Secondly, it is God that fits and prepares us, and that in inferiour callings: he fits, and then calles Bezaleel, & Aholiab, for the cutting of stones, and the carving of timber, and engraving in gold and silver [g].

Thirdly, hence wee thinke those men to bee called to the worke of the Ministry, who are fitted for the discharging thereof, and enabled to divide the word aright.

[g] Exod. 31. 4, 5. and 35. 30, 31.

Some perhaps here will say, that this aptnesse unto, or ability for the executing of the Ministeriall function, doth not at all belong unto the time of our calling thereunto. Obiect.

To which we answer, that it doth altogether: for we have a double calling, the first is Internall, this is unknowne and unperceived by it selfe, God not calling Ministers by name as Christ did here the Apostles, or suddenly inspiring them, and sending them then to preach, as hee did the Prophets. The second calling is Externall, which is a certaine fitnesse or ability thereunto, whether it be acquired by instruction, or study, or naturall endowments, which are given by God, and are necessary to be had, before wee undertak any calling: that is, we must be instructed, we must bee taught, wee must study, wee must bee made fit and able for the discharging of the calling, otherwise wee are not called: for fitnesse and ability unto or for a calling is a negative rule of a calling; that is, they that are unfit for, and unable to discharge the worke of a Minister, were never by God called unto the Ministerie. Answ.

VERS. 23. And Iesus went about all Galilee teaching in their Synagogues, and preaching the Gospel of the Kingdome, and healing all manner of sicknesse, and all manner of diseases among the people. Vers. 23.

Sect. 1. §. 1. And Iesus went about all Galilee.] Why is this historie here added? Quest. 1.

For three causes, to wit, First for Christs cause. Secondly, for the Apostles cause. Thirdly, for our cause. Answ. 1.

First, this historie is here inserted and expressed for Christs owne sake, that thereby hee might shew

124 shew unto us, that he did not call Apostles, that himselfe might bee idle; for notwithstanding this, he preacheth, and endeavoureth the salvation of our soules himselfe: Ministers can doe nothing of themselves without Christ, and therefore he gives them a promise first of his owne presence (behold I am present with you unto the end of the world[h].) And Secondly, of the presence of the Holy Ghost: I will send the comforter unto you, to lead you into all truth

[h] Matth. 28.20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this History is here added, for the Apostles sake, to teach them, that they are not called unto wantonnesse, or feasting, or jollity, or ease; but to preach the Gospell, according to the present practise and example of their Master: Ministers being called to labour in their function, and not to be idle, Christ being no president therein unto them.

Quest. 2. Wherein must we labour, or wherein doth a Ministers care and calling consist?

Answ. Having amply elsewhere to handle this question, I resolve it therefore here briefly thus: A Ministers office is to attend unto all those that are under him; and to be carefull of two things, viz. First, to know the lives and dispositions of all, who stand in need of counsell, who of comfort, who of reproofe, who of instruction. And Secondly, to apply fit medicines to every malady, as for example. I. To the coveteous, apply. 1 Tim. 6. 8. 9. That it is the root of all evill, yea, wounding and piercing deep the soule with many sorrowes. II. To the libidinous apply, 1 Cor. 6. 18. that the fornicatour sins against his own body, III. To the prophaners of the Temple, and House of God, apply, 1 Cor. 3. 17. if any pollute the Temple of God, him will God destroy, for the Temple of God is holy. IV. To lyars apply, Rev. 21. 8. and 22. 15. that out of heaven shall be shut all those, that love or tell lyes. V. In generall to all sinners apply, 1 Cor. 6. 9. and Ephes. 5. 5. 6. that no sinners shall inherit the kingdome of God, or of Christ.

Answ. 3. Observ. Thirdly, this history was added for our sakes, that we might hence learne, that the preaching of the word of God is to be published and proclaimed through the whole world; carried successively from one Nation to another; that all mouthes may be stopped, and all excuses taken away.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Teaching in their Synagogues, and preaching.] How doth teaching and preaching differ?

Quest.

Answ. 1. Teaching signifies an instruction unto Morall Righteousnesse, and vertues, which are taught unto us by the Law and light of nature. Rom. 2. 14. 15. Preaching signifies the publishing of the righteousnesse of faith[g].

[g] Chrysost. imperf.

Obiect. What neede was there for Christ, to teach them, what they know by the light of Nature?

Answ. 1 First, Christ did this for the manifestation, or clearing of some difficultyes, and obscurityes, that are in morall vertues, for so great is the corruption of our nature, that the knowledge of naturall righteousnesse is much obscured in us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ taught them, for the helping of their memoryes, we being naturally so seduced and mis-led, and overcome by our pleasures, and delights, and profits, and the like; that the remembrance of naturall righteousnesse, and morall vertues is almost wholy extinct in us.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, our Saviour did teach them, for the exciting and stirring up of their hearts, and the inflaming of their affections, unto these morall vertues; because all should labour to abound in all vertues both theologicall and morall. And therefore from our Saviours practise, we may learne, what is the work of preaching: Not onely, First, to teach, and instruct in the truth; but also secondly, to excit, provoke, and perswade; and that in a threefold regard, to wit, First, in respect of the memory, because that is fraile, and slippery, quickly loosing that which is good; and therefore the memory is often to be rubbed up, and people frequently to be admonished with all gentle perswasions of their duties, both towards God and man[b].

Secondly, in respect of the affection, because therein are tares, and the foreskinne of the flesh, yea a love unto, and a delight in every thing that is evill: Now preaching is a knife, to cut off this corrupt prepuce or fore-skin, it is a weeding hooke to roote out these tares, yea a sword to subdue all rebellious lusts; and therefore it should frequently bee performed with all meeknesse, and tendernesse of spirit, by the mercy of God perswading men.

Thirdly, in respect of the Impediments which from without hinder men from the practise of religion, which are many, and with the most prevaile much; and therefore Ministers should bee both carefull and painefull in reproving, admonishing, advising, perswading, and exciting men, to a solide, serious, sincere, and constant serving of God. Thus some (I say) shew a difference betweene teaching, and preaching, referring teaching to morall vertues, or naturall righteousnesse, and preaching to the righteousnesse of faith, and Evangelicall graces.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I rather thinke that these two words, docens et praedicans, teaching, and preaching, are Synonyma, importing and signifying one and the same thing; Or at least are but thus to bee distinguished; to teach, shewes what hee did in Galilee; To preach, signifies, how hee taught, and what hee taught: First, Quomodo, how hee taught in Galilee; it was publikely: Secondly, quæ, what hee taught in Galilee, the Gospell and word of the New Testament.

Sect. 3. §. 3. In their Synagogues.] These Synagogues were places of publike meetings both amongst the { Jewes, and / Samaritans.

Quest. 1. Why did Christ preach in the Synagogues?

Answ. 1. First, lest hee should otherwise seeme to contemne and despise those holy places, which were consecrated, and dedicated unto the worship and Obſerv. 1 and ſervice of God; hereby teaching us, that the publike worſhip of God in the Temple, is neceſſary, and not to be ſleighted or neglected.

Queſt. 2. God is every where preſent, and therefore what need we goe to the Church to ſerve him at all; he ſees our exerciſes, and heares our prayers at home; and therefore there ſeemes to bee no neceſſity of it to goe to the Temple or viſible houſe of God.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, true it is, that God heares and ſees the private duties, which we performe in our familyes, and the ſecret duties which in our private cloſets are offered up unto him.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, yet this doth not excuſe us from comming to Church, to ſerve God publikely with his congregation, as may appeare by theſe particulars, viz.

Firſt, every religion of the world doth teach the worſhip of ſome power, yea and that publikely. All Heathens that worſhip any Gods, have ſolemne publike places and dayes; ſeparated and ſet apart for the worſhip of them; yea, all religions throughout the world, none excepted, have their publike places for publike worſhip; and therefore it were abſurd for Chriſtians to be without, or to neglect them. Secondly, the Church in all ages, places, and times, where and when the profeſſion of religion was permitted, and not publikely perſecuted, had their ſolemne places for publike meetings: The Jewes had the Temple and their Synagogues; which Chriſt here reſorts unto to preach in; and which the Apoſtles alſo repaire unto for the celebration of publike worſhip, as we ſee in many places of the Acts.

Againe, they had their Synagogues in Antioch [a], for this ſame purpoſe; yea, in every city there were ſome of theſe publik places [b]; & therfore it is very unfitting for Chriſtians to be deſtitute of them, or careleſſe of the ſervice of God in them.

[a] Acts 13. 15.
[b] Acts 15. 21.

Thirdly, becauſe Chriſt did not deſpiſe them, (whoſe action is our inſtruction and imitation) neither his Apoſtles after him; as we ſee in Capernaum, Chriſt and his Apoſtles being there on the Sabbath day, he enters (not into a private houſe, but) into the Synagogue and preached [c] ſo alſo in his owne countrey [d], which he did not ſeldome, or ſome few times, but frequently, for as his cuſtome was, he went into the Synagogue on the Sabbath day [e]. So Peter and John go up together to the temple to pray [f]. And therfore although we may & ought to pray at home, yet not upon the Lords day, or in any other time of the celebration of the publike ordinances; if we be able to come to Church.

[e] Luke 4. 16.

Queſt. 3 What difference is there betweene prayers at home and at Church, that is publike and private prayers, that we thus enforce this duety of aſſembling and conjoyning our ſelves unto the Congregation upon the Lords day?

Anſw. They differ in three things; to wit, firſt, in power, ſtrength, and efficacy; vis unita fortior; the more ayde, the ſtronger force; thoſe that pray at home, ſleighting the aſſemblyes of the Saints are deprived of the helpe of their prayers, the joynt cry of many quickly penetrates the heavens.

Secondly, in the promiſe of being heard; where two or three are gathered together, there Chriſt hath promiſed to be preſent alſo [g], if in his name they be aſſembled; how much more gratiouſly will he be then preſent, when many are gathered together, both upon his owne day, & in his own houſe, for the celebration of his worſhip, and to powre forth prayers unto his Father in his owne name and mediation.

[g] Mat 18. 20.

Thirdly, in the ordination of God, who by his Church hath appointed and ordained the Lords day for prayer, and reading, and preaching, and hearing, and meditating, and the like: and therefore faith is ſtrong here, hoping aſſuredly that our prayers ſhall be heard. I. becauſe God is mercifull. II. becauſe we pray in faith. yea III. becauſe wee pray unto God upon that day, which is appointed for this and other holy duties, yea in that place which (by his providence) hath beene ſet apart for his publike worſhip and ſervice: my houſe (ſaith our Saviour) ſhall be called a houſe of prayer. And therefore we muſt not neglect to joyne our ſelves with the congregation of the Lord met together in his houſe, upon his day, for his worſhip, and ſervice: And thus much for the firſt anſwer, or reaſon why our Saviour went into the Synagogue to preach.

Anſw. 2

Secondly, Chriſt went into the Synagogue; leſt otherwiſe he ſhould ſeeme to have fled the light, or avoided the triall of what he taught, or to have been aſhamed of his Doctrine, and thoſe truthes which in his ſermons he uttered: Teaching us hereby, that religion is openly to be profeſſed, and held forth: thus Chriſt commands his Apoſtles; what I tell you in darkeneſſe, that ſpeake you in light: and what ye heare in the eare, that preach ye upon the houſe top [a]: yea our Saviour being examined by Cajaphas, anſwers, I ſpake openly to the world, I ever taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple, whether the Iewes alwaies reſort; and in ſecret have I ſaid nothing [b]. And therefore both by our Saviours precept, and practiſe, the word is not to bee preached in corners, and unlawfull conventicles, but publikely, in the temple, ſo long as the profeſſion and preaching thereof is not perſecuted: truth bluſheth not, neither ſeeketh corners, but religion is truth, becauſe Chriſt is truth [c]; yea againe, hee feareth not man, that truely feareth God [d], and therefore thoſe that are called by God unto the worke of the Miniſterie, muſt boldly preach the word of God, not fearing the frowne or anger of any.

Obſer. 1.

[a] Mat. 10. 27.
[b] Iohn 18. 20.
[c] Iohn 14. 6.
[d] Iohn 12. 42.

What may we thinke of the meetings and ſecret aſſemblies of the Anabaptiſts and Familiſts?

Queſt. 4.

Anſwer. They are neither to be liked, nor allowed of; for firſt, truth ſeekes no corners as they doe, and therefore their deſire of ſecrecy and privacy, doth argue falſhood and errour in their opinions: noctu latent mendæ, in the darke, groſſe faults are not perceived, and therefore thoſe that doe evill hate the light, leſt their evill ſhould be 126 made manifeſt, whereas the truth refuſeth not to be tryed by the light.

Secondly, their love of private aſſemblies, and contempt of publike doth at the beſt argue one of the worſt vices, and firſt ſinnes, that is pride; they hereby preferring their owne tenets opinions, doctrines, aſſemblies, yea perſons, before all others: And therefore theſe as both proud and erronious we juſtly reject.

Obiect. 1 The Fathers in time paſt had their private meetings and aſſemblies; yea ſometimes in deſarts, and in mountaines, and in dens, and caves of the earth. Heb. 11. 38. for which they are commended and rewarded by God, verſe 39. and therefore this practiſe is not to be thus taxed, as proud and erroneous.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, the reaſon is not alike, betweene them and theſe; for this private meeting of the holy Saints and Martyrs was in the times of moſt bloody and cruell perſecution, when neither preachers nor profeſſors eſcaped the fire; and therefore (like Elias that fled for his life) they were inforced to hide themſelves, and privately to enjoy thoſe comforts, and diſcharge thoſe duties and exerciſes of religion, which they could not publikely be ſuffered to doe: But the Anabaptiſts and Familiſts, may enjoy the reading and preaching of the word, and the benefits of Sacraments, and the aſſemblies of the Saints, and be made partakers of the prayers of the congregation; and will not.

Obiect. 2 But the Fathers in the primitive and former times had their private meetings, when there was no perſecution in thoſe places wherein they lived; and therefore this practiſe is warranted by antiquity.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, I might anſwer, that the Ancient practiſe is not our preſident in all things: but in this place I will not, becauſe this cuſtome of theirs is worthy of imitation.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Fathers in thoſe firſt times and afterwards, did deſire a double comfort and ſolace, viz. Firſt, the unity of the hearts of the faithfull, and members of the true Church, which they truely thought would ſooneſt bee acquired and obtained by their mutuall prayers, converſings, and private ſocieties. Secondly, (which was the chiefe thing) they deſired the worſhip and ſervice of God, and delighted in thoſe exerciſes of religion, whereby God was glorified and ſerved; but they never neglected the publique worſhip, or going to the publike places of worſhip, when they might without danger of perſecution, which theſe Separatiſts doe; neither did they hide or palliate their religion, as theſe alſo doe, who profeſſe their religion onely in corners and obſcurity.

Queſt. 5. He taught in their Synagogues:] Why doth Chriſt teach and preach in a corrupt Synagogue? For as the Galileans were a mixt people, ſo their religion and worſhip was mixed, as was that of the Samaritans, as is largely declared 2 King. 17. 32. 34. 41. where we read that they both worſhipped God, as the Levites taught them; and ſerved their Idols, as their owne Prieſts taught them.

Becauſe the place was dedicated unto God, and ſet a part for the reading of the law; therefore Chriſt regards not what is outwardly amiſſe, or their abuſe of the place, but uſeth it well according to its true inſtitution: Teaching us, that wee muſt not abſtaine from good and religious worſhip for ſome circumſtances which are amiſſe: Chriſt and his Apoſtles never refuſed (that we reade off) to goe into any Synagogue to preach, though never ſo much abuſed by others: yea the Apoſtles preach in Solomons porch [a], yea preach and pray by a rivers ſide, Acts 16. 13. 14. yea in Athens, Paul neither refuſes to diſpute in their Synagogues, nor in the market place, Acts 17. 17. nor to preach upon Mars his hill, verſe 22. And that becauſe the true zeale of the preaching of the word, and of the worſhip of God, will not be quenched or hindred by ſmall impediments, no not by any that is not ſinfull or prohibited, either directly, or by a neceſſary conſequent: Paul would rather have the word to be preached through ſtrife and contention, then not at all. Phil. 1. yea rather then that ſhould be letted, Timothie is willed to be circumciſed. Anſw. Obſer. 3. [a] Acts 3. 11 and 5. 12. Queſt. 6.

What ſhall we thinke of thoſe, that give over the preaching of the word, & forſake their high callings, onely for ceremonies, not onely Anabaptiſts, and Separatiſts, but divers others? Anſw.

I anſwer firſt, whatſoever is commanded by ſuperiors which is evill and ſinne in it ſelfe, is not to be done; thou muſt die rather, for evill muſt not be done, that good may come of it [b]. And therefore before thou give over thy calling, thou muſt conſider, whether thoſe things enjoyned be ſinne or no? Secondly, if the things injoyned be not ſinne, but inconvenient, then diſtinguiſh betweene him that commands it and thy ſelfe: Judge not him, for that belongs unto God; but looke unto thine owne part, and give not over the care of thy flocke, or thy preaching for a garment, or ſeeming inconvenience onely, which is impoſed upon thee by command. Thirdly, I judge no man but my ſelfe but let all thoſe judge themſelves, that for theſe outward laudable and ancient ceremonies of our Church give over their callings, whether they want true zeale or not? or whether they more reſpect themſelves, then they doe the preaching of the word of God? remembring that Chriſt would preach in a Synagogue, which had beene defiled by manifold ſuperſtitions, rather then not preach at all, that being the principall worke for which he was ſent, as it is ours who are his Meſſengers. [b] Rom. 3. 8.

§. 4. The Goſpel of the Kingdome.] Why is it called the Goſpel of the Kingdome? Sect. 4. Queſt. 1.

In a double reſpect, viz. Firſt, in reſpect of God. Secondly, in reſpect of us.

Firſt, it is called the Goſpell of the Kingdome, in reſpect of God, becauſe wee are exules, rebels, outlawes, and it is God onely that of his infinite mercy and love calles us by the Goſpel, unto his Kingdome, power, and Soveraignty: Teaching us, that the end of preaching is to bring us unto the ſubjection and ſervice of God: to draw the hearts of children to their Fathers [c]; wee ought Anſw. 1. Obſerv. 1 [c] Malach. 4. 6.

ought to be the Lords both by creation and election, and every way, both in body and soule; but by sinne, and the malice of Sathan, we are now none of Gods, neither have any part in him at all; but are wholly opposite unto him, both in hearts and lives, deprived of the glory of God [d], reprobate unto every good worke, and polluted both in soule and body: wherefore our condition being thus desperately miserable in our selves, the Lord in much mercie sends the Gospell unto us, his scope therein being, to reconcile us thereby unto himselfe.

And therefore first, let us put off the workes of darknesse, and in our lives and conversations submit and subject our selves unto the obedience of God, doing willingly and readily, that which hee requires of us in the Gospell. And then secondly, wee may bee sure of remission and pardon of all our sinnes, of reconciliation unto our God in and through Christ, of protection and providence both spirituall and temporall; yea, of whatsoever is good here, and of eternall glorie hereafter: for all these are promised by him that is faithfull in his promises, to all those that truely obey the preaching of the Gospell of the kingdome.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is called the Gospell of the Kingdome, in respect of us, because it calleth us unto our Coronation, and to the enjoying of a Kingdome: not that every faithfull person shall bee made a King or Ruler over some one Nation or People: neither have a temporall Diademe set upon his head: But first, because the greatest things in this world are Kingdomes, therefore it is called, the Gospel of the kingdome; because it brings us unto that honour, pleasure, joy and felicitie, which farre exceeds all temporall possessions, crownes, royalties, and Monarchies whatsoever. And secondly, because Kings are free, and subject unto none, therefore it is called the Gospell of the Kingdome, because thereby wee are made the free men of Jesus Christ, The Obser. 2. holy Ghost by this phrase teaching us, that the joyes of the faithful are greater, than all the joyes that worldlings partake.

Quest. 2. Wherein doth the joy and felicitie of the children of God consist?

Answ. In a full assurance, that they shall want nothing either spirituall or temporall, which may conduce unto the happinesse of Soule and body, both in this life and the life to come. Or their happinesse consists in a sure and certaine confidence, that all those many and gracious promises, shall in the Lords appoynted time, bee fulfilled, and made good unto them, which Christ hath made in the Gospell, both concerning temporall blessings, and spirituall graces, and eternall glory. More particularly,

First, those that are obedient unto the Gospell, and word of God, have a promise of temporall blessings, to wit, that rather Lyons shall hunger, and bee destitute of a prey, then they want any good thing which they stand in need of [a], because they shall be like trees planted by the rivers side, and whatsoever they doe, it shall prosper [b]; yea, their seed shall bee mightie upon earth: the generation of the upright shall bee blessed; yea wealth and riches shall be in his house [c].

[a] Psa. 34. 10.
[b] Psal. 1. 3. and Ierem. 17. 7.

Secondly, they have a promise of spirituall graces, to wit, first, protection against Sathan; because although Sathan be strong, yet Christ is stronger [d], yea protection against sinne, it shall not reigne over them [e], neither shall they sin unto death [f]. Secondly, that they shall delight themselves in the workes of holinesse, in the wayes of God, and in the exercises of Religion. Read to this purpose the whole 119. Psalme. Thirdly, they shall have peace of conscience [g], that being alwayes quiet, excusing not accusing them: yea such a peace, that nothing can dismay them, or cause them to doubt, or feare, or to forsake their hold, that is, the Lord in whom they trust [h].

[c] Psal. 112. 2. 3.
[d] Luk. 11. 22.
[e] Rom. 6. 14.
[f] 1 Ioh. 3. 9.
[g] Phil. 4. 7.
[h] Ioh. 13. 15. and Rom. 8. 36 &c.

Thirdly, they have a promise of eternall glory, where first is life everlasting. Secondly, glorified bodies. Thirdly, absolute freedome. Fourthly, deliverance from all miseries, disasters, griefes whatsoever. Fiftly, the presence of God, the sight of whose face shall be our chiefest felicitie; as followes in the next chapter. To summe up all, the childe of God, I. Considers, who it is, that makes all these large promises in the Gospell, it is the Lord, who is faithfull in his promises, they being all Yea and Amen unto the faithfull in Christ Jesus; yea, it is the Lord, who is so true and certaine in his word, that everie word of his shall bee accomplished, and heaven and earth shall rather passe away, than one Iota, or tittle of his word shall fall to the ground unfulfilled. II. He considers, what God promises; A sufficiencie in temporall things, security, safetie, and joy in spirituall things; yea, unspeakable happinesse in the kingdome of heaven, where his body shall neither bee subject to death, nor corruption, nor captivitie, nor sicknesse, nor misery, but shall live for ever, a glorified body, enjoying the fruition and sight of God in eternall blisse. Now the consideration of these two things, makes the childe of God enjoy heaven upon earth, and a greater measure of comfort, than the possession of the whole world could afford unto him: the assurance of the accomplishment of these promises unto him, puts more gladnesse in his heart, than all the things and comforts of this life can in the heart of the worldling [i]. And therefore aptly is the Gospell called the Gospell of the Kingdome, because it calles and invites us to greater joy, happinesse, and glory, than the greatest Monarch enjoyes.

[i] Psal. 4. 7.

Sect. 5. §. 5. Healing all manner of sicknesses, and all manner of diseases.] Christ, wee see, first teacheth them, and preacheth unto them, and then bestowes corporall blessings upon them.

Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour worke miracles after preaching?

Answ. 1. First, ob dignitatem, because of the excellencie of preaching; the word is preferred before miracles, as a more worthy thing; miracles being wrought for the praise and commendation of preaching.

Answ. 2. Secondly, ob utilitatem, because of the utilitie, preaching is profitable without miracles; but mira-128 miracles are altogether unprofitable unto us, untill we bee taught and inſtructed by the word, becauſe they doe not edifie us any further, than onely as they confirme the word unto us: thus the Apoſtles preach, and God confirmes the word by them preached, with miracles and ſignes[k].

k Mark. 16. 20. and Acts 4. 16

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, ob inſtructionem, for our inſtruction, that we hence might learne, that temporall bleſſings are not to be expected, untill we bee inſtructed in the knowledge of ſpirituall graces: For the true order of mercie is, firſt to convert the ſoule, then to heale the body.

Queſt. 2. What is the Lords end in beſtowing of temporall or corporall bleſſings?

Anſw. The end of God herein is threefold: Firſt, Probare, to prove and try us: thus the Lord hedgeth about his vineyard, and pruneth it, to try if it will bring forth grapes[l]: thus he ſpares the tree one yeare longer, and digges about it, and dungs it, to ſee whether it will prove more fruitfull, than it hath been heretofore[m]. And thus the Lord beſtowes temporall bleſſings, and corporall mercies upon us, to prove us, whether we will convert unto him, and ſerve him more faithfully, than formerly.

m Luke 13 8.

Secondly, Damnare, to leave us without excuſe, and for our greater judgement and condemnation: the Lord giveth the former and latter raine in his ſeaſon unto us[n], and therefore great ſhall our puniſhment bee, if wee will not ſerve and obey him: wee muſt render a reaſon at the laſt day, of our ſtewardſhip, and give account whether wee have improved all his mercies and bleſſings, upon us beſtowed, to his glory, and the benefite of our owne ſoules.

n Ierem. 5. 24.

Thirdly, Coronare, to crowne our obedience: God perſwades us to feare, love, and ſerve him, and bids us try him, if he will not bleſſe us[o], and therefore when wee are obedient unto his call, hee makes good his bleſſed promiſes unto us: If my people would (ſayth the Lord) have hearkned unto me, and walked in my wayes, I would thus have crowned & rewarded their obedience, I would have ſubdued their enemies, and avenged them upon their adverſaries; I would have fed them with the fineſt of the wheat, and with hony out of the Rocke have ſatisfied them[p]. Thus we ſee the firſt end is uncertaine, the ſecond end is deſperate, and it is onely the third, that is ſweet and comfortable, becauſe it depends upon the promiſes of God. Read theſe places, Exod. 23. 25. Levit. 26. 3. Deut. 7. 13. and 11. 26. and 15. 5. Prov. 10. 6. Lam. 3. 25. In all which places God promiſeth to bleſſe even with temporall bleſſings, thoſe that ſerve him in ſingleneſſe of heart: which promiſes hee performeth: firſt for his truths ſake, becauſe the word is gone out of his mouth, therefore hee will make good what hee hath ſayd. Secondly, for his childrens ſake, in love unto them; he delights in them that delight in him, and his ſervice; and therefore willingly performes with them the oath which hee hath ſworne. Thirdly, for the ſake of others, that all may know, that God loves the righteous, that there is a reward for the righteous; and that what bleſſings God gives unto them, hee gives in love; that by the experimentall knowledge hereof, men may bee allured to ſerve the Lord.

o Malach. 3. 13.

p Pſal. 81. 13. 15. 16.

Eſai. 61. 9.

Healing all manner of ſickneſſes, and all manner of diſeaſes.] Why doth Chriſt rather theſe miracles than others: hee could, and might have wrought greater than theſe; hee could have turned a Rod into a Serpent, or ſtones into bread, or have come downe from the Croſſe, or have done things greater than theſe? Why doth hee onely theſe, to heale and cure corporall infirmities? Queſt. 3.

Anſw. Chriſt could indeed have wrought greater miracles, becauſe all things were poſſible and facile unto him, but hee chooſeth rather to heale and cure, & feed, and do good; and that upon a threefold ground, viz. Firſt, that he might ſhew himſelfe merciful. Secondly, that hee might ſhew, that temporall bleſſings come from him. Thirdly, that in a type hee might ſhew, that hee onely cures the maladies and diſeaſes of the ſoule.

Obſerv. Firſt of all, Chriſt chooſeth to heale and cure, and doe good, rather than other miracles, that hee might ſhew himſelfe to bee a Miniſter of mercie, full of tender compaſſion. Omne tulit punctum, qui miſcuit utile dulci: he teacheth profitable things for the ſoule, hee workes pleaſing things unto the body; and all for this end principally, that hee might gaine and winne them to embrace the Goſpell: Teaching us, that God gives temporall bleſſings unto us, that hee may the ſooner draw us to ſpirituall graces: Hence hee makes large and gracious promiſes unto us, of temporall things, if wee will but render ſpirituall obedience unto him. Read Levit. 26. from verſ. 1. to 15. and Deut. 28. from verſ. 1. to 14. and Mark. 10. 30. God doth not endue us with temporall bleſſings, that he might make us happy in this life (for then hee would not afflict his children) but to try us, and if they lead us unto repentance, then they are truly good unto us, otherwiſe not. And therefore thoſe that abuſe the good temporall bleſſings, which God gives them, either to oppreſſion, or revenge, or wrong, or covetouſneſſe, or drunkenneſſe, or gluttonie, or pride, or idleneſſe, or laſciviouſnes, or prodigalitie, or to any prophaneneſſe at all, make them evil, not good; curſes, not bleſſings unto them: and may aſſure themſelves, that either God will deprive them of them, or if they remain, they ſhall be leanneſſe unto their ſoules.

Secondly, Chriſt choſeth to heale and cure, and the like, to ſhew, that temporall things are to bee expected from him, and to bee deſired of him: and hence hee teacheth us to pray, Our Father which art in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread[q].

q Mat. 6. 11

Queſt. 4. What temporall bleſſings come from God, or are to be expected from him?

Anſw. 1 Firſt, in generall, All, for he is the authour and fountaine of every good gift, and every perfect being.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, more particularly, many ſeverall bleſſings doth the Scripture ſpecifie to come from God, as for example. Firſt victory in battle tle from the Lord: When Moses prayes then Israel prevailes, when he ceaseth praying, Amaleck prevailes [a].

a Exod. 17 11.

Secondly, preservation or delivetance from enemies and danger comes from the Lord; this was not unknowne unto Iacob, who being afraid of his brother, cryes unto God, Deliver me I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, even from the hand of Esau; for I feare him, least he will come and smite me [b].

b Gen. 32. 11.

Thirdly, health, or recovery from sickneſſe comes from the Lord; this made Hezekiah when he heard that he muſt die, to pray unto God to adde ſome more dayes unto his life, and he was heard [c], and Ahaziah is blamed for this, becauſe he ſought not unto God in his ſickneſſe, but to the Phyſitians [d].

c 2 King. 20.2. d 2 King. 1.3.

Fourthly, off-ſpring, and children come from the Lord; thus the Pſalmiſt, Children are an heritage of the Lord; and the fruit of the wombe is his reward [e]; and it is he onely that opens the wombe, making the barren to bring forth; for which cauſe Anna repaires unto him, praying for a child [f].

e Pſal. 127 3.
f 1 Sam. 1 10.

Fiftly, Marriages are diſpoſed by God, and a good wife comes from him [g]; and therefore Abrahams ſervant prayes unto him ſo to direct his journey, that he may obtaine a wife for his Maſters ſonne [h].

g Prov. 19 14.
h Gen. 24. 12. &c: and v. 50.

Sixtly, Food and Raiment comes from the Lord, and therefore Iacob not knowing, what would become of him in the place to which hee went, he deſires God to provide him meat to eat, and cloathes to put on [i].

i Gen. 28. 20.

Seventhly, the Lord proſpereth buildings, and therefore Nehemiah fearing, leſt the worke ſhould be hindred, prayeth unto God, to proſper it, which he doth [k].

k Nehem. 4.9.

Eightly, Raine in time of drought comes from the Lord, and therefore Elias prayes unto him for it [l]. Thus the Lord is our cornucopia, that affords unto us whatſoever is good, in him dwelling all fulneſſe; and therefore in all our neceſſityes let us repaire unto him, begging from him what wee ſtand in need of, obſerving theſe two cautions. I. In petendo, in thy ſupplications, crave firſt thoſe things that are moſt worthy, and temporal things onely in the ſecond place [m]. II. In ſperando, in our hope to be heard, let us firſt labour to bee converted from ſinne unto God, and then we have a promiſe to be heard [n], otherwiſe none [o].

l 1 King. 18. 42.
m Mat. 6. 33.
n Malach. 3.10.
o Ierem. 5. 25.

Thirdly, Chriſt chooſeth to heale, cure, and the like, that in a type hee might ſhew, that hee onely cures the diſeaſes, and maladies of the ſoule; but of this wee have elſewhere amply to treat of, and therefore here I omit it.

§. 6. Healing their ſickneſſes and diſeaſes.] How doe theſe differ?

Sect. 6. Queſt.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome ſay, by ſickeneſſe is meant the infirmities of the body, but by diſeaſes, the maladies of the ſoule: thus thinkes Chryſoſt. (if it be his worke) op. imperf. ſ.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, others thinke that they both are to be referred to the body, and are either Synonyma, both ſignifying one and the ſame thing, or that the one ſignifies great infirmities, and the other little.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, it is onely to bee underſtood of bodily infirmities & griefes hiſtorically or literally, but typically it may imply ſpirituall diſeaſes; and νόσος ſignifies the greater maladies and more grievous, and μαλακία the leſſer and more eaſie to be borne; which is therefore added, to ſhew that Chriſt cured the leaſt as well as the greateſt, or that he vouchſafed to helpe all that were in any ſort diſtreſſed, that either came or were brought unto him, but of this in the next ſection.

Omnes; all diſeaſes, and all ſickneſſes.] How did Chriſt heale all?

Sect. 7. Queſt. 1.

Anſw. 1. Not collectivè (as they ſay) as though hee left none ſicke in all Galilee, or in any place where he came, but diſtributivè, that hee cured ſome of all ſorts of diſeaſes: Thus anſwers Calvin.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, I rather thinke that is to be underſtood collectivè then diſtributivè, that is both, of perſons, and maladies; that all perſons whatſoever, and howſoever diſeaſed that either came, or were brought unto him, were cured by him; no perſon or plague ſent away without redreſſe. Wherein two things are held forth unto our view, firſt, that nothing is impoſſible unto Chriſt; for he can cure all, and all manner of ſickneſſes and diſeaſes. Secondly, that Chriſt cures all our ſickneſſes, and all our ſores; or Chriſt perfectly cures all our ſinnes.

Queſt. 2. What ſinnes doth Chriſt cure?

Anſw. All whatſoever; though our ſinnes were as blood, yet they ſhall bee cleane waſhed away. Iſai. 1.18. read Ezec. 18. 22. Ier. 50. 20. Mich. 7. 19. and 1 Ioh. 1.7. The blood of Chriſt purgeth us from all our ſinnes.

Queſt. 3. How doth this appeare, that Chriſt purgeth us from all ſinnes?

Anſw. 1° First, it appeares robore agentis, by the omnipotency of the work-man, Chriſt doth nothing imperfectly.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this appeares; valore pretij, by the worth and value of the price paid by Chriſt, his blood was a ſatisfaction to the full, for all our ſinnes.

Anſw. 3i Thirdly, this appeares, modo agendi, by the manner of working: Non tollit ut non ſint, ſed ut non imputentur: Hee hath cured and healed all our ſinnes, not ſo as that we have no ſinne inhering in us, but that none, we commit ſhall be imputed unto us: And therefore if we have Chriſt we have enough, we need not the merit of the Saints to bring us to heaven, as the Papiſts teach.

Obiect. But they object, that they deſire not the merits of the Saints to bring them to glory, but only the interceſſion of the Saints for them unto Chriſt, and ſome ſimple Papiſts thinke this to be all that they believe, or that their Church teacheth.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſuppoſe it were thus, yet there is no neceſſity of this; for Chriſt is more full of mercy and love towards his, then either man, or Saint, or Angell can bee, they dare avouch indeed, the Bleſſed Virgin to be more merciſull then Chriſt, 130 but this is no lesse then plaine blasphemy, as shall elswhere be shewed. I say there is no need of any intercessours unto Christ, nay there ought to be none, because intercession is the office of Christ: And hence the Wise Men being instructed by the Holy Spirit (as was shewed before) fall downe before Christ, not before the Virgin, and worship him, not her.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the objection is false, for besides their invocation of Saints; they doe offer up the Merits of the Saints unto God, with manifold blasphemies, as for example.

First, they offer unto God the Merits of the Saints; or more plainly, they pray unto God to heare them, for the Saints sake. Quæsumus domine, ut per merita Christoferi, Erasmi Thomæ, &c. Wee beseech thee oh Lord to heare us, for the Merits of Saint Christopher, Erasmus, Thomas Becket, Damian, Hierome, Martha, Gertrude, a Chemnit exam. p. 3. 154. &c.[a]. Yea most plainely, Supplicamus domine, ut meritis Rochæ ab æternâ morte liberemur[b]. That b Ibid. f. 153. b. b. is, heare us good Lord, & by the Merits of Saint Roch deliver us from eternall death, and divers c Lege f. 158. a. the like blasphemies[c].

Secondly, they desire protection and preservation from the Saints, they have a prayer unto Saint Andrew, O tuis meritis me a futurâ irâ d Chem. p. 3. 157. b. defendas: Oh holy Saint Andrew, defend me by thy merits from the wrath to come[d], and the like request they make unto Saint Iames, O Iacobe, tuis meritis, me ab ira ventura eripias, et in angelorum consortium, &c. Oh holy Saint, by thy merits deliver mee from the anger of God, e Id. f. 157. b. and bring me to the participation and fellowship of the blessed Angels[e]. They have the like prayer unto Saint Jude, O Juda, tuis meritis a potentia dæmonum ad invisibiles potentias, &c. Oh blessed Saint, by thy merits free mee from the power of Satan, and bring me unto the dominion and kingdome of God[f]. f 158. a.

Thirdly, they pray unto the Saints, for to impute their righteousnesse unto them, and by their merits to make them just: Thus they pray to Simon Zelotes, Sancte Simon Zelotes, a cogitationibus immundis, tuis meritis me emunde, & monita mihi tribuas, unde angelica celsitudo, admirabilem me videat & justum: That is, oh holy Saint Simon, by thy merits cleanse me from all my uncleane thoughts, and give thou me such counsell and advice, and such ability to obey it, that I may appeare to those blessed Saints and soules, and Angels who are in heaven, to be holy g f. 157. a fine. and righteous[g].

Fourthly, the reason of these prayers made unto the Saints is, because God is severe, rigid, h f. 183. b i f. 147. a. and austere, yea, and Christ also, but the Saints are milde and mercifull[h], hence they say, appellandum a justitia Dei ad misericordiam Mariæ[i]. We must appeale from the justice of God, to the mercy of the Virgin Mary. Againe, Christus judex, nil insultum, ergo Deus providit advocatam mitem, suavem, saith Antoninus: That is Christ is so severe and exact a Judge, that he will spare no offenders, neither leave unpunished any offences; wherefore God hath provided a sweete and meeke Advocatrix to mediate for us[k]. Hee k f. 147 a. that desires to see more and worse examples of the point in hand, let him read, Chemnit exam. par. 3. f. 183. b. and 147. a. and b. and Biel. lect. 80. and Mort. Appeal. 240.

Fifthly, hence it comes to passe, that their love to the Virgin Mary, doth farre exceed their love unto Christ, O Maria nescio ad quem fugiam, &c.[l] Oh Blessed Virgin, whom can I flye unto l f 156. a. with comfort, but onely unto thee. Laus Deo, Virgini, & Christo[m]. Glory and praise be given m Mort. App. f. 240. b. unto God the Father, unto the Virgin the Mother, and unto Christ the Sonne. Thus they can pray with more comfort unto the Virgin, then unto Christ, & therfore in their Magnificat they preferre and place the Virgin before Christ, rancking her with the Blessed Trinity, yea leaving out the Holy Ghost, to put her in.

VERS. 24. And his fame went through all Syria, and they brought unto him all sicke people, that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with Divels, and those which were lunaticke, and that had the palsy, and he healed them. Vers. 24.

§. 1. And his fame went throughout all Syria.] That is, the excellencie of his doctrine, and the efficacie and power that was in him, to work miracles, was made knowne unto all Syria, both unto his glory, and the benefit and health of all such sicke persons, as were brought unto him. Sect. 1.

What and where was this kingdome of Syria? Quest. 1.

It was an ample and large kingdome, bounded thus: First, the West part thereof was closed in by the Mediterranean Sea: Secondly, the North part of it was shut in by Cilicia, and Armenia. Thirdly, the East end thereof was bounded and enclosed by Euphrates. Fourthly, the South side thereof was limited by the Desarts of Arabia and Egypt, and did not extend further, than thither. Answ.

How many parts was there of this large kingdome of Syria? Quest. 2.

Some make seven parts thereof[a]. I. The first whereof is Mesopotamia, which is encompassed with the rivers Tygris and Euphrates. II. The second is Cælesyria, whose Metropolis is Antiochia. III. The third is Phœnicia, which extends it selfe unto the dead Sea, and whose Metropolis is Tyre and Sidon. IV. The fourth is both Arabia Felix, and Deserta. V. The fift is Syria Sobal, which is Arabia Petræa. VI. The sixt containes the three Palestinaes, that is, Judæam, Philistæam, and Scytopolitanum. VII. The seventh is Idumæa, that lookes towards Egypt. And throughout all these regions the fame of Christs Doctrine and Miracles was divulged. Answ. a Tyrius l. 13. de bello sacro cap. 2.

§. 2. And they brought unto him all sicke people, &c. and he healed them. Sect. 2.

What diseases or sicknesses did Christ heale? Quest. 1.

Some[b] say, that he healed two severall heaps, or sorts of maladies, whereof the first of these were, Answ. b Aretius sup.

were, { First, sicke people, / Secondly, taken with divers diseases. / Thirdly, oppressed with torments. } Unto these answere, { Fourthly, those that were possessed with Divels. / Fifthly, those that were Lunatike. / Sixthly, those that had the Palsie. }

But I omit the prosecuting of these, because they are more curious: this we may take notice of, that all the sicknesses and diseases mentioned here to be cured by Christ, were grievous maladies.

Quest. 2. Why doth our Saviour here in Syria heale onely grievous and extraordinary maladies, and not Fevers, or the like, as well as hee doth in some other places?

Answ. 1. First, although these bee expressed, yet it is most likely, that hee healed others besides these, both blinde, and deafe, and dumbe, and lame, and leprous, and the like.

Answ. 2. Secondly, these onely are here expressed, for their Allegories sake, or for the Allegorical sense that they may have, because they signifie the nature of sinne.

Quest. 3 How may these with benefite, profite, and comfort be allegorized?

Answ. 1. By a serious consideration of the severall particulars here expressed, to wit, First, Male habentes, all sicke people; these are sinners, who although they would perswade either themselves or others, that they are not sicke; yet the truth is, they are not well, and therefore if they be not cured by Christ, they can never recover, but will grow worse and worse: although their sinnes seeme but small as yet.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Morbis detentos, those that were taken with diseases: these are they that are captives unto sinne, taken prisoners of Sathan, and must continue in those chaines, untill Christ free them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Torminibus detentos, those that were taken with inward paines and torments: βασάνοις, Probationibus, with trials and temptations: Teaching us, that our torments and sicknesses, are probations and trials?

Obser.

Quest. 4. Are all sicknesses and diseases trials?

Answ. First, sometimes they are for the punishment of sinne: thus our Saviour sayth to the diseased man, after he had cured him, Goe thy way, and sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee[d], as if hee would say, this long and heavie disease hath been inflicted upon thee for thy former sinnes, and therefore take heed of sinning hereafter. Thus the Apostle tells the Corinthians, that for their unreverent and unworthy receiving of the holy communion, many were sicke and weake among them, and many slept: that is, many were sicke, and many dead[e].

[d] Ioh 5. 14.

[e] 1 Cor. 11.31.

Secondly, sometimes sicknesse is inflicted upon us to curbe and keepe us backe from sinne: thus David was afflicted[f].

[f] Psa. 119 67. 71.

Thirdly, sometimes to stop the mouthes of others: thus Davids childe was stricken with sicknesse and death[g].

[g] 2 Sam. 12. 14.

Fourthly, sometimes to teach others by their example, that are thus afflicted: thus the Lord daily layes sicknesse upon some for the instruction of others, and thus the Galileans were wounded[h].

[h] Luk. 13. 3. 5.

Fifthly, sometimes to glorifie God, and that either { By the miracle which is wrought: thus God was glorified by the blind man[i]. / By our patience; and thus Iob was afflicted with boyles and sores. }

[i] Ioh. 9. 3.

And hence they are called Trials: wherefore we must apply all our sicknesses, and griefes of body, to the comfort and advantage of the soule; learning therein, I. to encrease in patience, II. to repent us of our sinnes, and III. to grow up in faith and confidence in God, in and through the onely Physitian of the Soule, Jesus Christ.

Fourthly, Lunaticos, those that were lunaticke: Answ. 4.

some question there is about the meaning of this word. First, some[a] say, that Lunatici signifie Epilepticos, either those that were sick of the falling sicknesse, or the Epilepsie, a disease which deprives one of the use of minde and sense together for a time: it is called by the Physitians, Morbus sacer, and Comitialis, and Herculeus. Secondly, I rather thinke, that Lunatici here signifies Maniacos, those that are madde, brain-sicke, and deprived of common sense: and are called lunaticke for divers causes, according to the opinion of divers. First, some think, because this disease is caused by the influence of the Moone[b]. Secondly, others thinke, because those only which are born directly at the change of the Moone, are afflicted with this disease. Thirdly, others thinke, they are so called, because this disease is bred in the braine, by the Aspect of the Moone with other Planets. Fourthly, because this evill doth encrease and decrease according to the encrease and decrease of the Moone: and in this sense it is a symbol of sinne; for our hearts are dunghils, or noysome channels, and the more they are stirred, the more they smell; the more our affections are excited and provoked unto sinne, the more madde wee grow therein. And therefore none must thinke, that they are free from this lunacie of sinne, because they are not excited; but if they be prone unto sinne when they are provoked, or occasion is offered, certainly they are not in their right wits, or mindes, or not rightly disposed in their soules: and therefore had need labour by Christ to be healed of this phrenzie.

[a] Aretius sup.

[b] A retius sup.

Fifthly, Damoniacos, those that are possessed of Divels. δαίμων (comes from δαίω) a Spirit, which first Plato and the Philosophers used for God: Secondly, or for the good and evill Genij: Or thirdly, for an evill Spirit, and thus the holy Scripture alwayes useth it. Hence δαιμονίζομαι signifies, à dæmone teneor, I am captivated or taken by the Divell: and δαιμονιζόμενος obsessus, besieged, or beset round about with the Divell. Answ. 5

Thus

132 Thus by nature wee are aſſaulted daily, by one Divell or other, which is in us: there is a Divell of pride, & of anger, and of envie, and of luxurie, and of drunkennesſe, and of calumnie, and of covetouſneſſe, and of treachery, and of blaſphemy, and of prophaneneſſe, by which we are daily tempted, and therefore we muſt repaire to the Phyſitian of our ſoules for preſervation from this internall foe.

Anſw. 6. Sixtly, Paralyticos, the Palſie; this is an ordinarie diſeaſe in the Soule, when the Nerves are bound, and there is no power of moving: and therefore power and abilitie is to bee begged at Gods hands.

Thus much for the ſecond generall anſwer, why our Saviour is ſayd here to cure onely great maladies.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, others ſay, this was done, Propter Adodicum, for the Phyſitians ſake, theſe ſickneſſes that were more incurable unto others, hee cures; but thoſe that ordinary Phyſitians could helpe, he omits.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, Chriſt cured all ſorts of ſickneſſes, but theſe great diſeaſes are onely named, to ſhew us, that nothing is incurable unto God: or that Chriſt cures and heales all our evils, and infirmities, both corporall and ſpirituall. This is the difference betweene Chriſt, and the beſt of Chriſtians; they by the power of Chriſt, can doe ſome things, but not others; as for example, the Apoſtles can reſtore the lame to their legges [c], but they cannot caſt out Divels alwayes [d]. Paul could recover ſome ſicke perſons, by ſending his handkerchiefe unto them [e], but hee cannot reſtore unto health Epaphroditus, that was ſo deare unto him [f]. Peters ſhadow could heale ſome, and his word deſtroy Ananias and his wife, but hee could not deliver or free himſelfe from priſon, Acts 12. nor from the hands of Nero [g]: But Chriſt can doe all things whatſoever he will, & whenſoever he will: and therefore in all our ſickneſſe and diſtreſſe, and danger, let us have recourſe onely to Chriſt, unto whom no cure is hard.

Queſt. 5. Is there any (at leaſt amongſt Chriſtians) that ſeeke helpe in their ſickneſſe, at the hands of any other?

Anſw. Some ſeeke helpe from Hell: Some from Earth: Some from Heaven.

Firſt, ſome forſake ſeeking unto Chriſt, and travell unto Hell, to be cured by the Divell. Thus Ahazia ſendeth to Baalzebub the god (rather the Idoll or Divell) of Ekron, (2 King. 1. 2. 3.) that by him he might bee cured of his hurt: and thus many repaire to witches and wizards in their ſickneſſe, as we ſhewed before.

Secondly, ſome neglecting Chriſt, ſeeke helpe from the Earth: theſe are they who repaire unto the Phyſitians, and truſt in their skill. True it is, hee is to be honoured, and uſed, and ſought unto as a lawfull remedie, as we may ſee in theſe places, Eccleſiaſticus 10. 11. and 18. 10. and 38. 1. and Geneſ. 50. 2. and Ezech. 47. 12. and Apoc. 22. 2. But we muſt neither truſt in the Phyſitians helpe, nor deſpaire of health, though wee ſhould bee deprived of it; for this is blamed in theſe Scriptures; 2 Chron. 16. 12. and Ierem. 46. 11. and Mark, 5. 26.

Thirdly, ſome neglecting the helpe of this heavenly Phyſitian Chriſt, make choice of others in Heaven, to wit, the Saints. Theſe are the Papiſts, who in their diſtreſſe flye unto the glorified ſpirits for health, helpe, and ſuccour, and they approve, and prove the efficacy of this practiſe, by many miracles, as true as the tenet it ſelfe: inſtead of many take one, they tell us a ſtory of a woman, who was poſſeſſed with a divell, and by the direction or revelation of the Virgin Mary, ſhee was brought to the Idoll of Loretto; where the Prieſts invocating and imploring the aid of God the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt, the divell moved not at all, but when he ſung the Letanie of the Virgin Mary, the Divell raged, and ſtormed, and a woodden Image of the Ladies, being laid upon the Damoſels head, the divell cryed out in her, quid mihi caput conteris, oh woman, why doſt thou breake my head [a]?

a Chem. exam. p. 3. f. 182. b.

Anſw. 1. Hereunto we anſwer firſt, this, and the like, are but old Wives Fables, and woe bee to that Church, and religion, which cannot ſubſiſt without theſe, vide Melch. Can. Loc. 6.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſuppoſe theſe Fables were truths, yet thou knoweſt not, whether they be in Heaven, or no, unto whom thou prayeſt, for ſome may worke miracles on earth, who ſhall never partake eternall bliſſe [b].

b Matth. 7. 23.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, how canſt thou pray unto him in whom thou neither canſt nor oughteſt to believe? Rom. 10. 14.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, what need is there to ſeeke helpe at their hands, though they could helpe us, ſeeing that Chriſt in this verſe can doe all things whatſoever he will of himſelfe, without any aid of others.

VERS. 25. And there followed him great multitudes of people, from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Hieruſalem, and from Iudea, and from beyond Iordan. Verſ. 25.

There followed him great multitudes of people.] Why doth the Holy Ghoſt expreſſe this? Queſt. 1.

To teach us that many are called, and but few choſen: many here follow him, but few perſevere, yea, ſcarce any, for when the people cry crucifie him, none (in a manner) abide with him, but leave and forſake him. Anſw. Obſerv.

Why doe ſo many ſtart aſide from their ſtations, or forſake their colours? Queſt. 2.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, by reaſon of perſecution, thus our Saviour ſaith, that when this fiery tryall comes, many will depart from the faith.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, by reaſon of the difficulty of obedience: Many ſay, durus ſermo, the way of the Lord is hard to walke in, and therefore they prove retrograde [c].

c Ioh. 6. 60. 66.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, by reaſon of the tediouſneſſe and wearieſomneſſe of perſeverance: Noviter converſi fervidi, [d] they are fervent when newly converted unto the profeſsion of Religion, but by and by grow luke-warme, and within a while ſtone

ſtone cold, Zelus ruit moleſtus, they beginne in the Spirit; but end in the Fleſh, their zeale declining and falling by his owne weight: Nullum violentum eſt diuturnum: No extreames hold long, and the buildings upon the ſand cannot long endure. Thus many beginne well, hearing the word of God with joy (Mat. 13.) but for want of depth of earth quickly wither and die.

Queſt. 3. What muſt we do that we may perſevere unto the end?

Anſw. 1. First, doe not preſume that thou ſhalt ſtand for ever becauſe thou art called; many are called, who finally, and totally fall away, and therefore let him that thinkes he ſtands take heed leſt he fall: bee not high minded but feare, and perfect thy ſalvation with trembling [e], Certè plures occidit gula, quam gladius, & præſumptio quam deſperatio: Intemperance ſlayes more then the ſword, and preſumtion then deſperation, we being naturally too prone hereunto: haſt thou a mind inlightned, thy affections inflamed with the love of God, and vertue; a ſenſe of thy duety towards God and man, a conſcience of thy ſinnes committed both againſt the firſt and ſecond table; yet meaſure not thy ſelfe by theſe. Are thy neighbours worſe then thou art (Ne te quæſiveris extra) yet meaſure not thy ſelfe by them; goe not out into the ſtreets to ſeeke for thy ſelfe: but meaſure what thou art by theſe rules: First, by thy owne ſinnes which thou doſt commit, this will make thee bluſh, and be aſhamed of thy ſelfe. Secondly, by thoſe bright ſhining lampes of the primitive Church, who lived on earth like Saints indeed, truely mortified in their carnall affections, truely crucified unto the world, truely quickned by the Spirit, giving themſelves wholly unto the Lord, and the Lords worke, being frequent in contemplation, and fervent in practiſe: this will make thee ſeeme unto thy ſelfe more deformed, then Therſites.

[e] Phil. 2. 12.

Thirdly, meaſure thy ſelfe by the purity of God and his Law, conſider how undefiled the Law of the Lord is, and how infinitely pure the Lord of this Law is; and then thou wilt be like the Dove, that could find no place to reſt her foot upon; thou wilt ſee nothing in thee, which thou canſt approve of, or like, but abhorre thy ſelfe in duſt and aſhes.

Fourthly, examine thy ſelfe by thy debility and weakeneſſe of perſeverance, conſider thy impotency and inſufficiency, to perſevere and continue in the wayes, and worke of the Lord, unto the end of thy life, and this will ſhew thee (as in a glaſſe) that thou art more brittle and fraile then the fineſt glaſſe. Thus let us meditate of theſe things, and take heed of preſuming.

Secondly, examine, and ſearch daily thy heart, trying and examining therein theſe particulars. First, haſt thou any faith at all? Secondly, is thy faith true, not falſe; built upon a ſure, not a ſandy foundation. 133 Anſw. 2.

Queſt. 4. How may we know, whether our faith be true or not?

Anſw. 1. By theſe markes, First doſt thou love God? Faith workes by love (Gal. 5. 6.) and where there is no love, there is no faith; and where no true love, no true faith; and therefore examine, whether thou loveſt God, or not: and that not onely lightly in word, but ſolidly in heart.

Queſt. 5. Queſt. How ſhall I know this, whether my love unto my Lord be cordiall and reall, or orall and verball?

Anſw. 1. Anſw. By theſe two things, viz. First, by the Obedience of God, both affirmative and negative: doſt thou nothing, which he forbids thee neither omit any thing which hee requires of thee, certainely, where there is true love, there is a ſolide deſire, and a ſerious endeavour to obey. Secondly, this may be known by thy reverence; doſt thou never thinke of God, never name him or mention him in thy ſpeeches, but with love and hope conjoyned with a godly feare and awfull reverence: hypocrites and wicked men approach unto God too familiarly, but the faithfull with the greateſt reſpect they can poſſibly, and therefore try, whether we love the Lord unfainedly or not, by our willing obeying of him, and our reverend reſpect unto him.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, wee may know whether our faith be true or not, by this, doe wee performe the workes of love, not onely in word, but in deed alſo, that is by a renewed, changed, and purified life and converſation; we now labouring I. To obey God otherwiſe then wee were accuſtomed, that is in ſincerity and ſingleneſſe of heart, by an univerſall and continuall obedience, with love and delight therein: II. Wee labouring now to find out all the reliques of ſinne and pollution, and to approve and allow of none, but to condemne and relinquiſh all: And therefore wee muſt examine theſe things, whether our ſinnes are hated, our affections changed, our lives purged, and our converſations framed to the will of God.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we may try the truth of our faith, by the truth of our actions; doe we all theſe things above mentioned out of a true heart, not as hypocrites that deſire to pleaſe men, but in very deed, becauſe wee both love the Lord with our whole heart, and alſo deſire to obey him, and delight in his ſervice more then in the pleaſures of ſinne for a ſeaſon.

CHAP.

CHAPTER V.

Vers.1. VERS. 1. And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a Mountaine: and when he was set, his Disciples came unto him.

OUR Saviour in this Verse beginnes his Sermon upon the Mount, which continues unto the end of the Seventh Chapter, it is without question the best Sermon, that ever was Preached, and therefore I have inlarged my Meditations more upon it, then upon any of the foure former Chapters, or shall upon any of the following Chapters. This Sermon containes most Divine and Heavenly lessons of instruction and direction, for the ordering of the lives and conversations of all sorts of men, so long as they continue in this life, if they desire soto live here, that they may live with their Christ for ever hereafter; and therefore let not the Christian Reader (who reads to learne) grieve at the large handling of these three Chapters, for the matter contained in them doth so aboundantly overflow the bankes of humane understanding, that a man may see some thing, but not any one man possibly perceive all the divine truths aimed at, and taught therein.

Sect.1. §. 1. And seeing the multitude, hee went up into a mountaine.]

Quest. Why did Christ go up to the Mount to preach the Gospel?

Answ.1. First, that he might be the more quiet, and the lesse disturbed by the people: thus sometimes he goes into the desart, Luke 4. 42. and sometimes into a ship thrust off a little from the land, Luke 5. 3. that hee might not be troubled with the thronging of the rude multitude.

Answ.2. Secondly, some say (Chrysost. imperf. s.) hee went up into the mountaine, that he might fulfill the prophecy and prediction of the Prophet Esaiah Chap. 40. 9. who saith oh Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountaines; oh Ierusalem that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voyce.

Answ.3. Thirdly, some (oper. imperf. s.) say, that this was done Tropologically, the mount signifies the Church, and therefore hee ascends into the Mount to preach, to teach us, where the preaching of Christ is to bee sought? to wit, in the Church.

Answ.4. Fourthly, some say, hee went up into the Mountaine to preach, that the multitude might not heare him; but this is not so, for hee taught them as well, as his Disciples, as followes afterwards.

Answ.5 Fiftly, some say, Christ goes us to the top of the Mount, when he was to preach, to shew, that the preachers of the word of God ought to strive to climbe up to the top of vertue, and religion, and to be second to none in pietie[a]. a Carthus. sup.

Sixtly, some say, Christ ascended, that hee might pray, Luke 6. 12. he sate, that hee might make choise of his Disciples, Luke 6. 13. he descended and stood, that hee might teach the people, Luke 6. 17.[b]; but Calvin thinks, that Saint Luke in that 6. Chapter conjoynes together two histories of a divers time. Answ.6. b Muscul. sup.

Seventhly, Gualter. sup. shewes that there were foure causes, why Christ went up into the Mountaine, when he went about to preach: to wit, Answ.7.

First, that he might bee heard the better of all his auditors. Secondly, that hereby he might the more lively demonstrate unto us, that hee taught sublime, high, and spirituall mysteries.

Thirdly, that hee might answer to the type of the law in the Mount { God gave the law with terrour. / Christ gave the Gospel with comfort.

Fourthly, that hereby hee might teach us to lift up our hearts, and to have our conversations in heaven, our affections being set upon those things which are above. Colos. 3. 2. Phil. 3. 20. Ascendit ut turbas ad altiora trahat[c], he ascends in person to the top of the mountaine, that hee might teach the people to ascend in their affections, from temporall, to spirituall things. c Hier. s.

§. 2. And when he was set;] Why did Christ sit, while he preached unto the multitude? Sect.2. Quest.

First, some say, that he might the better hide and conceale his Deitie; he doth not stand and preach, but sits, because they were not able to take up, comprehend, or understand, what hee should teach them in power, as God[d]. Answ.1. d Hier. s.

Secondly, some say Christ sate for the dignity of the Preacher, they that were taught were but men, but he which taught them, was more, he was God and Man, and therefore he sits, when he preacheth unto them[e]. Answ.2. e Aug. de S.D. in Monte.

Thirdly, the true reason thereof was this, because it was the manner and custome to preach sitting, thus elswhere Christ taught the People sitting. Mat. 13. 1. 2. Mark. 4. 1. Luk. 5. 3. Iob 8. 2. and most plainely, Luke 4. 20. he reades a Chapter, and then sits downe and preacheth. So Mat. 26. 55. Thus the Jewes were accustomed to sit and teach, whence they were said to sit in Moses seat[f]. And after Christ, the Apostles practised this same custome, sitting and preaching[g]. Answ.3. f Mat. 23. 2. g Acts 16. 13.

§. 3. His Disciples came unto him.] Why did the Disciples of Christ come unto him? Sect.3. Quest.

First, some think these words are here inserted, because he left the multitude, that he might the more conveniently teach his Disciples[h]. But hee went not into the Mount, that hee might be ridde of the common people, but that all might heare him with the greater facility[i]. Ne opineris Answ.1. h Aretius i Gualt. s.

solis

solis Discipulis loquutum, sed et cæteris: Wee must not thinke, that Christ spake here onely to his Apostles but to the rest also, sayth Chrysostome sup. et Hom. 6.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some thinke that the Disciples came unto Christ, that they might bee assistant unto him, or joynt associates with him in this office, as it is said, They shall sit with Christ at the day of Iudgement. Mat. 19. 28. Luk. 22. 30. Certainly, The faithful shall judge the world, 1 Cor. 6. 2. But this is not the meaning of this place, for the Apostles here were taught by Christ, as well as the rest.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Disciples came unto Christ, that they might be nearer unto him then the rest, and that for two causes. First, that they might bee eare-witnesses of the truth, which afterwards they were either to write or preach (Bullinger sup.) Secondly, because they were more obedient, ut essent corpore viciniores, quia animo præceptis appropinquabant[a], that they might be nearer to his person in body, as they were nearer to his precepts in mind: Teaching us, that the more obedient any man is unto God, the nearer Christ will draw him unto himselfe; and hence come those phrases, If ye obey me, ye shall bee my friends, and my brethren. Mark. 3. 34. Ioh. 14. 6.

[a] Aug. de S. D. in Monte.

Observ.

They came unto him.] If any man desire to be made partaker of Christ, hee must (as the Apostles doe here) come unto Christ. But it may be asked, how must we come?

Quest. 2.

Answ. 1. First, not negligently, or remissely, we must not seeke Christ in our beds, nor come slowly unto him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must not come unto him, with a bare externall profession onely Matthew 7. 21.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but wee must come with a longing and hungry affection after him: If any man thirst (saith Christ) then let him come unto me[b]. Wee must be so sensible of the want of Christ, that wee desire nothing in comparison of him. And therefore let us not come unto Christ with idle desires, or sluggish endeavours, (vult & non vult piger) but with longing desires, and laboutous endeavours, untill wee have found him, whom our soule loves, and are made partakers of him.

[b] Ioh. 7. 37

Obiect. We can do nothing of our selves, we can neither fervently desire Christ, nor faithfully labour to approach and draw neare unto him, and therefore in vaine is this exhortation.

Answ. Certainly without the Divine assistance of the Spirit of God, we can doe nothing, that good is; but when God gives, posse & velle, good desires, and ability and power to effect that which is good, then we must endeavour to perfect and finish it; we must not sit still, and cry God helpe us, but use those means which the Lord commands, and endeavour to performe what hee prescribes, and conanti aderit Deus, he will certainely blesse those our endeavours, and assist us by his grace to worke out thorowly the worke of our salvation[c].

[c] Phil. 2. 12. 13.

Quest. 3. What is required on our part, for the obtaining and enjoying of Christ?

Answ. 1. First, thou must take up thy crosse; patiently undergoing whatsoever the Lord laies upon thee to beare.

Answ. 2. Secondly, thou must deny thy selfe Mat. 16. 24. that is, thy owne workes, thy owne merits, thy owne desires, yea thy owne affections; thou must put off the old man with his old garments, and put on Christ, by faith and new obedience, not making provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof, but labouring to fulfill and obey the will of God[d], casting away from us (though never so deare unto us) whatsoever may hinder us from approaching neare unto Christ; blind Bartimeus threw away his cloake, because it was an impediment unto him, when Christ called him; he Traveller, and Souldier cast away, whatsoever may hinder them in their journey, or warefare, and thus must we, if we desire (with the disciples here) to come unto Christ, we must cast off those sinnes that hang so faston, and cleave so fast too, and runne cheerfully unto Christ[e].

[d] Rom. 13. 13. 14.

[e] Heb. 12. 1.

VERS. 2. And he opened his mouth, and taught them saying. Vers. 24.

§. 1. And he opened his mouth.] Why doth the Evangelist use this periphrasis or circumlocution, or needlesse phrase, can any speake without opening of his mouth?

Sect. 1. Quest.

Answ. 1. First, it is an Hebraisme, he opened his mouth, that is, exorsus loqui (Calvin. s.) hee begunne to speake: thus Saint Peter (when hee had heard why and upon what occasion Cornelius sent for him) opened his mouth and said[f], that is, begun to preach unto them: True it is the Jewes did not alwayes use this phrase of opening the mouth, when they meant to expresse the beginning of a speach, but onely when they were to speake of some serious and weighty things; thus the Psalmist, I will open my mouth in a parable, I will utter darke sayings of old[g]. And thus Salomon, Open thy mouth for the dumbe; yea open thy mouth and judge righteously. That is, bee carefull to speake and plead the poore mans cause which is oppressed[h]. Thus Gualter sup. thinkes that the Hebrewes onely used this phrase in such cases of moment, but Beza thinkes, it is not universally true.

[f] Act. 10. 34.

[h] Pro. 31. 8. 9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this phrase is here used to shew the originall of the Prophesies, and predictions of the Prophets, that it was Christ, who opened their mouthes, as if he would say, Christ now opened his owne mouth, who of old opened the mouths of the Prophets: Thus August. S. Dom. in monte.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, or this phrase may here bee used, to shew that Christ taught some, and sometimes without the opening of his mouth, and that either by internall revelations or inspirations, or visions, or by his workes and externall miracles; thus Chrysost. sup.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, or this phrase doth shew, that Christ was wont to keepe his mouth shut; and to open it but, when there was need: as David saith, The mouth of the righteous speaketh wisedome, and his tongue talketh of judgement[i]. And Solomon; the mouth of a righteous man is a well of life, yea the 136 mouth of the just bringeth forth wisedome[k]: Teaching us hereby two things, to wit, First, that we ought to set a watch over our mouthes, and keep our tongues as with a bridle. Secondly, that we ought liberally and freely to open our mouthes to preach the Gospell of Christ, and the word of God.

[k] Pro. 10. 11. 31.

Obser. 3.

VERS. 3. Blessed are the poore in Spirit, for theirs is the kingdome of heaven. Vers. 3.

Blessed.] There are three parts of this Sermon preached by our Saviour upon the Mount, the first whereof is the Preparation, layd downe in the two first verses of this Chapter: the second is the Sermon it selfe, beginning at this verse, and continuing unto the Chapter 7. vers. 28. The third is the Conclusion in that 28. vers. Sect. 1.

Blessed.] The Fathers[l] and Schoole-men much addicted, and the latter too much doating upon the number of seven, doe observe onely seven beatitudes mentioned in this chapter, to wit:

[l] Aug. S. Dom. Thom. 1a 2æ. q. 69. Anton. p. 4. Titul. 7. cap. 7.

1. Povertie of Spirit, vers. 3.
2. Meeknesse and Humilitie, vers. 5.
3. Mourning, vers. 4.
4. Hungring and thirsting after Righteousnesse, vers. 6.
5. Mercifulnesse, vers. 7.
6. Puritie of Heart, vers. 8.
7. Peace-makers, vers. 9.

Quest. 1. Admitting of these seven beatitudes, how may wee apply it with any benefite unto our selves?

Answ. 1 First, these seven-fold blessings may be fitted, squared, and applied unto the seven ages of man: which are these, I. Infantia, Infancie, which is from the birth untill the age of seven yeares old. II. Pueritia, Childhood, from seven to fourteene. III. Adolescentia, Adolescencie, from fourteen to twenty eight. IV. Iuventus, Youth, from twentie eight to fourtie. V. Virilitas, Strength, from fourtie to fiftie sixe. VI. Veneranda Senectus, reverend old age, from about fiftie sixe to seventie. VII. Decrepita Senectus, Decrepit, and much decayed old age; from seventie to death.

First, mans first age is Infancie; this must bee regulated by the first beatitude, Povertie of Spirit, wee must be like Infants, who are humble and lowly, or we cannot come to heaven.

The second age is Childhood: this must bee ordered by Meeknesse and gentlenesse; not obstinacie, perversnesse, & stubbornnesse: that is, we must be of humble & lowly spirits towards men, and meeke and gentle towards God, willing to bee taught and instructed, and directed by him in all things, not opposing his will in any thing.

The third age is Adolescencie; and is to be curbed by Mourning, and godly sorrow: this age is subject to many temptations, both of the Flesh, Divell, and World; and therefore humiliation and compunction of heart are good guides for this age to follow, to beat the body, and bring it into subjection, is a necessary worke, and needfull (although a very hard one for that age) and shall be rewarded with Blessednesse.

The fourth age is Youth, which is prone to covetousnesse, and the profits and preferments of the world, longing for, and labouring after them too much. And therefore it should rather be directed by a hungry and thirsty desire of righteousnesse, the fourth Beatitude.

The fifth age is Strength, or the perfection of a man; at which a mans strength beginnes to decline: this must bee moderated by the fifth Beatitude, Mercie, charitie, liberalitie, hospitalitie, and the like.

The sixt age is Venerable old age, this is principally to bee squared by Puritie of heart; old men must labour that their hearts may bee free from all fraud, or love of sinne, and filled with holy thoughts, and meditations, and longing desires of their journeyes end[m].

[m] Anton. part. 4. Titul. 7. cap. 5. sect. 6.

The seventh is Decrepit old Age: in which a man man must ſtudie Peace and Patience.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, theſe ſeven Beatitudes may be ſquared and fitly applied to the ſeven Ages of the World: viz.

The firſt age fell by pride, and therefore wee muſt learne to be poore in ſpirit.

The ſecond age fell by the height of Nimrods ambition, who would have built Babell: and therefore we muſt learne, and labour to bee meeke and humble.

The third age fell, becauſe they would not ſuffer adverſitie and want in the wilderneſſe, patiently and contentedly; but placed their happineſſe in earthly things: and therefore wee ſhould eſteeme this world a vale of miſerie, and not grieve for any temporall thing, we lack herein, but rather mourne, that wee our ſelves are ſo long herein; being ſeparated from the full fruition of our Chriſt, ſo long as wee are preſent in the body; becauſe bleſſed are they that thus mourne.

The fourth age was ruined, becauſe righteouſneſſe was contemned, and equitie trampled under feet; and therefore wee muſt hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe: for ſo wee ſhall bee bleſſed.

The fift age periſhed through crueltie, murder, bloodſhed, and diſcord, as we may ſee in the Maccabees; and therefore we muſt learne to be mercifull, and ſo we ſhall finde mercie, and not periſh.

The ſixt age brought forth Chriſt, who was a Lambe without ſpot: teaching us to endeavour, as the fellow members of Chriſt, to bee pure and cleane in heart, ſoule and ſpirit.

The ſeventh age hitherto hath been, and ſhall bee full of warres, broyles, and ſeditious ſtriſes; and therefore if in this age wee deſire to bee bleſſed, we muſt be keepers, lovers, and makers of peace[n]. [n] Anton. part. 4. Tibul. 7. cap. 5. ſect. 7.

Which is the firſt bleſſedneſſe pronounced by our Saviour?

This in this verſe, to wit, Povertie in Spirit. Queſt. 2.

What is conſiderable, or obſervable in this Beatitude? Anſw. Queſt. 3.

Anſw. Two things, to wit,
- The Propoſition, wherein are three circumſtances, viz.
  - Quid, what is promiſed? Bleſſedneſſe.
  - Qui, Who are bleſſed? The poore.
  - Quatenus, What poore? In Spirit.
- The reaſon, becauſe theirs is the kingdome of heaven, to wit, both the kingdome of
  - Grace, the preaching of the Goſpell,
  - Glory, eternall life.

Queſt. 4. Why doth our Saviour begin here: that is, why doth he begin his Sermon with the Beatitudes, and with the beatitude of Povertie of ſpirit?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, this Chriſt did in regard of his Diſciples, who being ſhortly to be tried, and afflicted, and ſcorned, muſt be corroborated by this conſolation.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, this was done in regard of all the people preſent: all love, and deſire happineſſe: and therefore our Saviour herewith beginnes, that his doctrine and Sermon might be the better liked, and more gratefully accepted of all.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe all men almoſt erre in this ſubject, ſome placing felicitie in one thing, ſome in another, all miſplacing it; our Saviour therefore doth here correct all the vulgar errours, ſhewing truely, wherein true happineſſe doth conſiſt.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, Chriſt beginnes this Sermon with the Beatitudes, becauſe the end of his preaching is to bring us to felicitie, and true bleſſednеſſe.

Queſt. 5. Why doth not our Saviour rather command us to be poore in Spirit, and to mourne, and bee meeke, and mercifull, and peace-makers, &c. than thus onely to pronounce ſuch bleſſed and happy?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe it is a certaine exclamation; or a more emphaticall phraſe: our Saviour by pronouncing the poore in ſpirit to be bleſſed, doth intimate the excellencie of this vertue of poverty of ſpirit.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe the vulgar errour of felicity and infelicitie, bleſſednеſſe and miſery, is the chiefeſt let and impediment unto faith: our Saviour therefore, that hee may take it out of the way, doth in theſe beatitudes, ſhew theſe two things: Firſt, that Bleſſednes doth not cõſiſt in the plenty, fulneſſe, and abundant fruition of peace, or temporal poſſeſſions. Secondly, that afflictions doe not hinder a man from being truely happy. The ſcope therefore of our Saviour here, is, to teach us what is true happineſſe, and wherein it conſiſts.

What is true happineſſe according to Chriſts doctrine and meaning, and how did the Ancients erre herein? Queſt. 6.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, the Philoſophers erred heavens breadth from Chriſts opinion concerning true happines: for firſt, ſome of them placed it in pleaſure; thus the Epicures, πολλὰ ἡδέα ἢ δικαία, as Xenophon ſayes. Secondly (for I will but name theſe, having to ſpeake of them more largely elſwhere) ſome[o] place it in riches. Thirdly, ſome[p] in honours. Fourthly, ſome in Fame, credit, and reputation; thus Pindarus ſayth, ὑπάρχειν καλὸν ἐν ἀνθρώποις ἔχειν, to have a good name, or to heare others report well of us, is a great happineſſe. Fifthly, ſome[q] place it in vertue, ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ ἐχέμεν, or vertuous qualitie: honeſtum judico ſolicem, injuſtum miſerum. I count the honeſt man an happy man, and him that is diſhoneſt, truely miſerable, ſayd Plato[r]: and againe, Felices poſſeſſione juſtitiæ & temperantiæ, infelices miſeriæ: he whoſe heart abounds, and life ſhewes forth the workes of righteouſneſſe and equitie, and temperance, is a happy man; but he is wretched, whoſe inward man is overflowen with the gall of bitternеſſe and hatred. Sixtly, Ariſtotle addes, that bliſſe conſiſts in a perfect life. Seventhly, wee might adde, that it conſiſts in a faithfull and religious purpoſe: Mihi adhærere Deo, bonum eſt, ſayd one[s], my happineſſe is to ſticke cloſe to the obedience of God. [o] Quæſtuoſi. [p] Politici. [q] Stoici. [r] Pindar. [s] Plato Gorg. [t] Plato ib. [u] Plotinus.

138 Secondly, true felicity, is something more then all these, for it is Praemium virtutis, ergo virtute major[u], the reward of vertue, and therefore more then vertue it selfe? Yea it is bonum ex omnibus bonis compositum[w], a good, compounded out of every good thing; or the quintessense of all things that are good: it is Reditus uniuscujusque rei, ad principia[x], the returning of a thing unto his proper object, from which it hath been separated, and therefore it is conjunctio cum Deo[y], an union and communion with the Lord of our life, and the God of our hope.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, true happinesse is threefold, first, it consists, in fortunis, ἐυτυχία, in the externall good things of this life: This felicity is neither promised unto the faithfull, nor denyed: and hence it is, that wee see some of Gods children abound in all temporall blessings, as did Salomon; some want many necessary things, as did Lazarus. Secondly, it consists, In mente ἐυδαιμονία, in the endowments of the mind and inward man, and this happinesse is twofold, to wit, either first, Philosophicall, consisting in an ample measure of wisedome, knowledge, learning, and the like: Or, Secondly, Thelogicall, consisting in the knowledge of God, and the Crosse of Christ, the former of these two is given but to few (not many wise according to the flesh being called[z]) but this latter is promised and given unto all the children of God in some measure: This is life eternall (saith Christ) to know thee, and him whom thou hast sent[a], and therefore the Lord will so enlighten the understanding of his children, that they shall have a tast of this saving knowledge. Paul tels us for our imitation, that hee desires to know nothing save Christ and him crucified[b]; and certainely those for whom Christ efficaciously dyed, shall bee in time made partakers of this knowledge.

Thirdly, the last and most perfect happinesse, consists in aeternitate vitae, μακαρισμός, in eternall life and glory, and this is the happinesse which is pronounced and promised in all these 9. verses. for ἐυτυχία and ἐυδαιμονία, belong unto this life, but μακαρισμὸς unto the life to come, and as the second exceeds and excels the first, so the third the second: for there are three sorts of men, in the world. First, Terreni, meer earth wormes, giving themselves wholly up unto pleasures, and the profits of the world. Secondly, Celestes, who are more refined, their mindes being more sublime, seeking after learning, literature, and knowledge.

Thirdly, Divini, whose studies, desires, and endeavours, are after piety, purity, and integrity of life; and these are truely the happy men; they are called μακάριοι, blessed, either from χαίρειν, to rejoyce and be exceeding glad [c] περὶ τῆς ἀπολαύσεως ἐλπίδι, because they are no more subject either to misfortune, fate, danger, distresse, or death, and this happinesse Christ brings those unto, who are poore in Spirit

Sect. 2. Quest. 1. §. 2. Are the poore.] Why doth not our Saviour say, Blessed are the righteous; and those that feare the Lord, but blessed are the poore?

Answ. 1 This hee did first, that hee might correct the errour of those, who placed Felicity in Riches.

Secondly, to teach us that the poore are nearet to happinesse and blessednesse then the rich: God hath chosen (saith Saint Iames) the poore of this world, to be heires of his Kingdome[e]. Answ. 2.

It will be here objected, Christ speakes not in this place of poverty, but of humility onely. Obiect.

First, it appeares plainely by Saint Luke, that the poore are here meant: for Luke 6.20. Christ saith to his Apostles, Blessed are ye poore: and on the contrary, vers. 24. he saith, Woe unto you, that are rich. Answ. 1.

Secondly, our Saviour here blesseth the poore, that the people might learne not to contemne and despise the poore Apostles (Chrysost. de variis loc.) Answ. 2.

Thirdly, Christ pronounceth the poore blessed, that his Disciples might bee encouraged the better to endure and undergoe poverty, and thus it evidently appeares, that our Saviour speakes not here onely of humility, but also of poverty. Answ. 3.

Wherein ar the poore more happy then the rich? Quest. 2.

They want the temptations and tryalls, and impediments which rich men frequently meete withall, and are incident unto; the way to heaven is much straighter and sharper to a rich man then to the poore, and therfore the poore is more happy then the rich: As for example. Answ.

First, those that abound in the wealth of this world, are much more prone to the love of the world, then those that are deprived of that affluence: Mel qui non gustavit, nescit, he that never tasted honey, knowes not how sweet it is; and hee that never tasted of the sugred baites of the world, cannot so love them, as they doe, who are bewitched with them.

Secondly, poore Lazarus is free from that heart-breaking care of getting, keeping, spending, and leaving of riches; which rich Dives growes leane and old withall; cura facit canos, for this care makes the head quickly gray. Thirdly, the Rich Man is tempted in the acquiring of riches (which so insatiably he desires) unto deceit, and theft, and lying, and perjury, and oppression, &c. All which temptations, the poore man is lesse frequently assaulted withall. Fourthly, in the enjoying of riches, the rich man is tempted unto Contentions, and Suites, and Pride, and Intemperancy, and Pleasure, and Unchastity, and that because hee is rich, and his money will supply him in all these, and procure him, whatsoever his wicked heart may long and lust after, but the poore man, to whom this fewell is wanting must needs be more cold, and lesse forward unto any of these, then the rich man is: And therefore in these regards we may safely say, blessed are the poore.

§. 3. The poore in spirit.] What is meant here by Spirit? Sect. 3. Quest. 1.

First, some understand the Spirit of God; and give this sense, Blessed are the poore in spirit, that is, blessed are they who are poore for the Holy Ghost; or who are made (or become) poore in will, Answ. 1.

[u] Answ. 2 Rhod. 18.14. [w] Plato def. Phi. [x] Mirand. in Genes. [y] Plotinus [z] 1 Cor. 1 26. [a] Ioh. 17. 13. [b] Gal. 6. 16. [c] Arist. Ethic. 7. cap. 11. [d] Eustathius. [e] Iam. 2. 5. Obiect.

b Hierom. ſi. will, for the Holy Spirit[b]. Hence Bellarmine collects the vow of poverty, but yet doth not ſo underſtand this word ſpirit.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome underſtand the humane ſpirit; and this is the truth.

It is hence doubted, whether by the humane ſpirit, be meant the will or the cogitations?

Queſt. 2.

This will the more clearly appeare, by the expoſition and interpretation of this word Poore. Anſw.

Poverty in Scripture is threefold, viz. either
- Affliction, thus David ſaith, I am deſolate and poore, that is afflicted[i]. [i] Pſal. 25. 16.
- Want, and this is threefold, either in
  - Act, but not affection, which is poverty by neceſſity.
  - Affectiō, but not in act, which is poverty by wil, not poverty indeed.
  - Both, Affection and Act[k]. [k] Bellar. de Monac. lib. 2. c. 20.
- Humility.

Hence there are three expoſitions of the word, ſome First, expounding it of Affliction. Secondly, ſome of want and poverty. Thirdly, and ſome of humility.

First, ſome by poore underſtand the afflicted, thus Calvine ſ. expounds the word, but Bellarmine altogether rejects this, becauſe this verſe then would bee one and the ſame, either with verſ. 4. or 11. that is, if by poore, were meant afflicted men, then it is the ſame with thoſe, that mourne, verſ. 4. or thoſe that are perſecuted, verſ. 11.

Secondly, ſome underſtand this word, de egeſtate, of want or poverty in temporall poſſeſſions, and this expoſition onely delights the Cardinall Bellarmine: who yet takes it neither for poverty in act onely, or in affection onely, but in both; adding over and above theſe two things, viz.

l è Bern. Serm. de feſto omn. Sanct. First, Affection is twofold.
- Of Truth, this is naturall affection, and is without any heart of zeale[l].
- Of Charity, this is a ſpirituall affection for the love of Chriſt; and this he meanes here.

Secondly, hence he collects, that poverty is not onely to bee brooked and borne, but alſo to be vowed: this collection was gathered with the left hand, for many things pleaſe God, ipſo imponente, when hee layes them upon us, which pleaſe him not, te aſſumente, when men undertake them of themſelves without either his impoſition or injunction: It is pleaſing unto God, when men are patient and contented in their poverty, the Lord laying it upon them, to exerciſe and try them thereby; but it diſpleaſeth the Lord when men impoſe poverty or miſery upon themſelves, the Lord not requiring it at their hands, but bleſſing them in temporall things.

Obiect. 1 But Bellarmine gives us a triple reaſon (that we may take our choice) for the confirming of his deduction.

First, becauſe our Saviour meanes onely ſuch in this place; bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit, that is ſuch, as willingly make themſelves poore.

Anſw. 1. It is evident that Chriſt ſpeaketh not of outward poverty, but of the humility of the minde, First, becauſe it is ſo expreſſed, Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit. Secondly, the Prophet David in the ſame ſenſe, ſaith, I am poore[m], yet was hee a King and abounded in riches. Thirdly, our Saviour ſaith, The poore receive the Goſpell[n], yet were they not all poore in ſubſtance that received Chriſt; as wee may ſee in Nicodemus, Ioſeph of Arimathæa, and Zacheus: But if this reaſon pleaſe not, the Cardinall hath provided us a ſecond, and that is.

[m] Pſa. 25. 16.
[n] Mat. 11. 5.

Becauſe poore here is oppoſed to rich Luke 6. 24. Obiect. 2

To this wee anſwer First, although Chriſt ſaith, Woe unto the rich, yet he meaneth not all rich men, but ſuch as truſted in their riches: for ſuch onely are excluded the Kingdome of Heaven[o]. Anſw. 1. [o] Mark. 10 24.

Secondly, although it be true, that Chriſt oppoſeth poore and rich men, yet the vow of poverty doth neceſſarily follow from hence; for there is a deepe difference beweene theſe two, to endure poverty, and to vow poverty: But Bellarmine gives us a third reaſon, which is this. Anſw. 2.

Our Saviour Chriſt was poore both in action and affection, practiſing himſelfe, what hee taught unto others, and therefore both poverty in action and affection is here meant. Obiect. 3

To this wee reply First, that Chriſt was not poore, that is, no begger; and this their owne Cajetane affirmes, giving theſe two true reaſons to prove it. Anſw. 1.

To wit,
- First, becauſe he bought neceſſary things.
- Secondly, becauſe he gave unto the poore.

Iohn 13.

Secondly, it is untrue, that Chriſt did profeſſe voluntary poverty; for we never read that ever he vowed poverty; yea their owne extravagant hath decreed, that it is an hereſie ſo to affirme: Chriſt having both money, and a bagge for the almes of the poore, Ioann. 22. Tit. 14. cap. 5. And hence the more diſcreet and ingenious Papiſts overſlip this place: Stapleton in his antidot mentions it not, Caniſius, that rakes up all the places and proofes he can, for devoted poverty, doth yet not cite this verſe, & Alphonſus de caſtro, in this head of poverty, Hareſ. 3. doth plainely deny this to bee the meaning of this place; and gives this reaſon for it, becauſe then it would follow, that onely poore men ſhould come into the Kingdome of Heaven; which was the hereſie of thoſe that called themſelves Apoſtolici. Ib. Hareſ. 1. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, ſome underſtand this place, de humilitate, of humility, Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit, that is, bleſſed are the humble; now if it bee meant of humility, not of poverty, then neceſſarily the Spirit doth ſignifie the cogitations, not the will: and this expoſition Bellarmine cannot 140 deny (because it is Chrysostomes and Augustines) but hee preferres his owne exposition of vowed poverty before this. Non de paupertate, quia non per se laudabilis[p]. By poore in spirit is not meant poore in substance, that not being a thing praise-worthy in it selfe; but contriti corde, the broken and humble in heart (Chrysost. ſ. ot op. imperf.) qui non magna ſapit de ſe (Id. Ibid.) ſed factus ut puer (Ib.) Who hath no high thoughts or conceites of himselfe, but is lowly in his owne eyes, as a young child: So Saint Augustine. blessed are the poore in spirit, that is, Non habentes inflantem ſpiritum, who hath no lofty or puffed up spirit. Humiliſpiritantes, conſcij indignitatis ſuæ[q], the poore in spirit are those, that are lowly, being truely conscious of their owne unworthinesse.

Queſt. 3. Are not these words then understood of poverty at all?

Anſw. They are, as we shewed before: But I. Not at all of the vow of poverty. Not II. Of the action, Nor III. Of the affection, But IV. of the state onely of those who are poore.

Queſt. 4. Doe not they then that are rich in estate and substance come unto the Kingdome of Heaven?

Anſw. 1. Yes; if they be poore in spirit; otherwise their portion is woe (Luke 6. 24) Abraham, Iob, Salomon, Ioſeph of Arimathæa, were rich in substance, and poore in spirit, and therefore are now blessed Saints in heaven.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this word (poore) is added exceptivè, as though our Saviour should say, blessed are the humble, bee they never so poore, for their poverty shall bee no barre or let unto their felicity.

Queſt. 5. Why doth our Saviour speake this unto his Disciples, they were proud of nothing, being of the inferiour sort of the people, and therefore it rather seemes to bee spoken of poverty then of humility?

Anſw. 1. First, this was spoken unto all; and therefore hereby are taught the rest of the people, as well as the Apostles.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this was spoken unto the Disciples in regard of the time to come: Christ knew, that afterwards they were to bee endued with many singular graces and the gift of miracles, and therefore he doth preadmonish them, not to be proud of any thing that hereafter may be imparted, or bestowed upon them.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, this was spoken unto the Apostles, in regard of the present time and occasion, for they seeing their Master thus magnified, and followed, and flocked unto, and that they onely were sufferred to approach unto him, might perhaps bee proud of this; and therefore to prevent it, our Saviour thus speakes unto them, blessed are the poore in spirit.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, I may adde, that the Disciples were proud indeed; as well as poore and meane, and therefore the excellency and felicity of humility, was as seasonable a doctrine unto them, as the blessednesse of poverty. Wee read of the pride that was in Iames and Iohn, the sonnes of Zebedee, that the one might sit on his right hand, and the other on his left, in his glory[r]. Yea wee see a great deale of pride in the rest, who in their Masters company, dispute among themselves, who should be the greatest[s].

Why is this blessednesse first pronounced, for some of the following vertues, as of hungring after righteousnesse, and purity of life, seeme to excell humility? Queſt. 6.

Anſw. 1. First, this was because the beginning of all misery and perdition both in Heaven and Earth came from pride, for that was the sinne, that threw Lucifer and his proud traine out of heaven, and that was the sinne that cast Adam out of Paradise, and brought so much misery and wretchednesse upon the earth[t].

Anſw. 2. Secondly, because the Prophet had foretold, that the Messias should come unto a people, that were humble, lowly, and should tremble at his word. (Eſa. 66. 2.) Therefore our Saviour doth first pronounce this beatitude[u], from this which hath been spoken. Concerning the sense and meaning of these words, we may gather a threefold observation, viz. First, poverty describes a right spirit, or, no spirit is liked, allowed, and approved by Christ, but onely the poore and humble spirit. There are coveteous spirits, and crafty spirits, and impure, or uncleane spirits, and factious, contentious, unquiet and brawling spirits, and bloody or cruell spirits, and murmuring, repining, discontented, and impatient spirits, yea scoffing, mocking, and deriding spirits: All these Christ rejects, and none of these are pronounced by him blessed and happy, because these are not poore, nor humble spirits.

Obſerv. 1

Obſer. 2. Secondly, we may learne hence, that the poore in temporall substance or estate, are not blessed, except they be poore in spirit also: Salomon tels us, that a poore proud man is an abomination unto the Lord; whence we may see, that a man may be poore and proud, & although he bee poore, yet if hee bee proud, hee is so farre from being one of the blessed of the Lord, that he is abominable in his sight.

Queſt. 7. How shall wee know, whether poverty bee good or evill; or how may a poore man know whether his poverty be such, as Christ commends or no?

Anſw. Poverty is knowne and discerned to be evill 3. manner of wayes, viz. First, if it were wickedly occasioned. Secondly, if it be the cause of wickednesse. Thirdly, if it bee accompanyed with evill.

First, poverty is evill, if it be evilly procured, or were occasioned by some sinne; that is, first, if thou hast prodigally, and profusely wasted thy estate, by idlenesse or negligence in thy calling, or by drunkennesse, or gluttony, or gameing, or whooring, and the like: Or Secondly, if thou hast provoked God to punish thee with poverty, for some of these sinnes: to wit, because the riches that now thou art deprived off, were acquired, either by fraud, or deceit, or oppression, or rapine, or theft, or by undermining of others, or by wronging the fatherlesse and widdowes: If thus thy poverty were occasioned, then it is mala paupertas, not commended by Christ.

Secondly,

Secondly, povertie is evill, if it cauſe evill, that is, If becauſe thou art poore, thou wilt therefore lye, and ſteale, and pilfer, and injure thy neighbours; then thy poverty is not beata paupertas, pronounced bleſſed unto thee, but rather condemned.

Thirdly, if thy povertie be accompanied with evils, or in thy poverty thou doſt accompany thy ſelfe with evill men, as with wandring beggars (amongſt whom is the cave and denne of all impietie) or drunkards, or harlots, or theeves, or cheaters, or lyers, or idle perſons, or murmurers; then thou art none of thoſe poore, which Chriſt here pronounceth bleſſed. 148

The third obſervation, that ariſes from theſe words, is, That the poore in ſpirit are humble; Or it is onely humility that is pleaſing unto God, and here commended by Chriſt: but of this we ſhall treat in another place. Obſer. 3.

§. 4. For theirs is the Kingdome of Heaven.] Sect. 4. Queſt. 1. What is here meant by Kingdome?

Anſw. Kingdome is twofold, to wit, { First, there is an earthly Kingdome, Secondly, there is an heavenly Kingdome, } which is taken three wayes, { Either for the Kingdome of Grace: Or, For the Kingdome of glorie: Or For both the Kingdome of Grace and Glory. }

And thus the Kingdome of Heaven is taken in this place: First, for the Kingdome of Grace. Secondly, for the Kingdome of Glory.

First, by Kingdome of heaven is here meant, the Kingdome of Grace, that is, the preaching of the Goſpell[w]: Becauſe it was thus fore-told of Chriſt by the Prophet, that he ſhould preach the Goſpell unto the poore[x]. And Chriſt bidding Johns Diſciples, to tell their Maſter, what they had ſeene, reckons up this amongſt the reſt, that the poore receive the Goſpell[y]. And hence it is called the Kingdome of heaven, both by Johns Baptiſt, Matth. 3. 2. and Chriſt himſelfe, Matth. 4 17. The ſenſe therefore of theſe words, is, that the preaching of the word is ſent unto the humble.

[x] Eſa. 61. 1.

[y] Matth. 11. 5.

Obiect. 1 It may againſt this be objected, that the Goſpell is not ſent onely unto the humble.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it comes unto many others, but it is ſent onely unto the humble; many are made partakers of the ſound, and preaching of the word; but it is principally directed by God, unto the poore in Spirit.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, or we may grant, that it is ſent unto others; but it is onely profitable and fruitfull unto them.

Queſt. 2. Why is the Goſpell ſent rather unto the humble, than unto others?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe pride hinders us from the hearing of the word: It is the poore, not the proud man, that receives the Goſpell, Matth. 11. 5.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe the humble are more apt & fit to receive conſolation, proud men ſtand not in ſuch need of comfort, as poore men doe.

Queſt. 3. Secondly, by the Kingdome of heaven is here meant the Kingdome of Glory. Hence it may bee asked, Doe none come unto Heaven, and eternall happineſſe, but onely the humble? doe not the godly, and chaſte, and liberall, and mercifull come thither as well as they?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome ſay, that certainly all theſe ſhall bee made partakers of the Kingdome of Glory, but principally thoſe that are humble, Chryſoſt. Imperf.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, no vertue, or grace Theologicall can be ſeparated from humilitie; and therefore it is here ſayd, for theirs is the Kingdome of Heaven, becauſe none can come into the Kingdome of heaven, who are not humble, or without humilitie: God reſiſts the proud, but gives Grace unto the humble[z].

[z] Pro. 29. 23.

And therefore humility muſt goe before honour, and pride before deſtruction[a]. For there is no gap or gate open at all, whereby any proud man may have acceſſe or ingreſſe into heaven; wherefore thoſe that deſire admiſſion into the Kingdome of glory, muſt take heed of proud religion, or religious pride.

[a] Pro. 18. 12.

What is religious pride? or how manifold is it? Queſt. 4.

It is threefold, viz First, there is ſuperbia de religione, a pride of Religion, that is, when a man waxeth proud of thoſe religious duties, which hee performes; thus the Phariſee was puffed up, becauſe hee was (in his owne opinion) more carefull in the outward obſervance of religious duties, than others were[b]. Secondly, there is ſuperbia in religione, a pride in the performance of religion: when religious duties are proudly performed: thus ſome will come into the Church on the Lords day in the afternoone ſometimes, when they will, but they will not be compelled. Thus great ones often applaud the practiſe of religion, and religious practiſes; but themſelves are very ſlacke, remiſſe, and negligent in the performance of ſuch duties; yea, when they doe performe them, it is (as it were) voluntarie, for they thinke not themſelves obliged and bound thereunto. Here there is indeed pride in religion. Thirdly, there is ſuperbia cum religione, pride conjoyned with religion, and that is, when thoſe that are profeſſours of religion, are men of proud lives, arrogant ſpirits, and will endure no reproofe, but advance themſelves above all others, crying, Stand farre from mee, I am more righteous than thou art. None of theſe three, being poore in ſpirit, have any right unto, or hope of the Kingdome of heaven: for that is the reward of humilitie. Thus Chriſt firſt humbled himſelfe, then God exalted him unto the height of honour and felicitie[c]. And thus wee ſhall bee crowned with glory in heaven, if with Chriſt wee bee humble on earth. There is a double world, to wit, this world, and the world to come; whereof the firſt is Gods, the ſecond is ours, that is, he that here neglects himſelf, and addicts himſelf wholly (in the humility of his ſoul) unto the ſervice and obedience of God, ſhall be eternally

[b] Luk. 18. 11.

[c] Phil. 2. 7. 9. 10.

142 eternally happy and bleſſed in the kingdome of heaven, according to our Saviours promiſe in this place.

Queſt. 5. Why doth our Saviour make this promiſe of eternall happineſſe unto the poore?

Anſw. To ſhew, that he doth not expect from us, or of us, that ſtoical ἀπάθειαν, to be without any feeling of our eſtates in temporall things; but that we might mitigate the ſence of our earthly Povertie, by the hope of celeſtiall joy and glory, although we be not rewarded at all in this life.

Queſt. 6. May not thoſe that are humble and poore in ſpirit expect a reward of riches and honour in this world?

Anſw. No: For their reward is in hope, their life is hid with God, their crowne is in heaven.

Obiect. 2 But God hath promiſed unto ſuch an hundred fold, Luke 18. 30.

Anſw. This is meant in ſpirituall things, in peace of conſcience, internall joy, and the like, ſayth Hierom. ſ. And it cannot bee meant of temporall things, 1. becauſe theſe temporall bleſſings are not given unto many of the children of God. 2. becauſe it were abſurd to thinke, that he which forgoes one wife for Chriſts ſake, ſhould have a hundred wives given unto him, according unto the letter of that promiſe: and thus ſayth Hilarius upon theſe words.

Obiect. 3. But Iob patiently and humbly bearing his loſſes and croſſes, was rewarded two-fold into his boſome, even in temporall things (Iob. 42.) Therefore the humble and poore in ſpirit may expect a reward even here on earth.

Anſw. A particularibus ad univerſalia; non valet conſequentia. Generall rules follow not from particular inſtances. Socrates was very wiſe, therefore every man is very wiſe, is no very wiſe argument. Chriſt ſaved one thiefe, therefore Chriſt will ſave every thiefe, followes not: ſo here, God rewards Iob two-fold in this life, therefore he will doe ſo unto all, that feare God as Iob did, or beare their afflictions and loſſes patiently, as he did, is an unwarrantable conſequence; and proved falſe by that undeniable inſtance, Daily experience.

Queſt. 7 Why may wee not expect a temporall reward to bee given unto us, although it be not alwayes granted?

Anſw. 1 Firſt, becauſe God requires of us to ſuffer with Chriſt (Rom. 8. 17.) who was not temporally rewarded in this life: and therefore, if we deſire to be rewarded, wee muſt endure unto the end, expecting that celeſtiall glory with Chriſt: Datur pati, it is given unto us to ſuffer [d], and we are called thereunto, and therefore wee muſt endure, and undergoe afflictions, loſſes, povertie, injuries, ſlanders, and whatſoever the Lord ſhall pleaſe to exerciſe us withall, expecting our reward onely in heaven.

[d] Phil. 1. 29.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, our life conſiſts not in earthly and temporall bleſſings, and therefore wee muſt not expect ſo to bee rewarded: our life is hid with God (Coloſſ. 3. 3.) and conſiſteth not in the abundance of earthly poſſeſſions (Luk. 12. 15.) Life eternall onely being abſolutely called Life. Wherefore we muſt await for our Crowne, and recompence, untill we come thither.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, proſperitie in temporall things ſeldome proves good (at leaſt often proves hurtfull) for us, in regard of our ſpirituall eſtate and condition; as appeares by theſe two particulars: Firſt, Proſperitie doth often take off, and abate the edge of our affections unto God; making us ſay, as Peter did: bonum eſt eſſe hîc, It is good for us to ſtay here [e], or as another ſayd, Hæc faciunt nos invitos mori, wee unwillingly depart from theſe, although it be to go unto God. Thus Proſperitie in worldly things, bewitcheth us with the love thereof; but adverſity and povertie weaneth us from the world, and maketh us weary of it. Secondly, Proſperity drawes us into ſinne; hence Adam was eaſily ſeduced in Paradiſe; and David when he was quietly ſeated in his throne, and Salomon, when ſilver was as plentifull as the ſtones in the ſtreets: very few there are that can rightly beare themſelves in an equall and juſt ballance, in the time of plentie and abundance: yea many there are, who can carry themſelves fairly, ſoberly, modeſtly, and unblameably in povertie, and a low eſtate, who runne headlong to deſtruction by ſome ſin or other, when they are great or rich: And therefore they erre and decline, à recto, from the truth, who being poore, ſerve God, that they may be made rich: for this ſhould not be done, neither ſhould great things bee expected in this life [f], becauſe we know not, how baneſull riches may prove unto us: wee muſt bee content with thoſe generall promiſes that God hath made unto us, that we ſhall have food and rayment; and that wee ſhall want nothing, that the Lord ſees and knowes will bee good for us, and unto us: and that he will lay nothing upon us, but what hee will enable us to beare: yea that all things ſhall worke together for the beſt unto us in this life, and we ſhall be made eternally bleſſed in the life to come.

[e] Matth. 17. 4.

[f] Ierem. 45. 5.

VERS. 4. Bleſſed are they that mourne, for they ſhall be comforted. Verſ. 4.

Bleſſed are they that mourne, &c.] Peccata lugentibus, non ſolum peccata remittit, & pœnas, ſed & ſalationem retribuit Deus [g]. To thoſe that mourne for their ſinnes, God doth not onely grant remiſſion of the guilt and puniſhment, but alſo comfort and conſolation.

Queſt. 1. If this promiſe be true, how comes it to paſſe, that the faithfull, and godly, cannot draw joy and comfort from it in the time of their mourning?

Anſwer. The cauſes why the children of God doe often not conclude true and ſolide conſolation unto themſelves, from hence in the day of ſorrow, are theſe. Firſt, ſometimes ſome ſtrong and powerfull temptation, that doth ſo ſtrongly and frequently aſſault them, that they cannot enjoy the comfortable light, and light of the Sunne, for that thicke cloud, that thus doth interpoſe it ſelfe.

Secondly, ſometimes the remainders of infidelitie, which abide in the faithfull, hinder them from from laying hold upon this ſaving comfort, by a ſure and certaine faith.

Thirdly, the conſcience of our owne proper indignitie, and unworthineſſe of this comfort, principally after the committing of ſome grievous ſinne: David and Peter weepe, and that bitterly, but cannot (for this cauſe) ſpeedily apply comfort unto themſelves.

Queſt. 2. How is this promiſe of comfort accompliſhed unto thoſe that mourne for their ſinnes?

Anſw. It is fulfilled, and performed foure manner of wayes. Firſt, when God tempers, and allayes the ſorrowes and afflictions of thoſe that mourne, according to the meaſure of their ſtrength; that is, layes no more upon them, then they are able to beare[b].

[b] 1 Cor. 10. 13.

Secondly, when God removes the griefe, with the cauſes thereof: Thus hee comforted Manaſſes, by delivering him out of the hands of the King of Aſſyria, and bringing him againe to Jeruſalem into his kingdome[i].

[i] 2 Chro. 33. 13.

Thirdly, when God gives inward comfort to the heart & conſcience, by his word, or by his Spirit, making his children even to rejoyce in tribulation[k]. Thus Saint Paul ſayth, that in Aſia, hee was preſſed out of meaſure, above ſtrength, inſomuch that he deſpaired of life 2 Cor. 1. 8. yet God comforted him in his tribulation, that he might bee able to comfort them which were in any trouble, by the comfort, wherewith hee himſelfe was comforted of God, 2 Cor. 1. 4. yea as the ſufferings of Chriſt did abound in him, ſo his conſolation alſo abounded by Chriſt. 2 Cor. 1. 5.

[k] Rom. 5. 3.

Fourthly, this promiſe of comfort is accompliſhed, when God by death puts an end to all the miſeries of his children, bringing their ſoules to eternall life. Thus was Lazarus comforted[l] and daily many of Gods deareſt Saints, who are onely by death freed from the miſeries of this life.

[l] Luk. 16. 25.

Queſt. 3. How muſt we ſo mourne, that we may be ſure to bee comforted?

Anſw. If we deſire this, two things are to be regarded of us: the firſt in our perſons, the ſecond in our actions, or in our mourning.

Firſt, in perſonis, in our perſons, we muſt labour that wee may bee made Chriſtians, ſuch as God hath promiſed to comfort: Chriſt ſpeaking unto his Apoſtles, ſayth, ye ſhall be ſorrowfull, but your ſorrow ſhall be turned into joy[m], as if he would ſay, it is not every one that mournes that ſhall be comforted, but onely the members of Chriſt, wicked and righteous men may ſorrow with the ſame ſorrow, but for a divers end, as both David and Cain mourne for their ſins, but the end of Cains teares, is the puniſhment that he hath incurred, Davids ſorrow being rather for the ſinne then for the puniſhment: and therefore we muſt endeavour to bee made the righteous and holy members of Chriſt, and children of God, if wee deſire to bee aſſured of comfort in the time of mourning.

[m] Ioh. 16. 20.

Secondly, In rebus, in the things ſorrowed for, or in the cauſe of our mourning; for many ſorrow for that, which is not to be ſorrowed for. As for example, Firſt ſome mourne, invidè out of envy, thus 1. ſome grieve for the proſperity of others, (as David had almoſt done, Pſal. 73. 2.) ſome for the piety of others, wiſhing that the righteous man may be taken away, as not being profitable unto them: or rather becauſe his glory doth obſcure their pride, and therefore they are offended with him, and ſorrow for his preſence: Theſe mourners have no promiſe of comfort. 143

I.

Secondly, ſome ſorrow Avidè, covetouſly, either, I. Becauſe they have not riches in abundance, whereby they might bee more able to ſatisfie their luſts[n], or follow ſinne with more eagerneſſe, freeneſſe, and libertie, which they cannot doe by reaſon of their povertie. Or II. becauſe although they have enough in regard of neceſſary things (that is, ſufficient for food and rayment) yet they are not content, but with an unſatiable deſire, wiſh for more, and grieve for the want thereof: The mourning of theſe ſhall not bee turned into mirth neither. II.

[n] Iam. 1. 5

Thirdly, ſome mourne and grieve Carnaliter; theſe are they who ſorrow for the puniſhment; but not for the ſinne, as Pharaoh, Cain, and Iudas did: and therefore ſhall be no more comforted than they. III.

Fourthly, ſome ſorrow Impiè, wickedly: theſe are they who mourne, becauſe it is not lawfull for them to ſinne freely, and without any puniſhment, either humane or divine. Many grieve, that there are lawes forbidding drunkenneſſe, fornication, ſtealing, and the like, and wiſh, that there were no ſinnes forbidden, or duties enjoyned, becauſe then they might live merrily, whereas now they mourne by reaſon of reſtraining lawes. This is a moſt infallible token of a wicked man, and therefore ſuch mourners have neither promiſe of bleſſedneſſe nor of comfort. IV.

Fiftly, ſome ſorrow Diabolicè, with a Divelliſh ſorrow, theſe are they who grieve unto the death, that is unto deſperation, thus Achitophel grieves that his counſell is not followed, and to put an end thereunto, puts an end unto himſelfe; thus Iudas mournes, that he hath betrayed his innocent Maſter, and in his agonie hangs himſelfe: Theſe mourners are utterly deprived of all comfort, both here and hereafter. V.

Sixtly, but we muſt doe thus if wee deſire conſolation in our ſorrow, to wit I. lament our owne ſinnes, and the ſinnes of the Church, land, and common-wealth wherein we live, II. let us hope for mercy, upon the condition of true and unfained repentance, III. and then it is lawfull for us to weepe and mourne for our afflictions, which wee groane under, becauſe they are the fruits of ſinne, and occaſioned thereby, and bleſſed are they that thus mourne: for they ſhall be comforted. VI.

Queſt. 4. What comfort or conſolation is it, that ſhall be imparted unto theſe mourners?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, the world hath many ſolaces for thoſe that are in diſtreſſe: to wit, honour, riches, pleaſure, ſecurity, falſe counſell, vaine comfort, fained freedome, and the like, which I omit to enlarge, becauſe theſe are not the comforts here promiſed.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the comfort of theſe bleſſed ones doth conſiſt, in the Holy Spirit, that true comforter.

144 What comfort or conſolation doth this Paracletus or Comforter give unto theſe mourners?

Queſt. 5.

Anſw. Three viz. Firſt, Temporall. Secondly, Spirituall. Thirdly, Eternall. Firſt, the Holy Ghoſt gives unto the mourners in Zion Temporale ſolamen, temporall comforts, firſt, Providence; hee will ſo provide for them, that they ſhall want nothing; although it bee with them, as Bias ſaid, Omnia mea mecum porto, that they carry all they have about them, as Hagar and Iacob, who had no more then the cloathes upon their backes, and the water in their bottles, yet when thoſe are ſpent and gone, hee will provide more. Secondly, Protection and Deliverance: he will protect, defend, and deliver them from all evill, as carefully, as hee doth provide for them, what is good: Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivers him out of all, that is, either 1. takes away the affliction wholly, or 2. takes away the ſting thereof, as he did unto Paul, giving him ſufficient grace to endure the temptation, though he tooke not the buffet from him, and therefore let us place all our hope and confidence upon God; let us depend firſt, upon him, for whatſoever good temporall bleſſing wee ſtand in need of: And ſecondly, for deliverance, either from the affliction (if the Lord may ſee it good for us) or from the evill of the affliction.

Queſt. 6. Theſe are ordinary, and generall things, What particular temporall comforts doth this Bleſſed Comforter afford unto theſe true mourners?

Anſw. The Lord hath particular conſolations, Firſt, for all men: Secondly, for all dangers.

Firſt, for all ſorts of men the Lord hath ſundry ſorts of comfort; as we may inſtance in ſome few, to wit, Miniſters, Magiſtrates, Poore men, Godly men, Profeſſours.

Firſt, the Lord hath comfort in ſtore, or ſtore of comforts for Miniſters, who are painefull and faithfull in their calling, notwithſtanding thoſe many diſcouragements, that they meet withall therein; as for example. Firſt, few will beleeve their doctrine; this is irkſome unto them, and makes them in the anguiſh of their heart cry out, Lord who hath beleeved our report, and to whom is the arme of the Lord revealed[o]. Secondly, they are made a ſpectacle unto the world, and to Angels, and to men[p]. Thirdly, ſinne (which by their preaching they labour to beate downe) doth grow up, and abound more and more. Fourthly, hence they grow weary of their lives, as we ſee in Elias, who deſires that he may die, becauſe of the wickednes of the world[q], ſo holy Ieremiah cries out, Woe is me, my Mother, that thou haſt borne me a man of ſtrife, and a man of contention to the whole earth[r]. Yet let them lift up their heads, and liſten unto the comforts pronounced unto them: For Firſt, God ſaith to Moſes and Samuel (and under them to all his Prophets) and Chriſt to his Apoſtles (and under them to all faithfull preachers) They have not diſpiſed you, but me. Secondly, the Lord ſaith unto them, feare not, I am with you[s].

r Ierem. 15. 10.

s Ierem. 1. 8.

Thirdly, their labour ſhall not bee altogether in vaine, in regard of others, for ſome ſhall be ſtil converted, whereſoever the Goſpell is preached[t]. Fourthly, their paines ſhall not be at all in vaine, in regard of themſelves, for they ſhall bee crowned. Thus the Lord is pleaſed to comfort the ſad hearts, and lift up the drouping, and hanging downe heads of his faithfull Miniſters.

t Acts 17. 34.

Secondly, Magiſtrates they watch, when ſubjects, and inferiours ſleepe; they take care for all, and yet though they bee thus faithfull and zealous, they are not reſpected, but rather diſobeyed, hated, and ſleighted by the vulgar ſort of the ſonnes of Beliall. This is enough to make them mourne, and a juſt cauſe of ſorrow, and therefore to comfort them, the Lord bids them not to feare, for hee will bee with them[u], and their worke ſhall bee rewarded.

u Ioſh. 1. 5, 9.

Thirdly, poore men want in a manner all neceſſary things, which makes them grieve, but for theſe (if good) the Lord hath theſe comforts, that 1. hee will give them needfull things (though not ſuperfluous) to the ſupplying of their wants, though not of their deſires: and 2. thoſe things, that hee with-holds from them, hee detaines, becauſe hee ſees them to bee poyſon, and hurtfull unto them.

Fourthly, Godly and pious men dare not lye, nor defraud, nor coſen, by falſe weights, or falſe meaſures. and therefore their gaines and meanes is very ſmall: but here is their comfort, God will provide for them.

Secondly, the Lord hath comforts and conſolations, for all perils and dangers and griefes whatſoever, as for example. Firſt, if thou bee in any temporall danger; then here is thy comfort, that all things ſhall worke together for the beſt unto thee[x]. Secondly, if thou bee derided for the profeſſion of religion, the holy Comforter will afford internall conſolation unto thee. Thirdly, doſt thou mourne for the ſinnes of others, and art in feare for them; then here is thy comfort, viz. 1. If they be righteous men who have ſinned, and for whoſe ſinnes thou art troubled, thou muſt remember, they ſtand or fall to their own Maſter[y]. 2. If they bee wicked men, for whoſe ſinnes thou mourneſt, and whoſe perſons thou art afraid of, in regard of their ſinnes, yet thou maiſt be comforted through hope.

x Rom. 8. 28.

y Rom. 14. 4.

What hope can we have in bewailing the ſins of the world, and of wicked men? Chryſoſt. imperf.? Queſt. 7.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it may be, that by thy prayers, teares, counſell, & advice, ſome may be converted; although the Apoſtle feares the worſt, and heares bad enough of thoſe unto whom he writes, yet hee hopes the beſt (Heb 6. 9.)

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the audaciouſneſſe and boldneſſe of the wicked in ſinning ſhall not be perpetuall, for Chriſt will come to judge the world, and therefore hence wee may have ſome comfort in our mourning, for the ſinnes of the wicked.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, God will glorifie himſelfe, either by converting them from ſinne, or by confounding them for ſinne: Wherefore in regard of Gods glory, wee are not utterly deprived of comfort in our our sorrow for their sinnes.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, at least, when wee see apparantly that they belong not unto God, we then mourne no more; that is, if we see them die in their sins, as they lived in their iniquities, then wee are to cease our mourning for them; and therefore in bewailing the sinnes of the world, wee have this hope, that either our mourning shall be turned into mirth by their amending, or shal be brought to end by their death.

Fourthly, if thou grievest for thy owne sinnes committed against thy God; thou mailt hearken what the Lord saith, and hee will speake peace unto thee, he will tell thee, he desires not the death of a sinner, but rather that he should turne from his sinnes and live; He will tell thee, that the sacrifices of God are a broken and contrite heart, and such a sacrifice he will not despise [p]. Yea thy Christ will tell thee, that if thou feele thy sinnes to be a burthen unto thee, that hee will ease thy shoulders of that load, if thou wilt but come unto him [a]. Thus the Lord hath particular comforts, for all the griefes of his children, or whatsoever their causes of mourning be. And thus we have seene the first consolation, which wee have from this Blessed Comforter, and that is, temporall. Secondly, the Holy Spirit gives unto all holy mourners, spirituall solace, and that two wayes, first, by mitigating their affliction by inward comfort; hence they can rejoyce in tribulation [b] yea hence they can cheerfully endure death [c], as we see in Paul (Acts 20.) and in the other Saints, Heb. 11. 35. &c. And in the Apostles, who rejoyce, that God is pleased to thinke them worthy to suffer for Christs sake [d]. Secondly, by giving unto them internall peace of conscience, both with themselves, and with their God [e], insomuch as they become thereby more then conquerers, in their greatest afflictions and tryals [f]. Thirdly, this Paracletus will give unto these mourners in Zion, eternall consolation in the new Jerusalem which is above: where and when Death shall be swallowed up in victory, and all teares wiped from off their faces [g], Revel. 21. 4. And their temporal mourning changed into eternal mirth, as Abraham saith to Dives, of Lazarus, he in his life time received paines, therefore now hee is comforted [h], and hence it is called everlasting consolation [i], yea joy and comfort which the heart of a mortall man is not able to conceive off [k].

Quest. 8. How many degrees are there of this Eternall Consolation?

Answ. Two, to wit. First, from death, when the spirit returnes unto God that gave it, and the soule is caried by the Angels into heaven, to enjoy the joyes of that celestiall paradise, with Christ for ever and ever. The second is, from the resurrection, when the body beeing united into the soule, both are made partakers of that eternall blisse; when we can see God with these same eyes [l], having put on immortality as a garment, and our corruptible bodies being made incorruptible. And therefore from the consideration hereof, we may see how blessed a thing it is to mourne, and to want comfort for a while here on earth; and how wide they shoot, that thinke those happy that laugh and rejoyce here on earth: Extrema gaudij luctus occupat, the end of temporall joy is eternall sorrow, as wee see in Dives, thou in thy life time receivedst pleasure (saith Abraham) therefore now thou art tormented [m]. We see worldlings rejoyce, and expose themselves wholly to profuse laughter and mirth, according to that of the Prophet, The harpe and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, and wine are in their feasts [n], with joy and gladnesse slaying Oxen, & killing sheep, eating flesh, and drinking wine [o] in bowles, chaunting to the sound of the viol, inventing instruments of musicke, and anointing themselves with the chiefe ointments [p]. But all this jollity doth not argue felicity, the lives of worldlings being meerely tragicall, that is merry in the beginning, but the Catastrophe, death and misery; Balthazar feasts, but by and by trembles, and within few houres is slaine, Dan. 5. 5. And many more like him, spend their daies in good things, and in a moment goe downe into the pit [q]. And therefore let us remember, how vaine all the joyes of this world are, and not place our felicity in them, or thinke our selves happy because we enjoy them, but rather thinke, blessed are they that mourne.

What comforts may we be supported withall in the time of our sorrow? What consolations may wee propound unto our selves in our distresse, that we may the more patiently beare and undergoe it? Quest. 9.

Answ. Ruminate in the day of mourning, and time of griefe, of these five things Remember first, that affliction is common with thee unto all the faithfull; and therefore thou mayest the better beare it [r].

Secondly, remember affliction may bee grievous to the body: but it is joyous to the soule: our Saviour sayth, Feare not him (nor that) which can kill the body; but feare him (and that) which can cast body and soule into hell fire: And therefore we should not feare affliction, because it can but kill the body, it cannot destroy the soule

[r] Heb. 12. 8.

Thirdly, remember the pleasures of sinne are but for a season, & wicked delights and joy may be pleasing unto us a while; but the end thereof is death: and therefore we had better bee cloathed with mourning, than girded with this mirth.

Fourthly, remember thy sorrow and mourning shall not long last, it shall but endure for a night; thou shalt not be long under the Chyrurgians sharpe instrument; and therefore beare patiently thy momentany paine.

Fiftly, remember, most undoubtedly thy sorrow shall end in eternall joy and glory; For if thou patiently suffer with Christ, and for Christ, then thou shalt be glorified with him [s], when and where all griefe and cause of sorrow shall be taken away; as our Saviour saith in this verse, Blessed are they, that mourne: for they shall be comforted.

VERS. 5. Blessed are the meeke: for they shall inherite the earth. Vers. 5.

§. 1. Blessed are the meeke.] The Fathers and Schoolmen, (as was shewed before, vers. 3.) doe Sect. 1. Quest.

onely

146 onely obſerve here ſeven Beatitudes; and ſome of the Fathers, and moſt of the Papiſts, do make Povertie in Spirit the firſt beatitude, and Meekneſſe the ſecond, and Mourning the third, &c.

Whence they propound this queſtion, Why is meekneſſe put after povertie of ſpirit?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, thoſe that are humble and poore, are ordinarily contemned, and uſually injured, and ſubject to much hard and harſh meaſure upon the earth; and therefore they ſtand principally in need of meekneſſe, leſt otherwiſe they ſhould bee provoked unto anger and impatience, and deſire of revenge.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Meekneſſe is put after Humilitie, and povertie of Spirit, becauſe the humble and poore are diſpoſed, and more apt unto meekeneſſe; as proud and great rich men are more prone unto anger [t].

t Chartbuſ.

Sect. 2. §. 2. For they ſhall inherit the earth.]. What Queſt. 1. is the meaning of theſe words?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome underſtand this of a ſenſible or an intelligible earth: theſe Chryſoſt. & Imperf. doth reject.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome underſtand our glorified bodies as David ſayth, My portion is in the land of u Pſal. 27. 13. the living [u], as if he would ſay, our bodies while we live here are the land of the dead, but are called the land of the living, when they are glorified. (Chryſoſt. imperf.)

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, ſome underſtand this of the body of Chriſt, that is of the glory of his claryfied body. Thus Saint Hilary upon theſe words underſtands them.

Anſw. 4 Fourthly, by earth, ſome underſtand eternity, to wit, either firſt, the heaven of the bleſſed, which is called earth, in reſpect of the imperiall heaven; or the court, in reſpect of the throne of God, and the Temple of the moſt high. Or Secondly, by eternity is meant that new earth, which Saint Peter mentioneth (2 Pet. 3.) and which is called earth, in reſpect of heaven. (Chryſoſt. imperf.)

Anſw. 5 Fiftly, ſome underſtand this literally of this world, they ſhall inherit the earth, that is, the world: and thus (almoſt) all our late divines expound it.

Anſw. 6. Sixtly, ſome conjoyne them both, underſtanding both earth and heaven, the life preſent and to come: Non de futura ſolum, ſed etiam de preſenti. Chryſ. And thus I take the words indeed to be underſtood; but yet for a more methodicall & orderly handling of them, we will ſeverally obſerve a double ſenſe, viz. Firſt, they are to be underſtood of this life preſent. Secondly, of the life to come.

v Chryſ. & de variis. Firſt, by Earth is meant the life preſent: Meek men are thought to bee deprived of the riches, and poſſeſſions of this world, by worldlings; but Chriſt ſhewes here the contraty, that they ſhall poſſeſſe the earth [v]. Or more plainely, that although God give unto the meeke eternall life, and would have them to expect it and hope for it, yet over and above he doth alſo give them earthly poſſeſſions: the promiſe of future bleſſings doth not take away the hope of preſent, for holineſſe hath a promiſe both of this life, and the life to come [w]. which promiſe is principally and particularly confirmed and made unto the meek, both by our Saviour here, and alſo by the Prophet David. Pſal. 27. 9. 11. 22.

w 1 Tim. 4. 8.

How doth God give the earth, in this ſenſe unto the meeke, for we ſee them often poore, perſecuted, afflicted, deſtitute of food, raiment, habitation, flying from place to place, for the ſafeguard of their lives, as meeke Moſes was conſtrained to doe? Queſt. 2.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome underſtand this of the men of the world, as if our Saviour ſhould ſay, bleſſed are the meeke, upon the earth, for they ſhall have many friends in the world: And therefore thoſe that deſire amity, and not enmity, let them embrace meekneſſe; what benefit is it to be oppoſed by all? it were certainely much better to be beloved of all; We hate proud men, we avoid the company, and ſociety of angry men, thoſe that are cruell (though great) men; wee wiſh in their graves, now meeke, gentle, and humble men are free from that hatred, theſe wiſhes, and conſequently gain much love and friendſhip amongſt men.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome underſtand this, of the fruition of their part or portion in earthly things, as if our Saviour would ſay, bleſſed are the meeke, for others are ſo troubled, turmoiled, moleſted, and diſquieted, that they have no comfort in any thing they enjoy, but are (in regard of any comfortable uſe thereof) deprived as well of thoſe things, which they have, as which they have not; but they ſhall enjoy what they poſſeſſe with joy and comfort; yea although they bee as having nothing, yet they ſhall poſſeſſe all things. x 2 Cor. 6. 10.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, ſome underſtand this of the affaires and employments of this world, becauſe meekneſſe is profitable unto us in every eſtate and condition of life: As for example.

Firſt, meekneſſe is very profitable unto thoſe, that have undertaken the ſtate of Matrimony, for ſo the Husband ſhall win his Wife, and the Wife the Husband: Plato tels us, that if a man clap his hands together, being both open, or if one be ſhut, & the other open, he takes no harme at all by the blow, but if the fiſts bee both bent, he will hurt his hands: So if both husband and wife be mild and meeke, or if the one be alwaies gentle, patient, and forbearing, the bond of conjugall love doth long continue entire, but if both be proud, or furious, or angry, or haſty, or revengeful, then the Matrimoniall knot of love is quickely looſed; and therefore meekneſſe is profitable for the married couple, if they deſire long to continue in mutuall love.

Secondly, meekneſſe is very neceſſary and behoveſull both unto children and ſervants, that is, Maſters and Fathers, by being meeke and gentle unto them, ſhall gaine more love, reſpect, ſervice, and obedience of them, then by being proud, harſh, and cruell unto them: Parents and Governours muſt not be remiſſe and negligent, but meeke and gentle in their places; they muſt not provoke their youth unto wrath [y], leſt they ſay, as he doth [z]. Illum oelunt, at me mortuum cupiunt: Ephes. 6. 4. y Terent. Adelph.

cupiunt: If wee had meeke and courteous Maſters, we would reverence, love, and obey them; but we have ſuch curriſh and harſh maſters, that we wiſh they were dead.

Thirdly, meekneſſe is good among neighbours; Mollis lucratur amorem, the milde & gentle man is loved whereſoever hee comes; becauſe quiet and meeke anſweres doe quench the ſparkes of ſtrife and contention, which often are occaſionally kindled amongſt adjoyning neighbours.

Fourthly, meekneſſe is good in Magiſtrates: and therefore the old experienced Councellours give advice unto Rehoboam, to bee a ſervant unto the people one day, and in anſwering them, to ſpeake good words unto them, and then they would ſerve him for ever[a]: that is, ſpeake them faire, be affable, gentle and courteous unto them, ſhew thy ſelfe meeeke towards them, and one that loves and deſires their good: and then thou ſhalt knit them unto thee for ever. The excellencie of this counſell appeares by the ſequell: for Rehoboam anſwering them with proud and threatning language, ten of the twelve Tribes fell from him. The common people are like untamed (yea wilde) beaſts; and therfore muſt not too rigidly be governed, but domanda popiſmis, are to bee tamed with clapping, and ſoft and gentle handling; which if Pertinax the Emperour had done, hee had not been ſlaine.

Fiftly, if wee bee expulſed, or expelled, or baniſhed out of our native home, then Meekneſſe is profitable in exile, for omne ſolum miti patria, a milde man is never out of his countrey, everie nation being to him whereſoever hee is, as his owne. The earth is the Lords, and the fulneſſe thereof[b]. And therefore hee will fulfill his promiſe made by Chriſt, unto the meeke, in every land and place.

[b] Pſal: 24. 1.

Sixtly, if we ſhould deſcend to lower and more inferiour perſons, eſtates, or particulars, wee may evidently ſee, how good and profitable a thing it is to bee meeke and gentle: as firſt, if we have any thing to buy, wee deſire rather to goe to that ſhop where there are quiet, courteous, and gentle Shop-keepers, than to thoſe that are peeviſh, froward, and haſty. Secondly, if we lack ſervants, men or maids, wee rather covet thoſe that are meeke and quiet (though worſe, for that imployment we have) than thoſe that are ſo proud, that they will not be reproved, or ſo turbulent, and of ſuch unbridled tongues and tempers, that the family is continually diſquieted by them. Thirdly, yea when we travel, we love that fained & counterfeited meekneſſe and courteſie which we meet withall in our Innes. And therefore we ſhould accuſtome our ſelves unto meekneſſe, that ſo we might bee beloved of all perſons, lovingly entertained in all places, and happy and bleſſed in all eſtates and conditions. Subſtantia perire poteſt, affabilitatem furari nemo poteſt[c]. Riches may be loſt, and may become unprofitable unto us; but affabilitie, courteſie, gentleneſſe, and meekneſſe, is a vertue, which none can take from us, and which wee may (with benefit and comfort unto our ſelves) exerciſe and practiſe in all places, and in all imployments. Thus much may ſuffice for the third anſwer. 147

[c] Gualt. ſ.

Fourthly, ſome underſtand by the inheriting of the earth, the good bleſſings of this life, and that either, firſt, becauſe what they enjoy, ſhall not decreaſe. Or ſecondly, becauſe it ſhall truly encreaſe. Anſw. 4.

Firſt, the poſſeſſions of the meeke ſhall not decreaſe, but continue with him, as appeares thus;

Firſt, he himſelfe will not conſume them, either in law, or ſutes, or contentions, or pride, or vaine oſtentation, or by ambition, as many doe.

Secondly, neither are others provoked by them. Many a man hath been utterly undone, and impoveriſhed by incenſing and exaſperating of others, by proud, ſcandalous, and uncourteous words: But the meeke man provokes none; and therefore as hee doth not ſue others, ſo hee is not ſued by others.

Thirdly, neither is the anger of the Lord kindled againſt him. Many gather riches wickedly, and the Lord ſcatters them juſtly; many by oppreſſion joyne houſe to houſe, and land to land, and the Lord curſeth them for it[d]. Now the meek man is free from this danger, becauſe he doth not ſo deſire riches, or temporall poſſeſſions, that hee will acquire them by any wicked meanes, or wayes. [d] Pſa. 5. 8.

Secondly, that which the meeke man poſſeſſeth, ſhall truly encreaſe, becauſe the Lord will proſper him, as hee did Ioſeph, this being the very thing which is promiſed in this place, that the meeke ſhall be bleſſed in temporall things.

Fiftly, ſome underſtand long life to bee the bleſſing here promiſed: David ſayth, Bloudy and cruell men ſhall not live out halfe their dayes: therefore by the rule of contraries, milde and meeke men ſhall multiply their dayes, and bee crowned with the crowne of old age. Wherefore I conclude the firſt ſenſe and expoſition of this verſe, with the ſaying of the Pſalmiſt; What man is there that deſires to live long, and ſee good dayes? let him learne and labour to be milde and gentle: for ſo bleſſed are the meeke in this life, that they ſhall inherit the earth. Anſw. 5.

Secondly, the words, for they ſhall inherit the earth, are to be underſtood of the life to come, and not only confined to this preſent life: as if our Saviour would ſay, Bleſſed are the meeke: for they ſhall be crowned with eternall glory, as the Father[e] ſayd, The celeſtiall Jeruſalem is not the ſpoyle or conqueſt of bloudy Souldiers, Sed ſpes manſuetorum, but the hope and reward of thoſe that are meeke. [e] Baſil. ſ. Pſa. 33.

VERS. 6. Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe: for they ſhall be filled. Verſ. 6.

Bleſſed are they that hunger, &c.] This verſe containes the fourth beatitude, wherein I ſhall but onely propound one generall queſtion, and that is this; Queſt. 1.

What is meant here by hungring and thirſting? Anſw. 1.

It may either be taken Literally, or Morally, or Spiritually.

Firſt, hunger and thirſt may here bee taken Lite-

148 Literaliter, for naturall hunger and thirst; And thus Saint Luke seemes to meane (Luk. 6. 21.) when he sayth, Blessed are yee which now hunger, that is, which through povertie hunger and thirst in the world: thus Saint Paul sayth, even unto this present houre we both hunger and thirst[f].

f 1 Cor. 4. 11.

g Staplet. Antid.

Some[g] vehemently inveigh against this exposition, thinking it not enough to say, that this is not the principall thing that is aimed at, or understood in these words; but this is not meant at all in this place. And they bring these three reasons, or arguments, for the confirming of their assertion, and dislike of our present interpretation. The first is this.

Obiect. 1 The poore, who are hungry and thirsty in the world, are not filled, or satisfied; and therefore a naturall hunger and thirst cannot here bee meant.

Answ. 1 First, the Antecedent is false: for we see sometimes the hungry are filled, and the poore plentifully relieved, as might be instanced in Iacob, Ioseph, and Iob: yea there is a direct generall promise made unto the faithfull, both in this life, and the life to come[h]; and a speciall particular promise of the poynt in controversie: Behold (sayth the Lord) my servants shall eate, and yee shall bee hungry, my servants shall drinke, and ye shall bee thirsty, &c[i].

h 1 Tim. 4. 8.

i Esa 65. 13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is an absurd argument, The poore that hunger, are not now filled; therefore they never shall bee, The poore are oppressed; therefore they never shall be delivered: There are no starres seene at twelve of the clocke at noone; therefore there shall none bee seene, at twelve of the clocke at night. How absurd this argument is, let every novice judge.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Calvin (whom Stapleton here opposeth) doth not say, jam saturandos, but posthac, not they that now hunger and thirst, shall instantly bee filled, but hereafter: to wit, either first, by allaying and abating the appetite, as a Martyr sayd, If his enemies tooke from him bread, God would take from him hunger. Or secondly, by peace of conscience, affording them such internall joy and comfort, that their povertie and hunger pincheth them not. Or thirdly, by the crowne of eternall life bestowed upon them; and thus the hunger of Lazarus was satisfied.

Obiect. 2 Secondly, he argues, All these promises pronounced by Christ, are spirituall, therefore literall hunger cannot here be understood.

Answ. This reasoning is as absurd as the former: the reward is not temporall, therefore it is not given temporally to the poore, this followes not.

Obiect. 3 Thirdly, hee objects againe, Esurientes (appetentes) temporalia, non beati, miseri potius: Those that hunger after (that is desire) temporal things, are not blessed, but rather miserable; and therefore by hunger and thirst a literall lacke cannot be understood.

Answ. 1. First, he doth grosly abuse & corrupt Calvin, who doth not speak, de appetentibus, of those that desire temporall things; but de carentibus, of those that want and stand in need of temporall things.

Answ. 2. Secondly, I give one generall answere more unto the thing objected; that is, that this place may be understood of a literall hunger & thirst, which appeares evidently by comparing two verses together: Saint Luke (chap. 6. 21 verse) sayth, Blessed are yee that hunger now: and by an Antithesis, vers. 25. sayth, Woe unto you that are full: What is the meaning of this? Doth our Saviour denounce a woe against them that are full of the workes of righteousnesse? Certainly no such thing, but those that abound in temporall possessions: for there is a double Fulnesse, the first terrene and earthly in this life; the second spirituall, in the life to come: Woe bee unto those (sayth Christ) that seeke the first, for they shall lose the second (vers. 25.) and blessed are those that have not the first, for they shall have the second (vers. 21.) and howsoever they may (by reason of their povertie and want) seeme miserable unto others, yet they are nothing lesse, they being indeed truly blessed.

Quest. 2. Are all blessed that are pinched with poverty in this life?

Answ. No, but onely those, who hunger and thirst for righteousnesse sake; there are many men, that are miserably poore, and poore miserable men, who hunger and thirst for want, but not for righteousnesse, being impoverished, either by idlenesse, or wastfulnesse, and therfore have no promise at all of blessednesse: But happinesse is pronounced and promised to the righteous man, who will not unjustly enrich himselfe; who will not for wealth forsake his God, to runne after the world, or the divell, by the use of wicked meanes, but will rather be as poore, as Lazarus. Certainely, the poore man that walketh, and thus continueth in his integrity is a happy and a blessed man[k]. And thus much for the literall interpretation of these words.

k Pro. 19. 1.

Secondly, by hungring and thirsting may bee meant a morall hunger and thirst, which is, when men hunger for just judgement to be executed, they being unjustly injured or scandalized[l], and cannot obtaine justice, according to the equity of their cause: To these our Saviour saith, Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousnesse, that is, blessed are those, that by wrongs and injuries, are deprived of their right in this life, and so are constrained to hunger and thirst after that which is their owne, waiting with patience to obtaine the same. Now this morall hunger after righteousnesse is two-fold, viz. Either for our selves, or for others. First, the morall hunger after righteousnesse, is when being injuried and wronged, we desire to be justly dealt withal; or if wee bee slandred, that the truth may be brought to light, that so we may be acquitted of the crime laid unto our charge. Secondly, the morall hunger after righteousnesse may, and ought to be for our brethren as well as our selves; for we should be zealous for others, when wee see them oppressed in their estates, or punished in their bodies, or wronged in their good names, for righteousnesse sake, as that holy Prophet out of his godly zeale unto those who were oppressed, cryes out unto God, Oh Lord, how long shall I cry, yea cry out unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save; wherefore beholdest

deſt thou thy tongue; when the wicked devoureth the man, that is more righteous then himſelfe [m].

m Habak. 1.2 13.

Queſt.3. Why ſhould we thus zealouſly hunger, that juſt judgement may be executed for the reliefe of others, is it not enough for us that wee are not wronged?

Anſw.1. Firſt, Chriſtians ought ſo to put on the bowels of compaſſion, that they might bee as ſenſible of their brethrens miſeries, as though they were their owne: we are taught to weepe with thoſe that weepe, and to rejoyce with them, that doe rejoyce [n], yea to remember them that are in bonds, as though we were bound with them, and them that ſuffer adverſity, as though we were under the rod [o].

n Rom.12 15.

o Heb. 13 3.

Anſw.2. Secondly, our love unto thoſe that ſuffer for righteouſneſſe ſake (that is for Gods ſake, and in a good cauſe) is an argument of our love unto God, 1 Joh. 4. 20. And without this love unto them, we cannot love God, and therefore by all meanes we ſhould expreſſe our zealous love and affection unto them.

Queſt.4. How farre muſt this zeale of ours be extended in the behalfe of the righteous, who are unjuſtly wronged and injured?

Anſw.1. Firſt, if thou be a publike man, that is a Magiſtrate, then thou muſt avenge their cauſe, and helpe them againſt their oppreſſours, and puniſh their backbiters and ſlanderers.

Anſw.2. Secondly, if thou be a private man, then ne ultra crepidam, thou muſt goe no further, then thy calling will warrant thee; that is, firſt thou muſt grieve in thy heart for their wrongs, and oppreſſions. Secondly, thou muſt pray for them unto God, that he would ariſe to defend them, and to plead their cauſe, againſt all their enemies. Thirdly, thou muſt ſhew thy zealous love and affection unto them, by thy words, that is by ſpeaking for them when they are abuſed or ſcandalized, and by urging the Magiſtrate with all modeſt importunity, to execute juſt judgement for them upon their enemies. And thus much for the Morall ſenſe of theſe words.

Thirdly, there is Fames ſpiritualis, a ſpirituall hunger and thirſt: having elſwhere to handle this, I here will but onely touch it: Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe: Firſt, theſe words may ſpiritually be expounded thus: Bleſſed are thoſe that are grieved with the iniquities of the times, and mourne for the ſins of the world, and withall doe in heart and ſoule long for the amendment and reformation thereof. Secondly, by righteouſneſſe we may well in the firſt place underſtand the righteouſneſſe of Faith, whereby a ſinner is juſtified through faith in Chriſt, and ſo ſtandes righteous before God, having the pardon of all his ſinnes ſealed unto him: Wee may in the ſecond place by righteouſneſſe underſtand righteouſneſſe of workes, whereby a man is ſanctified and made holy, having Gods Image renewed in him by the Spirit of grace, which was loſt by the fall of our firſt parents: And this appeares by theſe places. Iſa. 55.1. 1 Joh. 7.37. Rev. 21.6. All which places are one in ſubſtance, for by waters we muſt underſtand righteouſnes, which is that ſpirituall grace of God, the fountaine of all bleſſings, whereby ſinners are juſtified and ſanctified [p]. p Perkins.

VERS.7. Bleſſed are the mercifull, for they ſhall obtaine mercy. Vers.7.

In this verſe we have theſe two parts, towit,

- The bleſſednesse promiſed, wherein are theſe two things,
  - First, in generall, who are bleſſed, the Mercifull.
  - Secondly, in particular, what mercy, and how manifold it is, which is here required unto this bleſſednesse.
- The reaſon of the bleſſednesse, or promiſe thereof, wherein are theſe two things, viz,
  - First, in generall, why are the mercifull bleſſed; becauſe they ſhall obtaine mercy.
  - Secondly, in particular, what mercy this is, which the mercifull ſhall obtaine.

First, in generall, wee ſee here, who they are that ſhall obtaine mercy; onely the mercifull: Obſerv.1. Teaching us that thoſe who would find mercy, muſt exerciſe mercy: He hath ſhewed thee O man (ſaith the Prophet) what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to doe juſtly, and to love mercy [q].

q Micah 6.8.

Queſt.1. Why muſt we bee thus carefull to ſhew mercy unto others?

Anſw.1. Firſt, becauſe Mercy is a vertue taught us by nature; or, becauſe by the light of nature we are taught to be mercifull one towards another. For firſt, nature teacheth, Nemo ſibi natus [r]. No man is borne or brought into the world onely for himſelfe, but to doe good unto others, as well as unto himſelfe. Secondly, Nature teacheth that we muſt not be cruell, or revengefull againſt our owne fleſh: No man ever hated his owne body, but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it (ſaith the Apoſtle) that is, by the light of nature we are taught to doe good unto our ſelves, and thoſe that are of our owne fleſh and blood: And therefore wee ſhould be mercifull unto all, becauſe we are all children of one Father, and creatures of one and the ſame ſpecies, or kind.

r Cicero.

Thirdly, Nature teacheth us, that vindicta brevis voluptas, miſericordia perpetua, the pleaſure that a man hath in revenge is very ſhort, but the delight which a man findes in ſhewing mercy is of great continuance: and therefore we ſhould be mercifull.

Secondly, mercy pleaſeth God, and therefore we ſhould be mercifull; that the Lord is pleaſed herewith, appeares thus. Firſt, he loves and delights himſelfe to ſhew mercy; hence it is ſaid, The earth is full of his mercy (Pſal. 33.5.) Yea his mercy reacheth unto the clouds (Pſal. 36.6. and 108.4.) and is perpetuall, enduring for ever (Pſal. 100.5. and 106.1. and 107.1. and 136.) yea, all his wayes are mercy and truth (Pſal. 25.10.) this being Anſw.2.

150 being his nature, to bee mercifull and gracious, slow to anger, and of great kindnesse, Psalm. 86. 5. 15. Exod. 34. 6. Secondly, the Lord hath proposed this his mercie unto us for our imitation; Be mercifull as your Father in heaven is mercifull[f], and doe good unto all, as he doth, who causeth his Sunne to shine, and his raine to raine both upon the good and bad[t]: and therefore when we follow the Lord herein, certainly wee please him. Thirdly, the Lord to assure us hereof, hath plainly told us, that mercie is very acceptable and gratefull unto him: I will have mercie, and not sacrifice, sayth the Lord and his Christ. Ose. 6. 6. Matth. 9. 13. and 12. 7. And Salomon, a type of Christ, sayth, that the mercifull man doth lend upon usurie unto God[v]: yea our Saviour describing the generall judgement, doth shew how graciously the Lord accepts workes of mercie, wherein we have first, Gods acceptation, In as much as yee have done it to them, yee have done it unto me. Secondly, his enumeration, When I was hungry yee fed mee, when I was thirsty yee gave mee drinke, &c. Thirdly, his remuneration, therefore come yee blessed into everlasting joy[u]. And therefore wee may safely say, that God is pleased with mercie, and that it is our part to bee mercifull, if wee desire to please him.

f Luk. 6. 36.
t Mat. 5. 45.
v Prov. 19. 17.
u Mat. 25. 40. &c.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, God hath threatned to punish the cruell and unmercifull man: and hath promised to reward the mercifull; and therefore if we desire to be made partakers of mercie, or to bee freed from miserie, we ought to bee mercifull. First, the cruell and unmercifull man shall finde no mercie: Behold (sayth the Lord) this was the iniquitie of thy sister Sodome, shee did not strengthen the hand of the poore and needie: therefore I tooke her away as I saw good[w]. And thus Salomon threatens, that whoso stoppeth his eares at the cry of the poore, hee also shall cry himselfe, but shall not bee heard[x]. And shall have judgement without mercy, because he shewed no mercy[y]. Secondly, the mercifull man hath from God a promise of mercie: This will further appeare in the second part of this verse, and therefore I now leave it.

w Ezek. 16. 49. &c.
x Pro. 21. 13.
y James 2. 13.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it is our dutie, as we are Christians, to be mercifull; as thus appeares, by these dependant particulars: First, we are all one body: Thus sayth the Apostle, Wee being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another[z]. Read for this purpose, 1 Corinth. 12. 12. and 10. 17. and Ephes. 4. 4. 15. 16. Secondly, never any man hated his owne flesh[a]. Thirdly, hence came that mutuall communicating of riches, which wee read of, Acts 2. 44. and 4. 32. that no man esteemed any thing his owne which hee possessed; but those that had, communicated unto the necessities of those that had not. This made Theophrastus say of two friends, Cur ergo alter dives, alter pauper? If you bee such a paire of friends as you make the world believe, then how comes it to passe, that the one of you is rich, and the other poore? As if he would say, one friend should not see another lacke, so long as he hath to supply his want. Fourthly, hence God leaves poore amongst us, to try, whether we will communicate unto their necessities, or not; The poore shall never cease out of thy land; therefore thou shalt open thy hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poore, and to the needy in the land[b]. Fiftly, from hence mercie is made an evident token of a righteous man, and such as the Lord will acquit and justifie. Read Iob 31. 16. 17. 18. 19. and Luke 10. 30. And therefore if wee desire to discharge our duties either to God or man, it is necessarily required that we should bee mercifull.

b Deut. 15 11.

Quest. 2. In the first answer to the former question, we affirmed, that nature taught us to bee mercifull; whence it may be demanded, if this bee universally true, or not?

Answ. It is not, some holding the contrary in opinion: some in practise.

First, some are herein contrary minded, not in their judgement approving of Mercie: and these are either the common people, or the Philosophers. First, the common sort of people thinke mercifull men to bee Polypragmones, too pragmaticall, and medling; yea indeed no better than fooles, who not being content with their owne afflictions, and proper miseries, will trouble themselves with the distresses of others. Secondly, the Stoickes, a Sect amongst the Phisophers, had a double sinister opinion concerning this vertue of Mercie: First, they thought mercifull men twice miserable men, because they were afflicted, I. with their owne misery: and, II. with others misery. Secondly, they thought mercifull men to bee very weake men; and pittifull men to be passionate men; because they would have men to bee subject neither to mercie, nor envie, nor any other passion[c]. Wherein we may see, I. the foolish wisedome of the flesh, even in the Philosophers, and how corrupt carnall reason is. II. Wee may hence see also their absurd consequence, it is an infirmitie and weakenesse to bee subject to vice; therefore also to vertue: wee must not bee subject to the passion of envie, therefore not of mercie. The one is forbidden, the other is commanded: the one is pleasing unto God, the other is displeasing: by the one (Envie) we imitate Sathan: by the other (Mercie) wee imitate God. And therefore this opinion is to be exploded.

c Cicero Tuscul. 3.

Secondly, some are contrary hereunto in their practise, being cruell, hard, uncharitable, and of flintie hearts: And therefore the Apostle (utterly disliking this amongst Christians) doth earnestly desire them, as the elect, holy, and beloved children of God, to put on the bowels of mercie and kindnesse[d]. But here hard-hearted men will object many things.

d Col. 3. 12.

Object. 1 First, from carnall reason, or naturall wisedome, they object thus: First, hee hurts two, that gives relieve to a poore man in miserie; quia & perdit, & prolongat vitam ad miseriam[e], that is, first, hee wrongs himselfe, because hee loses what hee gives: secondly, hee hurts the other, because by his present relieve, hee doth prolong the miserable life of the poore man. Secondly, for the most part, the poore are most unthankfull people, and therefore as the proverbe is, is, all the liquor is lost, that is put in a crackt dish.

Answ. 1. Firſt, thou knoweſt not what a day may bring forth; and therefore helpe him for the preſent, who ſtands in need, and it may bee, the Lord will take care to provide for him for the time to come. Thou muſt not ſay, hee is miſerably poore, and will certainly bee famiſhed one time or other; and therefore I may as well let him dye now, as hereafter: but thou muſt now relieve him, as God requires, and for the time to come, leave that unto the Lord.

Answ. 2. Secondly, thou muſt not neglect to ſhew mercie the unto poore, becauſe they are an ungratefull generation: for that which thou doeſt unto them, is gratefull unto the Lord, and ſhall be rewarded by him, although the poore forget to be thankfull.

Obiect. 2. Secondly, they obiect from equitie and juſtice thus: The poore and miſerable people ſuffer but the puniſhment which they have deſerved; and therefore it is an unjuſt thing to relieve them, and little better than to take by force, a thiefe and malefactor out of the hands of the Juſtice, or Judge. They have been idle, or drunken, or prodigall, waſting their ſubſtance with riotous living; and therefore it were not juſt to helpe them, but to let them pinch for their paines.

Answ. 1. Firſt, what they are, or have been, is nothing unto us, wee muſt leave them to the judgement of God: yea, conſider our owne deſerts, if wee by our ſinnes have not deſerved, that the Lord ſhould make us as miſerable as now they are; and therefore their former ſinnes ſhould not cauſe us to ſhut the doore of our compaſſion againſt them. Thus the Apoſtle exhorts us, not to diſdaine and ſcorne thoſe that have ſinned, but conſider our ſelves that wee have ſinned, and may ſinne as grievouſly as they; and therefore wee ſhould reſtore them with the Spirit of meekneſſe [f]. [f] Gal. 6. 1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee muſt learne to diſtinguiſh between Divine and humane puniſhments: firſt, there is a certaine law of humane puniſhments; and therefore they are not to bee hindred: yea, the Judge is here charged to diſcharge juſtly his place, Yee ſhall doe no unrighteouſneſſe in judgement, thou ſhalt not reſpect the perſon of the poore, nor of the mightie: but in righteouſneſſe ſhalt thou judge thy neighbour [g], whether poore or rich. Indeed it is required, that Mercie ſhould be mixed with juſtice in judgement, but not that juſtice ſhould bee altogether omitted. Secondly, Divine puniſhments are not inflicted by one and the ſame rule, or way: for ſometimes God afflicts for ſinne, ſometimes for triall; and therefore whereſoever we ſee the hand of God lye, wee may there aſſent in our hearts unto the Lord, that hee is righteous in all his wayes, and juſt in all his judgements: but yet with our helping hands, wee ſhould commiſerate, pitty, and (to our abilitie) eaſe and leſſen the burden of the afflicted. [g] Levit. 19. 15.

Obiect. 3. Thirdly, they obiect againe from Religion: Firſt, charitie beginnes at home; now by relieving them, wee neglect our ſelves; by imparting unto their neceſſities, wee impaire our owne eſtates; and therefore in religious equitie it is not required of us. 151

Answ. 1. I anſwer, wee muſt doe as wee would be done unto: yea, wee muſt give a good example unto others: we ſhould labour that others might follow us by equall ſteppes in charitie and bountie towards the poore, and that by our example others might be provoked.

Secondly, they ſay, it is not onely iniquum, an unjuſt thing; but it is alſo impium, a wicked and ungodly thing: for by this meanes they injure their children; and hee that provides not for his family, is worſe than an Infidell.

Answ. 2. I anſwer, we muſt preferre neither the riches of our children, nor our owne pleaſure before the life of our brother. And therefore although the fleſh be prone to murmure in this kinde, yet let us remember theſe things: Firſt, it is not actus elicitus, ſed imperatus, not a free and voluntary action, but a thing commanded and enjoyned by God, and therfore we are obliged thereunto in dutie towards God. Secondly, remember, we and the poore are but one fleſh. Thirdly, that which we doe unto them, wee doe unto God. Fourthly, if we be hard-hearted towards the poore, we provoke the wrath of God without mercie. Fiftly, Mercie being a Divine worke, ſhall certainly be rewarded. And thus much for the firſt branch of the firſt part, who they are that are bleſſed.

Queſt. 3. Secondly, what mercie is this which is required unto this bleſſedneſſe?

Answ. Mercie may be defined thus, Aliena miſeria in corde compaſſio. (Auguſt. de Civit. Dei, 9. 13.) A commiſerating of another mans miſerie in our heart: Or agritudo ex aliena miſeria (Cicer. Tuſcul. 3.) A ſorrow for another mans diſtreſſe. Or, Dolor prò aliena miſeria, ex voluntate & charitate. (Gualt.) A heartie grieving for another mans griefe, ariſing out of an unfained love unto the partie afflicted. Or more plainly thus, Mercie is a pitying of another mans miſerie, with a deſire and endevour to helpe him to the uttermoſt of our abilitie. And therefore unto mercie is required, Firſt, a ſorrow: Secondly, ſorrow for our brothers affliction, not for our owne. Thirdly, a cordiall, not a counterfeit ſorrow. Fourthly, not a a bare ſorrow of the heart, but a griefe accompanied with a helping hand.

Queſt. 4. How manifold is this mercy, to which is made this promiſe of bleſſedneſſe?

Answ. 1. Firſt, ſome divide it into Temporall and Spirituall, in generall: but more particularly into theſe ſeven branches. Firſt, to have a care of Orphans and Widowes. Secondly, to plead the cauſe of the oppreſſed. Thirdly, to protect and defend the life of him that is in danger, whether it be by ſhip-wracke, or purſute of enemies, or falſe witneſſe, or the like. Fourthly, to redeeme captives. Fiftly, to reduce thoſe into the right way who ſtray and erre from it. Sixtly, to adviſe and admoniſh a man of that danger which we ſee approching unto him. Seventhly, to defend and maintaine the reputation and credit 152 of those that are scandalized. I grant these are good workes of mercie: but this division is imperfect, many things being omitted therein (as followes by and by) and therefore I passe by, and from this.

Secondly others (Stapleton Luk. 6. 37. 3 S.) say, that mercie is exercised either first in judgement; or secondly, in almes; or thirdly, in pardoning of offenders. And this partition is consonant to Scripture. Answ. 2.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, mercie is either
- Towards thy selfe; not spoken of in this place;
- Towards others, viz.
  - Either towards Cattell
  - Or Towards Men, which is either
    - Internall; Or
    - Externall; which is shewed either
      - By giving, Or
      - Forgiving.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, in mercy three things are to be considered; to wit,

First, quibus, to whom mercie is to be shewed,
- To all men.
- To Beasts.

Secondly, in quibus? wherein? to wit,
- In Heart.
- In worke, and that both
  - By not repaying injuries and wrongs, that is evill with evill.
  - By giving good things,
    - Either spirituall: as for example, I. Instruction if the partie bee ignorant or erroneous. II. Reprehension, if hee have sinned. III. Consolation, if his conscience bee pressed with the sense of sinne. IV. Prayer for him in all these, and all other his afflictions.
    - Or externall: as for example, I. To preserve him whose life is in danger. II. To advise and counsel him for his health, who is sicke. III. To preserve the good name of our brother. IV. To give meat and drinke unto the hungry and thirstie. V. To entertaine those who are weary through travell. VI. To cloth the naked. VII. To visite and comfort those who are in prison. VIII. To give counsell to our neighbour in his affaires. IX. To bury the bodies of the dead.

Thirdly, quomodo? & quatenus? how farre, and how mercie is to be shewed? to wit,
1. With a pious intention.
2. Prudently, to all, but principally to the godly.
3. Plentifully.
4. Quickly, without delay.
5. Cheerfully.
6. Frequently and often.

First, mercy is to be shewd to all men; or the object of mercy are all those who stand in need; thus our elder Brother exhorts us. Give to every one that askes[b]. And thus our heavenly Father doth, He causeth his sun to shine, and his raine to fall upon all men[i].

[b] Luke 6. 30.
[i] Matth. 5. 45.

Quest. 5. Why must we be mercifull and charitable unto all, both good and bad?

Answ. 1. First, because we have the Lord to be our president herein, who doth good unto those that are evill; yea shewed mercy (and that extraordinary) unto us, when we were his enemies, giving his onely begotten Sonne to die for us[k].

[k] Rom. 5. 6, 7.

Answ. 2 Secondly, those who are to bee loved, are to be helped; but all men are to be loved, therefore charity and mercy are to be extended unto all. Every one is our Brother either in the Lord, or for the Lord, and therefore every one is to be loved and helped. Againe all men are linked together by one of these chaines, viz. Either first, by the bond of the Spirit, as all the religious and godly are united together: Or secondly, by Hope; thus all the elect are linked together, and although for the present some be Sauls and enemies, yet we hope they may become Pauls and friends, and therefore we love them: Or thirdly, by the bond of the flesh, as all those who have any carnall relation unto us at all, whether by affinity, or consanguinity, or cohabitation, or the like: Or Fourthly, by creation, and thus all men in the world are our brethren, and therefore are to be loved, and helped by us in their necessities.

Secondly, mercy is to be shewed, to beasts, or to be exercised towards them.

Quest. 6. What mercy is to be shewed to unreasonable creatures?

Answ. 1. First, if they wander or stray, thou must bring them home Exodus 23. 4. Deuteronomie 22. 1. 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if they fall downe in the way, thou must helpe to lift them up againe. Deuteronomie 22. 4.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, thou must give them rest upon the Sabbath day, not working them therein Exod. 20.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, thou must regard the life of thy beast, and not over-worke them, or over-load them. Prov. 12. 10.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, thou must not delight, to exercise cruelty upon any creature whatsoever. Having briefly shewed. Quest. 7. Quibus: To whom mercy is to be shewed, it remaines in the next place to shew In quibus, wherein mercy is to be shewed. Answ. 1 First, Corde, in the heart. Secondly, Ore, in the mouth. Thirdly, Opere, in workes. First, mercy is to be shewed to our brother, in and with our heart, two manner of wayes. viz.

First,

First, Orando, by praying heartily for them, we must pray for all the Saints Ephes. 6. 18. yea for all men. 1 Tim. 2. 1. we must pray one for another, because the prayer of the faithful availes much [l]. And therefore this kind of mercy is to be extended unto all, because thus we may helpe King, and State, and Church, and all that are in any distresse, by praying fervently for them. Secondly, Compatiendo, by being fellow-feelers of their miserie: and this is the root of the worke of charitie. For when wee truly commiserate their estates, wee doe then relieve and helpe them as much as we can: yea true mercie is to be founded upon that σπλάγχνα cordis, the bowels of compassion; wee must bee touched with a sense of their miserie, as though wee our selves were in the like case [m], wee all are but one body, and one member suffering, all the members suffer with it [n]. And therefore the workes of charitie (Almes) without the compassion of the heart, are not acceptable unto God.

[l] Iames 5. 16.

[m] Heb. 13 3.

[n] 1 Cor. 12. 26.

Quest. 8. Who give almes with the hand, and not with the heart?

Answ. 1. First, hypocrites, that doe it to bee seene of men, and to be praised by men, Matth. 6.

Answ. 2. Secondly, superstitious persons, that doe it out of a meere custome, and otherwise would not doe it.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who give almes coldly (of which afterwards) None of these in their works of mercie please God, because they doe not proceed from love.

Secondly, mercie is to bee shewed unto our brethren, with our Mouth, and that also two severall wayes, viz. First, solando, by comforting them. Secondly, consulendo, by counselling them.

First, wee must comfort those that mourne: Our true mercie is to comfort those that are sicke in minde, this being the oyle that the Samaritane powred into the wounds of the halfe-dead man: yea, for this end the Lord giving the spirit of consolation unto some, that they might comfort others [p]. And therefore wee must remember, that every mourning man is an object of mercie, and ought to bee comforted; whether hee bee over-whelmed, First by some spirituall sorrow, as shaken by the strength of temptation, or assaulted unto desperation. Or secondly, by some civill griefe, whether sicknesse, imprisonment, losse, death of friends, or the like.

[o] Luk. 10. 30.

[p] 2 Cor. 1. 4.

Secondly, mercy is to be shewed, by counselling and advising those that stand in need of direction; thus the servants of Naaman counsell their master unto his health and profit, 2 Kin. 5. And it is the office of mercy to reduce by counsell our brother from every unprofitable path.

Quest. 9. Why must we be thus carefull to advise and admonish our brethren?

Answ. 1. First, because it is an honest and good thing, by admonition and counsell to preserve or deliver our brethren from the jawes of hell; yea this is a more excellent worke of charity, then to relieve the outward necessities of those that stand in need: for as the soule is more precious then the body; so he that admonisheth and adviseth his brother for the benefit of the inward man, is more charitable then he that gives of his substance for the refreshing of the outward.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is very profitable for us to counsell and advise others, and that in many regards; First, our brother whom we thus admonish will love us at the last, better then if wee had flattered him [q]. Secondly, wee teach our selves while wee advise and instruct our brother. Thirdly, wee shall be saved, if we thus discharge our duety towards our brother, though he will not be perswaded by us. Fourthly, and if we can prevaile with him and by our counsell reduce him from his wicked wayes, we shall shine in heaven as the starres in the firmament [r].

[q] Pro. 28. 23.

[r] Dan. 12. 2. and Iam. 5. 19.

Quest. 10 How must we counsell and advise our brethren?

Answ. 1. First, in civill and temporall things, and in his externall affaires, thou must teach him and shew him what may be most profitable and advantagious unto him; and reprove those things which are hurtfull for his estate or body, or good name.

Answ. 2. Secondly, so also in spirituall things thou must 1. teach him his duety both towards God and man: Thus the Apostle exhorts us to admonish one another. (Rom. 15. 14.) to edifie and build up one another (1 Thes. 5. 11.) to exhort and instruct one another (Heb. 3. 13.) 2. Thou must reprove the errours of his life: Warning those that are unruly (1 Thes. 5. 14.) rebuking thy neighbour, and not suffering him to sinne (Lev. 19. 17.) for therein thou shalt have delight (Prov. 24. 25.) And therefore first, Ministers must teach and reprehend (1 Tim. 5. 20.) And secondly, all men, according to their place, ranke, quality, and calling. Ministers Autoritative, other men Charitative.

Thirdly, mercy is to be shewed to our brother, in our deeds, and that two manner of wayes: First, negatively, we must not repay evill with evill; mercy doth not avenge her selfe but pardon, and otherwise there is no mercy to be expected from God, neither have we any warrant to pray for it [s].

[s] Mat. 6. 14. and 18. 35.

Secondly, affirmatively, we must doe good unto those that stand in need, that is give bread unto the hungry, take into house those that are cast out, & cover the naked [t], that thus we may make us friends by our riches [u], and shew that the religion which we professe is a pure and holy religion [v].

[t] Esa. 58. 7.

[u] Luk. 16. 9.

[v] Iam. 1. 27.

Quest. 11 Why must we thus give good things to those who want?

Answ. 1. First, in regard of our selves, because otherwise we cannot hope to obtaine any thing that we want at the hands of the Lord, who hath made no promise of mercie to those, who will shew none.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in regard of God, wherein there are three things to be observed,

First, who requires charity, and mercy at our hands of the Lord and his Christ, and therefore our Saviour saith, when I was hungry you fed me, &c. Matt. 25. 41.

Secondly, what doth God demand of us? his owne, nothing but what hee hath lent us, thence saith Iob, God gave, and God hath taken away, as if he would say, hee hath taken away from me nothing, but his owne [v]. So David, Oh Lord God, all this store that we have, commeth of thine hand, and is all thine owne [x]. Thirdly, how doth God require of us his owne? unto Usury, although it be his, yet he graciously promiseth to reward it seven-fold, yea a hundredfold into our bosome. And therefore seeing it is God that bids us give, who requires of us nothing but his owne, and yet faithfully promises to reward our workes of mercy; there is great reason, that we should be carefull to abound in good workes.

To wit, Extraordinary, Ordinary, and those either towards Fame, Reputation, and good name, Person, Dead body, three wayes; First, by hospitality. Secondly, by visiting of him. Thirdly, by almes deeds.

[v] Iob. 1. 21.

[x] 1 Chro. 29. 16.

Answ. Good workes are twofold, to wit, either Quest. 12. What workes of mercy must wee abound in?

First, there are extraordinary good deeds, which are occasionally offred unto us: As for example.

First, to admonish our brother, of what danger we know, and which he is likely to incurre without our admonishing of him. Secondly, to reduce into the right path him, whom wee know doth erre [y], as a certaine man did by Ioseph, when he wandred up and downe, and could not find his brethren [z]. Thirdly, to defend those that are oppressed, to take part with the widdow, fatherlesse, and afflicted. Thus Ionathan pleads for David (1 Sam. 20.) and Iob, the poore and him who had no helper [a]. Fourthly, to redeeme those who are in captivity. Fiftly, to helpe those, whose lives we see are in jeopardy, either by poison, sword, ship-wracke, deceit, false witnesse, or the like? All these are extraordinary, but when occasion offers any of them unto us, we must lay hold upon them.

[y] Esa. 58. 7. and Ezech. 34. 4.

[a] Iob. 29. 12. 13.

Secondly, there are Ordinary workes of mercy, which are threefold, viz. First, towards the good name of our brother: Here some [b] observe two things. I. Wee must not calumniate and slander our brother. II. Wee must not reproach or insult over the infirmities of our brethren; reciting them to their disgrace, whersoever wee come, as the manner of some is; and this is that which is meant in this place: Charity covers a multitude of sinnes [c], and therefore those are strangers to this worke of mercy, who have itching tongues, and itching eares, to which no talke is pleasing, but that which tends to the disgrace, and dispraise of their neighbour. Secondly, there are ordinary workes of mercy to be exercised towards our brothers person, and these are three. First, Hospitality, whereunto we must be prone; according to the advice of the two principall Apostles, Saint Paul, and Saint Peter, the first exhorting us to be given to hospitality [d], and the second, to use it one to another without grudging [e].

[b] Staplet. f. Matth. 6. 1.

[c] Prov. 10. 12. and 1. Pet. 4. 8.

[d] Rom. 12. 13.

[e] 1 Pet. 4. 9.

Quest. 13. Why must wee bee thus carefull to bee hospitable?

Answ. 1. First, because the Lord loveth the stranger, and therefore we should love him, and thus expresse our love unto him, by entertaining him lovingly.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because we may prove strangers in a strange land, and therefore if we desire that others may be hospitable unto us, we must use hospitality unto others [f].

[f] Deut 10 18. 19.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because some, by being given unto hospitality, have received Angels into their houses, Gen. 18. and 19. and Heb. 13. 2. Yea thus wee may come to entertaine Christ, who hath said, he that receiveth you receiveth me [g].

[g] Mat. 10. 40.

Quest. 14. What hospitality is it, that we must be given unto?

Answ. There is a three-fold hospitality, to wit. First, Civill, when a man generally keepes a good house, giving kind welcome, and loving entertainment to any that comes to his table; this is lawfull, but this is not that blessed mercy which our Saviour here speakes of.

Secondly, there is a Prohibited and unlawfull hospitality; which is shewed to lewd wandring beggars.

Thirdly, there is a Religious hospitality, which is I. lawfull, and II. exercised towards the poore, who are not able to recompense him that entertaines them; and III. blessed, according to that of our Saviour, When thou makest a feast, call the poore, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt bee blessed, for they cannot recompense thee [h].

[h] Luk. 14. 13. 14.

Secondly, the next ordinary worke of mercy, which is to be performed towards the person of our brother, is visitation, whether he be sicke, or in prison: viz. Those whom either necessity doth pinch, or the cruelty of men doe detaine in hold, not suffering them to enjoy their liberty.

Thirdly, the last ordinary worke of mercy to be exercised towards the person of our brethren, is Alms, or a reall relieving of their wants & necessities, whether it be by giving meat to the hungry, or drinke to the thirsty, or lodging to him that is destitute thereof, or cloathes to the naked, or money to him that lackes, and the like, whereof wee shall speake in the next Chapter, and by and by.

The third ordinary worke of mercy is to bee shewed to the dead body of our brother, that is, by interring it with a Christian burriall; this duty is much commended in Scripture, which for our imitation doth expresse the religious care that was taken for the burriall of Sarah (Gen. 23. 19.) of Iacob (Gen 49. 29.) of Ioseph (50. 25.) and of Saul and Ionathan (2 Sam. 2. 5.)

Quest. 15. Why

Why must we performe the duty of Christian buriall unto the dead?

Answ. 1. First, for the Body or Carkasses sake, yea for our owne sake, least it should putrifie and send Answ. 2. forth an unsavory stench.

Secondly, for civility and humanities sake; because it were a very barbarous thing not to afford buriall unto the dead, but let them lie like dead dogs in the streets, fields, or highwaies.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, wee are enjoyned this office of buriall, in regard of the resurrection: wee beleeve that the dead shall rise againe with the same bodies they had here on earth; and therefore wee lay them (being dead) into their Sepulchers, that they may there be reserved, until God summon Answ. 4 them to appeare at the last day.

Fourthly, Augustine (De Civit. Dei. 13.) adds a fourth answer, and that is, the memory of the party deceased: Si annulum, vestem, supellectilem amatis, quia patris fuit, cur non cadaver fratris Christiani? If thou love dearely, and keepe carefully a ring, or some garment, or jewell, or peece of houshold stuffe, because it was once thy fathers: then why not the dead bodie of thy deare deceased christian brother.

Quest. 16 Having considered Quibus, to whom wee must bee mercifull, and in quibus, in what or wherein wee must shew our mercy; I come now to the Third and last particular of the first part of this verse, and that is Quomodo & Quatenus? How our workes of Mercy are to be performed, and how farre to be extended.

Answ. The rules for the direction of our charity and mercy, doe either respect first the hand, or secondly the affection, or thirdly, the judgement.

First, in respect of the Hand, there are two rules: Sit eleemosyna { Plena manu; Continuata manu.

First, our Almes must be given with an open fist, and liberall hand: for if they be sparing, it is not a worke of mercy. Thus David describes i Psal. 112. 9. & 2 cor. 9. 9. the mercifull man, He hath dispersed, he hath given to the poore, that is, largely, and liberally. Thus Solomon describes the liberall woman, She stretcheth out her hand to the poore: yea she stretcheth

k Prover. 31, 20. forth her hand unto the needy: yea this is the Lords command, if there bee a poore man among you, thou shalt not shut thy hand from him, but thou shalt open thy hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his needs, in that which l Deut. 15. 7. 8. he wanteth.

Quest. 17 If Parsimonious almes bee not Mercy, then what is the measure of Mercy?

Answ. 1. First, negatively, the measure of mercy is not our covetous minde and will: But Answ. 2. Secondly, the Mercy of God. Divis: da mihi ex eo quod dedi tibi. Augustin. in Psal. 103. God saith, give me part of that which I have given unto thee; and let my bounty shewed towards thee, be thy rule to direct thee in shewing mercy towards others.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, the measure of our mercy is our brothers misery; our almes must bee according to our brothers want, Deut. 15. 8.

Fourthly, another measure of mercy, is our Answ. 4. owne hand, that is our ability and power: Non solum quantum, sed de quanto (Ambros. in 2. Corinth.) God doth not so much looke at that which thou givest, as at that which thou hast to give: And therefore the Holy Ghost doth neither condemne the Disciples, because they gave but little, nor commend them because they gave much, but praiseth them for this, That every one of them according to his ability, sent relefe unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea m: m Acts 11. 29.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, sometimes the Lord doth prescribe unto some a particular measure of mercy, which is to be observed: as for example;

First, the Lord did appoint unto the poore all the fruit, that sprang up or grew the seventh yeare n. Secondly, some remainder and gleanings n Exod. every yeare. Deut. 24. 19. Thirdly, sometimes 23. 11. halfe of that which wee possesse; thus Christ commands the people o, and thus doth Zacheus o Luk. 3. p. Fourthly, sometimes God commands us 11. to sell all and give unto the poore, Matthew 19. 21. p Luk. 19. Luke 12. 33. Fifthly, sometimes we are com- 8. manded, if wee have for the present nothing to give, to labour, that we may be able to helpe others. Acts 20. 35. Ephes 4. 28.

Who offend against this rule?

Quest. 18 First, those that labour hard in their callings; Answ. 1. not that they may be enabled to give almes, but that they may have enough to satisfie their greedy appetites of gluttony or drunkennesse.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those that give sparingly unto the poore: I speake not here of those who give little, because they have not much (for certainely the widdowes mite shall be accepted) but of those who have much, and yet give but little: The Apostles assertion is generall, For if there be first a willing minde, it is then accepted according to that which a man hath, not according to that which hee hath not q: where he most plainely layes downe q 2 Cor. 8. two rules of charity; the first is, what soever we 12. give, whether little or much, it must bee given willingly: the second is, that wee must give proportionably unto that which wee possesse, that is, if wee have but little God will accept then of a little: but if we abound in estate wee must abound in good workes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those are from this rule, that spend and give much for other things, and in regard of that but little unto the poore; it is no almes or true worke of mercy, to give a peece of bread or a penny unto a poore man, when in the meane time we spend much other waies; either 1. upon our lust or pleasure, as many spend much for the sight of Stage Players, much upon Hawkes, much upon Hounds, much at Dice and Cards, yea, much upon Harlots: or 2. when we waste and consume much by drunkennesse, or 3. by feasting frequently great men. Certainely we are no almoners, except we bestow, distribute, and disperse a greater part of that which wee possesse upon the poore, then upon our pleasures and lusts; and our sentence is this, if we sow sparingly we shall reape sparingly, and if we sow plentifully; we r 2 Cor. shall reape plentifully? Secondly, our almes must 9. 7.

156 be given with a continued hand; true mercy is not sometimes to be done, but to be habituated by a frequent and daily practise: Give (saith Salomon) a portion to seven and also to eight [f], and Saint Paul would have the Corinthians to lay by some thing in store every Lords day [g], and dissuades all men from being weary of this duety of charity [h], or of forgetting the workes of mercy [i].

f Eccles. 11.2.
g 1 Cor. 16 2.
h Gal. 6. 9.
i Heb. 13 16.

Quest. 19. Why must we be thus constant in the workes of mercy and charity?

Answ. 1. First, because there is daily need of the exercise thereof: the belly of the poore man will still cry for meat; yea new poore people will daily spring up, the Lord hereby proving and trying us, whether we will continue in the workes of mercy, or be weary of well-doing [k].

k 2 Thes. 3.13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because otherwise we shall have no reward: It is not enough to begin well, except we continue in well doing, for without perseverance there is no blessednesse.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because constancy in the workes of mercy, is recited unto the praise of such, and imitation of others, by the Holy Spirit. Thus we read of the daily distribution of the Church [l], and of Cornelius his constant course of prayer and almes [m], that wee might learne to imitate them in this vertue so lauded by the Lord.

m Act. 10. 3.

Quest. 20. How long must wee continue in giving almes?

Answ. 1. First, wee must give so long as wee see any stand in neede; and when none wants then we may retaine unto our selves what we enjoy, but that will be never, and therefore we must never cease to give.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee must give untill we have satisfied the mercies of Christ; wee must doe good unto the poore members of Christ, untill wee have done as much for them as Christ did for us, but this will be never, as that liberall Almoner said [n] unto a poore brother, Nondum sanguinem pro te, &c. I have not yet shed my blood for thee, as Christ did for mee, and therefore I must not yet give over doing good unto thee. And thus we must continue liberall so long as we continue in life, and ability to doe good.

n Iohn Eleemosynarius. Leontius vita.

Having shewed how the rules of Almes-deeds doe respect the hand; it followes in the second place, to consider how they respect the affections: wherein we have also two rules diligently to observe, viz. { Dandum hilariter. / Dandum cito.

First, what wee give, must bee given willingly and cheerfully: for true mercie gives with a willing minde; whence the Apostle exhorts the Romans, to give cheerfully [a]; and assures the Corinthians, that God loves a cheerfull giver [b]: and unto them exceedingly commends the Macedonians, who prayed him with much intreaty to receive their gifts [c]. And therefore it is not enough to give, except wee give willingly and cheerfully, because the Lord onely rewards such givers.

a Rom. 12 8.
b 2 Cor. 9. 7.
c 2 Cor. 8. 4.

Secondly, as wee must give willingly, so we must give speedily: true mercie being alwayes prepared to doe good: Wee must not say unto our neighbour, Go, and come again, and to morrow I will give, when thou hast it by thee [d]: yea we must bee so ready to give, that wee may not stay untill wee bee asked; for then it is not given willingly, neither is so praise-worthy with God, because the originall and ground thereof is not within thee, but without thee, proceeding not from thy affection and desire to give, but from him that begged it at thy hands. Hence wee read, how God saw the prodigall sonne, while hee was yet a farre off, and runnes unto him, Luke 15. 20. And Christ saw the widow whose sonne was dead, Luke 7.13. and the people that were hungry, Iohn 6. 5. and the blinde man, Iohn 9. 1. And the Samaritane saw the wounded man, Luke 10. 34. All which examples teach us, that we must bee ready to doe good; that wee must not wait till occasion seeke us, but wee must seeke occasions of shewing mercie: for this is acceptable unto God. The honey and oyle that flowes and distills willingly from the combe & tree, is much sweeter than that which is pressed, and more pure, the other being more full of Lees. And therefore the eye must not wait upon the eares, wee must not neglect to doe good untill wee heare some begging of us; but our hand must attend upon our eye, wee must bee looking continually abroad for some occasion of shewing mercie; and when our eye is once fixed upon such an object, then our hand must bee ready to extend it selfe to relieve. Good Christians should bee like covetous usurers, who enquire and seeke, where they may put out their money to their best advantage: for it is onely such givers that lend upon usurie unto the Lord, and whom the Lord hath promised to repay a hundred fold.

d Pro. 3. 28.

Observ.

Who transgresse or erre from this rule? Quest. 21.

First, those that avoyd and decline occasions of doing good, seeking how to shunne them, when they are offered. Answ. 1.

Secondly, those that will give no more unto any good use, or worke, then they are forced and constrained to give. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those that never give, but when they are asked; for this is not true mercie, as may appeare thus. First, many are ashamed to aske, and blush to begge, who for the most part, are, I. the more ingenuous poore, and II. stand in most need; wherefore hee that never gives but when he is asked, doth never exercise his charity towards the best, and those that are in greatest want. Secondly, the more impudent and bawling beggars will goe away with all, if wee give not, but when we are asked; and therefore this is no true mercie. Thirdly, our reward shall bee so much the lesse (if we have any reward at all) if we doe good onely when we are desired: and on the contrary, our recompence shall bee so much the greater, if we enquire out those who lacke, and are ashamed to aske; for thus the soule of the poore will blesse thee and thy willing worke. And therefore we should send messengers into the streets (Matth. 22.) that is, our eyes, Answ. 3.

eyes, our eares, our tongues (by enquiring) that so wee may finde out who they are that are truly indigent. Thus we have seene how the rules of mercie and almesdeeds respect the Hand, and the Affection: It now lastly remaines to shew how they respect the Iudgement.

Quest. 22. Here also two rules are to be well marked:

Answ. viz. Dandum prudenter, we must give prudently. Dandum piè, we must give piously.

First, the workes of mercie are to bee distributed and bestowed prudently, with judgement, not with a blinde minde; where two things are carefully to be observed: to wit,

First in generall, thou must give to none but to those who want and stand in need: Cave ne Christi substantiam imprudenter, rem pauperum non pauperibus, &c.[c]. Take heed thou dost not disperse, scatter and consume Christs treasure foolishly, or give the poore mens substance to those who are not poore. Almes are the inheritance of the poore, according to the ordinance of God; and therefore not to bee given but to them alone. God left poor men amongst his people[f], to try their charitie; implying plainly hereby, that charitie is to bee extended towards the poore.

Observ. 1

[f] Deut. 15 11.

Quest. 23. Who sinne against this rule?

Answ. 1. First, they offend here that begge and want not; that is, I. Those that goe from doore to doore, for almes, and yet need not. II. Those that demand and sue for a part of that money, which is collected onely for the reliefe of the poore, when in the meane time, they are in no want. III. Those that seeke and sue to bee admitted into Almes-houses, and Hospitals, which are founded onely for aged or impotent people, when they themselves have health, strength, and a competencie to live upon of themselves. Certainly, all these are no better then theeves who rob the spittle, and steale from the poore.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they sinne here, who being in place, preferre their owne friends onely to these stipends, that is, Masters of Companies, or Hospitals, or the like, are not to preferre those that are neare unto them, because neare, unto those pensions and places that they are betrusted to bestow and dispose of; but those who are impotent, aged, and indigent.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they transgresse here, that (being able) refuse to relieve their owne: thus rich children are to relieve their poore parents; and contrarily, rich parents poore children. This Saint Paul doth very fully urge in his directions sent unto Timothy: If any widow have children, or nephewes, let them learne first to shew piety at home, and to requite their parents. And againe, If any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his owne house, he hath denied the faith. Besides, If any man or woman that believeth, hath widows, let them relieve them, and let not the Church bee charged with them[g]. Where wee see plainly, that those who are rich, are enjoyned to provide for their poore kindred, and not to suffer them to live of the poores stocke. And thus much for the first observation.

[g] 1 Tim. 5. ch. 4. 8. 16. vers.

Secondly, in particular, there is an order to be observed in giving: For first, although it bee most certaine, that all poore people are to bee helped, according to our Saviour, Give to every one that askes; yet secondly, there is a difference to be put, and some indigent persons are to bee preferred before others. Aliquando melius negatur quam datur[b], because somtimes it is better to say some persons nay, than to give unto them. And therefore before wee give, wee should examine two impediments, to wit, First, Legis of the Law, doth not the law forbid thee to give to such and such? that is, to wandring beggars, who will not keepe at home, where the Law provides, they should be provided for. Religion doth not teach us to despise just lawes, as their lewd practises shew they doe. These lawes are founded upon religion, and Christian Prudence, because wee cannot truly know the want of those, whose persons and habitations wee know not; and therfore all poore are to make their wants knowne unto that parish and people, that know both them and their necessities. And those who will not doe thus, but contrary to all law and government, wander abroad, are either not to bee relieved at all, or if wee relieve them, wee should procure, that they may be corrected withall, either by stocks or whip. Thus the just prohibition of the law may hinder our almes.

Observ. 2.

[b] August. Epist. 48.

Secondly, Conscientiæ, of conscience, we must doe good, especially to the houshold of faith, (Galath. 6. 10.) for his soule will blesse us, and God will heare his prayers for us; but hee will not heare the prayers of the wicked; and therefore our Saviour sayth, that which is given to a Disciple (nomine Discipuli) in the name of a Disciple, shall bee accepted, and rewarded[i]. And therefore before wee give, wee should examine both the persons povertie, and his religion.

[i] Mat. 10. 42.

Quest. 24. May wee not then give relieſe unto wicked poore men?

Answer. Certainely we may, observing these cautions, or upon these conditions: viz. First, if thou dost not know him to be wicked. Secondly, if by thy almes thou dost not nourish him in his sinne, or supply his necessity for the satisfying of his lewdnesse. Thirdly, if necessity urge, thou mayst then relieve him; that is although he be wicked, yet if hee bee like to perish, thou must helpe and succour him by thy charity. Fourthly, if thy almes given unto him, doe not hinder thee from giving unto better than he is, then thou mayst give, but if the case should thus fall out with thee, that if thou give unto him, thou canst not give unto such an one, who is as poore, but a much better man then he, thou art then to withhold thy hand from. Fifthly, if thou beest able to afford relieſe to both; then thou mayst give unto both.

Secondly, we must give our almes piously as wel as prudently; that is, mercy towards others, is not accepted of God, except it be joyned with piety in our selves: Thus the Lord saith, that if a just man shall give bread to the hungry, it shall be rewarded

158 warded [k]. Audistis peccata redimi eleemosynis (Dan. 4.24.) ne intelligite perverse: prosunt si mores mutaveris, sin in malis perseveraveris, non corrumpes judicium Dei eleemosynis tuis [l]. It may be (saith the Father) thou observeſt Daniel to exhort the King to redeeme his ſinnes by giving of almes, but thou muſt dexterouſly underſtand this, thus, almes profit a man if he change his life, but if he perſevere in his perverſneſſe, hee cannot then by all his almes bribe the Judge of all the world, neither find any favour at all in judgement: And thus Saint Iames doth plainly cleare the point in hand, in ſaying, Pure and undefiled religion is to viſite and relieve the fatherleſſe and widowes, and (immaculatum ſe ſervare) to keepe himſelfe unſpotted [m]. True charity is a fruit of Repentance, and is an approbation or tryal of our faith.

m Iam. 1. 27.

Queſt. 25. Who ſinne againſt this rule?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, thoſe who give almes è malè partis of evil gotten goods. Honour God with thy ſubſtance, got by thy juſt labours (ſaith Salomon) not by thy injuſtice, or Uſury, or oppreſſion, or lying, or fraud.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe who give malo animo, out of an evill mind, that is, either out of hypocriſie, that they may be ſeene and praiſed (Mat 6.2. &c.) of men, now this is not acceptable unto God, as the Father ſaid, Ingrata Deo non quæ videtur, ſed quæ fit ideò, ut videatur: The Lord never is pleaſed with thoſe almes, which are therefore done that men may ſee them; but with thoſe that (although men ſee them, yet) proceed from a mind truely merciſull and charitable [n].

n Chryſoſt. ſ.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, they doe not give piè, holily, that live impiè, ungodly: many are bountifull unto the poore, but wicked in their lives, wherefore their almes is not gratfull unto God. Qui egenti dat, & animam non cuſtodit, Rem tribuit Deo, & Se peccato [o]. He that gives food to the poore but hunger-ſtarves his owne poore ſoule, gives his ſubſtance to God, and himſelfe to ſinne. And therefore he that deſires to have his almes accepted, muſt firſt indeavor to have his life purged. Thus much may ſuffice for the firſt part of this verſe, wherein we have ſhewed who are bleſſed, the merciſull; what mercy it is that ſhall be rewarded with bleſſedneſſe; and the diviſion thereof. I come now unto the ſecond part: For they ſhall obtaine mercy.

o Greg. mor. 19.

There are two things here conſiderable, 1. Illatio, the Inference. 2. Poſitio vel Ratio.

Firſt, the Inference is implyed in this word, Nam, For, as if our Saviour would ſay, thoſe that obtaine mercy at Gods hands, are bleſſed; but theſe men who are merciſull ſhall obtaine mercy at Gods hands, therefore they are bleſſed.

Obſer. 2. It is worth our obſervation, that Chriſt ſaith not, the merciſull men are bleſſed, becauſe they have deſerved the love or Kingdome of God, or have merited Heaven and happineſſe; but becauſe habebunt miſericordiam, they ſhall have (or obtaine) grace and mercy from God.

Queſt. 26. Doth not Bleſſedneſſe proceed from our merits?

No, but from the meere mercy of God. Saint Paul diſputes this queſtion, Rom. 4.5.6. &c. from Pſal. 32. 1. &c. and concludes that bleſſedneſſe proceedes not of debt but of grace: So Zacharias being filled with the Holy Ghoſt, prophecieth thus of his ſonne Iohn Baptiſt, that he was ſent to give knowledge of ſalvation unto his people, by the remiſſion of their ſinnes, through the tender mercy of our God [p]. Where moſt evidently we ſee that remiſſion of ſinnes, and eternall ſalvation doe flow unto us, not from our merits, but Gods tender mercies.

Anſw.

p Luke 1. 67. 77. 78.

Queſt. 27. Why may we not be made happy and bleſſed by our owne workes and deſerts?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe all our ſtrength is but weakneſſe.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe it is the Lord that workes in us whatſoever is good: He converts us Lam. 5. 21. of his owne good will, he regenerates us, Iam. 1.18. he gives both poſſe and velle, power to will and doe what is good, Phil. 2.13. And therefore he is ſaid to have mercy upon us, Rom. 11.32.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the Lord having converted, regenerated, and juſtified us, then onely are we able to bring forth good workes.

When once Chriſt hath redeemed us, then by Chriſt wee are enabled to ſerve God in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe [q], but not untill then. When the Lord infuſeth grace in our hearts, then are we by his grace enabled to deny all ungodlineſſe and worldly luſts, and to ſerve him all our dayes [r]. And from this ground it is, that the Apoſtle Saint Paul doth ſo ſtiffely deny juſtification by workes, Rom. 3.20. &c. unto verſ. 28. and 2. Tim. 1.9. and Titus 3.5. &c. holding them like two incompatible qualities, that cannot ſtand together. Rom. 11.6.

q Luke 1. 75.

r Tit. 2. 11.

Queſt. 28. Are all good workes like an unneceſſary garment to be layd aſide?

Anſw. We doe not deny Opera, but Operum merita, wee finde no fault with good workes, but onely blame the merit that Papiſts put into them.

Queſt. 29. Why may wee not aſcribe ſome merit unto our workes?

Anſw. Becauſe this were to arrogate unto our ſelves, both againſt Chriſt precept, and Pauls preſident; our Saviour commandeth us, when wee have done all wee can, to ſay, we are but unprofitable ſervants, and therefore have deſerved nothing [s]. S. Paul is ſo afrayd to aſcribe any thing unto himſelfe, that he deſires, when his hand is to bee held up at the barre of Gods Tribunall at the laſt day, he may bee found, not having his owne righteouſneſſe of workes, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, the righteouſneſſe which is of God by faith [t]. And thus much for the inference.

s Luk. 17. 10.

t Phil. 3.9

The ſecond particle of the ſecond part of this verſe, is the Poſition or Reaſon why the merciſull are bleſſed; becauſe Miſericordiam habebunt, they ſhall obtaine mercie.

Queſt. 31 Shall everie true merciſull man finde Mercie?

Anſw. Certes no truly merciſull man ſhall loſe his reward: for ſuch an one doth good to his owne ſoule, Prov. 11. 17. And therefore hee is happy, Prov. 14.21. and he ſhall be bleſſed, Prov. 22.9.

Why

Qu. 32. Why is this mercy and bleſſedneſſe promiſed unto the mercifull man?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe he honours God, as Salomon hath it, he that hath mercy on the poore, honours his maker, Prov. 14.31. and therefore God will honour him, as hee ſaid unto Samuel concerning Eli.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe herein he imitates God, and ſhewes himſelfe to be a child of God, he being mercifull, yea the Father of mercies Pſal. 103. 8.9. 13. and 145. 8. 9. And therefore let the certainty of the reward be a meanes to induce us to be mercifull.

Que. 33. What reward ſhall be given to him that is truely mercifull?

Anſw. Saint Luke (Chap. 6. verſ. 38.) ſaith, there ſhall be given unto him, good meaſure, preſſed downe, ſhaken together, and running over; from whence Stapleton obſerves foure degrees of this reward: viz.

Firſt, there ſhall be given him good meaſure, In temporalibus, preſſed downe, in naturalibus, ſhaken together, in ſpiritualibus, and running over, in æternis. Particularly, Firſt, there are but three ſorts of Rewards, Temporall, Spirituall, and Eternall, wherefore I will comprehend all the bleſſings promiſed unto the mercifull man under one of theſe, beginning with the firſt, to wit, temporall bleſſings, for he that gives to the poore, lends to the Lord [b].

[d] Prov. 19. 17.

Que. 34. What temporall bleſſings is the mercifull man promiſed to enjoy?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, all ſhall bleſſe him; and on the contrary the unmercifull man ſhall be curſed, thus ſaith Salomon, Hee that withholdeth corne, the people ſhall curſe him, but bleſſing ſhall be upon the head of him that ſelleth it [c]. If he that ſelleth unto the poore be bleſſed, then much more he that giveth; on the other ſide if he be curſed that denies to ſell, ſo is alſo he that refuſes to give in the time of need: but elſwhere the Kingly Preacher hath it more plainely in theſe words, hee that hideth his eyes from the poore ſhall have many a curſe [d]. Indeed ſometimes the curſe of the poore, is vaine and idle, becauſe it is pronounced ſine cauſâ, without juſt cauſe, but when it is provoked by the cruelty or coveteouſneſſe of men, it is then moſt powerfull and prevalent, and doth pierce the clouds: and on the contrary, bleſſed is he whom the ſoule of the poore man bleſſeth, and therefore by mercy and charity, we ſhould procure their prayers.

[b] Pro. 11. 26.

[c] Pro. 28. 27.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, he ſhall be freed and deliveted from his miſeries and dangers; and that one of theſe two wayes: Firſt, it may be the Lord himſelfe will deliver thee, as David ſaith, Bleſſed is he that conſidereth the poore, the Lord will deliver him in the time of trouble [d], we have examples hereof, 1. in Rahab, who was ſaved from deſtruction with all her houſhold, for her mercy and hoſpitality extended unto the Spies, Joſh. 2.12. and 6. 23. 2. in Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, who was delivered for his compaſſion ſhewed unto Ieremy [e]. 3. in a Citizen of Antioch [f], whoſe Hiſtory is this. Under the Emperour Mauritius the City of Antioch, was ſhaken with a terrible Earth-quake, after this manner. There was a certaine Citizen ſo given to bountifulnſſe to the poore, that he would neither ſup nor dine unleſſe he had one poore man to be with him at his table. Upon a certaine evening ſeeking for ſuch a gueſt, and finding none, a grave old man met him in the market place, cloathed in white, with two companions with him; whō he intreated to ſup with him, but the old man anſwered that he had more need to pray againſt the deſtruction of the City; and preſently ſhooke his Hand-kerchiefe againſt one part of the City, and then againſt another; and being hardly entreated, forbore the reſt. Which he had no ſooner done, but thoſe two parts of the City, terribly ſhaken with an Earth-quake, were throwne to the ground, and thouſands of men ſlaine. Which this good Citizen ſeeing trembled exceedingly, to whom the old man in white, anſwered and ſaid, by reaſon of thy charity to the poore thy ſelfe, houſe, and family are preſerved [f]. Thus ſometimes the Lord himſelfe extraordinarily delivers thoſe that are mercifull.

[d] Pſ. 42. 1.

[e] Jer. 39. 16, 17.

[f] D Beard Theater of Gods Judgements, f. 587.

Secondly, ſometimes the Lord excites and ſtirres up the enemies of mercifull men unto mercy; as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, He made them alſo to bee pitied of all thoſe that carried them captives [g].

[g] Pſ. 106. 46. & 2 Chro. 30. 9.

Thirdly, he that gives to others, to him it ſhall be given; that is, Firſt, he ſhall not want, thus ſaith the wiſe man, Hee that giveth unto the poore ſhall not lacke. Prov. 28.27. And Saint Paul confirmes it poſitively in theſe words, Hee that miniſtreth ſeed to the ſower, will miniſter bread for your food, if ye be mercifull, 2 Cor. 9.10. Secondly, his eſtate ſhall increaſe, thus the Apoſtle in this ſenſe comforteth the Corinthians for their bounty towards the poore, God will multiply your ſeed ſowne, and increaſe the fruits of your righteouſneſſe (2 Cor. 9.10.) and the Holy Ghoſt elſwhere telleth us, That there are ſome who ſcattereth, and yet increaſeth, and ſome who with-holdeth more then is meet, but it tendeth to poverty ([h]) that is, liberality unto the poore increaſeth the portion in temporall things, but by hard-heartedneſſe the eſtate is decreaſed.

Anſw. 3.

[h] Pro. 11. 24.

Secondly, the next reward which ſhall bee given to the mercifull, is Spirituall: Thus Daniel perſwades the King to redeeme his ſinnes by Almes, Dan. 4.24. And our Saviour ſayth, Give Almes and all things ſhall bee pure unto you. Luke 11.41. yea Dorcas is praiſed for her Almes-deeds [i]. Our Saviour divides the Law into a two-fold love, viz. towards our God, and towards our Neighbour. And Saint Paul aſſures us, that love is the fulfilling of the Law, Rom. 13. 8.10. Now this love of man is three-fold, I. towards our Superiours, II. towards our equals. III. towards our inferiours. And this laſt is the beſt, becauſe they moſt ſtand in need of our love and charitie.

[i] Act. 9:36

Thus mercie towards the poore, prepares the way unto Spirituall graces, non opere operato, vel ratione meriti, not by the worke wrought, or any merit therein; but it teſtifies our love unto God: for he that for conſcience ſake, or for

Gods

160 Gods ſake, doth love his brother, as a member of Chriſt, the bowels of his compaſſion yerning upon him; doth plainly thereby demonſtrate his love unto God. Yea this true mercie towards thoſe that are truely indigent, doth encreaſe graces in us; as for example, it teacheth us to contemne and deſpiſe the love of the world: it teacheth us to moderate our care for our ſelves and ours: it workes in us a quiet and peaceable minde: And increaſeth our hope, confidence and faith in Chriſt, becauſe he hath ſayd, Bleſſed are the mercifull, for they ſhall obtaine mercie.

Thirdly, the laſt reward which ſhall bee given to the mercifull, is Eternall; He ſhall neuer be moued. Pſalm. 112. 6. yea hee that followeth after mercie, findeth life, Prov. 21. 21. And hee which ſoweth bountifully (to the poore on earth) ſhall reap bountifully (from the Lord in heaven) 2 Cor. 9. 6. And Saint Paul prayes for Oneſiphorus, that the Lord would give mercie unto him, becauſe he had bountifully refreſhed him, when hee was forſaken of the moſt, 2 Timoth. 1. 16. 18.

Queſt. 35. Why doth God reward temporall mercie towards the poore, with eternall unto us?

Anſw. Firſt, becauſe this is the Lords ordinarie cuſtome, who is wont to recompenſe temporall things with ſpirituall. For our light affliction (ſayth the Apoſtle) which is but for a moment, worketh for us a farre more exceeding and eternall weight of glory, 2. Cor. 4. 17. So that the ſufferings of this preſent time, are not worthy to bee compared to the glory which ſhall bee reuealed in us, Rom. 8. 18. The Lord hereby ſhewing his bountie unto us, for our greater encouragement; that ſeeing hee is ſo graciouſly pleaſed to reward our temporall almes, given unto the poore for his ſake, with ſpirituall grace, and eternall glory, we ſhould bee the more carefull to bee rich in good workes, ready to diſtribute, and willing to communicate [l] 1 Tim. 6. 18.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe that are truly mercifull, ſhew themſelves thereby to bee the Sonnes of God; becauſe hee is mercifull. Now if wee bee Sonnes, then Heires, euen Heires of God, and joynt Heires with Chriſt, and ſhall bee glorified with him [m] Rom. 8. 17.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, that which is given unto the poore, (according to the rules preſcribed before) is given unto Chriſt; and therefore it ſhall bee rewarded with eternall mercies. In as much (ſaith our Saviour) as you did it to them (that is, the poore) you did it to mee; wherefore come yee bleſſed of my Father, into euerlaſting ioy, prepared for you, Matth. 25. 43.

Queſt. 36. If mercie towards the poore bee thus rewarded, may wee not then ſay, that Almes-deeds are meritorious?

Anſw. We muſt learne to diſtinguiſh Inter mercedem, & premium, betwixt wages and reward, and we muſt not be mercifull that we may merit or deſerve heaven as wages of due debt, but if we be mercifull we may expect a reward, for a cup of cold water ſhall not go unrewarded, if given charitably. Certainely, it is much to be lamented to ſee how Charity is growne cold, and (as it were) fled out of the world: there never were more objects of mercie than now, and men never leſſe mercifull; very few carefull (according to our Saviours advice) to lay up for themſelves treaſure in heaven.

Obiect. 4. Some will ſay, by a poſitive law, wee are forbidden to give reliefe unto the poore.

Anſw. 1. There is a fooliſh, wicked, dangerous, and hurtfull Almes forbidden by the Lawes of our land; and that is to relieve wandring beggars, who either will not worke, although they bee able, or will not keepe at home, where they are to bee provided for: This is Crudelis miſericordia, cruell pittie, to maintaine ſuch, that live in a trade of ſinne, and will neither be obedient to lawes humane, nor divine.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, in every place, where there are thoſe who are indigent enough, which wee ſhould enquire after: for although they be forbidden to begge from doore to doore, yet wee are never forbidden to ſend reliefe unto them. And it is this mercie to which is here promiſed a reward of bleſſedneſſe.

VERS. 8. Bleſſed are the pure in heart: for they ſhall ſee God. Verſ. 8.

§. 1. Bleſſed.] What is Bleſſedneſſe? Sect. 1.

First of all, men doe not covet to bee rich, or honourable; but all deſire to be happy: and therefore all doe acknowledge happineſſe to bee Aliquid eximium, ſome excellent thing. Queſt. Anſw. 1.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, but there is nothing more full of errour than this, what Happineſſe is, as appeares by Cicero, Lactantius, and Varro, who reckon up 288 opinions, about this particular. The principall whereof are theſe:

Some place Bleſſedneſſe in

- Externis, outward things, viz. 1. ſome onely in pleaſure, as the Epicureans. 2. ſome onely in Riches, as the worldlings. 3. ſome in both theſe. 4. ſome in Honour, as the Ambitious. 5. ſome in fame and credit, as the Academickes. 6. ſome in Fame and abundance together.
- Internis, internall things, to wit, 1. in wiſedome, ſolus ſapiens beatus, onely the wiſe man is happie ſaith Tully. 2. or in vertue, Honeſtum judico felicem: I eſteeme the honeſt man a happy man, ſaid Plato. 3. ſome in vertue conjoyned with riches ὀλβος χ' ἀρετὴν ἔχων, Pindarus. 4. ſome in vertue conjoyned with a perfect life, ſo Ariſtotle and the Peripatetickes. 5 ſome in vertue conjoyned with faith and Religion towards Chriſt Ieſus: and thus hold the Chriſtians: But it is ſomething more.

Thirdly,

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, bleſſednesse is taken 2. ſeverall wales, either for
- An action leading unto a happie condition; which action is Faith and Obedience, that conduce unto eternall felicitie: And in this the Chriſtian Peripatetickes do rightly place Happineſſe.
- The fruition and poſſeſſion of God, and that either in the life.
  - Preſent, by faith in God, and love of God.
  - To come, to wit, in
    - Ineffable glory.
    - The ſight of God.

This verſe ſpeakes of the Beatificall viſion, which the pure in heart ſhall certainely enjoy in the Kingdome of heaven for ever and ever: of which by and by in the fourth §.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Are the pure: This is the fixt Beatitude, and is a rectification of the reſt: the other may be in us hypocritically, and therefore here our Saviour pronounceth them truely bleſſed, who are Puri Corde, pure in heart; ſhewing hereby unto us viam & modum, the way and meanes how to obtaine true felicity and happineſſe.

What is the purity which ſhall bee crowned with felicity? Queſt. 1.

Anſw. It may be knowne by his contraries; for the underſtanding hereof obſerve: This puritie is oppoſed, either
- Duplicitati, to double dealing.
- Mixture, to compoſure or mixture: thus the Apoſtle ſaith, wee muſt bee ἀνεπίληπτοι, without any mixture of Impurity; this purity is two fold, n Phil. 2. 15.
  - Simple and abſolute, and ſo none is pure in this life.
  - Reſpective, and in part.

First Purity is opposed to double dealing: And therefore those that desire to bee made heires of heaven, they must bee simple, without fraud, harmelesse as Doves. Matthew 10. 16. like Nathanael in whom was no guile, blamelesse and sincere.

o John 1. 47.

p 2 Cor. 1. 12. & 11. 3.

Why must Christians bee thus carefull to avoid all deceit and false dealing? Queſt. 2.

Anſw. 1. First, because God is to bee imitated, who is a most simple substance; without any mixture or composition at all.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the dealing of God in the framing and creation of man doth require and call for this simplicity; God hath formed us a body, having two hands, two feet, two sides, two eyes, two eares, and but one tongue, one heart, to shew, that wee must nether bee double tongued nor double hearted, but plaine, true, and single both in word and thought.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, fraud and double dealing comes from Sathan: It was he that deceived Eve by his doubling with her; and Saint Paul feared that he through his subtilty, would corrupt the mindes of the Corinthians from the simplicity that is in Christ, because hee is so false and subtile, that he can transforme himselfe into an Angel of light; And therefore we should not imitate the father of lies, but the Father of truth, who is of a most single essence.

q 2 Cor. 11. 3.

r 2 Cor. 11. 14.

Obſerv. Secondly, purity is opposed to Mixture; to teach us that wee must labour to bee without all impurity, without the love of sinne in our hearts, without the practise of sinne in our lives; that so we may bee pure both in heart and life in the sight of God and man.

Queſt. 3. Why must we thus labour and endeavour to be pure and immaculate?

Anſw. 1. First, because without this purity wee cannot please God: hence the Apostle exhorts us to be transformed in our mindes, that so we may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.

s Rom. 12. 2.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, because wee are reconciled unto God through Christ for this end, that we might be pure and unblameable, and unreproveable in the Lords sight, Coloſ. 1. 22.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, because God elected us in Christ, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without blame before him in love. Epheſ. 1. 4.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, because this is the will of God, that we should learne how to possesse our vessels in sanctification. 1 Theſ. 4. 3. 4.

Anſw. 5. Fiftly, because onely purity leades unto the love of God: The assurance of the love of God is our chiefest felicity in this life, and it is onely purity that assures us of this: wee cannot be assured of the Lords love unto us, untill wee finde in our selves some love unto God; which love must be testified by our willing and cheerefull obedience of him in a holy life & unblameable conversation; according to that saying of our Saviour, If ye love mee, keepe my Commandements.

t John 14. 15.

Who sinnes against this precept, which injoynes purity of life? Queſt. 4.

Anſw. Some transgresse in Opinion, not being orthodox. Some in Practise, not being Orthoprax.

First, some erre here in Opinion; and these are either 1. Libertines, who denie all good workes; let Saint Iames say what he will, yet they beleeve that faith will save them without workes; and therefore assume unto themselves the name of Solsidians: that this is an errour appeares thus, 1. Saint Iames saith, faith without workes profits nothing, Iam. 2. 2 The author to the Hebrewes saith, without workes no salvation is to be had. 3 Saint Paul would have us perswade our selves, that we were created unto good workes: And therefore all that time is misspent, which is not spent in holy actions. 4. our Saviour teacheth us first of all to pray, Hallowed bee thy name, to teach us, that the end, scope, and aime of our lives is the glory of God, and the same u Heb. 12. 14.

x Epheſ. 2. 10.

same blessed mouth of thtuth tels us, that God is glorified by good workes; Let your light so shine before men, that they seeing your good workes may glorifie your Father which is in Heaven[y]. Or y Mat. 5. 16.

Secondly, those erre here, who deny any perfection of purity; although the Scripture affirme plainely, that the law which wee obey is perfect, Iames 1.25. and that Abraham is commanded by God to be perfect, Gen. 17. 1. And all the children of God by Christ, to bee perfect as their Father in heaven is perfect. Mat. 5. 41. yea although Saint Paul tells us, We preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisedome, that we may present every man Perfect in Christ Iesus, Col. 1. 28. And although Epaphras (who knowes the prayers of the righteous shall be heard) Labours fervently for the Colossians in prayer, that they may stand Perfect, and compleate in all the will of God. Colos. 4. 12. But of this Perfection we shall speake more plainely in the 48. verse of this Chapter. Or Thirdly, Prophane persons erre here, who deride all endeavours of purity; perswading men not to bee too holy, nor too pure, because Ne quid nimis is a good rule. Indeede I confesse that 1. in hypocrisie there is an evill puritie: yea 2. in cacozelia, blind and superstitious zeale there is an evill purity: But 3. in the law, wee cannot be Nimis too pure, or too strict: for who can love God too much? who can obey and serve God too much? when (in the best performances) our Saviour teacheth us to confesse our selves to be but unprofitable servants[z]. And therefore it is a thing full of danger to deride or contemne those, who dare not sweare or lye, or be drunke, or speake any vaine and unbeseeming words, or commit the least sinnes; For they that despise these despise the Lord whose servants they are, and slight the words of Christ, who hath here pronounced such Pure Blessed.

z Luke 17 10.

Secondly, some violate this precept which injoines Purity of life in practise, and these are either first, they who live a wicked life. Or secondly, they who mixe good with evill.

Obiect. 1

First, they transgresse here, who leade a wicked and impure life.

But some will say, there are none pure, but all men are polluted; and therefore who can bring a cleane thing out of an uncleane[a]? who can say I have made my heart cleane, I am pure from my sinne[b]? that is, none: and therefore if any man say he sinnes not (or pollutes not himselfe by sinne) he is a lyer[c].

a Iob 14.4

b Pro. 20. 9

c 1 Ioh. 1. 8. 9.

Answ.

Wee distinguish betweene a Simple and respective purity, which differ thus, the simple puritie is perfectly pure; the respective puritie is sincerely pure: the first is of and by workes, and therefore wee grant that there are none so pure in this life: the second is of faith, which first applies Christ unto us: then secondly assures us that all our sinnes, in Christ are pardoned: and thirdly, workes sincerely by love: and this purity is in the faithfull, and should bee sought for by all.

Quest. 5.

Answ. 1.

But how is this respective puritie acquired?

First, not by nature, or by any strength in our selves: for naturally the very thoughts and imaginations of our hearts are evill, and that continually[d]; yea the heart is deceitfull above all things, and desperately wicked[e]; wherefore Paul confesseth, the law is spirituall but I am carnall sold under sinne[f], and cannot do the good which I would, but doth the evill which I would not.

d Gen. 8. 21.

e Ierem. 17 9.

f Rom. 7. 14. 15.

Secondly, this puritie is procured by faith and grace: thus the Apostle saith, God put no difference betwixt us and them, purging and purifying our hearts by faith[g], whence it is evident, that we have not our purity and holinesse from our selves, but from Christ, who was made unto us Sanctification, 1 Cor. 1. 30. and who delivers us from sinne and Sathan, Rom. 7. 25.

Answ. 2.

g Acts 15. 9.

Who must labour to acquire this purity?

Quest. 6.

First, some answer that there are not many, who neede endeavour after this sanctitie, it belonging onely to a few, to wit, to Magistrates, Ministers, and old men; but this is false.

Answ. 1.

Secondly, purity belongs unto all, and therefore all must strive for it; as for example, first it appertaines unto young men: they must remember their Creator in the daies of their youth, for if that be spent in impurity, they must answer it at the great day[h].

Answ. 2.

h Eccles. 11. 9. and 12. 1.

Secondly, sanctitie belongs unto old men, and therefore Saint John writes unto them to put them in minde of it[i].

i Ioh. 2. 13

Thirdly, it appertaines unto husbandmen, who must bee as carefull to plow up the fallow ground of their hearts, as to till their fields[k].

k Ier. 4. 4

Fourthly, it belongs unto the simple and foolish; and therefore Wisedome calles and admonisheth them to turne from sinne, unto the service of the most High[l].

l Prov. 9. 4. 6. and 1. 20. 21.

Fiftly, it belongs unto the rich to be pure and unspotted, otherwise their riches cannot preserve them from hell; as we see in Dives, Luke 16.

Sixtly, it belongs unto Kings, and Monarches; for Tophet is prepared of old, it is wide, and large, yea for those Kings is it prepared whose lives are impure, and wills not subject unto the will of God[m]; And therefore David admonisheth them, that although they bee like Gods on earth, yet they shall fall like men into pardition, except they labour to bee pure, and to participate of that divine nature[n]. Thus it appertaines unto all to be pure and holy, because every soule that is not circumcised shal be cut off.

m Esa 30. 33.

n 2 Pet. 1. 4.

Secondly, they erre here in practise, who mingle Bonum malo, Corne and Cockle, wheate and chaffe, good and evill together: that is, they who obey in some things onely, like Agrippa, who was halfe perswaded to become a Christian; or Herod, who did many things but not all, and abstained from some sinnes but not from all[o].

o Mar. 6. 20.

But some will say, who can performe all things that are required of them? who can doe all that God bids, or eschew all that he forbids?

Obiect. 2

Answ.

We cannot obey God in all things perfectly, but we may sincerely: and that in these two things.

First,

Firſt, in Reſolution; wee ſhould reſolve to ſerve God in ſingleneſſe of heart, and purpoſe to leave and forſake whatſoever is diſpleaſing unto him; yea even to caſt away from us thoſe ſins that hang ſo faſt on, and cleave ſo faſt too, and have beene formerly valued as hands and eyes.

Secondly, in endeavour; wee muſt ſtrive to performe what wee have purpoſed, and labour to accompliſh what we have reſolved, with the utmoſt power of our ſoules: we muſt fight even unto blood [p], and wraſtle as Rachel with her ſiſter, with manfull wraſtlings till wee have prevailed: and thus both in deſire and endeavour we muſt ſerve the Lord ſincerely; and although wee doe but obey in part, and feare in part, and love in part, yet with all our hearts we muſt deſire and labour that what is in part were aboliſhed, and that we could ſerve the Lord in ſingleneſſe of heart.

Sect. 3. Queſt. 1.

S. 3. In heart. Why doth our Saviour pronounce onely thoſe Bleſſed, that are pure in heart?

Anſw.

Becauſe true purity is rooted in the heart, or true religion is founded within: My ſonne give me thy heart, ſaith God, Prov. 23.26. for except I have that, I will have nothing. Thus Saint Paul ſaith, the end of the Commandement is to love and ſerve God with a pure heart, 1 Tim. 1.5. And therefore he prayes for the Theſſalonians, that the Lord would eſtabliſh their hearts unblameable before him in holineſſe [a]. And prayes Timothie, that he would follow the ſteps of thoſe who call on the name of the Lord out of a pure heart [b].

a 1 Theſ. 3.13.

b 2 Tim. 2.22.

Queſt. 2.

Why muſt our Religion and purity be rooted and grounded in the heart?

Anſw. 1.

Firſt, becauſe this is the ordinary progreſſe; there muſt bee I. a heart. II. obedience. III. ſtrength, that is, firſt a ſanctified ſoule; then ſecondly, a beautifull and pure body; and thirdly ſtrength of grace: The heart muſt bee purified, before we can truely obey God in our lives; and therefore the circumciſion of the heart is the roote of a new life, according to that of the Apoſtle, he is a Iew, that is one inwardly, and circumciſion is that of the heart, in the ſpirit [c]. yea, our anointing, and ſeale, and earneſt, are all begun in the heart, for Chriſt hath anointed us, and hath alſo ſealed us, and given the earneſt of the Spirit in our hearts [d].

c Rom. 2. 29.

d 2 Cor. 1. 21.22.

Anſw. 2.

Secondly, our religion and obedience is not living, except it bee grounded in the heart, and proceeds from thence. A good man (ſaith our Saviour) out of the good treaſure of the heart bringeth forth good things [e]. And on the contrary from an evill heart proceed no good things. And therefore it is neceſſary that firſt the heart ſhould be purified.

e Math. 12 35.

Anſw. 3.

Thirdly, we regard nothing that our ſervants or children, or acquaintance doe for us, if wee know that it bee done unwillingly, and comes not from the heart, and therefore how can wee hope that the Lord will accept of any thing wee doe, if it be but a labour of the lip, and not of the heart.

Fourthly, it is requiſite that our purity and religion ſhould be rooted in the heart, becauſe otherwaies wee doe not honour God, but rather diſhonour him: Hee is a Spirit, and therefore muſt be worſhipped in ſpirit and in truth [f], and not onely with outward worſhip: God is not like man, who ſees onely the outward appearance, but he ſees the heart [g], and he will make manifeſt the counſels of the heart [h]; According to that confeſſion of David, I know, O Lord, thou proveſt and trieſt the heart and inward man: and approveſt of men whoſe heart is not upright [i]. And hence it is that the Apoſtle doth ſo highly commend the obedience of the Romans, and bleſſe God for it, becauſe it proceeded from the heart: God be thanked (ſaith hee) that ye have obeyed from the heart that forme of doctrine which was delivered unto you [k].

k Rom. 6. 17.

Who doe obey God but not with the heart?

Queſt. 3.

Anſw. 1.

Firſt, thoſe who under a ſhew of obedience doe palliate and cloake Superſtition: who ſeeme religious in their lives, but are ſuperſtitious in their hearts; who love Popery in their ſoules, but yet profeſſe our religion outwardly, either for gain, or for avoiding of the penall ſtatutes, or for the favour of others. Let theſe conſider Cui bono, what good it will doe them thus to profeſſe religion? For they cannot deceive God, who ſees their hearts as well as their outward man [l]; and if their conſcience tell them, that they profeſſe with their mouthes, what they approve not with their hearts, God who is greater then their conſcience, muſt needes much more accuſe them [m]. What a folly is it for men to goe about to deceive men, when as the Judge, and accuſer, and witneſſe, that is, God, Sathan, and their owne conſciences, ſee and know what they do? Let theſe conſider what the reward of Hypocrites is, the approbation of men, and the rejection of God.

l Gal. 6.7.

m 1 Iohn 3.20.

Anſw. 2.

Secondly, thoſe who under the cloake of obedience palliate Atheiſme, and prophane mindes: who pretend zeale & obedience, but their hearts runne after ſinne; and yet oftentimes take no notice of their hypocriſie, but think they are very good, and doe very well: But theſe may eaſily know what they are, if they doe but examine themſelves by theſe three ſignes.

Firſt, ſome avoid ſinne for feare of temporall puniſhment: they take heede of adultery and theft, not of lying, ſwearing, or drunkenneſſe; becauſe theſe are not ſo ſtrictly looked unto, nor ſo ſeverely puniſhed as thoſe are. Certainely theſe are neither pure in heart not life, who doe abſtaine but onely from ſome outward ſinnes.

Secondly, ſome avoid publique ſinnes, but not private; and thicke not to commit adultery if it may be done ſecretly, or to injure their brother, if they may doe it cloſely, or ſupplant their neighbour if they can doe it, and not bee perceived, or diſſemble, if it may bee done fairely: Certainely theſe I. are not pure in heart, becauſe that is polluted with cloſe impiety. II. this obedience of theirs is but that eye ſervice, which God cannot endure [n]: yea III. theſe are but fooles, who hide their ſins from man, & lay them open n Ephe. 6. 5. & Col. 3.22.

open before God, who might judge them at the last day, according to their workes.

o 2 Cor. 5. 10.

Thirdly, some abstaine from sinne, but it is with murmuring and much unwillingnesse: now these are not pure in heart, neither doth this blessednesse belong unto them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, there are another sort who obey not God with the heart, and those are Hypocrites, who draw neere unto God with their lips, but their hearts are farre from him. These may bee knowne by these two markes. First, if they straine a gnat, and swallow a Camell; if they stumble at a straw, and leape over a blocke; if they tithe mint & anice, and neglect greater things; if they make more conscience of that which is of lesse moment, then certainely they are no better then outward formalists, wch God cares not for.

p Esa. 29. 13. and 58. 1.

Secondly, if they be faire without and blacke within; if the superficies bee gold, and the substance copper; if they have Iacobs voice, but Esaus hands; if the Cup bee plate, but the draught poyson; if the face be beautifull and the heart adulterous; if they bee painted sepulchers, faire without, but within rottennesse; if they bee like the apples of Sodome, pleasant to the eye, but within ashes; if they have a forme of godlinesse, but in their hearts have denyed the power thereof q, certainely they are but Hypocrites, whose hearts are not pure, nor themselves blessed.

q 2 Tim. 3. 5.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, those obey not with the heart, whose hearts are insensible, or who obey without zeale; but of this elsewhere: And therefore if we desire to bee happie and blessed, wee must labour. I. that our hearts and inward man may be purged from all love of sinne, or desire after it. II. that our lives may bee replenished with good workes: And III. that they may be performed with love, zeale, willingnesse and chearefulnesse.

Sect. 4. Quest. 1. §. 4. For they shall see God.] Is not God invisible? is it not said, none can see him and live? Exod. 33. 20. and none hath seene him at any time; John 1. 18. Doth not the Apostle testifie, that hee dwells in the light, which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath seene, nor can see? 1 Tim. 6. 16. and 1 John 4. 12. And therefore how shall the pure in heart see God?

Answ. Not in this life, but in the life to come; not on earth but in heaven; not with a corporall eye, but a spirituall.

Quest. 2. What great matter is it to see God: what wonder is it that he shal be seene of the pure in heart, in heaven, seeing that he hath often been seene on earth? Abraham saw him often. Gen. 12. 1. & Chap. 15. & Chap. 17. & Chap. 18. and 22. 14. Iacob saw him. Gen. 32. 30. Moses saw him. Exod. 33. The Prophet Esaias saw him chapter 6. 1. and the Prophet Ezekiel, Ezech. 1. 29. Stephen saw him also, Act. 7. 56. And Paul, 2 Cor. 12.

Answ. 1. First, all these were pure in heart.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this was miraculous, and extraordinary, and temporall; but the beatificall vision in heaven shall be ordinarie, and perpetuall; and the pure in heart shall see God continually, and eternally.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this sight of God which these had on earth was imperfect. Abraham saw God like a man. Gen. 18. Ezechiel saw him imperfectly; and Moses saw not Gods face, Exod. 33. But the pure in heart in heaven shall see God perfectly; and not in part; they shall see him face to face, as they are seene and not darkely; or through a glasse.

r 1 Cor. 13. 10, 11, 12.

Quest. 3. But hath not this promise place in this life? doe not the pure in heart see God at all on earth, but onely in heaven?

Answ. This promise hath place both in this life & in the life to come: the pure in heart see God both on earth & in heaven, but after a divers manner.

Observ. Here then observe that there is a manifold vision of God:

The Vision and sight of God is either in the life

Present, and that either

First Intelligendo, by understanding either the Nature and person of God; but as hee is simple, who thinkes a little shell can containe all the water in the sea, so is hee who thinkes the shallow shell of mans braine can comprehend in this life the nature and person of God perfectly; yet by speculation, and contemplation, and a serious studie of the Scriptures, together with the intent consideration of the Attributes of God, the pure in heart may understand something.

Or

The will and word of God.

Secondly, Videndo, by seeing some representations of him, as those holy men did whereof wee spake before quest. 2.

Thirdly, sentiendo by perceiving either the Mercy of God; which is called his face; Thus Aaron was to blesse the people, The Lord make his face to shine upon thee: that is, shew mercy unto thee s, so Psalme, 13. 1. 44. 24. and 80. 7. Thou Moses by faith saw him who is invisible t, and feared not the wrath of the King of Egypt, because he was sensible of Gods mercy.

s Numb. 6. 25.

t Heb. 11. 27.

Peace of God, which passeth all expression u or by tasting how sweete and good the Lords is Psal. 34. 8.

u Philip. 4. 7.

To come and that is two fold, to wit, either Corporall, with the bodily eye; which is impossible.

Or

Spirituall with the eye of the soule which is the knowledge of the nature of God, and is either Perfect: in regard of our capacitie & apprehension, as every vessell throwne into the sea shall be filled.

Absolute; and thus onely God can comprehend what God is.

In this life the pure in heart see God by understanding his will: the meaning therefore of this verse, may bee this, Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God; that is, the pure in heart and minde shall see the will, and truth, and majestie of God shining in his word: or purity of heart doth helpe us unto the true understanding of the word of God: Be renewed (sayth the Apostle) in your mindes, that you may prove, what that good, and perfect, and acceptable will of God is[y]. And therefore we should purge our hearts from all pollutions, that so wee might bee able to understand what is acceptable unto the Lord.

Obser. 1.

[y] Rom. 12. Ephes. 5. 8. 10.

Object. As for the true corporall sight of God (which I sayd was impossible) it is objected, The eyes of a glorified body in heaven, differ much from the eyes of a corrupt and earthly body: and therefore our bodies being glorified, wee may truely and corporally see God.

Answ. God hath no corporall, but a spirituall substance; and therefore is onely perspicuous unto the eye of the soule, and not at all obvious to the eyes of the body, although they bee glorified.

In the life to come the pure in heart shall see God with a spirituall sight; that is, although the Creature cannot absolutely comprehend the Creator; yet hee may with a certaine degree of perfection.

Quest. 4. What benefit shall we reap by this vision and sight of God, that our Saviour pronounceth him blessed that shall enjoy it?

Answ. 1. First, we shall enjoy many things in Heaven by vertue of this sight, which here I forbeare to enlarge: we shall there have health, beautie, and agilitie of body; wee shall also have light without darknesse, joy without sorrow, desire without paine, love without hatred, or discontent, fulnesse of joy without any loathing, life without death, health without sicknesse, peace without warre, or the least disturbance[a].

[a] Greg. s. Psalm. pœnitentiales

Secondly, this beatificall vision none can perfectly define, nor fully describe: but yet some things wee may conjecture at, as for example,

First, wee shall know the immense Deitie: the simplest in heaven shall farre exceed in wisedome, and the knowledge of God, the wisest upon earth.

Secondly, wee shall have Angels, Prophets, Apostles, Martyrs, Patriarches, and all the blessed Saints to bee our Companions.

Thirdly wee shall there have true, solid, and ineffable joy, wherein wee shall delight, and with which our soules shall be satisfied.

Fourthly, wee shall have a new and continued desire after this joy: for our desire shall be without any lacke, and our fulnesse without any dislike.

Fifthly, God himselfe will be all in all unto us. And therefore let us give our selves unto puritie in this life; that we may be assured of protection, grace, and peace of conscience here, and of immortalitie and felicitie for ever hereafter.

VERS. 9. Blessed are the Peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God. Vers. 9.

§. 1. Blessed are the Peace-makers.] Who are Peace-makers? Sect. 1. Quest. 1.

First, some expound this, of the reconciling of brethren; that is, both those who reconcile them that jarre, and those who are reconciled unto them whom they have offended. Chrysost. sup. & Op. imperf. Answ. 1.

Secondly, some expound this, of those who are good and peaceable in themselves. Vis cognoscere quis pacificus? audi Psalm. 34. 14. Cave à malo, sequere pacem. (August. de Serm. Dom.) Wouldst thou know who is a Peace-maker? listen then unto the Psalmist, and hee will tell thee, that it is hee, who eschewes evill, and followes after peace. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, some understand it of those, who are slow to anger, but ready to forgive and pardon: Obliti eorum, quibus offendi possunt, in fratrum charitate viventes. (Hilarius) that is, hee is a peace-maker, who lives in love and charitie with his brethren, passing by, and forgetting those injuries which are offered unto him. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, some expound it of those, who labour to subdue and subject all rebellious motions to the obedience of the Spirit; who first labour for peace in themselves, and then make peace amongst others. Quid enim prodest alios pacare, dum intus bella vitiorum? (Hierom. sup.) What benefit is it to make peace amongst others, while our owne corruptions warre within us? Answ. 4.

Fifthly, all our late Interpreters, (viz. Calvin, Gualter, Musculus, Marlorate, and Arctius) in a manner expound it of those, who preach, and publish, and bring peace from God, and love, concord, and brotherly amitie amongst themselves. Answ. 5.

There being such diversitie of opinions concerning this particular, that we may give a clearer resolution of this first question, I will propound a second, and that is,

How manifold is Peace? Quest. 2.

First, some say, there is a three-fold peace: the first with God, the second with our owne conscience, the third with our brethren. Stapleton sup. Pentecost. Answ. 1.

Secondly, there is a foure-fold peace; to wit, First peace of conscience. Secondly, civill peace in our selves. Thirdly, spirituall peace betwixt God and us. Fourthly, a civill peace amongst brethren. Answ. 2.

First, there is a peace of conscience; when a man labours to subdue all rebellious lusts in the heart; and is so carefull to obey and serve his God, that he hath an excusing, not an accusing conscience. These are certainly the deare children of God, that are thus carefull to imitate their Father in puritie and sincerite[b]. But this verse speakes not of this peace, and therefore I omit it.

[b] Ph. 1. 2. 15.

Secondly, there is a Civill peace in our selves;

166 when wee are carefull to live peaceably with all men[c], and to follow peace with all men, Heb. 12.14.

[c] Rom 12. 18. But properly to make peace is referred and attributed unto those who reconcile others, not unto them who conserve and keepe peace in themselves. And therefore this place not speaking of this peace, I also leave it.

Thirdly, there is a Spirituall peace betwixt us and God: and thus Aretius, Musculus, Gualter, and it agrees well with the scope of the place; for our Saviour speaks here unto his Apostles, comforting them against the derision of the world; Blessed (saith he) are the peace-makers, as if hee would say, the world will hate and contemne you, but blessed are ye, because 1. ye shall be called the Sonnes of God, and 2. because yee shall bring peace from God unto the sonnes of men; and 3. because ye shall be a means to make peace betwixt God and men: Our Saviour teaching us hereby, that the function of a Minister is a blessed function: Hence the Apostle saith, that the word of reconciliation is committed unto us, 2 Cor. 5.19. and we preach peace unto the people of God, Rom. 10.15. for which our feet are called beautifull. Nahum. 1.15.

Observ. 1

Quest. 3. What need is there of preaching peace unto men?

Answ. Because we have lost it, and there is now no peace at all unto us, so long as we are wicked.

Quest. 4. How doth it appeare that the peace is violated betwixt God and us?

Answer. By the consideration and observation of these particulars: First, we were created innocent and pure without spot or wrinkle. Secondly, then Sathan fell from heaven by his pride. Thirdly, being himselfe cast out of the heavenly paradise, he seduceth Adam and Eve, that they may bee thrust out of the earthly. Fourthly, they having eaten of the forbidden fruit, and thereby violated the law of God, hence the wrath of God was kindled against them; which just anger in him produceth these effects towards them. I. God judgeth them Gen. 3. II. Casts them out of Paradise. III. Defends the tree of life with a flaming sword, that Adam might not take of that fruit. IV. With-drawes his presence and sight from Adam, who must not now enjoy that sweet society, which formerly he did. V. Yea hence the earth was cursed, and by this curse subjected to barrennesse, sicknesses, diseases, sudden casualties, and the like, the wrath of God being thus revealed against man[d]. The sense and apprehension of which anger did amaze David Psal. 38.2. &c.

[d] Rom. 1. 18.

Fifthly being thus subjected unto anger, and a curse for sinne, it was meerly impossible for us to escape or free our selves by any means. For I. Riches will not availe us for the pacifying of this anger. Prov. 10.2. II. Naturall, or carnall wisdome can not helpe us to free our selves, from sinne, Sathan, or the irksull hand of God; this wisedome being but foolishnesse. Rom. 8. 6. III. Morall workes cannot save us, as the Apostle proves plainely, Rom. 1.2.3.6.11. IV. The Law cannot save us. Ro. 8.3. And thus it evidently appeares, that the sweet peace and union that was betwixt God and us, was now disjointed and broken; and therefore there was great need of a peace-maker, or a messenger of peace.

Who makes peace betwixt God and us? Quest. 5.

The peace-makers are either Principall or instrumentall. Answ.

First, the principall peace-makers are three, viz. First, God the Father, who out of his unspeakeable love unto man-kind gave Christ, and sent Christ into the world, that it might be saved by him[e], ordaining Christ to suffer and to take our nature upon him for this end, to make up the breach, to be our peace, to make our God and us one, and to breake downe the middle wall of partition between us[f]. Secondly, God the Sonne, who hath laid downe his life for us, Ioh. 10. And hath made peace through the blood of his Crosse[g].

[e] John 3. 16.

[f] Ephes. 2. 14.

[g] Colos. 1 20.

Thirdly, God the Holy Ghost, who confirmes this peace and reconciliation unto us; assuring us that we are not now enemies, but friends, and servants, yea the Sonnes of God. Rom. 8.15.

Secondly, the instrumentall peace-makers, are the Apostles, and Ministers of Christ, whose worke is to labour, to turne the hearts of children unto their fathers, Malac. 4.6. whence they are called συνεργοὶ, labourers together, or coworkers with God[h], wherefore Saint Paul is not afraid to say plainely unto the Corinthians, in Christ Iesus I have begotten you through the Gospel[i]. And as a wise Master builder I have laid the foundation[k]. Yea hence certainly it was, that our Saviour taught that salutation unto his Apostles, when they came unto any place to preach, Peace be unto this house[l], because they were instruments of peace betwixt God and man.

[h] 1 Cor. 3. 9.

[i] 1 Cor. 4. 15.

[k] 1 Cor. 3. 10.

[l] Luk. 10. 5.

But perhaps some will say, the Apostles and Ministers are rather instruments of warre, then of peace, yea Christ himselfe came not to send peace, but a sword, and division; so that two shall be against three, and three against two[m]. And thus Ieremiah was a man of contention and strife to the whole earth[n]. How then are they peace-makers? Obiect. 1

[m] Luke 12 52.53.

[n] Jerem. 15.10.

This is accidentall, arising from the people, not from the Pastours, for they having made a wicked covenant with sinne and Sathan, Ministers come to dissolve this covenant which they have made, and to set enmity betwixt them and the serpent, and to make a new covenant betwixt them and God. Answ.

If the true end and aime of Preachers be thus to make peace betwixt God and man, then how is their preaching to bee heard by the people? Quest. 6.

It must not bee heard for forme or fashion sake; or with itching eares, but as the word of reconciliation, and a message of peace: Wherein these things are required of us, to wit. Answ.

First, so hear the word of God, that thou mayst learne thereby to breake that covenant which thou hast made with the world, and with thy owne affections, and lusts, that so thou maist have peace with God.

Secondly, labour in the hearing of the word for for the remission and pardon of thy sinnes already committed. Thirdly, strengthen thy selfe daily with a new and renewed purpose of repentance, for thy sinnes committed. Fourthly, so heare, that faith may be wrought in thee, that is, examine by that which thou hearest, thy selfe, thy estate and condition wherin thou standest, thy repentance, thy love unto that which is good, thy hatred unto that which is evill, and the like.

Fifthly, when thou art thus carefull to examine thy heart, and to direct thy life by the word of God, then thou shalt be made partaker of the peace of God, and the Ministers of the word shall be messengers of peace, and reconciliation unto thee.

Fourthly, the last peace is the civill peace amongst brethren; And thus Chrysostom, Hierome, Calvin, Aretius, Gualter, Musculus, and Obser. 2. divers others expound this place; Teaching us, that it is a godly and blessed worke to make peace betwixt brethren; and to compose strife beweene neighbour and neighbour: A foole (saith Salomon) breeds jarres amongst friends, but a man of wisdome appeaseth strifes, Quest. 7. Why is it so good and happy a thing to make peace, and to appease strife betwixt brethren?

Answ. 1. First, because peace is a common good, and therefore every one should seeke after it, both in themselves and in others: yea it is such a good, that all things desire it in a three-fold regard.

First, ratione conservationis, in respect of preservation: for without peace nothing can subsist. If a Kingdome be divided against it selfe (saith Christ) it cannot stand.

Secondly, ratione perfectionis, in regard of perfection in life, for without peace nothing can live.

Thirdly, Ratione fruitionis, in respect of possession; because no man without peace, hath joy in that which he doth possesse. And therefore seeing peace is so good a thing, so common a good, and a thing so much desired, it must needs bee a godly and blessed thing, to make peace betweene those who are divided.

Answ. 2. Secondly, God will not dwell in a contentious heart, and therefore those who compose strifes, prepare mansions for the Lord of Hosts to dwell in, which is a good and a blessed thing. It is a good and happy thing for a man to make up a breach betwixt man and man. And therefore much better to attone and unite God and man: Now when one man is reconciled unto another, there is a way made for both their reconciliations unto God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because by appeasing jarres, and composing strifes, we imitate Christ, who is our Mediatour, Intercessour, Arbitrator, and Peacemaker.

Quest. 8. Are not they pragmaticall, and too great medlers, who thus trouble themselves, and interpose themselves betweene man and man?

Answ. Some men meet together to provoke and inflame one another unto strife, contention, and discord, and therefore why may not the children of God intrude themselves to make peace where it is broken? Certainly the Lord did not hold Moses as a busie-body, when he did interpose himselfe to compose the contention which arose betweene the two Hebrewes[a], but hath rather set it downe for our imitation; because it is the dutie of all Christians, not onely to care for themselves, but to bee carefull to preserve peace amongst others. And he who thinks this office of making peace belongs not unto him, hath forgot that hee is a member of Christ.

[a] Exod. 2. 13.

Some perhaps will object here, the saying of Object. 2. Pittacus, That a man must not bee Judge, or Arbitrator between two friends, lest by judgeing profitably for the one, hee loose the friendship of the other.

First, we must give way unto an inconvenience rather than a sinne; now it is but an inconvenience to loose the friendship of a man; but it is a sinne to neglect that which God requires of us, for so wee shall lose his friendship; now the Lord commands, that we should follow after peace, both by embracing it in our selves, and by endevouring to preserve it amongst others. Answ. 1.

Secondly, in all Christian duties required of us, wee must use the meanes, but leave the successe and event to God, who can order all things, as he pleases. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, some have beene arbitrators beetween friends, and have both reconciled them one to the other, and retained the friendship of both also: and therefore there is a possibilitie that wee may doe so. Archidamus the Lacedemonian, being chosen arbitrator, to decide a contention betweene two friends, first brought them into the Temple of Diana; then secondly, made them both sweare upon the Altar, precisely to observe whatsoever hee determined: And then thirdly, gave this verdict, that neither of them should depart out of the Temple, untill they were reconciled. And thus they, were both constrained (by reason of their oathes taken) to make themselves friends, and to agree betwixt themselves, and both still esteemed alike of Archidamus, because hee had given definitive sentence against neither. And thus by wisedome and prudence, a man may so order and dispose of himselfe, that hee may both make peace betweene friends, and also keepe peace with friends. Answ. 3.

§. 2. For they shall bee called the Sonnes of God. Sect. 2.

Quest. 1. How are Peace-makers the Sonnes of God?

Answ. 1. Three manner of wayes: viz. First, in the worke of reconciliation wrought by them, they therein being helped and assisted by God, Who is the author and fountaine of every good gift, and every perfect blessing, James 1. 17. To compose strife, and to unite dis-joynted brethren, is so good a worke, that our Saviour hath here pronounced that man blessed that doth it; and therefore hee that doth this worke, must needs acknowledge that hee was assisted by God 168 God his Father in the doing of it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Peace-makers are the children of God in imitation: It is the Lord who creates peace, Esai. 45. 7. From God comes peace, Rom. 1. 7. because he is the God of peace, Rom. 15. 33. and 16. 20. And therefore lovers of peace imitate God therein.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Peace-makers are the children of God in Reward: For first, all men are the children of God by creation, whether good or evill. But secondly, onely the godly and righteous by Adoption, for whom alone the heavenly inheritance is prepared and reserved; and thus these are the children of God; and are therefore by Christ here pronounced blessed, because they shall bee made partakers of the kingdome of God.

Quest. 2. Why doth our Saviour say, they shall be called the Sonnes of God? are they not indeed Gods children?

Answ. 1. First, some things are called that which they are not; as when an Ethiope is called Formosus, beautifull.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some things are such, but are not so called; as when chaste Lucretia is called an Adulteresse, or unchaste, and sober Socrates called intemperate.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some things are such, and are so called; that is, have neither nomen sine re, nor rem sine nomine; but & nomen, & rem, not the name without the thing, nor the thing without the name; but both the name and thing; as when a holy man is called (like as some impious Popes have been) Pius. And this is that which our Saviour here speakes of, they shall be called the Sonnes of God, that is, they shall both bee the Sonnes of God, and also so called: or, Blessed are the Peace-makers; For first, God will esteem them his children: and secondly, men shall call them so.

Quest. 3. Who are enemies, or opposite unto this Beatitude?

Answ. 1. First, those that are contentious, and given to strife and revenge: The vulgar sort thinke these happy, who can and will be revenged of all those who injure them; but our Saviour rather thinkes the peace-makers happy and blessed: In Noahs Arke all the wilde beasts were tame and peaceable, the Lyon feeding with the Lamb, and the Beare with the Dogge; now the Arke was a Type of the Church of God: and therefore all Christians should be mild and peaceable, not cruell and revengefull. Cæsar nil oblitus, nisi injuriarum [p] The memory of Cæsar was so strong, that he forgot nothing which occurred unto him but onely injuries and wrongs: And therefore it is a shame for Christians to seeke revenge; who should rather suffer wrong, observing diligently these three short rules. First, prize peace in thy selfe. Secondly, perswade others thereunto. Thirdly, submit thy selfe rather to thy brother, then suffer the bond of peace to be broken: we have a singular example of this in our Father Abraham, who fearing that the contention set on foot betwixt his brother Lots Herd-men and his owne, would extend it selfe unto them; comes unto his brother Lot to quench this fire which was already kindled with these mild and soft words; Let there be no strife I pray thee, betweene me and thee, for wee be brethren: The whole land is before thee, therefore if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will goe to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will goe to the left [r]. And thus wee should rather imitate this holy Patriarch, in submitting our selves one to another for the preservation of this blessed peace, then by contention, strife, revenge, and the like, dissolve this bond.

Secondly, those are enemies and opposite unto this beatitude, who are inexorable, refractory, and will not be reconciled unto those who have injured them: these are they whom our Saviour saith shall not be pardoned, because they will not forgive men their trespasses.

Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those are principally opposite unto this beatitude, who instigate and provoke others unto contentions and strife: and therefore Salomon saith, He that soweth discord among brethren, is an abomination unto the Lord [s].

Answ. 3.

[s] Prov. 6. 16. 19.

Who are these sowers of Discord, that are thus opposite unto this Christian vertue?

Quest. 4.

They are found either in the Church, or in common and private affaires.

Answ.

First, there are sowers of the seeds of sedition in the visible Church of Christ, and these are Sectaries, which the Apostle forewarnes us of in these words, Observe those which cause breaches and divisions in the Church.

Secondly, there are seedesmen of strife in private and publike matters: to wit, I. Those who are whisperers and tale-bearers; such there were in Saint Pauls time, who were not onely idle, but also tatlers and busie-bodies [t]. II. Those who provoke others to sue them by whom they have beene injured; who are as spurres in mens sides, to instigate and hasten them on to dissension and discord. III. Those Lawyers, who (like covetous and unconscionable Chyrurgions) prolong suites, by their demurres and delayes, onely for their owne advantage. All these are opposite unto this peace, and therefore have no interest at all in this Blessednesse which is pronounced by Christ unto the Peace-makers.

[t] 1 Tim. 5. 13.

VERS. 11. Blessed are yee when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evill against you falsly for my sake.

Vers. 11.

There are three phrases here expressed, reviling, persecuting, and speaking evill of: The second, (to wit, persecution) I have wholly omitted, reserving the consideration thereof unto another place. The first and third (viz. to revile and speake evill of) seeme to be the same, and are of one and the same nature; but Augustine distinguisheth them thus. First, we are reviled to our face, as the Iewes did unto Christ, say wee not well, thou hast a divell [u]. Secondly, wee are spoken evill of behinde our backes; and thus some say privately of Christ, that he cannot be the Messias, because hee is a Galilean [u] John 8. 48.

Galilean, and Christ must not come out of Galilee [v].

v Iohn 7. 41.

Vers. 12. VERS. 12. Rejoyce and bee exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the Prophets which were before you.

Obiect. 1. Great is your reward in heaven.] The Papists object this place for the Merit of our workes, thus: life everlasting is in this verse called Merces, a recompence or reward; therefore good workes doe properly merit.

Answ. 1. w Aug. Pref. in Psal. 109. First, Augustine saith [w], Quicquid promisit indigne promisit, ut nemo quasi operibus merces præmitteretur, sed gratia gratis daretur; whatsoever God hath promised hee hath promised to those that are unworthy, that it should not be promised as a reward unto workes, but as grace freely given. The argument then followeth not, there is a reward: ergo merit; for the reward may bee counted of favour as well as of debt, Rom. 4. 4. as followes in the next answer.

Secondly, there is a double reward, the first properly so called; the second improperly, and by a certaine similitude; now of this latter, to wit the reward improperly so called, we grant the Antecedent (viz. that life eternall is called a reward) but deny the Consequent; therefore good workes merit heaven; for there is not one and the same reason of Homonymorum, or ambiguous and doubtfull words; Porsanus here proves the consequence (which wee deny) thus: Wee cannot conceive a reward to be without merit, any more then we can conceive a sonne to bee without a father, or a husband without a wife; or a master without a servant; or a mountaine without a valley; or a schoole-master without a scholler.

369

Answ. 2.

Obiect. 2.

Answ.

These examples will not prove the consequence; for all these are of a proper appellation, or taken in their proper and genuine significations; but reward in an unproper sense, more plainly, there is a perpetuall relation betweene { Father and Sonne, } betweene { Husband and Wife, } betweene { Master and Servant, } betweene { Hilles and Valleyes } Because he cannot be a Father without a Sonne; or a Husband who hath no Wife; and so of the rest: But there is not a perpetuall relation betweene { Mercedem or Meritum, } or { Wages and Merit. } As appeares thus:

When Leah brought forth Issachar, shee said, God hath given me my wages, because I have given my maiden unto my husband [x]. Now in this thing, Leah did performe no good worke; neither did it for Gods sake, neither did well in doing of it; and therefore there could bee no merit in it, neither in any respect can the giving of her maiden unto her husband be called a merit, or can it bee said that thereby shee did merit or deserve any thing at Gods hands. And therefore there is no perpetuall relation betweene Wages and Merit; or that whersoever wee read of reward, there we must needs understand it to be given as of due debt [y].

x Gen. 30 18.

y Chamier. tom. 3. f. 465.

Great is your reward in heaven.] Our Saviour doth not promise a reward in earth, but in heaven: Teaching us, that the true retribution of affliction is in the life to come.

Observ.

Quest. Why is the recompense and reward of affliction after this life?

Answ. 1. First, because the promised reward spoken of in this verse is to be given unto all; but temporall deliverance and freedome is not given unto all.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the reward here promised ought farre to exceed all our sufferings, and afflictions, which temporall blessings often doe not, but eternall glory doth alwaies: I reckon that the sufferings of this present time, are not worthy to bee compared to that glory, which shall bee revealed in us [z].

z Rom. 8. 18.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this reward of our afflictions must bee extended to the soule as well as to the body, and therefore must not be a temporall but an eternall reward.

It may be objected, our afflictions, losses, and crosses, are promised to be rewarded a hundredfold in this life, and therefore the reward is temporall in earth, not eternall in heaven.

Obiect. 3.

Answ. 1. First, a temporall reward is not promised, and hence wee see it sometimes to some granted, and sometimes from some with-held.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the hundred fold reward promised in this life may bee understood of peace of conscience, which farre exceeds all worldly wealth.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the true and adequate reward of the soule is eternity. And in our afflictions, we must not thinke that God will give us riches, or honours, or freedome, or reputation, or joy and health, or the like (for in all these things wee must say; thy will bee done.) But wee must remember. First, that we suffer for Christs sake. Secondly, that the Patriarches, Prophets, and Apostles, were copartners with us in our sufferings. Thirdly, that our sufferings shall be rewarded in heaven.

Fourthly, that this heavenly reward which wee shall bee made partakers off is an exceeding reward, yea also eternall. For these things considered, wee shall thinke nothing hard or heavy to bee borne; but even the yoake of the crosse light and easie: Art thou injured? the time will come when thou shalt bee avenged: art thou slandered, and thy reputation not vindicated; the time will come when thy innocency shall appeare and shine as the Sunne; art thou killed for Christs sake? there is a time when thou shalt rise

170 rise againe, and live for ever with Christ in eternall glory; and therefore blessed are they who are persecuted, reviled, slandered, and afflicted for Christs sake, for great is their reward in heaven.

Vers. 13. VERSE. 13. Ye are the salt of the earth, but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be troden under foot of men.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Ye are the salt of the earth.]

Quest. 1. Whether is this meant of their persons, or of their office?

Answ. Of their office or function; ye are the salt of the earth, that is, it is your office and worke to salt and season the earth: Trahit ad personas quod est doctrinæ (Calvin in.) Christ applyes that to their persons, which belongs unto their doctrine. Non tam ad personas quam ad munus (Gualt. in.) This doth not so much belong unto their persons, as unto their office; or apostolicall function, to wit, the Ministery of the word. Teaching us, that it is the part of the Ministers of the word, to season the hearts of the faithfull.

Obser.

Quest. 2. Could not Christ have seasoned the hearts of his children himselfe, and if he could, why did he do it by men?

Answ. Christ could have seasoned and sanctified the hearts of his children by himselfe: but yet would doe it by men for these two causes: First, that he might have an evident and perspicuous Church and discipline upon earth, or a representation of his presence amongst men. Secondly that hereby his power and strength might be glorified in our weakenesse, and infirmity.

Quest. 3. Who is it that doth truely salt and season the heart with grace?

Answ. 1. First, really this seasoning comes from God, and his Blessed Spirit, who is the principall author of all good in us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the principall Instrument of our seasoning, is the sacred Scriptures.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Ministers are only secondary instruments of this seasoning: And that First by Preaching unto men the word of God. And Secondly, by sealing them by the Sacraments of Christ; which two workes if they be truely performed, doe mutely confirme unto us the salt of the Holy Ghost.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Ye are the salt of the earth.] If the salt Quest. 1. have lost his savour, it is good for nothing, &c. How many sorts of unsavoury Ministers are there?

Answ. 1. First, blind watch-men, who have no knowledge; and therefore are not able to give light unto those who sit in darkenesse, nor eies unto the blind, neither can instruct those who are ignorant.

Answ. 2. Secondly, heretical teachers, such as teach false and damnable doctrine; such as doe not season but poyson, and destroy the soule, such are the Romish teachers, Priests, Jesuits, and Seminaries, who mingle the word of God with their owne inventions, and humane traditions.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, such as preach true doctrine, but yet misapply the same, sowing pillowes under the elbowes of the wicked, preaching peace unto them, when they should rather awaken them unto repentance, by discovering unto them their sinnes, and by denouncing the judgements of God against them for their sinnes.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they who though they teach the truth, and generally apply it well, doe yet lead ungodly and scandalous lives; for an offensive and unsavoury conversation in the teachers doth hinder the seasoning vertue of the word of his Ministery in the hearts of the people: his doctrine not being able to build up so fast, as his life and conversation pulleth downe; most men not regarding so much what is said by Ministers, as what is done by them; and therefore our Saviour here earnestly perswades his Apostles, and under them all Ministers, to take heed that they be not found unsavoury salt.

Quest. 2. Why must Ministers bee thus carefull to be in their lives and doctrine seasoning salt?

Answ. 1. First, because if they be unsavoury salt, they will bee a meanes to draw many into everlasting perdition.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because although otherwise they be endowed with great and eminent gifts, yet if they be unsavoury salt, they are altogether unprofitable in the Church of Christ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because if they bee not savoury salt, they shall bee had in contempt, for that is signified by this phrase of treading under foot.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if they be not seasoning salt, they shall bee cast into utter darkenesse where their torments shall bee greater and more exquisite then the torments of other wicked men. And therefore great should the Ministers care be, that his owne soule may bee seasoned with knowledge and grace; that his doctrine may be sound, and his life sincere; that so both by doctrine and example they may be instruments to season the hearts, and direct the lives of others.

Vers. 14. VERS. 14. Ye are the light of the world, a City that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Vers. 14.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Ye are the light of the world.] The occasion of these words, was this: I. Some altogether neglect the word preached: II. Some hate he preaching of the word. Whence it comes to passe that Ministers are partly weary with preaching, because they see they doe but cast pearls before swine, and plow the sand. Our Saviour in his infinite wisedome observing and knowing this, doth excite and stirre up Ministers unto industry and diligence in their office by a double parable. First, of salt, vers. 13. Secondly, of light, vers. 14, 15, 16.

Quest. 1. Whether doe these two parables signifie one and the same thing or divers?

Answ. Both the Parables have the same scope, but yet a threefold difference may bee observed in them, viz.

First, salt doth preserve meat from being any worse then it is whē it is salted; but if it be tainted before it be salted, then the salt doth not reduce it to it to his first estate, or make it as good as it was. But light doth reduce us from that darkenesse and ignorance wherein we were[a].

[a] Chrysost imperf. s.

Secondly, salt hath reference to a good conversation; light unto sound Doctrine[b], or (as Aretius thinkes) contrarily, salt signifies, sound and wholesome doctrine; and light a holy and unblameable life.

[b] Ib. Id.

Thirdly, Ministers are salt unto believers; light unto the ignorant. Conversatio sine luce non adducit ad veritatem, scientia sine pietate non preservat in sanctitate[c]. A conversation without the light of doctrine cannot bring us unto truth; knowledge without holinesse cannot preserve us in piety: And therefore it is necessary for Ministers to be both { Salt and / Light.

[c] Id. Ib.

Quest. 2. Why must we be first salt, then light, or why doth our Saviour observe this order.

Answ. 1 First, because it is a Ministers part first to keep those which he hath, then to gaine those which as yet he hath not; and therefore first, he useth salt for the preservation from corruption of those who doe beleeve; and then light for the enlightning of others who sit in darkenesse and in the shadow of death.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is first requisit to live well, then to preach well: Nam conversatio ducit ad scientiam, contrarium vix. Multi scientes sine timore Dei, nulli timentes sine scientia[d]. A good conversation leads unto knowledge, but seldome the contrary: For many know much who feare not God, but none truely feare God without some knowledge, The feare of God being the beginning of wisedome.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, salt was for the Jewes, that they might be preserved in their knowledge, light was for the Gentiles, that they might be reduced from the darkenesse of ignorance: and therefore Christ first gives the parable of salt, before this of light. To conclude this question observe: First, salt, is the way unto light, that is, piety leads unto true knowledge.

Secondly, that is no true knowledge, that doth not arise from piety and holinesse.

Thirdly, that is not true piety which doth not hunger after the knowledge of God.

Sect. 2. Obiect. 1. § 2. Yee are the light of the world.] Christ was the light of the world Ioh. 8.12. and 9.5. And Iohn was not that light, but was sent onely to beare witnesse of that light, Ioh. 1.8. How then are the Apostles the light of the world?

Answ. 1. First, light is taken in Scripture diversely to wit.

Marlorat. Thesaur. First, for the Creator of light, as Iohn saith, The light shined in darkenesse, and the darkenesse comprehended it not, Ioh. 1.5.

Secondly, for the Sonne of God, thus Saint Iohn the Evangelist, saith of Saint Iohn Baptist, He was not that light (that is the true Messias) but was sent onely to beare witnesse of that light[e].

[e] Ioh. 1. 8.

Thirdly, for that power of the understanding and reason which is kindled in the minds of men; thus Iohn saith, Christ was life, and the life was the light of men[f].

[f] Ioh. 1. 4.

Fourthly, for the knowledge of the glory of God: Thus Saint Paul saith, God who commanded the light to shine out of darkenesse, hath shined in our hearts to give us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God[g]. Where light is taken both for the knowledge of spirituall and celestiall glory. 171

[g] 2 Cor. 4. 6.

Fiftly, for sanctity of life; What communion (sayth Saint Paul) hath light with darkenesse, that is what agreement is there betwixt sanctity and sinne[h]. And so our Saviour in the next verse save one unto this, saith, let your light so shine before men, &c. Where by light is expressed to bee meant a holy life repleniſhed with good workes.

[h] 2 Cor. 6. 14.

Sixtly, light sometimes is taken for the doctrine of the Gospell; according to that of Saint Paul, Christ being risen from the dead, shall shew light unto his people (the Jewes) and to the Gentiles, that is, shall send his Gospell to be preached unto both.

[i] Acts 26. 23.

Seventhly, light is taken, for the Doctours of the Evangelicall doctrine as in this verse, yee are the light of the world.

Eightly, all Christians are called light. So the Apostle exhorts the Philippians to be harmelesse, blameleſse, and without rebuke, because they were lights among the ignorant Gentiles[l]. Now true Christians are called light in a threefold regard. First, because they are enlightned in themselves by that most true, pure, and bright light, the illumination of the Spirit of Christ: Secondly, because they walke in the light. And thirdly, because by their pure and holy life they shew light unto others.

[l] Phil. 2. 15.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ is called light, because he is that true primary light, which doth not borrow his light from any other, but hath light in himselfe, and of himselfe doth enlighten others. Read for the proofe hereof, Ioh. 1.9. and 8.12, Esa. 9.2. and 40.6. and 43.6. and 60.1.12. and 1 Ioh. 1.5. and 2.8.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Apostles, and other Doctors & Ministers of the church of Christ, are called light: not because they have light in themselves, & of themselves, for they have it from Christ, that true primary light; as the Moone borrowes her light from the Sunne, shee beeing without but a darke substance or body. So they being enlightned by Christ, they are called lux mundi, the light of the world, in these regards: First, because they beare witnesse of the true light[m]. Secondly, because they have received the splendor of divine knowledge from Christ. Thirdly, in respect of the sincerity of life, and integrity of manners.

[m] Joh. 1. 7. 8.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, God is the cause of light; this may be understood either of God the Father, Sonne or Holy Ghost: For First, God the Father is called the Father of lights. James 1. 17. yea he commands the light to shine out of darkenes[n]. Secondly, God the Sonne enlightens every one who comes into the world[o]. Thirdly, God the holy Ghost is called the Spirit of light. The Apostle proves most plainely that the ever blessed Trinity is the cause of light, in these words I pray for you that the God of our Lord Iesus Christ the Father of glory

[n] 2 Cor. 4. 6.

[o] Ioh. 1. 9.

172 may give unto you the Spirit of wiſedome, that ſo the eyes of your underſtanding may be enlightned[p].

Firſtly, the light it ſelfe is the word of God: Thus David, Thy Word is a light unto my feet, Pſalm. 119. 105. And Paul, Chriſt hath brought life and immortality to light, through the Goſpell, 2 Tim. 1. 10. And Peter, ye doe well to take heed to the word of God, as unto a light that ſhineth in a darke place. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

Anſw. 1. Anſw. 5. Anſw. 6.

Sixtly and laſtly, it is given unto the Miniſters from God, to enlighten the world through this his word: Thus Paul was ſent unto the Gentiles, that by the preaching of the word unto them, he might open their eyes, and turne them from darkneſſe to light[q].

[p] Ephes. 1. 17. 18. [q] Acts 26. 18.

Obiect. 2. It may againſt this be objected: to enlighten or give light, is an internall worke; and therefore man cannot doe it, but it muſt bee wrought by the bleſſed Trinitie, as was ſayd before, anſwer 4.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it is not onely an internall worke: for there are two parts of this illumination, viz. firſt, an externall adhibiting of light: ſecondly, an internall application thereof to the underſtanding and ſpirit: As in the ſenſe of ſeeing, Firſt, there are the ſpecies or ſeverall objects without. And ſecondly, theſe are applied unto common ſenſe within. Now the outward light is adhibited by the Miniſters of the word of God.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Miniſters are ſayd (by conſequence) to worke the internall light alſo: For firſt, although it bee the worke of the holy Ghoſt, and a taſte of the heavenly gift, and of the Spirit of God[r], yet ſecondly, the application of the outward light by the miniſtery of the word, is the ordinary means wherby the internall light is wrought within us. And therefore I conclude this objection thus; Firſt, the light is the word, which comes from God, not from the Miniſters. Secondly, the power of enlightning is from Chriſt, not from the Miniſters; and they only illuminate through his helpe and aſſiſtance. Thirdly, yet it is the office of Miniſters to hold forth the light in their Miniſterie.

[r] Heb. 6. 4.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Yee are the light of the world.] The Apoſtles being but Toll-gatherers, and Fiſhers, Queſt. 1. and not Scribes, why doth our Saviour call them the light of the world, and not rather the Scribes?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Chriſt doth it to comfort them, leſt they ſhould be dejected by reaſon of their poore, baſe, and low condition: Thus elſewhere hee encourageth them to be conſtant both in active and paſſive obedience; becauſe there will a time come, when they ſhall ſit upon twelve ſeates, and judge the twelve Tribes of Iſrael[s].

[s] Matth. 19. 28.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Chriſt calles his Apoſtles (not the Scribes) the light of the world, leſt the Miniſterie ſhould ſeeme to bee ſupported by an arme of fleſh. If the Scribes and Phariſees had beene made the light of the world, the world would then have thought, that the word had been upheld and maintained by humane power; but when the Goſpell is preached, publiſhed, divulged, and diſperſed through the world, by the Apoſtles, who were but Fiſhers, Toll-gatherers poore, and illiterate men, then all the world will ſay, Hic eſt digitus Dei, that this is Gods worke, and ſupported by a divine hand.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, our Saviour calles his Apoſtles (not the Phariſees and Scribes) the light of the world, to teach us, that worldly pompe and ſplendour, addes nothing to the efficacie of the Miniſterie; it neither helpes (if preſent) nor hurts, if abſent.

Queſt. 2. Why doth not externall and mundane glory availe, and further the preaching of the word?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe it is a ſpirituall worke, and therefore it is to be wrought by ſpirituall meanes, and not carnall: for neither eſtimation, nor honour, nor riches, nor the wiſedome of the fleſh, can helpe forward this worke of God. Hence Saint Paul oppoſeth them, firſt, in his converſation, in theſe words, Our rejoycing is the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſimplicitie, and godly ſinceritie, not with fleſhly wiſedome, we have had our converſation in the world[t]. Secondly, Saint Paul oppoſeth them in his preaching: Chriſt (ſayth he) ſent me to preach the Goſpell, not with wiſedome of words[u], not with excellencie of ſpeech[v], not with enticing words of mans wiſedome; but in demonſtration of the Spirit, and of power[w].

[t] 2 Cor. 1 12. [u] 1 Cor. 1 17. [v] 1 Cor. 2. 1. [w] 1 Cor. 2. 4.

Secondly, God in this worke will not uſe the power of men, leſt the praiſe of the work ſhould bee given unto men. Uzza was ſtrucke with death, becauſe hee puts his hand to the Arke[x]. And God will not deliver his people by 32000, but by 300[y], leſt the people ſhould glory in themſelves; whereas hee that glories ſhould glory in the Lord: yea, hence it was, that God would not take the temptation from Paul, but rather ſuſtaine him in it; becauſe thus his glory and ſtrength was made perfect in weakneſſe[z].

[x] 2 Sam. 6 7. [y] Iudg. 7. 2. [z] 2 Cor. 12. 9.

Sect. 4. Obiect. §. 4. A Citie that is ſet on an Hill, cannot bee hid.] Theſe words (as alſo the former) ſome Papiſts urge for the viſibilitie of the Church, thus: Our Saviour compares his Church to a Citie on an Hill, which cannot be hid: Therefore the Church muſt needs bee viſible.

Touching the viſibilitie of the Church, I lay downe this propoſition.

There ſhall be alwayes a Church truly viſible, ſo long as this mortall world ſhall laſt. Here that I may be the better underſtood, let me adde theſe explanations, to wit, Firſt, the moſt viſible Church ſhall not alwayes bee trueſt: for the weeds of errour, and chaffe of hypocriſie, and ſuperſtition, ſhall ſometimes over-grow the corne of true religion[a]; as Arianiſme did the truth in Hilary his dayes[b]. Yea, this is confeſſed, Major pars vincit aliquando meliorem, the greater part oftentimes overcomes the better. Bellarm. de Concil. 3. 9.

Secondly, errours over-growing the truth: peradventure the Church ſhall at ſome time bee viſible onely, ad intra, not ad extra, that is, knowne among themſelves, though not obſerved of the world. I ſay, peradventure, becauſe many of our worthy Divines hold, that it ſhall be be visible alwayes, not onely in some scattered persons, but in an orderly Ministery and use of the Sacraments [f].

[f] D. Field de Eccles. 1. 10.

Thirdly, this Church shall not alwayes be resplendent and glorious in the worlds eye (as the Papists sometime perswade the ignorant) but (after Saint Augustines comparison) like the Moone, ever being, but sometimes in the wane, scarce seene shining at all. Obscurari potest multitudine scandalorum, saith Bellarmine [g], in answer to Hylary, out of Saint Augustine, epistol. 48.

[g] Bell. de eccles. milit. 3. 16.

Fourthly, this visible Church hath no warrant of not erring (in the usuall sense, to wit, in part) this being the greatest imposture, that the Papists gull the world withall, as shall be shewed in another place.

Sect. 5. §. 5. A City set upon a hill:] Here wee have two things to consider of, first what this Citie is? Secondly, what this Mountaine is?

Quest. 1. First, what this City is which is set upon a Mountaine?

Answ. 1. First, some say the Apostles are this Citie: but this cannot be, except onely by a Metonymie, as we take mundus pro mundanis, the world for worldlings: And therefore our Saviour doth not say, Yee are the City set on an hill.

Answ. 2. Secondly, others say the Church is this City, because it is as a City deare and consecrated unto God: yea elsewhere called the City of God, Psal. 46. 4. the joy of the whole earth, the Citie of the great King, Psal. 48 2. and of righteousnesse, Esa. 1. 26. yea it is termed Mount Sion, the City of the living God, the heavenly Ierusalem, the Church of the first borne [h]. How deare and pretious this Citie is in Gods sight, may appeare by these things observed by some in the metaphore. I. The City is the Church: thus David, Glorious things are spoken of thee, oh Citie of God [i]. II. The Mountaine whereupon the City stands is Christ; according to that of the Prophet David, The stone became a great Mountaine, and filled the whole earth [k]. III. The Citizens of this Citie are the Saints; thus saith Saint Paul, Yee are fellow-citizens with the Saints and of the household of God [l]. IV. The Towers of this City were the Prophets, who were most eminent in the Church. V. The Gates of this Citie were the Apostles, by whose Ministery men were brought into the Church. VI. The Walls of this City are the Ministers of the Word and the Apostles successours; who are as rampers, to defend the Church against the assaults of sin, superstition and errour [m].

[h] Heb. 12. 22.

[i] Psa. 87. 3

[k] Da. 2. 35.

[m] Chrys. imperf. op.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the true City is not in this life: for here we have no continuing City, but we seeke one to come (Hebr. 13. 14.) to wit, that new Jerusalem which is above, Revel. 21. 2 10.

Quest. 2. If the City expected and longed for by the faithfull be not in this life, then how is the Church called a City, both in this verse, and in other places, as was shewed before?

Answ. The Militant Church of Christ may be called a City, partly Analogicè; because it something resembles the heavenly Hierusalem, and triumphant Church; partly, Synechdochicè, because it is a part of that Citie which is above.

Quest. 3 What is to be expected, or may be looked for, in this Citie?

Answ. Foure things, to wit; first, τάξιν, Order, God the King of this City not being the author of confusion, but of peace, (1 Cor. 14. 33.) and therefore all things are to be done decently and in order, vers. 40. avoiding contention, because it becomes not the Church of Christ [n]. And therefore those who will not be subject to the godly, decent, and lawfull injunctions and orders of the Church, are no true members thereof, or at least are to be esteemed as stubborne children; whether they be 1. Fanatici, the Anabaptists, who understand all truths as they list themselves, measuring all Doctrines by their owne revelations: Or 2. Furiosi, the Brownists, who will tolerate no rites or customes at all, although all who know any thing, agree, that in all Churches there have beene some. Or 3. Pertinaces, those that are headstrong, perverse obstinate, and rebellious, whose will is a Law, and will make any thing lawfull that they please, not subjecting themselves to any government, or command, though never so lawfull. Of all these we may say with the Apostle, If any seeme to be thus contentious, we have no such custome, wee nor the Church of God [o].

[n] 1 Cor. 11. 16.

[o] 1 Cor. 11. 16.

Secondly, the second thing to be expected in this City is Unitie; there is but one governement, one King, one head, and one body, and therefore we expect unitie in this City (reade Ephes. 4. 5. 16. and Rom. 12. 5. and 1 Corinth. 10. 17.) it being necessary that the Citizens should be of one minde and of one judgement, having but one rule to walke by, and one way which all must walke in who hope to be saved [p]. There is one light whereby we are enlightned, one truth whereby we are directed, one law of obedience unto all, one faith in Christ unto salvation, one profession of faith and obedience, and whatsoever differs from this is an error. We may differ in outward and adiaphorall things, and yet be of the same religion and body of Christ: as we may see Protestant Churches, that although they vary in circumstances, yet they hold one and the same substance and fundamentall truths entire.

[p] Phil. 3. 16.

Thirdly, as we may expect in this City unitie betweene the subjects and Soveraigne, the body and the head; so wee may also betweene the fellow-members of this body, because I. they are concives, fellow-Citizens [q]. II. They are brethen, Psal. 133. 1. III. because they are members of one mysticall body, Romanes 12. 5. and 1 Corinth. 10. 17. Ephes. 4. 16. and 5. 27.

[q] Ephes. 2. 19.

Fourthly, in this City there is splendour; villages are more vile, but Cities are more splendidious and sumptuous; this splendour and glory which is in that part of the Church which is triumphant is lively portraied, Revel. 21. 18. ad vers. 25. but that beauty which is in the Militant Church is especially internall and spiritu-

174 all, not externall and corporall: according to that of the Psalmist, The Kings daughter is all glorious within [r]. And therefore if we desire to be assured that we are members of the Church militant, and shall be of the triumphant; let us then learne I. to be subject to the lawfull and decent rites of the Church. II. To be obedient to the Lawes of God and behests of Christ. III. To love, to agree and accord one with another in brotherly and christian-like love. And IV. to endevour that we may be pure and unspotted in the hidden man of the heart.

[r] Psal. 45. 13.

Quest. 4. Secondly, having thus considered of the Citie set upon a hill, let us now proceed to the Hill upon which this City stands. And first, hence it may be demanded, what this Hill or Mountaine is?

Answ. 1. First, some hereby understand heaven: Who shall dwell ô Lord (saith David) upon thy holy hill? Psal. 15. 1. and 24. 3. Hee that beleeves shall possesse thy holy hill, Esa. 57. 13. But the word is not thus taken in this place.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand righteousnesse: and thus Augustine sup.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some understand Christ (Chrysost. imperf.) alluding unto Sion, which is called the holy Mount, Psal. 2. 6. and 43. 3. Teaching us, that we are founded onely upon Christ, who is the true corner stone (Ephes. 2. 20, 21, 22.) the head, beginning, and first-borne of the faithfull, Coloss. 1. 18. yea our alone Saviour, Acts 4. 12. And therefore we may not seeke helpe from any other.

Observ.

Quest. 5. May we not pray unto the Saints for succour in our distresses?

Answ. No, because he unto whom we pray, or from whom we expect any blessing, ought to have these three properties, which are proper onely unto God, and not communicable unto any other.

First, he must have Scientiam inopiæ, a knowledge of our wants and necessities: The Papists dispute, that the Saints know our wants in speculo Trinitatis, seeing them in the face of God as in a glasse. But 1. this glasse is but a foolish fiction and braine-sicke phansie of their owne, and it is false, at the least doubtfull whether the Saints know any of our particular griefes or not. 2. It is necessary, that they should heare all at one time who pray unto them. Yea 3. understand the hearts and hearty desires of all in distresse; but these are peculiar unto God, as shall be shewed, Matth. 6. 9.

Secondly, hee must have Potentiam juvandi, power and ability to helpe: that is, be able 1. to give all good things unto us which we want. 2. To preserve us from all dangers we are incident unto. 3. To overcome Satan our deadly enemie. 4. To direct all things that befall us unto our goods. Now the Saints cannot give all things unto us, for they are but creatures, and this is proper to the Creator and Lord of all things in heaven and earth: When a Papist prayes to any Saint in heaven for any blessing, if that Saint should heare his prayer, I perswade my selfe he would answer, as Christ did to the Mother of Zebedees children (who desired that one of her sonnes should sit upon his right hand, and the other on his left) That it was not his to give, but it should be given to them, for whom it was prepared of his Father [u], prosperity, promotion, preferment, and the like, being ordered and disposed by him. Againe, the Saints cannot deliver from danger; This Eliphas the Temanite knew right well, when he said, To which of the Saints wilt thou turne [v]? But if wee call upon the Lord he can deliver us, Psal. 50. 15. Againe, the Saints cannot enable us to overcome Satan, for this power is derived unto us from God, who being stronger than he, can take away his armour wherein hee trusts, and his captives whom he possesses, binding him in chaines, and setting them at liberty.

[u] Mat. 22. 23.

[v] Job 5. 1.

Lastly, the Saints cannot order and dispose of all our actions to our good, because they doe not know what may come to passe [w]: Omnia in futurum reservantur incerta: But the Lord calls those things which are not, as though they were, knowing things to come as well as present or by-passed, and hath promised by his speciall providence so to dispose of all the actions of his children, that all things shall worke together for the best unto them [x]; And therefore we must pray to no other.

[w] Eccles. 8. 7.

[x] Rom. 8. 18.

Thirdly, hee must love us cordially, having Voluntatem juvandi, as well a will to helpe us, as power and ability to assist us: Now none hath equalled the Lords love unto us, for that was infinite [y]. And thus much for the third exposition of the word Hill.

[y] Joh. 3. 16. & 1 Joh. 4. 16.

Fourthly, some more generally understand by this word Mountaine and Hill, onely a more glorious and conspicuous estate of the Church: And thus the name of a Mountaine is given to the Church it selfe: Yee are they that forsake the Lord, and forget my holy Mauntaine [z], that is, the Church.

Answ. 4.

[z] Esa. 65. 11.

How and wherein is the Church of God like unto a City set upon a Mountaine?

Quest. 4.

First, it is more conspicuous, and in that regard more prone, and subject to be assaulted by enemies, because they can see it from farre: but this followes in the next §. it cannot be hid.

Answ. 1.

Secondly, it is defended with Towers, Walls, Gates, Rockes; Now the Ministers of the Word of God are all these, as appeares in Jeremiah, Behold (saith the Lord) I have made thee this day a defenced City, and an iron pillar, and brazen walls, against the whole land, against the Kings, Princes, Priests, and people [a]. As the wall repelles and beates backe the darts, and keepes out the enemies, so in like manner doe the Ministers; they oppose themselves against sinne, and boldly reprove sinne, not fearing the favour or frowne of any: Christ calls Herod Fox; Elias reproves Ahab, telling him that it was hee and his Fathers house who had troubled Israel.

Answ. 2.

[a] Jer. 1. 18.

Thirdly, a City built on a Hill hath watch-towers, as we see Ezekiel 3. 17. Sonne of man, I have made thee a watch-man unto the house of Israel, and therefore give them warning: And the Ministers

Answ. 3.

Ministers of the new Testament are made overseers, Acts 20. 28. and Heb. 13. 17. And therfore they are no faithful Ministers who do not admonish their people of danger: in warre, if he sleepe who is appointed to stand centinel, and to watch for the safeguard of the army, hee is hanged by Marshall law; Wherefore Preachers who are the Watch-men of this city the Church, had need to bee vigilant, lest they incurre the Lords displeasure against them to cut them off, for their negligence and remisnesse.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, such cities as are founded upon Mountaines are most safe, and secure; they are more hardly assaulted, and with great difficulty sacked: so God is in the midst of his Church [b], and will establish it for ever [c]. And therefore the children of God, and the inhabitants of this City need not feare; because the Lord is their watch-man who is able to preserve them, and so carefull of them, that hee neither slumbers nor sleepes.

[b] Psal. 46. 5.
[c] Psal. 48. 8.

Sect. 7. §. 7. Cannot be hid.] Why are these words added?

Quest. 1.

Answ. That the Apostles might be the more carefull to give all diligence in their ministry, from the successe; because their lives could not be so spent in obscurity, but that either praise would redound unto them for their diligence, or infamy for their negligence.

Quest. 2. What is the meaning of these words, It cannot be hid?

Answ. 1. First, some understand it of the visibilitie of Glory, and Chrysostome thinkes this spoken prophetically, that although now the Gospell of the Kingdome bee but newly published, yet in time the Church shall flourish.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand it of the visibility of the word; that the word shall bee revealed to all, or preached through the world, Ephes. 3. 5. Coloss. 1. 26.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some understand it of the visibility of workes in Ministers, that they must use their utmost endevour to bee unblamable in their lives, and indefatigable in their callings, because all men see them, all eyes are upon them.

Vers. 15. VERS. 15. Neither doe men light a candle, and put it under a bushel; but on a candlesticke, and it giveth light to all that are in the house.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, &c.]

Argum. The Papists hold that the Scriptures are not to be translated into the vulgar tongue, whereby the vulgar sort may read them; against which Tenet wee produce this place, arguing thus: The Scripture being like a lighted candle, is therefore given unto men that it may shine unto all, that is be expounded and explained to their understandings and capacities. And therefore that it may give light unto all, and be seene by all, it is necessary that it should be translated into that language, which is understood by them [d].

[d] Scharp. curs. theolog. f. 37. arg. 9.

Sect. 2. §. 2. It giveth light to all that are in the house.]

Quest. 1. What is meant here by House?

Answ. In this place House is to bee taken for the Church Militant, which is therefore called a House, because it is a segregation or separation or separating of a company of people from the rest unto the profession of religion: Teaching us, that the Church of God is a society or assembly of the household of faith, separated unto the service of God. The house is the Church, 1 Tim. 3. 15. the Citizens are the household of God, Ephes. 2. 19 and of faith. Gal. 6. 10.

Quest. 2. How are the faithfull separated from the world?

Answ. 1. First, by profession of the true God, they are separated from the Gentiles who serve Idols.

Answ. 2. Secondly, by the profession of Christ, they are separated from Turkes and Jewes, who deny him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, by the profession of the pure word of God, they are separated from heretikes who hate the word, as the thiefe hates a candle, or hee that doth evill, light.

Vers. 16. VERS. 16. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good workes, and glorifie your Father which is in heaven.

Vers. 16.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Let your light so shine before men.]

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of the whole verse?

Answ. 1. First, the true genuine and naturall interpretation in generall, is this, Let your light shine, not onely before God, but also before men, not onely in doctrine, but also in the workes of your ministery, yea in your whole life; that men not onely may heare, but likewise may see your good workes, not to the intent that they may celebrate your praise, but that they may glorifie your Father which is in heaven.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly, the sense and meaning of this verse is thus to be taken up, viz.

First, the Ministers of the Church of Christ ought to shine before men, not onely by sound and saving doctrine, but also by a sincere and sanctified life.

Secondly, those Ministers doe neither rightly nor sufficiently shine unto edification, who doe onely teach and preach well, but their life is not answerable to their doctrine.

Thirdly, the preachers of the word must not onely (in that which they doe) satisfie their own conscience betwixt God and them; but (as Saint Paul saith) they must provide for things honest, not onely in the sight of the Lord, but in the sight of men [f], they must circumspectly avoid all scandalous actions, or which may be interpreted to be such.

[f] 2 Cor. 8. 21.

Fourthly, the Ministers of the word, both in their preaching, and in all the actions of their lives, must seeke the glory of their heavenly Father; and not their owne fame, honour, gaine, esteeme, or the like.

Fiftly, our Saviour doth here seeme to imply, that if in the preachers of the Gospell sound doctrine be stained with a corrupt life, God is not then glorified, but rather dishonoured and scandalized by them [t].

[t] Rom 2. 24.

Quest. 2. How may this verse be divided?

Herein two parts may be obſerved, viz.
- First, the Commandement wherein are two things,
  - Quid? what is commanded? let your light ſhine.
  - Quibus? to whom? before men.
- Secondly, the reaſon of the precept, taken from the end which is twofold,
  - First, that men may ſee your good workes.
  - Secondly, that God may be glorified: wherein there are
    - First, the maine end, which is aimed at in our workes, and that is Gods glory.
    - Secondly, the name given unto God; your Father.
    - Thirdly, the place of his abod, or of the greateſt manifeſtation of his glory, and that is in heaven

I have propounded this queſtion, and divided this verſe, becauſe I ſhall treat a little more amply upon it, than upon the former.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Let your light ſhine.] What is meant by Queſt. 1. this Shining light which is here commanded to be held forth?

Anſw. 1. First, ſome expound it of preaching onely, thus, Let the light of the word ſhine, that the workes or fruits of your labour may appeare: for thus ſometimes the fruits of the Goſpell are called workes: Are not you (ſayth Saint Paul to the u 1 Cor. 9.1. Corinthians) my worke in the Lord[u]? And hence v 1 Thes. 5.13. he exhorts the Theſſalonians, to eſteeme highly their Miniſters for their workes ſake[v]: yea preaching is called the worke of an Evangeliſt, 2. Tim. 4.5. And hee who deſires to bee fitted for, and admitted into this calling, is ſayd, to deſire a w 1 Tim. 3.1. good worke[w]: Teaching us, that it is not enough Obſerv. 1 for a Miniſter to have knowledge, but he ought ſo to preach; as to make it his worke, that ſo by the bleſſing of God upon his labours, he may bee an inſtrument to convert many. Muſculus ſup.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome expound this of preaching and pietie together; as if our Saviour would ſay, ſhine in doctrine, but withall let men ſee your Obſer. 2. good workes. Gualt. ſ. Teaching both Paſtors and people, that to the knowledge of the word, they muſt adjoyne the practiſe of pietie: Or they muſt diligently labour to encreaſe both in knowledge and practiſe.

Queſt. 2. Why are both knowledge and practiſe thus neceſſarily to be adjoyned?

Anſw. 1. First, becauſe without the knowledge of religion, our pietie and devotion is but blinde, knowledge being the eye by which religion is directed; and therefore they are neceſſarily to be conjoyned.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, knowledge and practiſe are the two wings of religion, without either of which, our religion is lame, and falles to the ground: And therefore if with the Eagle, wee deſire to ſoare up unto heaven, we muſt adjoyne and linke them both together.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, knowledge is not required in us, or to be acquired by us, for it ſelfe; but that thereby we might be more enabled to performe our duties towards God, which we cannot without the knowledge of the word: and therefore it is requiſite, that firſt our hearts ſhould be inſtructed in the knowledge of God, and of his Law, and of our Maſters will; and then carefully to performe what wee know our God requires of us.

Who are faultie in this particular?

First, thoſe who preferre ignorance before knowledge, darkneſſe before light.

Secondly, thoſe who are remiſſe in ſeeking for knowledge; who are ignorant, and negligent in the uſe of the meanes of knowledge: Vult & non vult piger, they love wiſedome, and ſay, they long for underſtanding; but other things wholly divert them from the queſt thereof. And therefore it is neceſſary to heare, and read, and learne, and pray for the encreaſe of knowledge.

Thirdly, they are too much defective here, who labour for knowledge, and reſt only therein; whether Paſtors or people: for we muſt not bee hearers onely, or ſpeakers onely, or knowers onely, but doers alſo; becauſe without a holy, obedient, and religious life, our preaching, hearing, and knowledge is altogether fruitleſſe. Indeed it is true, that a knowing Miniſter by his preaching may benefit others, but not himſelfe; except hee bee a follower as well as a leader, a Diſciple as well as Doctour, a practitioner as well as Teacher.

Fourthly, thoſe Miniſters are principally faultie here, whoſe lives are ſcandalous, and converſations impious; who doe not onely no good, but alſo much evill: Theſe weave Penelopes web, undoing as much by their evill life, as they doe by their good doctrine; deſtroying as faſt with the left hand, as they build with the right. Thus much for the ſecond generall anſwer to the firſt queſtion: the third and laſt remaines.

Thirdly, ſome expound theſe words, Let your Anſw. 3. light ſhine, of pietie onely: Thus Calvin, moſt truely, as though our Saviour would ſay, as you are the light of doctrine (verſe 14.) ſo ſhine in good workes, that men ſeeing them, may glorifie God.

Who are they that are commanded to let their Queſt. 3 light ſhine, or to hold forth a good example unto others?

First, this belongs unto all, in regard of all Anſw. 1. thoſe to whom their life may be made knowne; and that for theſe cauſes, First, becauſe all men ought to glorifie God by their workes. Secondly, becauſe there are none, but they may exhibite ſomething in their life, whereby ſome others may either be confirmed or furthered by.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, because all men in their severall states and callings, have some singular occasions of doing some good, which others upon the like occasion offered, ought and may imitate: And therefore every one should labour to shine in the workes of holinesse and uprightnesse, that others thereby might be provoked to the like.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they principally are enjoyned to hold forth the lampe of a pure life, who either in age, gifts, or office, are superiours unto others; that is, old men must be a president unto young, Masters a patterne unto servants; Fathers a copie unto children: Magistrates an example unto people; Ministers as Leaders unto their flocke, and the like. Read 2 Thessal. 3.9. and 1 Tim. 4.12. and Titus 2.4.7. Now the reasons why this dutie of shining unto others, belongs unto all sorts of superiours, are these, First, because much is required of him, to whom much is given[w]: and therefore the more God hath honoured any, let them bee the more carefull to honour him; the higher hee hath raysed any, the more are they engaged to strive by the light of a holy life, to advance his glory. Secondly, because the more eminent a man is in place, the more conspicuous is his life, and is the lesse hid: as our Saviour sayth in the former verse save one, A Citie set on a hill, or a lighted candle put into a candle-sticke, cannot bee hid. Those who are in any high place, cannot conceale their lives and actions, but they will appeare to those, who are under them, either to their glory or infamy; and therefore it concernes all superiours and Governours, to be carefull, that their light so shine unto others, that God may be glorified by them and in them. Thirdly, because those who in place, degree, or rank, are above others, ought in going before, to shew the right way to others. Fourthly, inferiours depend upon superiours, and therefore for the most part, compose themselves according to their example: If a Ruler (sayth Salomon) hearken to lies, all his servants are wicked[x]. And therefore all Governours had need to be wary, lest they mislead those whom they must answer for; and so their blood bee required at their hands.

[w] Luk. 12 48.

[x] Pro. 29. 12.

Sect. 3. Quest. §. 3. Before men.] What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, Musculus understands it of preaching the word: as though our Saviour should say, you must preach the word to all, without respect of persons, that is, first to all nations and people, whether Jewes or Gentiles. Secondly, to all of what order and degree soever: whether rich or poore, masters or servants, Kings or subjects. Thirdly, to all of what condition, qualitie, or disposition whatsoever: whether wise or simple, ignorant or learned, wicked or righteous, obedient or rebellious: for whether they will heare, or whether they will forbeare, the word must bee preached unto them[y], that those who will not amend, may be left without excuse.

[y] Ezech. 2.4. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, these words, Let your light shine before men, may be expounded of pietie also as well as preaching; as if Christ should say, you must bee carefull to order your conversation aright, as well in regard of others, as of your selves: For first, they are our brethren; and therefore wee ought to love them: Secondly, by our evill example we may hurt, pervert, debilitate, detain, and keepe them backe from the wayes of grace, and worke of the Lord. Thirdly, by our good example wee may helpe, convert, strengthen, excite, and excourage them to undertake the practise of pietie, and to submit themselves to the obedience of the Lord. And therefore wee must make it our chiefest care so to live, that we be not bridles, to hold any backe from the course of religion, but spurres to quicken them forward, that so the Lord may be glorified both by us and them.

Sect. 4. Quest. 1. §. 4. That they seeing your good workes.] Why must the workes of pietie bee so done, that they may be seene?

Answ. 1. First, because wee must so repent as wee have offended: As wee have formerly yeelded our members servants to uncleannesse, and to iniquity unto iniquitie; even so now yeeld your members servants unto righteousnesse, unto holinesse[z]. As formerly wee sinned greedily, so now we must repent zealously: as we offended publickly, so we must amend openly; as before our wicked workes were perceived by others, so now our good workes must be seene by them.

[z] Rom. 6. 19.

Answ. 2. Secondly, good examples are gratefull and pleasing unto all: light is delightfull unto all, but those who are blear-eyed; and good workes are gracious unto all, but those who are evill: therefore wee should so shine, that others might see our light.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if wee doe not so live, that others take notice of our good workes to Gods glory, then wee dishonour him; and the way of truth is evill spoken of through us[a]: he that enjoyes the meanes of grace, and doth not honour God by shewing forth the good fruits thereof, he doth dishonour him.

[a] 2 Pet. 2. 2.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, wee ought to shew unto men, to whom we belong, or whose wee are; whether Gods or the Divels: and therefore if wee desire to manifest unto the world, that we belong unto God, it must bee by our good workes, and unblameable conversation.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, we must shew forth our good workes, that men may see them; because wee ought to procure a good name and reputation unto our selves. Procure things honest (sayth the Apostle) in the sight of men[b]: for a good name is better than riches, Prov. 22.1. yea, is a precious ointment, Eccles. 7.3.

[b] Rom. 12 17. and 2 Cor. 8.21.

Quest. 2. Are wee to hunt after praise and fame in the performance of good workes? doth not our Saviour teach us the direct contrary, that our workes must be done secretly, Matth. 6.3. 6.16.

Answ. 1. First, good workes must bee so frequent, customary, and habituall unto us, that although they shine unto others, yet unto our selves they must not (as it were) be taken notice of.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if we shew forth any good worke, of what nature or qualitie soever, for this end, that we may reape and gaine glory thereby, it is not to be liked or allowed; but if it bee performed 178 med before men, that others may bee edified thereby, and God glorified, then it is not at all disallowed by Christ; who doth not forbid simply our workes to be seene, or to appeare before men; but not to be shewed forth for the praise of men; and therefore we must distinguish betweene these two.

To wit, { To seeke praise, and to boast of our good workes: for this our Saviour prohibites, Matth. 6.
To performe good workes evidently; for this is commanded in this place, for the good of our neighbour, and the glory of our God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we may distinguish of workes thus, some good workes are { Publicke, these of their owne nature require to bee manifested unto others, and may and ought modestly and warily bee represented unto others.
Private; these ought not to be published or divulged by us, because this would argue in us ambition, of vaine glory.

Quest. 3. Is it necessary then so to live, that others may see and know what we are and doe?

Answ. It is; yea hence Saint Paul appeales to the people, Yee are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly, and unblameably wee behaved our selves among you[c]. And therefore they stray from the true path, who neglect fame, credit, and reputation among men; who say they care not what others say or thinke of them; for the Apostle would have us so carefull in this particular, that he admonisheth us to avoid and abstaine from every appearance of evill[d], wee must approve our hearts unto the Lord, and our lives unto the world, that so men may see what wee do, and witnesse what we are; we must carefully endeavour so to walke, that we be not evill spoken of by any.

[c] 1 Thess. 2.10.

[d] 1 Thess. 5.22.

Obiect. It will here be objected, many speake evill of men for doing that which is good; and therefore it maters not much, what men say of us.

Answ. Some speak evill of men for { Evill actions, this is to bee reformed.
Doubtfull actions; and this is circumspectly to be avoided, for as much as in us lies, wee must give no such occasions, but eschew all such actions as may be evilly interpreted.
Good actions; and herein we may rejoyce; they speake evill of you (saith Saint Peter) because you runne not with them unto sin[e]. And thus we must be careful, that wee give not occasion to bee reproached for evill, or doubtfull actions, but if for good workes, then not to regard their detractions at all.

[e] 1 Pet. 4. 4.

Quest. 4. Is it necessary to hold forth good workes before men? Is it not enough to keepe our hearts unspotted?

Answ. Certainely there is a necessary use of good workes in a threefold regard; namely, First, they doe serve as notable meanes and instruments to set forth Gods glory by, (as in this verse.) Secondly, by them also our faith is shewed, published, and made knowne, for the good example of others[f]. Thirdly, our owne conscience is thereby quieted, and our election daily made more sure unto us[g].

[f] Iam. 2. 18.

[g] 2 Pet. 1. 10.

§. 5. That they may glorifie your Father.] The workes that Christ commands his Apostles to shew forth unto men for their edification, and Gods glory, are (as was formerly shewed) either the preaching of the word, or the practise of religion. The first belongs unto Ministers onely, the second to Preachers and people. Sect. 5.

First, Preachers must so labour in the preaching of the word, that people may thereby be provoked and stirred up to glorifie God.

Quest. 1. How must wee so preach that the Lord may gaine glory by it?

Answ. It is done 3 manner of wayes, viz. either, { First, by preaching the glorious workes of God.
Secondly, by perswading men to advance and set forth Gods glory in all their actions.
Thirdly, by labouring faithfully in the worke of the Ministerie: in becomming all things to all men, that they may by some meanes winne some: and in preaching the word, Opportunè Importunè, in season, and out of season[n].

[n] 1 Tim. 4.2.

Quest. 2. What is here required of people?

Answer. They must so heare the word preached, that God may bee glorified by their hearing, that is, First, in hearing they must learne the ouglinesse of sinne, that 1. seeing how deformed a thing it is, they may hate it, 2. seeing how deformed it makes them in the eyes of God, they may be afraid, and stricken with terrour and trembling of the just judgments of God: and 3. being afraid of the anger of God for sinne, they may the more fervently pray against sinne; and for the pardon of their sinnes, 4. and that thus praying, they may endeavour withall, that they may bee truely converted and turned from sinne. God is glorified by our hearing, when we thus heare.

Secondly, in hearing we must learne the mercy of God; that is, I. consider in the word, how mercifull the Lord is in his owne nature, II. admire the infinite mercy of God unto us and unto all mankinde. III. Labour to be made partakers of this mercy; beg it earnestly at Gods hands, that being sensible thereof, thou maist truely rejoyce: God is glorified by our hearing, when we thus heare.

Thirdly, hearers must learne so to heare, that their lives may bee directed piously, prudently, watchfully, and unblameably, because God is glorified by their thus hearing of his holy word, as followes in the next particular. Thus we have shewed the first work, which Christ requires unto Gods glory, which belongs unto Ministers, namely the preaching of the word.

Secondly, the next worke belongs both unto Preachers

Preachers and people, and that is the practise of religion: For all men must labour so to live, that God may be glorified in them and by them; or wee must labour to abound in those workes, by which glory may redound unto God.

Quest. 3. How is God to be glorified in our lives?

Answ. 1. First, when we being truely by God converted unto himselfe doe give praise, and glory, and honour unto God, our mouths being full of his praises, by reason of his manifold mercies, extended towards us: but of this we have to speake elsewhere.

Answ. 2. Secondly, when the workes themselves which wee doe, doe praise the Lord: that is, when our lives are replenished with those workes which are both pleasing unto God, and gratefull unto men. For the better understanding of this observe that there are three kindes of workes, to wit.

First, some workes are odious and abominable both unto God and man; as Murther, Incest, Treason, Rebellion, Cruelty, and the like; there is no question to bee made of these, for all wil grant that God is not glorified by these, but dishonoured.

Secondly, some workes are odious unto God, but gratefull unto men; as to flatter and sooth up men, to apply themselves to their dispositions. These workes are not to be done, for although they please men, yet they do not glorifie God.

Thirdly, some workes are both acceptable unto God, and gratefull unto men: And in these workes must we principally labour, because all good men will commend them, and give glory unto God for them. And therefore although all good workes are to be wrought, yet principally such as procure praise unto God from men, being approved as pretious both by God and men.

Quest. 4. What workes are these?

Answ. Such workes as have in them these two things; namely, first, those whose goodnes is evident & apparent unto all; viz. a solid observation of the morall Law; a life unblameable, uprightnesse in dealing conjoyned with modesty, a holy life conjoyned with humility, an honest walking in an honest calling with paines and diligence, patience in all crosses, injuries and wrongs conjoyned with prudence, and the like; for the goodnesse of this is questioned neither by Jew nor Gentile, all men by the light of nature approving of them.

Secondly, as their goodnesse must be evident unto al, so they must be profitable also unto men: S. Paul distinguisheth between a righteous man and a good man, telling us that for the former scarce any would dye, but for the latter, some would dare to dye [p] Rom. 5. 7. Now this is the true good man which some would lay downe their life for, who doth abound in those workes which are beneficiall and commodious unto others, namely; first the workes of pardon towards offenders, laid downe in these places, Rom. 12. 14. 17, 19. Coloss. 3. 13. and 1 Cor. 6. 7. and 1 Pet. 3. 9. It is profitable to those who offend to pardon their offences, and it is pleasing unto all to observe, how ready wee are to pardon and passe by wrongs. And therefore Christ prayes for those who crucified him, Father forgive them; and Stephen for those who stoned him, Lord lay not this sinne unto their charge. Secondly, the works of mercy, whereof wee treated largely before, vers. 7. And therefore I conclude, if we desire so to live, that the Lod may be glorified in us and by us, we must abound in every good work, but principally and chiefly in those which are 1. good in themselves 2. gratefull unto the good God. And 3. pleasing and profitable unto men.

§. 7. Your Father.] Sect. 7.

Why doth not Christ call God, the Lord, or Judge of all the world, or by some of his terrible names; but onely Father? Quest.

Because our Saviour by this relative compellation would provoke them unto a greater care, as if he would say, let this move you to shine before others in a holy life, because he is your Father, whose glory I perswade you to seeke; and they are children whom by your good workes you ought to bring unto the Father. And therefore he who neglects to hold forth the light of a holy conversation, doth both neglect the glory of his Father, and the conversion of his brethren. Answ.

§. 8. Which is in Heaven.] Sect. 8.

Why are these words added? Quest.

Because by the very mention of Heaven, all earthly impediments are obliterated and extinguished: as if our Saviour would say, bee not hindred from shining before men, by the world, for this is the will of your heavenly Father, that you should doe it. Answ.

VERS. 17. Think not yee that I am come to destroy the Law or the Prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. Vers. 17.

In this Sermon preached by our Saviour upon the Mount, there are these three parts.

To wit, the { Exordium, wherein our Saviour treats of true blessednesse, chap. 5. 3. unto vers. 13.
Tractate, concerning instructions which direct us in a holy life, unto chap. 7. vers. 24.
Conclusion, which is parabolicall, chap. 7. vers. 24. &c. unto the end of the chapter.

The

The Tractate hath a double instruction, whereof the first is of the preaching the Law, and that both of the Law preached, and this both in Preachers, the Apostles, chap. 5. 13. unto verse 17.

Generall, shewing that the Law is to be observed and kept, chap. 5. 17. unto vers. 21.

Particularly correcting some errors about the Law, alledged by the Jewes, either Truely, but not aright explicated, as of { Murder, chap. 5. 21. unto 27. / Adultery, chap. 5. 27. unto 31.

corruptly, and that either

Indirectly, and that either because

First, it was not a true or positive Law, but onely a toleration, as of Divorce, vers. 31. unto 33.

Secondly, it was not the whole Law, as of swearing, vers. 33. unto 38.

Thirdly, it was not given unto them, as of revenge, vers. 38. unto 43.

Directly, by adding unto the Law, as of love and hatred, vers. 43. &c. unto the end of the chapter.

Second is of the practice of pietie, where Christ followes a double method, namely,

First, hee condemns the evill examples of hypocrites in Almes-giving, chap. 6. 1. unto vers. 5.

Prayer, where he blames in them two things, { Boasting, 6. 5. 6. / Battologie, 6. 7. unto 16.

Fasting, 6. 16. unto vers. 19.

Secondly, he layes down the good precepts which are to be observed, viz.

First, wordly care is to be avoided, 6. 19. &c. unto the end.

Secondly, our brethren are not to be judged, 7. 1. unto vers. 6.

Thirdly, holy things are not to be prophaned, 7. 6.

Fourthly, prayer is confidently to be made, 7. 7. unto vers. 13.

Fifthly, holines is industriously to be followed, 7. 13. unto 24.

The generall Tractate concerning the law, hath 3. parts, to wit, the Proposition which is partly { Negative, wherein may be observed { The phrase, Thinke not yee. / The thing, that I am come to destroy the law. } Affirmative, wherein are two things, { The affirmation, Not to destroy, but to fulfil. / The confirmation, where two things are observeable, { The phrase of asseveration, verily. / The certainty where are { The time, until heaven, &c. / The universality { Not one jot, which is meant of precepts. / All shalbe fulfilled, which is meant of punishments.

Generall conclusion unto all men: whosoever shall { Breake, } vers. 19 / { Keepe. }

Particular application unto the Apostles, vers. 20.

Sect. 1. §. 1. I came not to destroy the Law, &c.

Wee have in these words two things to observe, { The occasion of them, / The scope, wherein there is two parts, the { First, Negative, wherein are { The phrase. / The thing it selfe. } / Second Affirmative. } Quest. First, why and upon what occasion doth Christ speake these words?

Answ. 1. First, to confute the Pharisees, who might have accused him, first for an Innovator: Secondly, for a Doctour of liberty; because many did suspect that he was contrary to the Law, [q] Math. 7. 29.

Both by his { Doctrine, because 1. he taught not as the Scribes [q]. 2. He condemned their traditions, Math. 15 9. &c. and chap. 23. 3. The legall lotions and purifications and ceremonies he contemned and despised, Math. 15. 2. And therefore by these things they thought that he was no friend unto the Law. / Conversation, because first he was very seldome amongst the Pharisees and Princes of the Jewes: Secondly, often amongst the Publicans and Harlots.

Answ 2. [r] Luk. 24. 27. 44. Secondly, these words were here added by Christ, to confirme the Doctrine which he had a little before taught unto his Apostles: For they might now have objected unto Christ; What necessity is there to let our light shine before men, if now thou put an end to the old law? To this our Saviour answers, I came not to destroy the law: in which answer he implies two things; viz. First, that he was no Innovator; neither went about to bring in any new thing, but only to fulfill those things which were fore-told by Moses and the Prophets [r]. Secondly, that hee went not about to loose the raines of liberty, by making void any part of the morall Law. And therfore the Ministers of the Word should so preach, that it may appeare, they neither 1. affect novelties (for there is no new thing in the true observation of the Law) Nor 2. give any liberty or leave to sinne or licentiousnesse at all.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Secondly, we now consider the phrase here used by our Saviour: Thinke not yee with your selves. When Queſt. 1. When doth Chriſt uſe this phraſe of ſpeech, and why here?

Anſw. It is not an uſuall ſpeech with Chriſt, but uſed by him onely, when and where he condemnes the opinions of others: Thus hee ſpeakes unto the Jewes, Thinke not yee that I will accuſe you to the Father [s]. And thus Saint Paul ſpeakes unto the Corinthians, Let no man thinke me a foole [t]. And ſo in this verſe, Thinke not ye, that I come to deſtroy the Law, &c. As if our Saviour would ſay, I know that there are many fooliſh opinions broached againſt the Law of God, but Ne vos putate, Think not you, &c. In which phraſe he implyes, that amongſt men there are many things held amiſſe concerning the Law of God.

[s] John 5. 45.
[t] 2 Cor. 11. 16.

Queſt. 2. What errours have beene ſet a foot about the Law?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome have rejected and condemned all Scripture whatſoever: as the Mirabiliarii, the Enthuſiaſtes, and the Anabaptiſts, Danæus de Hæreſ.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome reject the old Teſtament, the Law and the Prophets, becauſe to them they ſeeme contrary to the Goſpel; thus the Cerdonians (Danæus 62.) and the Marcionites, who condemne the whole Old Teſtament (Danæus 66.) as doe alſo the Appellites (69.) and the Severians, Tacians, and Manichees, Danæus 71.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, ſome ſlight the Decalogue or ten Commandements; thus did Simon Magus (Danæus ex Epiphanio) and the Cainani (Danæus 55.) and the Manichees, who call it a killing Letter, Senenſis 78. 2. c. yea an unjuſt and cruell Law, Senenſ. 452. 2. &c.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, ſome wholly neglect the workes of piety commanded in the Law, and for this cauſe have hated the law, becauſe it requires holineſſe; thus the Origeniſts reject all the Books both of the Old and New Teſtament, which reprove and condemne filthineſſe and uncleanneſſe (Danæus 115.) thus the Montaniſts ſlight the Law, becauſe they would have none compelled to live well (Danæus 194.) And ſome have given reaſons for the ſtrengthning of this opinion; namely, firſt becauſe the ſoule is not polluted by ſinne, but onely the body; thus the Simonians and the Gnoſticks (Danæus 6.) Secondly, becauſe we are ſaved by grace, and therefore it is lawfull to ſinne, if ſo be wee doe but beleeve (Rom. 6. 1.) thus the Baſilidians, and Gnoſticks, and Simon Magus, and Saturnians, and Manichees, and Ætians, and Eunomians; and hence the Corpocratians taught uncleanneſſe, and the Valentinians derided all goodneſſe. Now leſt ſome ſhould thinke that I revive and give new life to old forgotten and forſaken Hereſies; it will not be amiſſe to obſerve in a word, that there are many ſuch as theſe even at this day, who thinke it is lawfull for them to ſinne (becauſe where there is no Law there is no ſin, Rom. 4. 15.) and therefore they reject the Law (Senenſ. 79.) The Libertines teach that all ſins are lawfull, and therefore they plainly reject the Old Teſtament (Prateolus ex Lindano. 254. & è Calvino contra libertinos) Teaching us, that the wiſdome and opinions of the fleſh doe eaſily oppoſe themſelves to the Law and Commandements of God. Obſerv.

Why is carnall wiſedome ſo prone to contradict the pure and holy Law of God? Queſt. 3.

Firſt, becauſe it is not ſubject to the will of God, and therefore doth oppoſe it. The carnall minde is enmity againſt God: for it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can bee, Rom. 8. 7. Anſw. 1

Secondly, becauſe the Commandements of God are grievous to a corrupt and polluted heart, which cannot ceaſe to ſinne: And therefore doth oppoſe them. Anſw. 2.

§. 3. I came not to deſtroy the Law. Sect. 3.

The Jewes object this place, to prove that the Law ſhall not be abrogated, when the Meſſiah comes, thus; The Chriſtians ſay, that Chriſt was the true Meſſias, and yet he both obeyed and fulfilled the Law himſelfe, and both by example and Doctrine did move others alſo to the obedience thereof: In this verſe he ſaith, I came not to deſtroy the Law, but to fulfill it: and afterwards, verſ. 19. he ſaith, Whoſoever ſhall breake one of theſe leaſt Commandements, and ſhall teach men ſo to doe, he ſhall be called the leaſt in the kingdome of Heaven. And therefore, ſay the Jewes, that both by the words and deedes of Chriſt it evidently appeares, that the Moſaicall Law ſhall not ceaſe or be abrogated. Object. 1.

That we may truely ſee how Chriſt fulfilled the Law and the Prophets, we muſt remember that in the Law and Prophets were principally contained five things, namely, things morall, ceremoniall, judiciall, Sacramentall, and promiſes and threatnings. Anſw.

Firſt, in the law and Prophets there are Morall things, to wit, the ten Commandements, which are neceſſarily to bee obeyed unto ſalvation by all thoſe, who are of yeares of diſcretion: and therefore were not to ceaſe at the comming of Chriſt, nor to bee aboliſhed by him, but fulfilled.

Secondly, in the law and Prophets there were Judiciall things, as an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, and divers the like, in theſe there was judgement without mercy, and therefore they were to bee mitigated and allayed by the ſweetneſſe of mercy, at the comming of the Meſſiah.

Thirdly, in the Law and Prophets there were Ceremoniall things, to wit, all the ſacrifices, and many more, which being but figures of things to come, were to vaniſh when Chriſt (unto whom they all pointed) came into the fleſh: now even theſe Chriſt did obey & fulfil literally until the determinate time of their ceſſation, and then by himſelfe, and his Apoſtles, did reduce them unto a ſpirituall and myſticall ſenſe.

Fourthly, in the law and Prophets there were Sacramentall things, as circumciſion, the Paſchall Lambe, and the red Heifer; theſe were figures of Chriſts ſuffering, death, and blood-ſhed and therefore were neceſſarily to ceaſe when Chriſt came: And theſe were fulfilled by him in his death and ſuffering.

Fifthly,

182

Fiftly, in the law and Prophets, there were Promises of the comming of the Messias, and withall of the conversion of the Gentiles, of remission of sinnes, and eternall salvation, and these our Saviour perfectly fulfilled [1].

[1] Galatinus, lib. 11. cap. 2. fol. 400.

The Manichees (as was said before) rejecting the law of God, and the Old Testament, are urged (by Saint Augustine) to give over their opinion, considering what our blessed Evangelist hath positively avouched in this verse, why doe yee not (O Manichees) receive the law (saith the Father) and the Prophets, which Christ came to fulfill?

Here Faustus in the behalfe of them all takes the quarell in hand, disputing thus.

Obiect. 2 Firſt, none make mention of this saying but onely Matthew, who followed Christ when he came downe from the mount, and was called to bee an Apostle after this Sermon was preached, namely, Chap. 9. 9. but Saint Iohn saith nothing of it, who was alwayes with him.

Answ. Hereunto Augustine answers, that though Matthew heard it not from Christ upon the Mount, yet hee might either heare it from his owne mouth at some other time, or hee might heare it from Iohn who was present.

Obiect. 3 Secondly Faustus objects againe, this Gospell was not written by Matthew, but by some other, for of Matthew it is written in the third person: Hee seeth a man sitting at the receit of custome, whose name was Matthew, Mat. 9. 9.

Answ. Hereunto Augustine answers, that by the same argument Faustus may as well conclude, that Saint Iohn writ not his Gospell, for he speaketh of himselfe saying, Peter turned him about & saw the other Disciple whom Iesus loved.

Obiect. 4 Thirdly, Faustus objects, to beleeve the new Testament is nothing else but to acknowledge the disanulling of the old, and therfore the law is not now to be observed.

Answ. In the old Testament were figures, which must needs cease, when the things figured out are present, and even herein are the Law and Prophets fulfilled, in which it is written, that God would give a new Testament, Ieremiah 31. 31.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in the Morall law we may observe the
- Condition which is either of
  - Death, which is Maledict and a curse, and this Christ tooke away in his crosse, and abolished it, as appeares by these places 2 Cor. 3. 7. Gal. 3. 10. 13. Deut. 27. 26. and 1 Cor. 15. 56.
  - Life, which is Justification, and this also is abrogated, Rom. 3. 20. Gal. 2. 16. and 3. 11. and 5. 4, For Christ is the end of the law for righteousnesse to every one that beleeveth, Rom. 10. 4.
- Direction, the rule of good, and this is immutable as God himselfe is; because it is his will.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wee being in Christ are freed from the law of sinne and of death (Rom. 8. 2.) But yet wee are debtours not to the flesh, to live after the flesh; but to the law, to be regulated thereby; for the law is good, holy, just, spirituall, and to be consented unto, Rom. 7. 7. 12. 14. 16. yea to be delighted in, and that in the inward man. Rom. 7. 22. And therefore, although the ceremoniall law be now disanulled, and the conditions of the morall law abrogated; we being freed from the curse and condemning power of the law, and not justified by the law; yet as the law is a rule of direction unto us, so it is to be obeyed, and submitted unto.

Fourthly, when a Jew shall aske thee (saith Faustus) why thou dost not keepe the precepts of the Law, which Christ came not to dissolve, thou either 1. must confesse this verse to be false: or 2. deny thy selfe to bee Christs Disciple: or 3. yeeld to observe the ceremonies still. Obiect. 5

The faithfull (saith Augustine) doe keepe the Law and the Prophets, when truely, cordially, and unfainedly they love God and their neighbour, and as for figures and ceremonies, they know that things shadowed out by them are now fulfilled in Christ. Augustin. contra Faust. lib. 19. Cap. 7. Answer.

How is the Law destroyed, because our Saviour saith here, he came not to destroy the Law? Quest. 1.

Answ. 1. Firſt, the Law is destroyed, Male explicando, by a wrong interpretation thereof, and thus Christ gives the true sense of the Law, and refutes the impious expositions of the Scribes and Pharisees, vers. 21. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Law is dissolved, Male explendo, by a false fulfilling and accomplishing thereof. And thus Christ doth not teach, that obedience unto the Law is to bee neglected, but rather urgeth it.

Obiect. 6. Either by the comming of Christ the Law is destroyed, or else the Scripture is contrary to it selfe, but the latter is false, therefore the former is true. The necessity of the connexion is proved thus, Saint Paul urgeth, first, that by the workes of the law wee cannot be justified, Rom. 3. 20. 21. and Gal. 2. 16. and Rom. 4. 14. 15. Secondly, that it is impossible for the law to save us, Rom. 8. 3. Gal. 3. 21. Thirdly, that wee are not now under a pedagogue, Gal. 3. 24. 25. that is, not under the law, but under grace, Rom. 6. 14. we being dead unto the law, Romans 7. 4. Galat. 2. 19.

Answ. 1. Firſt, the ceremoniall law is abolished; for that was our pedagogue unto Christ, daies, and meats, and moneths, and feasts, and ordinances, and circumcision, were but shadowes of things to come; and therefore the substance and thing typified being come, the types and shadowes vanish out of sight. Read Heb. 10. 1. Gal. 5. 2. and 4. 10. and Ephes. 2. 15. Colos. 2. 16.

Obser. Teaching unto us this necessary instruction, that the Gospell doth not take away the obedience of the morall law: Blessed are they (saith David) that are upright in their waies, Ps. 1. 1. &c. and if wee would enter into life, our Saviour saith, we must keepe the Commandements. Mat. 19. 17. &c. whence S. Paul saith, that those who are in grace, are not without law to God, but under the law to Christ [v]. And againe, the grace of God which bringeth salvation, teacheth us to deny ungodlinesse [v] 1 Cor. 9. 21.

and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world[u]: And therefore both the negative and affirmative part, both of the first and second table, is to be obeyed even of the deare members of Christ, because this he did not by his comming destroy.

u Titus 2. 11. 12.

Quest. 2. Why must the Morall law bee observed in the times and places of the Gospell?

Answ. 1. First, because God is unchangeable, and therefore so is also his will, Iames 1. 17. But the Law (as was sayd before) is the will of God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, God requires of all persons, in all times, to live holily, and unblameably, as appeares by these places, Luk. 1. 79. and 1 Thessal. 4. 4. and Titus 2. 11. 14. and Heb. 12. 14. and 1 Pet. 1. 17. But the rule of holinesse, goodnesse, truth, equitie, and justice, is no where laid down but in the Law, and therefore the Morall Law is perpetuall.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Morall law is in force in the times of the Gospell, and must bee obeyed, because disobedience thereunto is severely punished. Hee that sinnes against the law, shall bee judged by the law, although hee live under the Gospell; as we may see in these places, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Ephes. 5. 3. Coloss. 3. 6. And therefore Bellarmine is most injurious unto us, in saying, that Protestants affirme, Christian libertie to consist in an absolute freedome from the obedience and subjection of the Morall law: Quod Moses cum suo Decalogo nihil ad nos pertineat: and that Moses with his Decalogue, belongeth not unto us[w].

w Bellar. lib. 4. de Iust. cap. 5 initio.

How false and malicious this is, all the world may know, considering that wee subscribe to the truth of this present Scripture, that Christ came not to dissolve, but to fulfill the law. Indeed the Muscovites doe hold, that the Decalogue is abrogated by the Apostles[x]: But Protestants are far off from so grosse an opinion: for we say, That Christian libertie consisteth in these three things, namely, x Theolog. Muscovit. cap. 5.

First, that wee are exempted from the Ceremonies of the Law, and the Judicials, so farre forth as they concerned the politicke state of the Jewes[y].

y Act. 15. 10.

Secondly, wee are freed from the curse and guilt of the law[z], Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, when hee was made a curse for us.

z Galath. 3. 13.

Thirdly, we are delivered from the servitude of sinne: And therefore it is a shamelesse slander, to avouch, that wee hold Christian liberty to consist in a freedome from the obedience of the Law of God.

Sect. 4. Quest. Answ. §. 4. The Law.] What Law is here meant?

There is a two-fold Law,

- First, the Law of the Gentiles, which Saint Paul calleth the law of Nature; They doe by nature the things of the Law, Rom. 2. 14.
- Secondly, the Law of the Jewes, which is three-fold, viz.
  - First; Ceremoniall, which is described and explained in the Bookes of Moses, especially in Leviticus; and prescribed rites and ceremonies unto the Jewes, to bee observed and performed in the worship of God.
  - Secondly, Judiciall, which prescribed ordinances for the government of the common-wealth of the Jewes, and the civill punishment of offenders.
  - Thirdly; Morall, here meant; and wherein 3 things are observeable, viz.
    - First, the Morall Law is that which was written at first in the heart of Adam, and in all men since by nature, in regard whereof it binds all men.
    - Secondly, it commands perfect obedience, both inward in thought and affection; and outward in speech and action.
    - Thirdly, it bindeth to the curse and punishment, every one that faileth in the least performance of holy duties[a].

a Gal. 3. 10.

Sect. 5. Quest. §. 5. And the Prophets.] Who are meant here by Prophets?

Prophets are of three sorts, namely, First of the Jewes. Secondly, of the Gentiles, of whom Paul sayth, One of your owne Prophets hath sayd. Thirdly, of the truth, of whom Christ sayth, Behold, I send unto you Prophets and wise men. Now our Saviour meaneth the Prophets that did foretell of him. Faustus ex August. lib. 19. cap. 7. contr. Faust.

Sect. 6. §. 6. But to fulfill it.] Our Saviour here affirming, that he came not to destroy the Law, but to fulfill it, may make some doubt, whether there be any difference betweene the Law and the Gospell, or not; and how they differ.

Answ. 1. The difference betweene the Law and the Gospell stands in five things, namely,

The Law

- First, is Naturall, and was in mans nature before the fall.
- Secondly, sets forth Gods justice in rigour, without mercie.
- Thirdly, requires perfect righteousnesse within us.
- Fourthly, threatneth judgement without mercie, & therefore it is called the ministery of condemnation[c].
- Fiftly, promiseth life to the doer[d].

The Gospell.

- Is spirituall, revealed after the fall, in the covenant of grace.
- Sets forth Justice and Mercie, united both in Christ.
- Revealeth our acceptance with God, by imputed righteousnesse.
- Shewes mercie to mans sinne, in and by Christ, if wee doe repent, and believe in him with a lively faith.
- To the believer. Rom. 4. 5.

c 2 Cor. 3. 7. 9.

d Rom. 10. 5.

184 How did Christ fulfill the Law?

Queſt. 2. Anſw. 1. First, by and in his Doctrine, and that theſe two wayes; Firſt, by reſtoring unto the Law its proper meaning, and true ſence (as Matth. 5. verſ. 21 22. 27. 28.) which was depraved by the Phariſees, as appeares plainly in the whole next chapter. Secondly, by revealing the right way, whereby the law may be fulfilled.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Chriſt fulfilled the Law in his Perſon, and that five wayes: Firſt, by becomming accurſed to the Law, in ſuffering death upon the Croſſe for us: for although the Law could not condemne Chriſt, who was innocent and unſpotted, yet becauſe hee had put on our perſon, which the Law had condemned by a curſe [e], and alſo taken upon him our curſe and malediction, he fulfilled that crying Law, curſed is every one that doth not abide in all, that is written in the law [f]. He was made a curſe for us, that we might obtaine and partake the bleſſing of Abraham in him. Secondly, hee fulfilled the Law in his perſon, by enduring and undergoing human things, although hard to bee borne, and unjuſtly commanded: Thus hee payes tribute (when it was required) although it were proper unto ſtrangers, the children being free. Thirdly, Chriſt fulfilled the Law in his perſon, by obſerving the ceremonies and ſhadowes of the Law. Fourthly, by fulfilling all the predictions and propheſies of the Law concerning himſelfe; whether they were, I. the Types of the Law: or, II. the promiſes of ſalvation, as for example, Iacob ſaith, The Scepter ſhall not depart from Iudah, &c. untill Shiloh come [g]. Moſes ſayth, The Lord will raiſe up unto thee a Prophet from the midſt of thee, of thy brethren, unto him ſhall yee hearken [h]. Iſaias ſaith, The Spirit of the Lord is upon mee, therefore the Lord hath anoynted me, and ſent me, &c [i]. Read further, Iſai. 53. 4-6. Ezech. 36. 25. 26. Zach. 12. 10. Pſalm. 110. 1. In all which places, and many more, wee may ſee the Oracles and predictions of the Law and Prophets, concerning the Regall, Sacerdotall, and Propheticall offices of Chriſt, really and verily fulfilled by him: and therefore he doth moſt truely affirme, that hee came not to diſſolve the law, but to fulfill it. Fiftly, Chriſt fulfilled the Law in his perſon, by performing perfect obedience unto the Morall law, doing all that was therein required of him, either in regard of God, or man; in which reſpect hee was ſayd to bee made vnder the Law [k]. There was in him ſuch a perfect obedience, and conformitie unto the Law of God, that he did obſerve it fully, and fulfill it without the leaſt defect; yea herein dares challenge his adverſaries the Jewes, Which of you can reprove mee of ſinne [l]. And thus Chriſt in his perſon fulfilles the Propheſies, Ceremonies, Types, Shadowes, and Promiſes of the Law; yea, after his reſurrection, telleth the two Diſciples, that it was neceſſary, that hee ſhould fulfill all things which was written of him in the Law of Moſes, and of the Prophets, and Pſalms.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, Chriſt fulfilled the Law in men three wayes, namely,

First, by creating faith in their hearts, whereby they lay hold on Chriſt, who fulfilled the Law for them. Secondly, by writing the Law in their inward man; Ierem. 31. 33. I will write my law in their hearts. Thirdly, by giving them his owne bleſſed Spirit, which makes them endeavour to fulfill the Law; which endeavour Chriſt accepts for perfect obedience, though it be imperfect: For Chriſt infuſing the grace of his Spirit into us, by the vertue thereof wee are quickned, and begin to fulfill the Law, in performing new obedience unto God, according to all his commandements. And thus we ſee the truth of this aſſertion, or ſentence, I came not to deſtroy the law, but to fulfill it.

VERS. 18. Verily I ſay unto you, till heaven and earth paſſe, one jot, or one tittle, ſhall in no wiſe paſſe from the law, till all be fulfilled. Verſ. 18.

§. 1. Till heaven and earth paſſe.] Shall the Law end when heaven and earth doth paſſe away? Sect. 1. Queſt.

Anſw. 1 Firſt, ſome anſwer, that the written Law and Prophets ſhall paſſe away, but not the Law it ſelfe, thus Bucer.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome ſay that the yoake and coaction of the law ſhall paſſe away, but not the rule or truth thereof.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, ſome ſay the phraſe is figurative, and this I conceive to bee the truth, They ſhall feare thee Oh Lord (ſaith David) Donec Sol, ſo long as the Sunne and Moone endure [m], where Donec doth not include a ſet time; ſo our Saviour ſaith unto his Apoſtles, Lo, I am with you, Donec, even unto the end of the world [n], that is for ever: Yea Saint Luke thus alleadgeth this verſe, It is eaſier for heaven and earth to paſſe, then one tittle of the law to faile [o]. Wherefore Gualter concludes, Eſt argumentum ab impoſſibili: As it is impoſſible for heaven and earth to paſſe, ſo it is impoſſible for any part of the law not to bee fulfilled, or to bee made voide: Teaching us that the Morall law is alwaies to be obſerved, by all men, in all ages, Chriſts word ſhall not paſſe away, Mat. 24. 35. and the word of our God is perpetuall, enduring for ever. That which was ſinne in it ſelfe once, is ſin alwaies, for there is no mutation with God at all, Jam. 1. 17.

If the ſtudious Reader deſire a learned expoſition of theſe two words, Jot, and Tittle, let him read Senenſis, Biblioth ſanct. lib. 2. fol. 75. fine. & 76.

What doth our Saviour meane by theſe words? Queſt.

Anſw. Ἰῶτα, Jot is the leaſt letter, κεραία, Tittle, is leſſe then Jota or Jot. Auguſt. ſ. by which our Saviour meanes, that there is nothing ſo little in the law that it may bee omitted; hence he ſaith elſewhere that account muſt bee given unto God for idle words, yea for thoughts. God is wiſer then men, and hath commanded no vaine thing, but all things are ſignificant, which are enjoyned in the law, that being altogether juſt [p], God is holy in all his workes, much more in all his lawes, and therefore the leaſt tranſgreſſion of the law, ſhall be puniſhed.

[p] Pſal. 12. 7.

§. 3.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Vntill all things be fulfilled.]

Obiect. It may here bee obiected, that many things commanded in the law, are violated and broken, and therefore all things therein, are not fulfilled.

Answ. These words are not to bee referred unto the life of men, but unto the truth of the doctrine: for although many precepts are transgressed, yet all the promises and threatnings shall certainely be accomplished in Gods appointed time.

Vers. 19. VERS. 19. Whosoever therefore shall breake one of these least commandements, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdome of heaven; but whosoever shall doe and teach them, the same shall bee called great in the kingdome of heaven.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Whosoever shall breake one of these.] λύειν

Observ. The word here used signifies to untie a knot, or to loose a bond or chaine: Teaching us, that the Morall Law is a Bond which binds the conscience; and remaines still as a rule of obedience unto us, as was shewed in the 17. verse.

Quest. 1. Cannot a man obey God aright, except hee acknowledge this obligation unto the Morall Law?

Answ. No: because if we be free from God, wee are the servants of sinne, and slaves unto our owne lusts; and therefore so long as wee have not taken Christs yoake upon us, and yielded up our selves to the service and obedience of God, as bound in conscience to serve him, and him alone and that with all our hearts; wee have not performed any true, faithfull, or acceptable service unto him.

Quest. 2. Have the children of God then under the Gospell no liberty?

Answ. There is a two-fold liberty or freedome, namly. First, External. Secondly, Internall.

First, there is an Internall liberty, when a man will not be taught, or directed, or reproved, or compelled to performe any service unto God. This is not granted unto any, yea all must know, that what they doe is not gratefull unto God, except they pay it as a debt, and do confesse that it is their duety to doe it. There are three sorts of men that obey God. First, some acknowledge the obligation, but are backeward to performe covenants; they confesse it is their duety to obey God, but they doe it unwillingly, these must remember that God loves a cheerfull and ready service. Secondly, some freely and willingly doe that which God requires, but will not acknowledge it as an obligation, they are content to performe holy dueties, but yet will not confesse that they are so obliged to the performance thereof, that they had sinned if they had omitted them, or that they have deserved nothing for the performance of them. These must remember that God requires service of us, and not will-worship. Thirdly, some confesse that it is their duety to serve the Lord, and labour to obey him willingly and cheerfully, readily, and with a willing mind; and the obedience onely of these is acceptable unto God. It is too ordinary with many, because the word is preached by poore and meane men, to disdaine to obey it, yea hence to doe whatsoever they will, and to come to Church when they will; but they must distinguish betweene the Messengers and Message, Embassadour and Embassage, for although the Ministers be poore, or contemptible, yet the word they bring, is not to be despised, because that comes from God [q].

[q] 2 Cor. 5. 19.

Secondly, there is an Internall liberty, when the conscience dares not resist the Law of God, and this is twofold. First, Servile, Oderunt peccare mali, formidine pœnæ. When a man out of a slavish feare of punishment dare not transgresse the Law of God; this is not praise-worthy in it selfe, but yet these are much better then those, who will not at all obey the Lord.

Secondly, Filiall, when the love and reverence of God are so conjoyned together, that we neither dare commit any evill or omit any thing that is good, but of this elswhere.

Sect. 2. Quest. §. 2. One of these least commandements, &c.] Is any sinne small, is not every transgression against an infinite Law, and an infinite God?

Answ. Sinne is esteemed small in a threefold regard: First, in respect of the degree thereof, because all sinnes are not equall; as for example, Incest is a greater sinne than a lascivious word, or wanton thought. Secondly, in respect of Difficulty thereof, because it is more easie to abstaine from some sinne than from other; as for example, a man doth easilier forbeare murder and theft, than lesse sinnes. And hence the Pharisees tithed Mints, but left undone the greater workes of the Law [r]; that is, they performed easie duties, but those which were hard to bee obeyed, they omitted. Thus some sinnes may bee called lesse than other, because wee can more willingly forbeare, & more easily abstain from some sins, than from other, some being more pleasing unto our nature, and sutable to our dispositions, than others.

[r] Mat. 23. 23.

Thirdly, sinne is said to bee small or little, in regard of our Estimation; and thus the Scribes and Pharisees thought it a lesse sinne to violate the commandements of God, then their owne traditions [s]. And this is that which our Saviour meets with, and condemnes in this verse, proving that there is no sinne little, or small, because 1. every sinne is against an infinite law, which is both the rule of true, good honest, and profitable things, 2. because every sinne is against the Majesty of God, the true Lawgiver, and 3. because the least sinne workes death and condemnation: for sinne is ἀνομία, the prevarication of the Law, and the breach of the Law is death: Hence some sinnes which seeme small unto man have beene severly punished by God, as Adams eating of an Apple was punished by expulsion out of Paradise; Achans preserving the gold and garment out of the fire, was punished with the death of himself & his family: Sauls sparing of the best of the Cattle was the cause of his rejection from the Crowne, and for gathering a few stickes upon the Sabbath day the poore man was stoned to death. Numb. 15.32.33.

[s] Mat. 15. 9.

186 §. 3. He shall be called the least in the Kingdome of heaven.

Sect. 3. Quest. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, they are diversely interpreted; and therefore that wee may attaine unto the true sense of them, observe, that there are three words or voices in them. First, Vocabitur, hee shall bee called, that is, he shall bee esteemed, or he shall be indeede the least, &c. as before verse 9. he shall be called the Sonne of God, that is, not falsely, but he shall be made Gods sonne. Now in this word all the Interpreters agree.

Secondly, Minimus, the least; First, some understand this for Nullus; so Calvin, and Stapleton: Minimus vocabitur, that is, minimè vocabitur (Castalio) he shall be called the least, that is, hee shall not bee called at all, one of the kingdome of God. Secondly, some understand by Minimus, Infimus, he shal be called the least, &c. that is, he shall be the lowest, and most inferiour in the kingdome of heaven; as if our Saviour would say, he shall bee admitted into the Kingdome, but he shall not be honoured therein, thus the Papists expound generally the words as followes by and by.

Thirdly, in regno cælorum, in the kingdome of heaven, this I. some expounds of the kingdome of the Church, and of Grace, as Calvin and Beza: because thus Iohn Baptist was called the least in the kingdome of heaven. Luke 7. 28. II. some expound this of life eternall, and so Aretius and Stapleton.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we may perceive here a difference Object. 1. then, in this word Minimus, the least; For from hence the Papists collect, and hereupon establish their Evangelicall Counsels unto perfection; He (say they) that breakes the least (Counsell not Precept) shall bee called least, (that is, of least esteeme, as the Laicks, or Plebeians) But he that keepes the least, (that is, the Monkes, and Friers, and Nunnes) shall be highly esteemed, and greatly prized.

Answ. To this I answer first, Christ in this place speakes of Precepts, not of Counsels, as appeares. First from the phrase he uses, calling them Mandata, Commandements. Secondly, from the scope of the place: our Saviour principally here prohibiting the violation of the least commandements, and understanding the internall sinne of Object. 2 the soule. Thirdly, this will appeare by the remoovall of their objections: First the Papists say, they are called the least sinnes; and therefore they are not great.

Answ. This followes not, they are called the least, therefore they are little in themselves; but I. because others are greater, all sinnes not beeing equall. II. because the Pharisees thought the sinnes of the heart to be but small.

Object. 3 Secondly, they object, Minimus erit, hee shall be the least; he doth not say exterminabitur hee shall be destroyed; hee shall not bee cast out of the Church, but hee shall bee lightly regarded, in the Church. To this their owne Stapleton answers; Imò nullus erit, hee shall Answ. not all belong unto the Kingdome of heaven. Non significat gradum inferiorem, sed è cœlo exclusionem. (Chrysost. ſ.) Least here doth not signifie an inferiour degree of glory, but a direct expulsion from heaven, as followes in the next verse, except you bee more righteous then the Scribes and Pharisees, you cannot be saved.

Thirdly, from what was said in the first answer, we may observe a difference amongst ex- Answ. 3.
positors about the meaning of these words, kingdome of heaven; I. some understanding them of the kingdome of grace. And II. some of the kingdome of glory: Now I suppose that they may be understood of both; namely, first of the kingdome of grace, because the Church of Christ is ever and anone called the Kingdome of heaven, as Matt. 3. 2. and 4. 17. and Luke 7. 28. The Church of God is the Kingdom of Christ, and the Church militant and triumphant make up but one and the same kingdome. Secondly, these words may be understood of the kingdom of Glory; he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven, that is, hee who is disobedient to the least of Gods Commandements, howsoever hee may bee esteemed in the world, yet with God hee shall bee rejected, neither by him allowed a place in the Kingdome of Heaven. The Lord respects no mans person, but judgeth every man according to his workes, and therefore those who give way unto the workes of wickednesse shall receive from him the reward of their iniquitie.

§. 4. Whosoever shall doe the least of these commandements; and teach them, &c.] Sect. 4.

Our Saviour in these words doth silently point at three sorts of Teachers, namely.

First, those who teach indeede, but by their teaching destroy the law; and therefore neither they themselves fulfill the law, neither by their teaching doe they induce others unto the obedience thereof.

Secondly those who doe not destroy the law by their opinions, but doe truely teach the law unto others, although they doe not practise it in themselves: both these are rejected by Christ.

Thirdly, those who teach the law soundly, and practise it sincerely; that is, who direct by their doctrine and example others unto God, and instruct them in the workes of righteousnesse, and true holinesse; and these are they, whom our Saviour saith here, shall bee called great in the kingdome of heaven; which simply is to bee understood of a greater and more eminent degree of glory, according to that of David, They that turne many to righteousnesse, shall shine as the starres for ever and ever [w]. Parens sup.

[w] Daniel 12. 3.

VERS. 20. For I say unto you, that except your righteousnesse shall exceede the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdome of heaven. Vers. 20.

§. 1. For I say unto you except, &c.] Sect. 1.

Bellarmine produceth this place, to prove that Object. 1 there can bee no certaintie of salvation in this life, life, arguing thus, if salvation depend upon the condition of workes, then there can bee no certaintie thereof; but the Scripture doth in plaine termes teach us, that salvation depends upon the condition of workes; Therefore none can bee sure of his salvation.

The Minor or second proposition he confirmes by this verse, I say unto you, except your righteousnesse exceede the righteousnes of the Scribes and Pharisees, you cannot enter into the knigdom of heaven: so chap. 19. If thou wouldest enter into life, keepe the Commandements.

Answ. 1. First, the condition of workes doth either simply suppose 1. the necessitie of workes; or 2. over and above the merite of workes: Now in the first sense the Scriptures doth require indeede, that they who desire to bee assured of eternall life and salvation, must labour to abound in the fruits of sanctification: And thus wee grant that salvation doth depend upon the condition of workes.

In the second sense it is signified that this salvation is acquired by the merit of those workes of sanctification: And this we altogether deny, as followes in the following objection, and third answer of this.

Answ. 2. Secondly, although salvation doth depend upon the condition of workes, in the first sense, yet it followes not hence, that therefore there can be no certaintie of salvation; but rather on the contrary wee say, that this condition of workes being supposed, there is a great certaintie of salvation; because none can be faithfull, who doth not give all diligence in good workes; and those who doe, know hereby that they are faithfull.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, in the second sense, wee grant that there can bee no certaintie of Salvation, such a condition of workes being supposed as includes merit: But Bellarmine cannot perswade us Protestants, to grant that any such condition of workes is made in the Gospel; neither doth hee prove it, the places alleadged by him being understood of the first condition of workes, which supposeth their necessity, not of the second, which supposeth their Merit[x].

It is questioned betwixt us and the Papists, whether the Evangelicall promises have the condition of workes added unto them, not simply, but whether as antecedent or consequent: And Bellarmine affirmes the former, we the latter.

Obiect. 2 The Jesuite objects this place for the confirming of his opinion, Except your righteousnesse exceede the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye cannot enter into the kingdome of heaven. This is an Evangelicall promise, because it comprehends the kingdome of heaven: and yet it hath the condition of actuall righteousnesse, which consists in a perfect observation of the Commandements.

Answ. 1. First, it may bee doubted, whether this bee an Evangelicall promise or not, considering that Christs scope here is to vindicate the law of workes, from the traditions of the Pharisees: for when he had protested, that he came not destroy the law, but to fulfill it; had & pronounced them to be the least in the kingdome of heaven, who broke one of these Comandements: he doth by and by adde, Except your righteousnesse exceede the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisees, yee cannot enter into the kingdome of heaven; signifying hereby, that this righteousnesse of the law did farre exceede and excell that righteousnesse, which the Pharises did exercise and commend as most perfect.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the reason why the Cardinall perswades himselfe, that this is an Evangelicall promise, is because it comprehends the Kingdome of heaven: But this is nothing, for by the kingdome of heaven is meant life eternall (as all grant:) And life eternall was propounded and promised to legall righteousnesse (as the Papists themselves confesse.) Wherefore, what should hinder, why wee may not say, that the kingdome of heaven is propounded and promised to legall righteousnesse? I confesse that this kingdome is in some sort proper to the Gospel, namely, in a double regard.

First, because the plaine and direct name is in the Gospel, not in the law; this phrase (The kingdome of heaven) being frequent in the New Testament, but not found in the Old.

Secondly, because this kingdome of heaven is obtained by the Gospel, not by the law: Now if these two regards should make the kingdome of heaven not to belong unto the law, the same would make life eternall not to belong unto the law; which is absurd.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, although wee should grant that this is an Evangelicall promise, not a legall, yet the argument is idle, because it doth not prove the antecedent condition of workes (which is the thing in question) but the consequent; that is, that good workes doe not goe before as meritorious causes of justification and salvation, but followe after as fruits of sanctification.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the last words of the Jesuites objection are as false as the rest, for this consequent righteousnesse is not placed in a perfect observation of the Commandements of God, for this would destroy the remission of sinnes: If wee could perfectly fulfill the law, then wee needed no pardon, but this is grossely absurd and false, as shall else-where be shewed[y].

[y] Chamier. tom. fol. 521. de neces. oper. lib. 15. cap. 5. Sect. 3. 4. 5. 6. Sect. 2. Quest. 1. Answ. Quest. 2. Answ.

§. 2. Your, except your righteousnesse, &c.] Why doth our Saviour adde this word Your?

Because righteousnesse is not acceptable before God except it be Ours; we cannot bee helped by another mans righteousnesse, but every one must be saved by his owne faith, Rom. 10.

How then are wee saved by the merits of Christ?

Because they are Ours: as appeares thus, first they were done for us; Christ fulfilled the law, and performed whatsoever his father required of him, and that for us. Secondly, faith applies Christs active and passive obedience to us; yea Christ himselfe unto us, and with him all things[z]. Thirdly, faith purgeth and sanctifieth; or leadeth unto puritie and sanctitie;

[z] Rom. 8. 34.

188 thus ſaith the Apoſtle, God put no difference betwixt us and them purging and purifying our hearts by faith[a], and Saint John ſaith, hee that hopes to be ſaved by Chriſt, will purge himſelfe, even as hee is pure[b]. And thus the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt is imputed unto us, and applied unto us, and ſo made Ours:

a Acts 15. 9.
b 1 Iohn 3.3.

Queſt. 3. What may wee thinke of Supererogatory merits, and Church treaſure? doth not that availe others, and pleaſe God, yea ſatisfie his juſtice in the behalfe of others.

Anſw. This is falſe and ridiculous: For firſt a man cannot ſave his owne ſoule by his owne workes, much leſſe then ſave his brother, by his overplus. Secondly, no man can doe more then hee ought to doe for himſelfe, and therefore none can have any overplus of workes whereby others may be bettered. Thirdly, the Scripture plainely affirmes that to redeeme a brother from death, or to ſave a ſoule, is too great a worke for man, and muſt be left wholy unto the Lord, who onely can doe it; and therefore although a man could ſatisfie for himſelfe, yet hee could not for another by his merite.

Queſt. 4. The Papiſts here demand, why our brothers merits may not as well be applied unto us, as the merits of Chriſt are?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, this is little better then blaſphemy thus to compare God and man together: for God owes nothing unto man, and therefore may give, & communicate unto him what he pleaſes, but every mans owes all he can doe (and more) unto God, and therefore hath no good workes or merits to impart unto his brother.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Faith apprehends the merits of Chriſt, and makes it ours; but what faith can we have in our brothers workes or merits? faith is built upon the promiſes, but where have wee any promiſe, that by other mens workes of ſupererogation we ſhall be ſaved? A Papiſt with his mony may buy of the Prieſts ſome of this Church treaſure, but he can never by faith (enformed and founded upon the word of God) be aſſured, that it will availe him at all.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, Chriſt was given unto us for a Mediator; now how injurious is it to the office of Chriſt, to make our brother our Mediatour unto God, that he would accept the overplus of their merits for us?

Sect. 3. §. 3. Righteouſneſſe, except your righteouſneſſe.] This place is alleadged by one of the preſent pillers of our Church againſt Popiſh equivocation; That doctrine which is leſſe honeſt then the doctrine of Pagans, is intollerable among Chriſtians: But jeſuiticall equivocating is leſſe honeſt then the doctrine of Infidels and Pagans; Therefore ought to bee eſteemed abhominable among Chriſtians. The Major propoſition is taught by our Saviour in this verſe, Except your righteouſneſſe doe exceede, &c. ſhewing where there is more knowledge of Chriſt, there the profeſſion muſt be more honeſt: And Saint Paul ſaith expreſſly, There is ſuch fornication among you, as is not among the heathen[c]: Concluding that it is blaſphemy againſt God, for a Chriſtian to bee more vile in life then a Pagan.

Argum.

c 1 Cor. 5.1.

The Minor is proved from the Jeſuit (Eman. Sà. Ioſ. Aphor. Tit. Iuramentum) who telleth us that ſome of the Papiſts hold, that a priſoner unjuſtly detained in priſon, if upon his oath he be licenced to goe forth, is bound according to his oath to returne againe; except hee bee abſolved from his oath by a Biſhop. This is an oath without equivocation; but our Equivocators thinke their equivocation in making an oath better, and of more power then any Biſhop to free them from perjurie in an oath; eſteeming it as good as no oath, wherein they uſe their Reſervation, when as yet the very infidels in reſpect of their naturall knowledge of God, kept better fidelity among men. If any deſire an example or further proofe of this, I referre him to Biſhop Mortons confutation of Equivocation, Chap. 17. part 3. fol. 89.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Except your righteouſneſſe exceede the righteouſneſſe, &c.] Queſt. 1. What doth our Saviour condemne in the Phariſees and Scribes, that hee here admoniſheth all his to excell them, and not to follow their ſteps, but rather to outſtrip them?

Anſw. There was in the Righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſees, a fourefold Hypocriſie, which our Saviour juſtly reproves, the firſt conſiſted in externall righteouſneſſe without internall, whereof Chriſt ſpeaketh, ſaying, yee Phariſees make cleane the outſide of the cup, and of the platter, but the inward part is full of ravening and wickedneſſe. Yee fooles did not he, that made that which is without, make that which is within alſo[d]? And againe, Woe be unto you Scribes, Phariſees, Hypocrites, for ye are like unto whited tombs, which appeare beautifull outward, but are within full of dead mens bones, and of all filthineſſe[e], that is, outwardly ye appeare righteous untomen, but within ye are full of hypocriſie and iniquity.

d Luk 11. 36.
e Mat. 23. 27.

The ſecond conſiſted in an externall holineſſe alſo, but prepoſterous and defective, becauſe they were ſcrupulous in trifles, but negligent in things of weight: hence Chriſt ſaith unto them, woe be unto you Phariſees, for yee tithe the mint, and rue, and paſſe over judgement and the love of God[f], and the weighty matter of the law[g].

f Luke 11. 42.
g Mat. 23. 23.

The third Hypocriſie of the Phariſees was a verball not a reall, a famed not a true obſervation of Gods commandements, which Chriſt taxed in them, ſaying, whatſoever they bid you obſerve, that obſerve and doe; but doe not according to their workes, for they ſay and doe not[h].

h Mat. 23. 3.

The fourth Hypocryſie of the Phariſees was vaine glory, for in all their actions of religion they ſought the glory and praiſe of men; as our Saviour in the next chapter doth plainely prove. Now from this fourefold hypocriſie of the Scribes and Phariſees, Chriſt dehorteth all Chriſtians by a motive of heavenly bliſſe, in this verſe; as if our Saviour would ſay, Labour I. that your righteouſneſſe may be externall and internall: II. that you may be more carefull of the performance of ſubſtantiall and reall things, then of circumſtantiall and rituall: III. That your religion may not conſiſt in a verball profeſſion, but in a reall practiſe. IV. Be not proud or vaine vaine glorious in the duties which you performe, but seeke the glory of God in all your actions; and then assure your selves that your righteousnesse exceeding the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisees, you shall certainely enter into the Kingdome of heaven, i.

i Copley. observ. doctr. et mor. fol. 101.

What sort of righteousnesse is it, which our Saviour taxeth here in the Scribes and Pharisees?

Quest. 2. Answ. There are three kinds of righteousnesse, viz. Distributive, Commutative, and Directive or Regulative; now they were faulty in all these: For first they honoured rich men, and despised poore men, and therefore transgressed the lawes of Distributive righteousnesse.

Secondly, they did wrong, deceive, and injure their neighbours, by oppression, and fraud, and therefore violated Commutative righteousnesse.

Thirdly, they did not governe or regulat their lives aright, making no conscience of the sinnes of the heart, because men saw them not, yea obeying outwardly the Commandements of God, either for feare of punishment, or the praise of men, or the gaine of worldly things, and the like base ends; and therefore sinned against that Righteousnesse which the Lord had expressed in his word for them to regulate their lives and conversations by k.

k Anton. Part. 3. Titul. 18. cap. 5. Sect. 4. col. 2.

§. 5. Of the Scribes and Pharisees.

Sect. 5. Quest. 1. Who were the Scribes and Pharisees?

Answ. 1. First, a Scribe is a name of office, whereof there were two sorts among the Jewes. First, Civill, who were like publique Notaries, and did register the affaires of Princes; and such an one was Shimshai. Ezra. 4. 8. Secondly, Ecclesiastical, who were imployed in the expounding of the Scripture; such an one was Ezra himselfe, chap. 7. verse 1. 5. 6. and those who are mentioned. Mat. 13. 52. & 23. 2. & such are meant in this place, to wit, men in Eccleſiasticall Office, descending from the Tribe of Levi, who expounded the law unto the people: and these were all one with the Priests and Levites under the law, wherefore Ezra is called both a Scribe and a Priest. Nehem. 8. 1. 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the name Pharisee betokeneth a sect not an office; for there were three speciall sects among the Jewes, namely, the Essenes, the Sadnces, and the Pharises: The Essenes were like popish Monks and Fryers, which did separate themselves from the people; vowing, and dedicating themselves to live in perpetuall sanctitie. The Saducès were a sect who did expound the law according to the letter and syllable, and withall denied the Resurrection and the immortalitie of the soule, as is plaine, Acts 23. 8. The Pharisees were such as did forsake the common exposition of the Scribes, teaching and framing a more exact and strict exposition of the law, according to the traditions of the Fathers; and these were most holy outwardly, and of chiefe account among the Jewes; and such an one was Paul. Acts 23. 6. and 26. 5. yea sometimes the Scribes and Pharisees were all one, that is, the Pharisees were also Scribes, as appeares thus, Iohn 1. 19. it is said; The Jewes sent Priests and Levites (which were Scribes as was shewed before Answer 1.) unto Iohn, and verse 24. They who were sent unto Iohn were Pharisees.

Quest. 2. Why doth our Saviour mention onely the Scribes and Pharisees, and not the Publicanes also? must wee not exceede them in righteousnesse also as well as the other, or are the Publicanes better then the Scribes or Pharisees?

Answ. 1. First, the Scribes and Pharisees were not
- Worse then the Publicanes, in regard of their present condition, for they had attained unto a higher degree or measure of holinesse then they: the Pharisees being pure in their outward man, but the Publicanes polluted.
- Better then the Publicanes, in regard of true repentance and conversiō, but rather worse; for the Publicanes confesse they are sinners, but the Scribes & Pharisees think themselves wronged, when they are so called l.

l Ioh. 9. 40

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour names the Scribes and Pharisees, and not the Publicans, for these two causes: First, because he would convince that pride which was not hid, but openly discovered in the Pharisees, but in the poore and contemptible Publicans there was none; and therefore Christ doth not name them. Secondly, because he would admonish his Apostles to take heed that they were not deceived; now they were not so prone to be seduced by the Publicans, as they were to be carried away with the leaven of the Pharisees, and therefore our Saviour names these, and not those.

VERS. 21. Yee have heard, that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill: and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgement. Vers. 21.

§. 1. It was said by them of old time.

Sect. 1. Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour alledge or recite these words?

Answ. To teach us, that Antiquity is not alwayes true: it may bee said of Old, and yet bee false.

Quest. 2. Tertullian saith, Quod antiquissimum verissimum, that which is most ancient is most true; And the Prophet directed by the Spirit of God commands us, To seeke and aske for the old pathes, where is the good way, and walke therein m. How then doe we say that Antiquitie is not true?

m Ier. 6. 16.

190

Answ. We must distinguish betweene a double Antiquity, namely,

Prima, the first, or Antiquissimum: and this we grant (according to Tertullian) to be verissimum; for what is most ancient is most true.

Secunda, the second; and this is oftentimes false: for thus wee may prove murder from Caine, Drunkennesse from Noah, ancient religions of the Heathens which were full of superstition, yea sacrifices of humane flesh: all which are of great antiquity: And therefore our Saviour urgeth the Jewes to looke ad primam, to the first Antiquity; from the beginning it was not thus, Matth. 19. 8.

Quest. 3. Why may wee not assent unto Antiquitie, although it be not most ancient?

Answ. 1. First, because at the best they are but humane authorities, and therefore being subject to error, we must be very wary how wee subscribe unto them: this the Lord admonisheth his people of, in these words, What is the chaffe to the wheate? where the Word of God is compared to wheate, and the words or writings of men, to chaffe.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because truth hath beene revealed unto the world by little and little, and not all truths of old time: and therefore neither every ancient opinion is true, nor every recent tenet false: as wee may see by an example or two: The Apostle saith, The God of this world hath blinded their eyes[n]; Irenæus, Tertullian, Augustine, yea all before Hierome understood this of the Lord, who is blessed for ever; but Hierome expounds it of the Divell, who is accursed for ever. Now the first interpretation is more ancient, but the second is more true, as all expositors doe now acknowledge. Moses saith[o], The sonnes of God saw the daughters of men, that they were faire, &c. Iustine, Origen, Tertullian, Philo, Iosephus, and divers others, understood this of the sinne and fall of the Angels: but now all agree that by the sonnes of God are meant not the Angels, but the posterity of Seth, who married with daughters of the posterity of Cain. Here also the first opinion is more ancient, but the second more true. It was a common errour maintained by all before Augustines time, that the Angels were created long before the world; and he holding that they were created within the six dayes, it was called inventum Augustini. And yet hee which was later spake more true than those who were long before him.

n 2 Cor. 4. 4.

o Gen. 6. 2

Answ. 3. Thirdly, many of the ancient Fathers were Heretickes, and therefore Antiquitie is not alwayes to be assented unto; Tertullian and Cyprian were Montanists, wherefore Hierome calls them Hæresiarchæ, Arch-heretickes. Irenæus, Iustinus, Papias, Tertullian, Lactantius, were Ghiliasts: Origen in many things so faulty, that although he often doth hit the marke, yet where he misseth, none roves so far, or erres so grosselly, as he doth. In libris doctorum inveniuntur prava (Anselmus.) In the writings of the Ancients are many slips. Dum errorem destruunt in alterum incidunt (Senensis.) While the Fathers laboured to avoid one errour, they often fell into another.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the ancient Fathers would not have us embrace their opinions, except we finde them consonant unto the holy Scriptures: And therefore without this tryall, Antiquity is not to be our rule. Nolo authoritatem meam sequaris, (August. epist. 112. ad Paulin.) I would not have thee to follow my directions, or to build thy faith upon my opinions: Solis Scripturis canonicis, hanc authoritatem, timorem, &c. (August. epist. 19.) but onely respect the authority of the Canonicall Scriptures, and regulate both thy opinions and practise thereby.

Quest. 4. May we not build our faith upon the ancient Fathers?

Answ. 1. First, the Papists sometimes say absolutely yes: thus one of them (Greg. a Valent. tom. 3. pag. 291. d) saith, The Protestants in the questions of faith, should enquire on what side the Fathers stand, that it being knowne, immediately without any other examination, they might embrace that Doctrine which the Fathers of old judged to be true. So another (Brist. Mot. 14.) cries out, what the Fathers beleeved I beleeve; what they held, I hold; what they taught, I teach; what they preached, I preach.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some of the Papists are not so lavish as these, but limit their answer thus, that which all the Fathers deliver with one consent, is infallibly true, and a sure Rocke for us to build our faith upon. This seemes reasonable, if it were not a stale to deceive us, and a meere jugling tricke to bleare our eyes; for wee must know, what they meane when they say, All the Doctors or the Fathers consenting in one, are to be assented unto: The meaning whereof is not that they know the judgement of all at any time (unlesse it be very rare) but this is it[p]. They are to be counted All the Doctors, whose authority is such, that the circumstances of their learning, piety, and multitude considered, they alone may justly be regarded, and the rest neglected as no body, if they be compared with these. And thus one or more Doctors erring, may be pressed with the authority of the rest. Here wee see one brave device, that although they brag of all the Fathers, and say they will refuse nothing wherein they all consent, yet when it commeth to scanning, they have no hope so much as to finde this consent of all, but referre it to their owne discretion, wisely to judge by circumstances, who are all, and what the consent is. Another brave device of theirs is to give soveraigne authority to the Pope over the Fathers, to explain their meaning, to allow them, dis-allow them, purge them, and fit them to their purpose. If the Reader desire to see this clearly confirmed, let him repaire to White, his way to the true Church, fol. 328. §. 11.

p Greg. a Valent. tom. 3. f. 290.

Thirdly, some Papists (of as good credit as the former) answer this question negatively, that that they care not what the Fathers ſay, neither doth their authoritie move them at all, and therefore they will be ſure not to build their faith upon them; here firſt they ſpeake of the workes and writings of the Fathers in generall, thus Marſilius[q] ſaith. He will receive whatſoever they bring conſonant to the Scripture: but what they bring diſſonant from it, he will reject upon the authority of the Scripture, whereto he will leane. Turrecremata ſaith[r], The writings of the Fathers binde us not to beleeve them in all their opinions, but we may lawfully contradict them, where they ſpeak againſt the Scripture or the truth. And Poſſevine ſaith[s], Some things in the Fathers (wherein they diſſented from the Church) are judged and rejected.

Secondly, they reject the Fathers one by one, ordinarily, when they croſſe Romes Doctrine: Many examples the Reader may ſee heereof in our fore-named Authour, White, pag. 330. §. 13.

Thirdly, the Papiſts baſely ſlight the Fathers, although many of them agree in one and the ſame thing: as for example, in the queſtion touching the cauſe of predeſtination, one[t] ſaith, that Chryſoſtome, Origen, Ambroſe, Hierome, Auguſtine, Theodoret, Sedulius, Theophilact, Oecumenius, and Theodulus, held the preſcience of merits; the which opinion was condemned in Pelagius. And thus he rejects ten Worthies at once.

[t] Sixt Senenſ. bib. lib. 6. annot. 241.

Another[u] ſayth, that Hierome, Auguſtine, Ambroſe, Sedulius, Primaſius, Chryſoſtome, Theodoret, Oecumenius, and Theophilact (which are the chiefeſt of the Fathers) in the queſtion concerning the difference betweene a Prieſt and a Biſhop, held the ſame opinion which Aerius, the Waldenſes, and Wickliffe did, whom he counteth for Heretickes, and chargeth the Fathers with the ſame hereſie. In the matter touching the baptiſme of Conſtantine the great, they[v] reject Euſebius, Ambroſe, Hierome, Theodoret, Socrates, Sozomen, and the whole Councell of Ariminum, ſaying, they deſerve no credit, becauſe not they (that is, the Fathers) have written the truth, but themſelves (that is, the Papiſts) have truly related, that hee was baptized by Euſebius the Biſhop of Nicomedia. And thus wee ſee, how the Papiſts eſteeme of the Fathers, or their writings, when they ſute not with their owne Tenets.

[u] Mich. Medin. orig. ſacr. hom. li. 1. cap. 5.

[v] Baron. an. 324. n. 43. & 50. et inde

Fourthly, the Workes and Writings of the Fathers are purged (I ſhould ſay rather, polluted) by the Papiſts, and adulterated and corrupted, and gelded, and changed; and therefore wee are not now by any meanes to build our faith upon them. I intreat the ſtudious Reader here to peruſe Perkinſi Problema, pag. 2. &c. ad 44. And Cenſura quorundam Scriptorum. Auctore Roberto Coco, where he ſhall finde this anſwer abundantly confirmed.

Anſw. 4.

Fifthly, the Fathers in many things diſſented among themſelves; and therefore wee cannot build our faith upon them, becauſe the foundation of faith ought to bee firme, and infallible, truth being but one.

Anſw. 5.

Theophilus calleth Ephiphanius Hereſiarcham, the grand Captaine, and Father of Heretiques. 191

Gennadius ſaith, that Saint Auguſtine was not farre off from being an Heretique.

Saint Hierome writing to St. Auguſtine, ſayth thus, In Epiſtola tua quædam hæretica eſſe judicavi, I conceive that there are ſome hereticall opinions in your Epiſtle.

Saint Auguſtine wiſheth Saint Hierome to acknowledge his errour and recant[w].

[w] Jewel Defenſe of the Apolo. f. 378. Anſw 6.

Sixtly, the Fathers have erred in many things, and therefore are not firme pillars to build our faith upon. This a learned Papiſt doth acknowledge[x] in theſe words; The Canonicall Authors as being directed from above doe alwaies hold a perpetuall and ſtable conſtancie in their writings; but the Fathers being inferiour unto them faile ſometimes, now and then contrary to the courſe of nature, bringing forth a monſter. And another of them ſaith,[y] that in their bookes which the Church readeth, many times are found things corrupt and hereticall. Thus Hillary denied that Chriſt in his ſufferings had any ſorrow (Refert. Bellarm. de Char. l. 4. c. 8.) Clemens Alexandrinus ſaith, that Chriſt did not eate and drinke of any neceſſity, but onely to ſhew that he had a true body; and that hee and his Apoſtles after their death, preached to the damned in hell, and converted many[z]. Cyprian held rebaptization; and Athenagoras condemned marriage.

Seventhly, we Proteſtants doe not deny the Fathers, but receive them with all reverence; ſtudying their writings, and accounting their bookes as moſt excellent monuments of antiquitie; but wee dare not make them rules of faith in themſelves, by which doctrines of truth are eſtabliſhed; but allow the Scriptures onely to be judge, whereby wee trie both the Fathers and our ſelves. Faith comes from the word of God, not from the writing of men; Rom. 10. 14. and therefore the word, not the Fathers, muſt be the rule of our faith, and by the proportion and Analogie of faith and truth therein contained, all opinions are to be proved. And therefore I thus conclude this queſtion: firſt, that the Fathers may erre. Secondly, that many of them may erre together. Thirdly, that the learned of this preſent age in many things have more underſtanding then the Fathers had: we being (as Dominicus Bannes a Doctor of the Church of Rome ſaid pag. 58. 59.) like children ſtanding on the ſhoulders of Gyants, who being lifted up by the talleneſſe of the Giants, ſee further then they themſelves. Fourthly, and laſtly that therefore with reverence they may in ſome things be refuſed.

Anſw. 7.

§. 2. Thou ſhalt not kill. Sect. 2.

How many degrees are there of murther in the text? Queſt. 1.

Five, namely, firſt Whoſoever is angry with his brother: by Anger here is meant all the interiour motions in the minde, will, and heart, which are repugnant to brotherly love. The ſecond degree is, to call out brother Raca, that is to uſe Anſw.

ſome

192 ſome ſignes and geſtures of an angry and malevolent minde, either by the countenance or by ſome diſdainfull words of reproach which breake forth, or by ſome geſture of the body. The third degree is to call our brother Foole, that is, when the mind and affections being throughly moved, we breake forth into manifold opprobrious and evill ſpeakings. The fourth is, when by ſome deede which externally we performe, we harme the body, or impaire the health of our brother. The fifth and laſt is Homicide it ſelfe; But of all theſe more particularly by and by.

Much might be ſpoken, firſt of the Antiquity of this law, it being given preſently after the flood; Whoſo ſheddeth mans blood, by man ſhall his blood be ſhed[a]. Secondly, of the Antiquitie of the breach of this Law, it being violated, not many yeares after the creation[b], when Cain killed Abell. Thirdly, of the generality of this Commandement, Every one that takes the ſword, ſhall periſh with the ſword[c]. But I here forbeare, referring theſe to another place.

[a] Gen. 9.6

[b] Gen. 4. 11.

[c] Matth. 26. 52.

Queſt. 2. What was our Saviours ſcope in the quoting of this Law, Thou ſhalt not kill?

Anſw. To teach them that they did not truely and rightly underſtand it, expounding it onely according to the letter.

Queſt. 3. Why muſt not the Law be reſtrained onely to his literall ſenſe?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe the words are conciſe, but the ſenſe is prolixe; the formes are ſhort for the helpe of memory, but the matters therein contained are long and many; and that both in the Decalogue, and in the Lords prayer; and therefore if they be extended no further, then the letter of them, they are not ſolidly expounded, as for example. Wee pray, Give us this day our daily bread; ſhall wee not therefore pray for health, apparell, life, preſervation, and proſperity, all which are included in this word Bread.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Law of God is Spirituall, and therefore it is not onely literally to bee interpreted, Rom. 7.14.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, God is to be worſhipped in Spirit, and therefore the Law which preſcribes the manner of his worſhip muſt not onely be literally expounded John 4.24. Prov. 23.26. and therefore the excuſes of ſome will never availe them, who tell us, firſt, that blaſphemy is no perjurie, and therefore why may they not ſweare: ſecondly, ſwearing by the creatures doth not prophane the name of God; and therefore thereby that Commandement is not violated: thirdly, fornication is not adulterie; and therefore the law is not tranſgreſſed, and the like. Theſe muſt remember firſt, how pure God the Law-giver is, yea Puritie it ſelfe: ſo glorious, that the heavens are impure in his ſight.

Secondly, the Law is an exemplar of God; and therefore is holy and pure, Pſal. 19.7.8.

Againe, there are others worſe than theſe, and that is thoſe who diſtinguiſh the words of the precept: for the former granted onely the words and literall ſenſe, the latter will not allow of all the words according to the letter: as for example, ſome can diſtinguiſh lying, into, firſt, a pernicious lye: and ſecondly, a manifeſt and apparent lye; and theſe they condemne: but if 1. it be an officious lye, whereby ſome profit or benefit may accrew, either to themſelves, or others: or 2. if it bee a palliated lye, then as lawfull we defend it. But, non diſtinguendum ubi lex non diſtinguit: wee are no other than Lawyers, who can onely expound the ancient and fundamentall lawes, but not make new lawes, neither by falſe gloſſes pervert the law, or divert it from the true ſence thereof: we muſt not diſtinguiſh where the Law doth not, leſt the Lord will not accept of our diſtinction, and ſo by our quaint ſophiſtry, wee onely cozen and deceive our ſelves.

Queſt. 4. How manifold is Homicide? or what is it which is here forbidden?

Anſw. Homicide or Bloud-ſhed is three-fold, namely, firſt Juſtum, juſt: ſecondly, Impium, wicked: thirdly, Immune, free from puniſhment, or excuſeable.

First, there is a juſt and righteous murder, w^ch is either

- Neceſſarie, ſe defendendo, when a man in his owne defence kilies another, beeing not able to free himſelfe out of the hands of his adverſarie, either by flight, or by the ayd and aſſiſtance of others. But here we muſt carefully obſerve, that this is two-fold: Firſt, ſometimes a man ſlayes theeves, and robbers, and enemies, who lye in wayt for his life, becauſe otherwiſe hee cannot eſcape from them: this is lawfull, if the cauſe be reall; but ſome kill, when they need not, but might eſcape by flight, or preſerve their lives by the loſſe of their purſe. Secondly, ſometimes a man is layd in wayt for, or aſſaulted by the Magiſtrate, or the Kings Officers, that they may apprehend him: here it is not lawfull for us (before God) in the defence of our ſelves, to ſhed their bloud; and therefore wee muſt not thus defend our ſelves againſt Arreſts.
- Lawfull, which is acted in a lawfull warre; to wit, either firſt in a defenſive warre, when wee are aſſaulted by ſome forraigne foe: Or ſecondly, in a warre undertaken for the recovery of a due, true, and neceſſarie right, which hath unjuſtly been taken away.

Secondly, there is a wicked murder, which is either
- First of a mans selfe, being done { Violently and wilfully: when a man layes violent hands upon himselfe: Now this is altogether desperate and horrible.
- Secondly, of another, whether done { First, rashly; this the Lord himselfe condemnes for murder: If a man smite his neighbour with any morall or deadly weapons, either of Iron, or stone, or wood, that he dye, hee is a murderer, and shall be put to death. Numb. 35.16 17.18.
- 2ly, of malice, whether done by { A mans selfe, whether by lying in wait secretly for the destruction of his brother, or by under-hand poysoning of him: or by an open assault, onset, or force. Read Exodus 21. 14. Numb. 35. 20. Deut. 19. 11.
- By another, & that either { Imperando, by commanding; and thus David slue Vriah, and Iezabell Naboth, because they were slain through their commands: Consulendo, by counselling; thus Herodias slue Iohn Baptist, because he was beheaded through the counsell given by her to her daughter, Mark 6.24. Conducendo, by perswading, provoking, and hiring with a reward, or price: and thus the Scribes and Pharisees were guiltie of the bloud of Christ; because they hired Iudas with money to betray him, Matth. 26. 15. Petendo, by intreating: and thus Herodias daughter was the killer of Iohn Baptist; because Herod beheaded him at her request, Mark 6.25. Consentiendo, by consenting: and thus Ahab was guiltie of Naboths bloud, and Paul of Stephens.
- Silendo, by concealing, or not revealing the murder: if this bee done { Before the fact (that is, if a man knowes of a murder intended, and conceale it) it is murder jure divino, by Gods law. After the fact is done, hee is condemned, jure positivo, by mans law, and that justly, because murder is not to be concealed, neither is such counsell to be kept.

Thirdly, there is an excusable homicide, viz. casuall, and contingent; as when a man is imployed about some honest affaires, and accidentally kills his brother: this homicide is excused; because the Lord delivered him into his hands. Read Exod. 21.13. and Numb. 35. 22. Deut. 19. 5. and 4. 42.

Vers. 22. VERS. 22. But I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of the judgement: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Racha, shall be in danger of the councell; but whosoever shall say, thou foole, shall be in danger of hell fire.

Sect. 1. Quest. 1. §. 1. But I say unto you] To whom doth Christ here oppose himselfe, to the law of God, or to the exposition of the Pharisees?

Answ. 1. First, the Papists say, to the law of God, that hee might make it more perfect (Stapler. Antidot.) And hence they deduce two conclusions, the first is concerning Evangelicall Councels: the second is of veniall sinnes, whereof something hath been spoken already, and more followes in this verse to be considered of.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Stapleton gives us these reasons, or arguments for his opinion, Arg. 1. First, Christ is the true Law-giver in the New Testament; and therefore hee doth here oppose the old Law.

Answ. 1. First, Calvin answers, that Christ is not a new Law-giver; which answer Stapleton derides, not remembring that saying, There is but one Law-giver, who is able to save and to destroy [d] Iam. 4. 12.

Secondly, Stapleton answers this reason himselfe; or from him we may thus answer it, It is the part of a Law-giver not onely to make new lawes, but to interpret also those that are made. [e] And therefore it followes not, that because Christ is a Law-giver, therefore he must make new lawes, disanulling or opposing the old. Answ. 2. [e] Staplet. Ibid.

Secondly, Christ saith, Ego dico, I say, not as the Prophets were wont to doe, Hæc dicit Dominus, Thus sayth the Lord; and therefore Christ here opposeth himselfe to the law of God. Arg. 2.

The reason why Christ sayth, I say, is not because hee speakes contrary to that which his Father had spoken formerly by his Prophets, but because whatsoever he speaks from the Father, he speakes from himselfe; which the Prophets did not. Prophetæ ad conservos, Christus ad servos. [f] Chrys. sup. Answ. 1.

Christ as a Lord speakes unto his servants, and therefore saith, I say unto you, the Prophets as the servants of the Lord, speake unto their fellow servants in the Lord, and therefore say, thus saith the Lord.

Thirdly, Stapleton proves this from examples; Christ saith he addes new Lawes, and therefore he opposeth the Law of God, he proves the proposition thus. First, Christ saith, thou shalt not sweare at all, vers. 34. Arg. 3.

Answer; it was never lawfull or allowable by the Law of God to sweare by those things which Christ reproves, wherefore this was no new Law. Answ. 1.

Secondly, Christ teacheth that Divorce is never lawfull but for adultery or fornication vers. 31.

I answer

194

I answer, this was an old Law, and no new one. Our Saviour himselfe saying, that from the beginning it was not allowed, for a man upon every occasion to put away his wife [g].

Answ. 2. g Matth. 19.8.

Thirdly, Christ teacheth us under the Gospel to love our enemies, vers. 44.

Answ. 3.

This was an ancient law, If (saith the Lord) thou meet (not thy friends, but) thy enemies Oxe, or his Asse going astray, thou shalt surely bring it backe to him againe [h]. Now none can deny, but this instance doth plainely imply and injoyne love to our enemies. But if any be so blind, that they cannot see it, or so obstinate that they will not acknowledge that it may hence bee deduced or proved, that wee ought to love our enemies, let him listen then to the wise man, If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eate, and if bee bee thirsty, give him water to drinke, &c. [i]. And therefore that addition which our Saviour speakes of, vers. 44. Thou shalt hate thine enemy, is a falsification of the Pharisees, as shall bee shewed afterwards, and was never injoyned by the Law of God.

h Exod. 23.4.

i Pro. 25. 21.

Fourthly, Christ teacheth us to love our brethren, and calleth it his Commandement, John 14. 15. 21. and 15. 10. 12. 17. and John 13. 34. and Saint Paul cals it, the Law of Christ. Galat. 6. 2.

Answ. 4.

This was no new commandement, but an old given in the Old Testament, David expresly commends, and implicitly commands this brotherly love: Oh how good and joyfull a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in amity and unity, Psal. 133. &c. Yea, our Saviour saith the one halfe of the Law is to love our neighbour as our selfe, Mat. 22. 39. which words are taken from Lev. 19. 18. And therefore I may safely (those rubbes removed out of the way) conclude this question, that certainely, Christ doth not here oppose himselfe to the Law of God, but to the expositions of the Pharisees.

Quest. 2.

Why did not Christ (who was the true Messias) ordaine new Lawes for those to walke by who were under the Gospell?

Answ. 1.

First, because the Law of God was perfect, Psal. 19. 7. and wonderfull, 119. 129. and spirituall, Rom. 7. extending it selfe to the inward man as well as the outward, for it forbids covetousnesse, and condemnes the internall concupiscence of the heart, (in the tenth Commandement) God is to be worshipped in spirit, and with spirituall worship (Joh. 4. 24.) this also the Law commands, Salomon perswades us to give God our hearts (Prov. 23. 26.) and Moses, to love and serve God with all our hearts, and with all our soules. Deut. 6. 5. And therefore there was no need of a new Law, the old being such as hath beene said.

Secondly, whatsoever Christ taught or desired to teach to his Apostles and Disciples, and to all his, dispersed through the whole world, was included, prescribed, and laid down in the Law; and therefore there was no necessity of framing new Commandements. We read of three principal Lawes which Christ commends unto all that are under the Gospell, the first, is to keepe the Commandements, Mat. 19. 17. Now this is injoyned in the Old Testament. The second is, to love the brethren, or our brethren, this also was commanded in the Law. The third is, to believe in Christ, but this is the Commandement of the Father [k].

k 1 Joh. 3. 23.

§. 2. But I say unto you.] The scope of Christ in this place is to oppose his true opinion to the opinion of antiquity; and he doth not endeavour to prove this from the best, most learned, or most ancient Rabbines, but onely from his word; that he might teach us, that the onely fountaine of truth is in his word: Christ doth not say, It was said of old thou shalt not kill, &c. but Rabbi Salomon, or Ben-Ezra, doth not say so: But I say unto you, that hence wee might learne, that the true tryall of antiquity is in the Holy Scriptures; and therefore wee are commanded to search them, Ioh. 5. 39. to repaire to them, Esa. 8. 20. because by them we are regenerated. 1 Pet. 1. 23. from them we have faith. Rom. 10. 17. yea, they are able to make us perfect [l]. The Church is our Mother, therefore shee must be subject to God our Father, for the wife ought to be so unto the husband: and hence Saint Paul would have us to wave the opinion of an Angell, rather then of the word of God [m], much more then of a Father, who is subject to errour, as was shewed in the former verse.

Sect. 2.

Observ.

l 2 Tim. 3. 16.

m Gal. 1. 8.

Is there no use at all to be made of Antiquity, or of the opinions, workes, and writings of the Fathers and Ancients?

Quest.

First, in generall, the true use of the Ancients is not to establish a new way unto heaven, but to facilitate the old, not to teach new opinions, but to expound and explaine the ancient truths, which are couched in holy writ.

Answ. 1

Secondly, more particularly, the true use of the Fathers and ancient writers consists,

Answ. 2

In

In these 4. things, to wit.

First, in the exposition of the Scriptures, which is twofold, namely, either Positive; as for example, this exposition of Scripture is true, because the Fathers so interpreted it. This followes not.

Privative, this exposition is false, because none of the Fathers so give it: here observe two things namely,

First, this is no certaine or generall rule, because often all the Fathers of some one time, or for a long time have been mistaken, as was shewed in the former verse in the exposition of Gen. 6. 2. and 2 Cor. 4. 4.

Secondly, this is to be reverenced, and doth strongly convince Private spirits, when we can say, none have as yet thought thus besides your selfe.

Secondly, the true use of the ancient writers, is in convincing those adversaries which trust unto them and relie upon them: for although this follow not, the Fathers say thus, therefore it is true; yet this follows; these men pretend to follow the Doctrine of the Fathers; & yet in their opinions varie fro (yea are enemies unto) the Fathers; and therefore they doe but deceive and juggle with the world, making a shew of that which is not: This is the usuall pranke of the Papists, to exclaime that all the Fathers are on their side; and when the matter comes to triall, their Judges condemne them, and the Fathers speake against them.

Thirdly, the use of the Ancients is, for the moving of the affections of their hearers; for certainely modest Christians and ingenious natures will be much moved, and strongly perswaded, when they heare the thing they are exhorted to embrace; not onely to be consonant to Scriptures, but also agreeable to the example, counsell, and resolution of the Fathers.

Fourthly, the use of the Fathers is to direct us in outward things, or to teach us the nature of indifferent things, how farre they may bee used, and how they are abused.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Whosoever is angry with his brother, &c.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of this verse in generall, or of the words distinguished herein, namely, Anger, Racha, Foole, Iudgement, Counsell, Fire?

Answ. 1. If the Reader desire full satisfaction herein, I referre him to M. Weemes, in the tractate of the Judiciall Law of Moses, lib. 1. chap. 16. and Doctor Field of the Church, who will resolve him in this particular [m]; for my own part, I forbeare to transcribe them, they being both in English, and easily to be had.

[m] D. Field of the Church, lib. 3. cap. 9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because I would not leave my Reader altogether unresolved, I intreat him to take notice that our Saviour here observes three degrees of anger: The first is, in the sudden heat and boyling of the affection inwardly without cause, layd downe in these words, Whosoever is angry with his brother unadvisedly. The second is, in shewing of this indignation outwardly, by any disdainfull words, as in calling one Racha, that is, idle-head, light-braine: for so (Rik) in the Hebrew (to which this Syrian word Raka agreeth both in sound and sense) signifieth light, or vaine [n]. This indignation may bee expressed also by other signes, as by grinning, frowning, spitting, and such like. The third degree of anger consists in open railing, as calling one Foole, with other tearmes of reviling; which is a weapon fit for the Gyant with three hands, because Trez quasi uno ictu occidit [o], it killeth three as it were with one blow; first, himselfe that revileth and raileth. Secondly, him that giveth credit to his reviling and railing. Thirdly, him who is slandered and reviled.

[n] Iuniur. [o] Basting.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, as our Saviour maketh difference of the sinnes: so also hee here sheweth three degrees of punishments, alluding to the publicke forme of judgement used among the Jewes: For first, there was the Session of judgement of three, who judged of small causes. Secondly, there was the Councell of three and twentie, who determined more weighty matters. Thirdly, the great Synedrion, or Judicatorie, which consisted of seventie and two, sixe chosen of every Tribe; who sometimes convented before them the High Priest, and sometimes false Prophets; yea sometimes a whole Tribe, as reverend Beza thinkes.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, from these premises I thus conclude and determine the question: First, hee that suffers anger to boyle in his breast, shall be censured in the secret judgement of God. Secondly, hee that bewrayeth his indignation by opprobrious words, shall be held guiltie before all the assembly of heavenly Angels and Saints. Thirdly, he that raileth and revileth, shall bee judged worthy of hell fire, that is, of the greatest punishment. For foure kindes of punishments were practised and exercised among the Jewes, whereby they put malefactors to death: First, strangling: secondly, the sword: thirdly, stoning: fourthly, the fire. Of the which they thought the last to bee the worst, as Beza affirmes upon this place. Or if wee looke to the former words, they will helpe us to the true understanding of these: It was said of old, Thou shalt not kill: and whosoever shall kill, shall be in danger of judgement, where we see, the Jewes held a murderer to bee guiltie of judgement; and that not onely positively, but privatively: as if our Saviour would say, yee yeeld the homicide to be guiltie of judgement, who really takes away his brothers life; but hee is not called into judgement with you, who sheddes not his brothers bloud, although he hate him in his heart, & revile him with his tongue: but ra-196 dico, I say unto you, whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of judgement: Where wee see, Christ gives as much to anger, as they to murder[p]. And therefore the true sence and meaning of the words, I take to bee this: Hee that is angry, shall bee guiltie of judgement; that is, at the day of judgement hee shall give account, and answer for that his anger[q]. Hee that calles his brother Racha, shall bee guiltie of a Councell; that is, shall bee more severely punished, than the former, as his sinne is greater. Hee that calles his brother Foole, shall bee guiltie of hell fire: that is, is condemned already before God[r]. And yet all these three are eternall punishments; and the first may be resembled unto a pettie Sessions: the second unto a generall Assizes: the third to Marshall law.

q Math. 12. 36.

r Aug. s.

Quest. 2. Are then some of these mortall sinnes, some veniall? doth it deserve condemnation to call our brother foole, but not to bee angry with him?

Answ. 1. First, the Papists answer here affirmatively, both in generall, that there are some sinnes in their owne nature mortall, and some veniall; and in particular, that the last sinne mentioned in this verse is mortall, the first (to wit, Anger) is but veniall, and therefore of his owne nature deserveth not everlasting condemnation, which is onely due unto the last, to call one Foole[s].

s Bellarm. de Purga. lib. 1. c. 4.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Thomas of Aquine likes the generall allowance of the distinction of mortall and veniall sinnes, but dislikes the particular application thereof unto this place, holding that this Anger which is here spoken of, is a deadly sin, in that Christ saith, He that is angry with his brother is guilty of judgement; which words must be understood, De motu tendente in nocumentum, &c. of a motion tending to hurt, where there is consent, and so that motion is deadly sinne, Thom. in opuscul. Ex Lappem.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the distinction of sinnes veniall, and not veniall, in their owne nature, in respect of the greatnesse or smallnesse of the sinne, is not to bee admitted, and that for these reasons.

1 In respect of the nature of sinne, which of it selfe deserveth death, Rom. 6, 23. The wages of sinne is death: Yea, sinne is the transgression of the Law, 1 John 3. 4. And every transgression of the Law is under the curse, Gal. 3. 10.

2 In respect of the infinite Majesty of God, which to violate can be no veniall sin of it selfe.

3 In respect of the perfect and absolute righteousnesse of God, which cannot abide the least blemish or imperfection: And therefore in these regards, no sinne committed against God can in it selfe be veniall[t].

t White s. Exod. 20. Constit. 5. Prac. 6. f. 320.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, this motion and passion of anger, even when it is sudden and unadvised, though there be no further purpose nor intendment to hurt, is guilty of judgement; as is plaine in this verse, Whosoever is angry with his brother without cause, shall be guilty of judgement, that is, shall be guilty of damnation; for so judgement is taken in Scripture: David prayes that the Lord would not enter into judgement with him[u]. And Paul saith, Thou that judgest another, condemnest thy selfe[v], where to judge and condemne are taken for all one: to be culpable then of judgment is to be guilty of condemnation.

u Psa. 143. 2.

Thirdly, we admit this distinction of veniall and mortall sinnes, if it be understood, not in respect of the nature of sinne, but of the quality of the persons: for unto those that beleeve and repent, all sinnes are veniall, and pardonable through the mercy of God (Rom. 8. 1.) But to the wicked and impenitent all their sinnes are mortall. Answ. 3.

Sixthly, the Fathers side with us in our opinions, holding that all these three sinnes here mentioned are mortall; yea the Papists generally, make anger (whereof the principall question here is) one of the seven deadly and mortall sinnes, as Canisius, Pupilla oculi, Manipul. Curatorum, and the rest. Chrysostome upon this verse, saith, Christus dat ultionem homicidio, irae; supplicium aeternum adulterio, concupiscentiae, Christ doth not punish murder, and spare anger, or condemne adultery and acquit concupiscence, but condemnes and punishes both the one and the other. St. Augustine s. saith, that all these three are to be arraigned before Gods judgement-Seate, where Hell shall be the reward of all: If any object why then are the two former degrees (Judgement and Councell) named? Hee answers, because there are severall degrees of punishment in hell, according to the degrees of sinne on earth. Answ. 6.

Saint Hierome condemnes the first degree of anger, to be worse than idle words; but these we must give account for at the day of Judgement, when and where, no sinnes that we must answer for are in their owne nature pardonable[w]. Saint Hilarie, Non minus irarea Evangelio quam homicidium lege. Anger under the Gospel is no more a veniall sinne, than murder was under the Law. And therefore I shut up this question with this assertion, That to be angry with our brother unadvisedly, to call him Racha, or foole in our anger, are all mortall sinnes, and deserve in their owne nature eternall fire.

w Mat. 11. 36.

Bellarmine (tom. 3. fol. 113.) objects, to bee angry with our Brother, or to call him Racha, doth not exclude us from the Kingdome of heaven; and therefore they are not mortall sinnes. The Antecedent he proves thus, That which is not properly a precept, but onely a degree of a precept, cannot exclude us from the Kingdome of Heaven; but to be angry with our Brother, or to call him Racha, is not properly a precept, but onely a degree of that Commandement, Thou shalt not kill: Therefore this will not exclude us from the Kingdome of Heaven. Object.

First, here is Petitio principii, a begging of the question; hee taking it for granted without proofe, that these two, to call our Brother Racha, or to be angry with him, are no precepts, which is the thing questioned. Answ. 1.

Secondly,

Secondly, if this were granted, that these two were onely degrees of that Commandement, Thou shalt not kill, yet it would not hence follow, that they are veniall sinnes, which will not exclude us out of Heaven; For to call our Brother Foole, is but onely a degree of that Commandement, and yet the Jesuite himselfe doth confesse that to be mortall, and to deserve condemnation, Bellarm. de Purgat. lib. 1. cap. 4. tom. 1. 1809.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because they are degrees of the precept (as is confessed by the Cardinall) therefore it cannot be denied, but they must belong unto the violation and transgression of the Commandement, and consequently deserve death, because cursed is every one that continueth not in all things, which are written in the Booke of the Law[y]. There being no transgression so small, but it shall be punished, except it be repented of, and washed away by the Blood of Christ.

y Galath. 3.10.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the Jesuite doth diametrally oppose Christ, even in the very scope of the place: Bellarmine saith, the violation of the Commandement it selfe, according to the letter, excludes us from the Kingdome of Heaven; but not the transgression of the degrees of the Commandement.

Christ here saith plainely, that the Pharisees and Scribes did observe the Letter of the Law, but that was not sufficient to bring them unto Heaven, or to preserve them from Hell; And therefore if we desire to be saved, we must carefully observe the very degrees of the Commandements, and therein our righteousnesse may exceed the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisees, because otherwise wee cannot enter into the kingdome of God.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Whosoever is angry with his Brother.]

Quest. 1. Why are all Christians forbidden to bee angry?

Answ. 1. First, because Anger comes from the Divell, as the authour thereof; Give no place to wrath, give no place to the Devill, Ephes. 4. 27.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because anger comes from our inbred corruption, and pride of heart. Non ab illius injuria, sed a tua superbia (Basil. hom. de ira.) Anger proceeds not from the injury of others, but from the pride of our selves, that being the moving cause thereof: Many are wronged, and yet but some are provoked, and some are not; Why? because some are patient, and others are proud. Now we should labour not onely to withstand the assaults of Satan, but also to subdue our owne corruptions, and pride, and impatiencie in the suffering of injuries; because these are the causes of Anger.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Anger is forbidden us, in regard of a three-fold pernicious effect thereof, namely; First, it pleaseth not God (Iam. 1. 20.) Those which are in the flesh cannot please God, Rom. 8. 8. But Anger is a worke of the flesh, Gal. 6. 20. And therefore cannot please God.

Secondly, Anger is dangerous and pernicious to him that is angry; for it hurts the heart, it wounds the conscience, it expels the holy Spirit, and deserves to be punished. Fructus iræ, lingua effrænis, manus incontinentes, contumelia, accusationes, verbera[z]; the fruits of anger, are an unbridled tongue, a quarrelling hand, reproaches, accusations, stroakes, and the like, whence our Saviour reputes it murder in this place; how lightly soever Bellarmine esteemes it.

z Basil. hom. de Ira.

Quest. 2. Doe all the Papists thinke Anger a veniall sinne?

Answ. The more ancient Papists were otherwise minded: Pomerius (dom. 5. Pentec.) expounds these words thus, He that is angry shall be guilty of judgement, that is, he shall be accused before God at the day of Judgement, because hee hath sinned against that Commandement, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy selfe. He that saith to his Brother, Racha, shall be in danger of the Councell; that is, the whole Congregation of the Saints will approve the sentence of his condemnation.

The same Author doth there for the better clearing of his exposition, observe eight degrees of anger, wherein there are some things amisse which I passe by, because he speakes plainly and abundantly enough for the proofe of what wee affirme against Bellarmine.

The first degree of anger is provoked through zeale, either towards God, or against sinne; and this is good, as followes by and by. The second degree is a sudden motion and disturbance of the minde; which (saith he) is not sinne. The third is a deliberated anger, but quickly blowne over: this (saith he) is a veniall sinne in it selfe. Fourthly, Anger joyned with some small desire of revenge, or with a desire of some small revenge; this also (saith hee) is veniall by reason of the smallnesse of the desire of revenge. The fifth degree is, when Anger is accompanied with a will and desire of some great vengeance; but yet is concealed within in the heart, comming no further, neither shewing it selfe in the countenance or actions: this he saith (and that truely) is mortall. The sixth is, when internall anger conceived, and for a while concealed in the heart, doth at length breake out, revealing it selfe by some signes; as for example, either 1. by some frowning, and lowring, and discontented looke. Or 2. by turning away the face from the party we are angry with all. Or 3. by not speaking unto them. Or 4. by not re-saluting them, when by them we are saluted. The seventh degree of anger is conjoyned with some reproachfull words, as Foole or Asse; this also (saith he truely) is a mortall sinne. The eighth and last degree, is Anger accompanied with some reall harme done unto those, with whom we are angry; this is also a mortall sinne. And thus by his sixth, seventh, and eighth degree of Anger, he doth plainly shew, that all the three degrees of anger laid downe in this verse are mortall sinnes: And therefore we should carefully avoid and abstaine from all prohibited Anger.

Quest. 3. By what wayes or meanes may we resist and withstand this passion of anger?

Others, that is, not to provoke us, either by opprobrious words, or injurious workes; But this not being meant in this place, I passe it by.

The remedies against Anger are either in

In our selves, wch are these which follow, namely.

First, Premeditation; before thou beginne to bee angry, ponder with thy selfe, I. all the provocations, reproaches, injuries, and wrongs, which may bee offered unto thee, that so thou mayest prepare thy selfe to contemne and despise them, and not to bee exasperated by them. II. Ruminate with thy selfe what thy duty is, and how thou oughtest in patience to possesse thy soule, notwithstanding all crosses and wrongs which may bee offered unto thee; that thus thou maist arme thy selfe against them. III. weigh with thy selfe, what Christ suffered for thee, and with what patience; he suffered contempt, derision, injuries, yea death for thee, and in them all was like a lambe dumbe before the shearer, or as a dove without gall: And therefore remember this, that thou maist imitate thy Master herein. These premeditations being frequently and seriously in our hearts, will be one excellent remedy against Anger.

Secondly suppresse it within; give no place to the water; nor to the fire of wrath: as soone as ever an angry motion ariseth in thy heart, nippe it at the roote, that like Ionas his gourd it may suddenly wither.

Thirdly, remember how unprofitable anger is; it hurts thy selfe, it harmes others, but is gainefull to none.

Fourthly, observe the excesse, immoderate rage, and anger of others: marke how ill it becomes them, yea how it doth disgrace them; looke upon angry men, as the Lacedemonians made their children behold drunkards, that detesting it in another, thou maiest avoid it in thy selfe.

Fiftly, imploy thy selfe about some honest and lawfull affaires, that thy mind may be taken off from the provocations unto anger. Otio crescunt patibemata.

Sixtly, accustome thy selfe to prudence and wisedome: remember how thou oughtest to shew thy selfe to be a wise man, yea a Christian, endued with patience and heavenly wisedome, and cloathed therewith as with a garment Colos. 3. 12. Iames 3. 17. that so thou maist acquite thy selfe like a wiseman in all provocations, injuries, and wrongs whatsoever.

Sect. 5. §. 5. Without a cause, or unadvisedly.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, they may be expounded, subito. Hee that is angry with his brother suddenly, or causually, not willingly incensing himself unto wrath against his brother, but rashly overcome by a sudden passion of anger: Teaching us, that Christ doth not only condemne in us voluntary and deliberated Anger; but also rash, sudden, and harsh anger. For he that is hasty of Spirit exalteth folly. Pro. 14. 29.

Observ. 1

Answ. 2. Secondly, they may be expounded sine causâ, Hee that is angry with his brother without a just cause; as if our Saviour would say, Anger is not to be blamed when it springs from a good root, or is moved and provoked by a good cause. Teaching us, that Anger is to be judged according to the moving cause thereof: Or, Anger is commendable if it proceede from a good cause. Be angry but sinne not, Esay 4. 26. therefore there is a lawfull anger.

Obser. 2.

Quest. 2. How may we know whether our Anger bee commendable or culpable?

Two

Two things in anger are observable:

First, Radix the roote therof, from whence it springs; that is, the internall affection or irascible facultie, as it is naturall, and lawfull, without any hypothesis moved against the sinne committed, without any displicency or hatred of the sinner: of this more plainely by and by.

Secondly, the branches, or the anger it self which is either.

Evill, which is twofold, namely
- First, immoderate, and excessive, of this we spake §. 4.
- Secondly unjust, and is either
  - When wee desire our owne revenge: Or
  - When wee are angry for our owne gaine or losse.

Or

Good; which springeth either from a cause
- Civill, Ira cos fortitudinis, I meddle not with this,
- Spirituall which
  - First, is allowable[a], and warrantable; religion not prohibiting all anger: for first, this were impossible. And Secondly, it is sometimes profitable[a], for those who offend. And thirdly, necessary for our selves, because Non irasci nbi irascendum est peccatum peccato addere[b], Not to bee angry, when we should, is to adde one sinne unto another. [a] Chrys. sup. [b] Chrys. s.
  - Secondly, is an anger against sin, to wit either against
    - Our owne proper sinnes, or our selves for our sinnes; and thus Bern. s. 4. Psal. 4. 26. Bee angry and sinne not; that is, (saith he) bee angry with thy selfe for thy sinnes committed: and sinne no more.
    - Our brothers sinne; Oportuna est ira quæ increpando convertit[c], that anger is seasonable and commendable, that reduceth a brother from his evill way. [c] Chrys. s.

Obiect. Against the last particle it may bee objected, He that is angry with his brother for sinning, is angry with his brother; which is here forbidden by Christ.

Answ. To this Augustine answers, Non fratri, qui peccato fratris irascitur: Hee is not angry with his brother, who is angry with the sinne of his brother: for sinne and the sinner are two distinct things; and therefore a man may hate his brothers sinne, and yet love his brothers person: he may bee angry with the offence committed, and yet not breake the bond of Christian charitie with the offender. Chrysostome upon this place, gives us these examples hereof: first, of Moses, whose anger waxed hot for the peoples idolatry, and yet hee hated not their persons[d]. And so againe in the matter of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, it is sayd, that meeke Moses was very wroth[e]. Secondly, of Paul, who seemes to reproach the Corinthians, I speake it to your shame; and yet through his whole Epistle, he shewes how he loves them[f]. And againe, he calles the Galatians fooles[g], but hates them not. Wee may adde, how his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the Idolatry of the Athenians[h]. And thirdly, the example of Christ, who was angry when he saw the hard-heartednesse of the people[i]; and scourged some (at another time) out of the Temple[k]. And this Anger is called Zeale. Yea fourthly, we have an example of Gods anger kindled against a holy man for want of this anger. Eli hearing of his sonnes impietie, admonisheth them, Why doe yee such things? your dealings are evill: and it is no good report I heare of you[l]: but yet notwithstanding this, what sayth the Lord, I will judge his house for ever, for the iniquitie which he knoweth: because his sonnes made themselves vile, and he restrained them not; or (according to the Hebrew,) he frowned not upon them[m]. God did not thus threaten Eli, because hee would not hate the persons of his sonnes, (for that had beene unnaturall) but because hee was not zealously moved against their sinnes. And therefore there is a godly anger against our bretherens sinnes.

[d] Exod. 32. 19. [e] Numb. 16. 15. [f] 1 Cor. 6. 5. [g] Gal. 3. 1 [h] Acts 17. 16. [i] Marke 3. 5. [k] Iohn 2. 16. [l] 1 Sam. 2. 23. [m] 1 Sam. 3. 13. כְּהֹרִים

Wherein doth this anger consist which is to be kindled against our brothers sinne? Quest. 3.

It consists in foure things, or is it to be moderated according to these foure Rules. Answ.

First, let the object of this anger be lawfull, or let it be for a just cause, namely, some publik evil, and not a private; let it bee for the honour of God, of Christ, of the Gospel, of Religion, and of profession; or for something that is hurtfull to the Common-wealth, or for the perverting of Justice, or for the slandring or calumniating of good men, or the oppressing and injuring of the poore and godly. Thou must not be angry with thy brother for thy owne private cause, and patient in a common evill; for it is a vile thing to be provoked unto rage for a private injury, and not to bee moved at all for a publike. Rule 1.

Secondly, let thy anger be against Satan, not against thy brother: Cum Sathan instigat, frater instigatur ad malum, in illum converte iram, in hunc autem mi ericordiam[n]. When Sathan doth instigate, and thy brother is perswaded by him unto evill, be angry with him that tempted, but mercifull and pitifull unto him that is tempted: Be angry with the Divell, as the cause of thy brothers sinne, but not with thy brother, who is overcome by his subtilitie and strength. Rule 2. [n] Basil. hom. de Ira.

Thirdly, this anger must arise from love, not envie or malice; because we love our brother, therefore wee must bee angry with his sinne, it being pernicious unto his precious soule. Rule 3.

Fourthly, let this anger never be immode- Rule 4.

rate or unbridled; anger muſt bee curbed (as a head-ſtrong horſe) with a bridle. Sit ira inſtrumentum virtutis, non domina mentis, ſed ancilla ad obſequium parata[o]. Anger muſt be the inſtrument of vertue, not the inſtigator unto vice; it muſt be as a dutifull hand-mayd alwayes prepared to obey; not a miſtreſſe of the minde to dominiere or command. When the cauſe of thy anger is not good, then reſtraine it; when the cauſe is good, then looſe the reines, but doe not caſt the bridle out of thy hands, but ſtill reſtraine it, that ſo thou mayſt never breake forth into intemperate rage.

o Gregor. Mor. 5. 33.

Sect. 4. §. 6. Shall be in danger of the judgement.]

Queſt. What is meant here by Iudgement?

Anſw. The word being expounded before, §. 3. queſt. 1. I here onely adde, that there is a threefold judgement,

Namely,
- Firſt, Diſcretionis, of diſcerning or ſeparating the good from the evill, For judgement (ſayth Chriſt) am I come into the world[p], that is, to divide the good from the bad.
- Secondly, Punitionis, of puniſhment, either: Particular, at the houre of death, Or, Generall, at the laſt judgement.
- Thirdly, Remunerationis, of reward; when the Lord ſhall judge the Saints.

p Ioh. 9. 39

This verſe neither ſpeakes of the firſt judgement of Separation, or of the laſt of Remuneration, but of the ſecond, and ſecond particle thereof, the judgement of the laſt day. For theſe words, Hee ſhall bee in danger of judgement, do containe the reward and puniſhment of unlawfull anger; as if our Saviour would ſay, anger ſhall not eſcape juſt puniſhment, but ſhall bee arraigned and ſummoned before Gods Tribunall at the dreadfull day of judgement, when the angry man ſhall not be able to anſwer one word of a thouſand.

Sect. 7. §. 7. Whoſoever ſhall ſay to his brother, Racha, ſhall be in danger of the Councell.

Obiect. Bellarmine lib. 1. de amiſſ. grat. cap. 9. objects this place to prove, that all ſinnes deſerve not eternall death. Chriſt (ſayth hee) makes three degrees of anger, proportioning alſo three degrees of puniſhment thereunto, to wit, of Iudgement, Counſell, and Hell fire, which is threatned onely to bee inflicted upon him that calles his brother Foole: Therefore there are ſome ſinnes which doe not deſerve hell fire.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, this place doth ſhew a difference and degree of everlaſting puniſhment, according to the qualitie and diverſitie of ſinnes: but another kinde of puniſhment beſide eternall it ſheweth not: For Iudgement, a Counſell, and Hell fire, doe but ſignifie three degrees of the ſame puniſhment; Hell fire being due to the reſt, but added onely for diſtinction, to ſhew both the difference of the ſinne and puniſhment.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Iudgement, κρίσις, κρίμα, is taken in Scripture for everlaſting puniſhment, or condemnation, as Roman. 2. 3. How ſhalt thou eſcape the Iudgement of God? And therefore Bellarmines conſequence is nought, He that is angry, ſhall be guiltie of judgement, therefore not of hell fire; for Iudgement ſignifies the puniſhment of ever-burning Tophet.

Thirdly, Saint Paul ſayth, No rayler ſhall inherit the kingdome of God, (1 Cor. 6. 10.) But he that ſayth Racha to his brother, is a rayler; wherefore hee that ſayth Racha, ſhall not inherit the kingdome of heaven. The Minor propoſition is thus proved, Racha is an Hebrew Interjection, and is derived from ריק Raiak, evacuare; and is read by the Thalmud ריקא Inanis, vacuus, that is, a light head, or cock-braine, wide and emptie of wiſedome, or underſtanding. Now hee that thus reviles his brother, railes upon him; and therefore if Saint Paul may bee beleeved, hee that calles his brother Racha, ſhall not inherit the kingdome of heaven. Anſw. 3

Sect. 8. §. 8. Whoſoever ſhall ſay, thou Foole.] Is it not lawfull then at all to call any Foole? Queſt. 1.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it is lawfull for God to call wicked men fooles (Prov. 12. 6.) and for Chriſt to call the two Diſciples fooliſh (Luk. 24. 25.) yea for Saint Paul, to brand the Galatians with folly, Gal. 3. 1. and plainly to call the Cretians, Liers and Slowbellies, Titus 1. 12.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, this place is to be underſtood of them which charge men with folly, with a mind to reproach them, by way of revenge; we muſt not call any foole in anger, hatred, or contempt, becauſe (as was formerly ſayd) Chriſtians muſt looke upon all men as their brethren; and our Saviour ſayth here plainly, thou muſt not in anger call thy brother foole.

Queſt. 2. Doth the abuſe of the tongue deſerve hel fire, or deſtroy the ſoule?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Pomerius ſaith, Convitia, reprochfull words are veniall ſinnes when they are thus qualified: I. When they are given by ſuperiours, by way of correction or reproofe. II. When they proceed not from hatred, but from the levity of the mind. III. When they proceed from a light or ſmall anger, and from unbridled, or immoderate rage. IV. When they proceed from no deſire of diſgrace, that is, although a manuſe ſome reprochfull and diſgracefull words unto his brother in his anger, yet doth it not with a purpoſe or intent to diſgrace him. V. When by the reprochfull words which are given, our brother is not much diſgraced.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Pomerius ſaith, Maledicta, evill ſpeeches, and maledictions are but veniall ſins, when thus occaſioned or uttered, viz. I. When they proceed from a good cauſe, or from ſome calling from God. II. When they are pronounced againſt, or reflect upon him onely who hath deſerved to be evill ſpoken of. III. When they are occaſioned for a trifle, a matter of no great moment. IV. When they are from a ſudden undeliberated heat of paſſion. Theſe reſpects thinkes Pomerius, doe ſo allay, and qualifie the poyſon of the tongue, that it wil not prove mortall unto us.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, we have a more ſure word of prophecy to reſolve, and eſtabliſh us in this particular, then the opinion of an erring Papiſt, and that that is the word of God, which teacheth us what to thinke or judge of rayling, reproachfull, and curſed ſpeeches, by theſe particulars: Firſt, the Scripture commands us, if wee deſire to approve our ſelves to have put on Chriſt, to put on the vertue contrary unto theſe: Put on therefore as the elect of God, bowels of mercies, kindneſſe, [p] Coloſſ. 3.12. 13. humbleneſſe of mind, meekeneſſe, long ſuffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another [p]. All theſe are contrary, or oppoſite, to reproaches and evill ſpeakings, and therefore if the one bee commanded, then is the other forbidden; if one bee an argument of an elect veſſell, the other is of a reprobate, at leaſt for the preſent: And therefore whether ſimply taken, or according to Pomerius his qualifications and reſtrictions, they are no veniall ſinnes.

Secondly, the Scripture prohibites theſe ex conſequenti, by a neceſſary conſequent: Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good, &c. That you grieve not the [q] Epheſ. 4. 21. Holy Spirit of God [q]. Now none will deny but that reviling and wicked ſpeeches are corrupt communication, at leaſt tend not to edification, but rather offend God. The Apoſtle ſeemes plainely thus to argue; thoſe ſpeeches which are corrupt, and edifie not the hearers are diſpleaſing to the pure Spirit of God, and become not Chriſtians; but rayling, reviling, and reproachfull ſpeeches, are corrupt, and tend not to edification; and therefore they are unbeſeeming Chriſtians, and diſpleaſing to the Holy Ghoſt, and conſequently (in their owne nature) lethall and not veniall.

Thirdly, the Scripture diſlikes all ſpeeches of this kind, becauſe they argue that there is neither grace in us for the preſent, nor hope of glory for the time to come. I. That man who gives way to theſe abuſive ſpeeches doth thereby teſtifie, that his heart is not ſeaſoned or ſanctified with true grace. If any man ſeeme religious and [r] Iam 1. 26. bridleth not his tongue, he deceiveth his owne heart, and his religion is in vaine [r]. II. That man is as yet no heire of glory. Be not deceived; for raylers and revilers ſhall never enter into the kingdome of [ſ] 1 Cor. 6. 10. God [ſ]. I conclude this particular with this plaine ſyllogiſme. That which excludes us both from grace and glory is mortall and not veniall, but rayling, reviling, and reprochfull words (not being repented of) exclude us both from the poſſeſſion of grace, and true hope of glory, therefore they are no veniall ſinnes.

Fourthly, theſe are directly and poſitively forbidden by God in his word; and therefore are no veniall ſinnes in their owne nature. Lay aſide all malice, envy, and evill ſpeakings, ſaith [t] 1 Pet. 2. 1. Saint Iames [t], and Saint Paul moſt plainely, Let all bitterneſſe, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, [u] Epheſ. 4. 31. and evill ſpeaking, be put away from you [u]. Having ſhewed that rayling and reprochfull words are mortall ſinnes, it may hence be further demanded, Queſt. 3. why the abuſes of the tongue doe deſtroy the ſoule, and muſt bee puniſhed with Hell Fire?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe the tongue was given unto us for other ends; ſpeech is onely given unto men; and that for this end that thereby they might performe thoſe duties which God requires of them, viz. to wit. Firſt, wee muſt bleſſe and praiſe God with our tongues Jam. 3. 9. Secondly, wee muſt confeſſe Chriſt with our tongues, Rom. 10. Thirdly, wee muſt invocate and ſupplicate the throne of grace for mercy, with our tongues. Fourthly, wee muſt confeſſe our ſinnes unto God with our mouths. Fiftly, wee muſt ſpeake the truth, and hold forth the truth in our words. Sixtly, we muſt edifie our brethren by our ſpeeches and communications [x]. For the performance of theſe holy duties God in mercy hath given us (not as unto the other creatures, dumbe and ſilent tongues, but) ſpeaking tongues: and therefore hee that ſhall thus farre defraud the Lord of his expectation, making this rare member, an inſtrument of wickedneſſe, ſhall be puniſhed by the Lord for this abuſe therof with hell fire. [x] Epheſ. 4. 29. Coloſſ. 4. 6

Secondly, becauſe theſe ſpeeches are evill in themſelves: Hence Michael contending with Sathan about the body of Moſes, durſt not uſe any reviling ſpeeches, but onely ſaid, The Lord rebuke thee [a]. The Lord beſt knowing the impiety of ſuch words, and how prone wee are unto them, hath ſhewed his infinite mercy, and care towards us; in the preventing of them, by the framing, faſhioning, and placing of the tongue: God doth nothing in vain, & therfore he would have the ſons of men to anatomize the tongue, and to read ſome profitable lecture upon every particle thereof: as for example. I. The tongue is placed in the head, in the midſt of the ſenſes; to teach us, that our words muſt bee wiſe, grave, weighty, and diſcreet. II. The tongue is hedged and fenced in with a double wall; namely, of earth, and of ſtone, the lips being as the earthen wall, the teeth as a ſtone wall, to teach us that we muſt ſet a watch over our lips, and keepe our tongues as with a bridle; yea, be cautelous and circumſpect in our words, that nothing may break through the teeth and lips, which is either diſpleaſing unto God, or diſagreeing unto our profeſſion, or diſgracefull unto our brethren. III. The tongue is ſimple, and undivided; men being not like Serpents double or cloven tongued, to teach us, that wee muſt ſpeake the truth alwaies; for truth is but one, and we have but one tongue, and therefore it ſhould alwaies utter the truth. IV. The tongue is tyed below, but hath no ligaments above; to teach us that our tongues muſt bee much more prone and ready to ſpeake of heavenly and celeſtiall things, then of earthly and terreſtriall; frequent in diſcourſing of thoſe things which are above, more ſpare of thoſe which are below. V. It is of a ſoft not of a hard, canly, or tough nature, to teach us that our words muſt be mild, ſoft, gentle, and not proud, reprochfull, cruell, diſdainfull, and the like. Theſe things the Lord would have us to ruminate upon, in our tongues, that ſo it may be a meanes to make us more wary of our words, we being naturally ſo prone to breake forth (upon all occaſions and provocations) unto unchriſtian ſpeeches, which are both diſpleaſing to our Father, [a] Jude 9. verſ. Anſw. 2.

202 hurtfull to our brother, and mortall to our ſelves, and therefore if wee would not defile our tongues, provoke our God, extinguiſh grace, grieve the Spirit, enflame and kindle the fire of hell, for the burning of our ſelves, wee ſhould abſtaine from all rayling, reviling, and reprochfull words; not ſaying in our anger to our brother, either Racha, or thou Foole.

Queſt. 4. Wee are prone to utter what we ought not againſt our brother in our rage (as was truely ſaid before) and therefore what meanes may we uſe for the curbing of this little, troubleſome, and firy member, the tongue, which often ſets on fire the whole courſe of nature?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſtudy to anſwer, and learne to ſpeake well: The righteous ſtudyeth to anſwer, but the mouth of the wicked powreth forth evill things [b]. Let us not accuſtome our ſelves, to ſpeake whatſoever comes uppermoſt (as the proverbe is) but digeſt, weigh, and ponder the nature, and quality of our words, before we ſpeake.

b Pro. 15. 28.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſtrive and endeavour to ſpeake molliter, mildly, gently, calmely, that thy anſwers may be ſoft [c], for they will pacifie wrath; that thy tongue may bee ſoft, for that breaketh the bone [d]. Frangit oſſeum, that is, duriſſimum & rigidiſſimum; gentle and ſoft words wil mollifie the moſt hard, rigide and croſſe natures [e].

c Pro. 15. 1

d Pro. 25. 15.

e Tremel. ſup.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, learne to ſpeake ſanctè, holily and purely: Let thy words be ſeaſoned with ſalt, fit for edifying, that they may adde grace to the hearers, Epheſ. 4. 28. Coloſſ. 4. 6. Let us accuſtome our ſelves to pious diſcourſes, that they may become habituall unto us, and ſo wee ſhall bee the more free from all corrupt and wicked ſpeeches, which our Saviour hath threatned here to puniſh with hell fire.

Sect. 9. §. 9. Shall be in danger of hell fire.] What is meant by Gehenna, Hell, in this place?

Queſt.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome hereby underſtand, the valley of Hinnom, which is mentioned, Ioſua 15. 8. And which was abuſed by Idolaters, to barbarous, inhumane, and heathenish Idolatry. Thus Ahaz burns incenſe in the valley of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen [f]. Thus Manaſſes cauſeth his children to paſſe through the fire in the valley of the ſonne of Hinnom, 2 Chron. 33, 6. The fire wherein their children were burnt, was called Tophet: They have built the high places (ſayth Ieremiah) of Tophet, which is in the valley of Hinnom, to burne their ſonnes and their daughters in the fire [g]. And the Idoll whereunto they there offered their children, was called Molech: They built the high places in the valley of Hinnom, to cauſe their ſonnes and their daughters to paſſe through the fire unto Molech [h].

f 2 Chro. 28.

g Ierem. 7 31.

h Ier. 32. 35.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, in this valley of Hinnom, there was a double fire; Firſt, the fire wherein their children were burnt: our Saviour here by the fire of Gehenna, may have reference to this fire, thus; Firſt, this valley of Hinnom was a place of miſerie, in regard of thoſe many ſlaughters, that were committed in it through their barbarous idolatry: ſo Hell is a place of miſerie, and infelicitie, wherein there is nothing but ſorrow. Secondly, by the bitter cries, and ejaculations of poore infants, the reſtleſſe torments of hell may be ſhadowed here alſo.

Secondly, in this valley of Hinnom was another fire, which was kept continually burning, for the conſuming of dead carkaſſes, and filth, and the garbidge that came out of the Citie. Now our Saviour by the fire of Gehenna in this place, hath reference principally to this fire, ſignifying hereby the perpetuitie, and everlaſtingneſſe of helliſh paines.

If my Reader deſire further to learne, how the Kabbaliſts paraphraſe and diſtinguiſh of a ſuperiour and inferiour Gehenna, or how they obſerve ſeven manſions or degrees in Gehenna, called, 1. Infernus, 2. Perditio, 3. Profundum, 4. Taciturnitas, 5. Vmbra mortis, 6. Terra inferior, 7. Terra ſitiens. Let him read Capnio de Kabala, pag. 644. and Pet. Galat. lib. 12. cap. 6. & lib. 7. cap. 7. and Reuchlin in lib. 1. Cabalæ, pag. 456. and Otho Gualtperſyllog. pag. 81. 82. 83.

This place is ſtrongly urged by Peltanus, and Bellarmine (lib. 1. cap. 1. and lib. 2. cap. 6. de Purgatorio) and divers others for the proofe of Purgatorie: Some of them briefly arguing thus, Obiect.

If in the world to come, the firſt and ſecond degrees of anger here expreſſed, ſhall not be puniſhed with hell fire, and yet ſhall bee puniſhed with ſome torments; then it remaines, that they muſt bee puniſhed in Purgatorie, becauſe after this life, there is no other place of puniſhment, but either hell or Purgatorie, Bellarmine and Peltanus they diſpute thus: Firſt, our Saviour ſpeakes here of puniſhments which are to be enjoyned unto, and inflicted upon ſinners, by the judgement and ſentence of God after this life. Secondly, that there are here diſtinguiſhed by Chriſt three ſorts of ſinnes, and three kindes of puniſhments; and that hell fire, and eternall condemnation is attributed onely to the third kinde: and to the firſt and ſecond, more light puniſhments, that is, temporall. And therefore ſome ſoules ſhall be puniſhed after this life, with temporall puniſhments, to wit, in Purgatory, becauſe there is no other place of puniſhment after death, but either hell or Purgatory.

First, wee grant, that our Saviour ſpeakes here of puniſhments, which ſhall bee inflicted upon ſinners, by the judgement and ſentence of God after this life: But it followes not from hence, that hee ſpeakes of the temporall paines of purgatorie. Chamier. tom. 3. fol. 1160. de Purgat. cap. 6. Sect. 3. lib. 26. & Scharp curſ. Theolog. de Purgat. pag. 557. reſp. 2. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, wee deny, that there are three diſtinct ſorts or kindes of ſinnes, or puniſhments; but rather three degrees of puniſhment in hell, which although they bee unequall, yet are all eternall, as evidently appeares by theſe reaſons; Firſt, every tranſgreſſion of the Law is ſinne; and the wages of every ſinne is death, (Rom. 6. 23. and 1. Ioh. 3. 4.) But to be angry raſhly, and to raile, are tranſgreſſions, and conſequently ſins (as was ſhewed before.) And therefore in themſelves are worthy of everlaſting death. Anſw. 2.

Secondly, he that loveth not his brother, abideth

in

1 1 Ioh. 3. 14. 15. in death, that is, hath no eternall life[1]. But hee that is angry with his brother unjustly, loveth him not: therefore he hath no part in eternall life. Thirdly, no raylers shall inherit Gods

† 1 Cor 6. 10. kingdome, that is, without repentance[†]. But he that sayth to his brother, Racha, that is idle-braine, or light-head, raileth: therefore this sinne (without repentance) excludeth from heaven: and consequently, in it selfe is worthy of hell. Willet. Synops. 408. Fourthly, Christ speaks here of the sinne, not of the punishment; for to bee angry with our brother, and to harme him with some opprobrious words, is the fault of the sinne, not the punishment thereof: but every fault and guilt of sinne not pardoned, doth bring upon the sinner eternall condemnation (as shall elsewhere be shewed.) And therefore all these three degrees of sinne are guiltie of hell fire. Fiftly, Christ concluding this discourse, commands every one to be reconciled unto his brother, lest he be delivered unto the Judge, and by him sent into prison, from whence hee shall not come out, untill hee have payd the uttermost farthing, that is, never, as shall bee shewed by and by. And therefore although there be divers unequall degrees of punishment in hell, yet all are equall in regard of the eternitie and perpetuitie thereof. Chamier. de Purgat. fol. 1160. §. 5.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, an Argument drawne from a Metaphor, similitude, or a resemblance, is not to be stretched, or urged, beyond the scope or intent of him that propounds it. But Christs scope here was, to correct the false interprerations and expositions of the Decalogue; the Pharisees restraining the transgressions of the Law, onely unto the outward and more weightie commissions and acts: and therefore our Saviour teacheth them, that those sins which they account light and veniall, as to bee angry with their brother, or to reproach him by some disgracefull words, are indeed great and mortall sinnes, deserving hell and damnation it selfe. Scharp. de Purgat. fol. 557. resp. 2. & Sadeel pag. 258. error 2.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if our Saviour speake here of Purgatorie, where he represents divers judgements, or jurisdictions of the Jewes, whereof some were superiour, some inferiour; as the Judgement, Councell, and great Synedrion: then it would follow hence, that there are many severall jurisdictions in Purgatorie, and appeales from the inferiour Judges to the superiour, as was in them. But this is so absurd, that I never heard nor read Papist maintaine it; and therefore I could wish, they would thinke Purgatory it selfe as grosse.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, neither of these words, Judgement or Councell, can in any respect agree, or be applyed to Purgatory; there not being in them the least mention or insinuation of any purging, more than there is in the word Gehenna. Ames. tom. 2. pag. 201.

Answ. 6. Sixtly, from this place they must either prove two distinct Purgatories, or none at all: for Bellarmine himselfe observes two kindes of punishments distinct from the eternall torments of hell fire. And therefore if this argument bee worth the owning or maintaining, he must grant two Purgatories distinct in place and situation: For as the Councel is a distinct place and jurisdiction from the place of the fire of Hell (as he saith) so also is the place of Judgment, a distinct place frō the Synedrion or Councell: And therefore if the Papists contend for this, that the Synedrion or Councell differs from the fire of Hell: wee doe no lesse strive for this, that in like manner Judgement differs from Councell; and so cannot be numerically one. Wherefore either they must goe set up a second and new Purgatory from this place, or pull down the old one, which they have so stoutly heretofore maintained from hence, because this Scripture we see must either support two Purgatories or none.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, if this conclusion of the Papists be good, our Saviour speakes of punishments after this life, because mention is made of Hell fire; then this will follow also, that he speakes of the punishments of civill judgements, or Courts in this life, because he makes mention of a Judgement, and a Councel, which belong unto this life, and are not in Purgatory; and therefore if this be absurd and deformed, so is also the former, being both cut by one Last.

Answ. 8. Eightly, what Fathers can they finde who interpret this place, of Purgatory? Theophilact upon these words, by councell understands the consent of the Apostles in the great and generall judgement. And Saint Augustine (de serm. Dom. in monte) from this place concludes, that there are different degrees of punishment in Hell.

Answ. 9. Ninthly, to prove Purgatory from this place cannot stand with some other opinions of the Papists; and therefore if they could prove Purgatory hence, yet they would lose more than they should gaine by the bargaine: As for example, 1. If the words of our Saviour here concerning Judgement and Councell doe belong unto Purgatory; then that is false which the Papists say, Non culpam sed panam in Purgatorium venire: that the guilt of our sinnes doth not come into Purgatory, that being washed away in the blood of Christ, but onely the punishment: For in the Judgement and Councell they consulted of the fault: Judicium dicitur, &c. saith Augustine (l. 1. de ser. in monte cap. 19.) that is called Judgement where the sentence is not pronounced, that a Councell where the punishment is yet consulted of; but Gehenna or Hell is that, which hath certaine damnation, &c. 2. If the words of our Saviour here concerning Judgement and Councell, doe belong unto Purgatory, then that is false which the Papists say, that Purgatory is a Tormentory or a place of punishment; for neither the judgement nor the lesser Synedrion were places of punishments, as was shewed before. Lastly, this Answ. 10. verse which is so vehemently urged by our adversaries for defence of Purgatory, hath beene likewise by their owne learned Doctors, so exactly and particularly answered, that Protestants may well spare all paines of any further confutation thereof. This place is objected by VERS. 23. Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the Altar, and there remembrest that thy brother hath ought against thee.

Vers. 23.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Therefore if thou bringest thy gift to the Altar.]

Quest. 1. What is the end, or main scope of our Savior, in this verse, and the three following.

Answ. Christ here implicitely teacheth us, that God desireth not the death of sinners, but rather that they might live, that is, that they would repent, and by faith lay hold upon God, labouring and seeking for reconciliation with him, whom they have offended by their sinnes; And that our Saviour may the easelier prevaile with us herein, he expresseth this Parable, wherein he useth these Arguments to perswade us hereunto. First, he shewes the greatnesse of the debt, which wee owe unto God, and which we are no way able to pay; And therefore if God once call our sinnes unto account, wee must needs be cast into prison. Secondly, he shewes that the Judge before whose Tribunall we must stand, is an omnipotent God, from whose hand and power we cannot escape, he having Ministers and Officers to arrest us, and a prison to hold us. Thirdly, he expresseth the nature and manner of the last judgement, that it shall be according to the severitie and the rigour of the Law, requiring a perfect and exact solution and payment of all our debts, even unto the least farthing; which we being not able to performe, are necessarily to be detained in the prison of hell for ever.

Quest. 2. What is the sense and meaning of this verse?

Answ. 1. First, some understand this literally, thus, If thou bring thy gift unto the Altar, &c. that is, if thou beest conscious unto thy selfe, that thou hast done something, whereby thy brother is justly incensed and provoked, then give all diligence with all speed to be reconciled unto him by confessing and acknowledging the wrong thou hast done him (Wotton of the Reconcil. of sinners.) Others againe expound these words literally thus, that Christ speakes here onely according to the present state and custome of the Church of the Jewes; thus Bulling. Aretius, Marlor, Calvin, Muscul. Gualter, and others, and it is the most safe exposition: Sic non potest de fratribus absentibus (trans mare) sed præsentibus intelligi m. But if the words be thus literally interpreted, then they meane our present, and not absent brethren; for if wee have offended some who are in another remote land, we must not then leave our offering untill they come over.

m Aug. de serm. dom. s.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some give a literall sense of these words, but a spirituall application, thus; If thou remembrest that thy brother hath ought against thee, &c. that is, the offence which thou remembrest thou hast done unto thy Brother, acknowledge it, appease it, remove it, and bee reconciled unto him: And thus we must labour to be reconciled unto God, whom wee have offended by our sinnes, either by appeasing his wrath, or by removing away his anger, either by our selves, or by another; now by our selves we cannot, and therefore we must be reconciled and atoned unto him by Christ, who made himselfe a sacrifice for sinne, that thereby he might cleanse us from all our iniquity, and reconcile us unto God by his death n.

n Lubertus contra Socinum.

Thirdly, some expound these words morally, of every good worke which wee performe unto God as a part of his worship o. The Altar is faith upon which we offer Prayers, praises, and spirituall duties, August.

Answ. 3. o Staplet. Antidot.

Fourthly, some understand this of the expiatory sacrifice of the Masse. Necesse est legem de externo sacrificio, &c. (Stapleton s.) Our Saviour here doth certainely speake of some externall sacrifices, therefore that of the Masse: this he proves 1. Because the Fathers did apply this place to the Eucharist, or Lords Supper. 2. Because Christ here prophecieth, what would come to passe.

Answ. 4. Object.

Answ. 1. First, it is true that the Fathers did apply this place to the Supper of the Lord.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they did not onely apply it to the Eucharist, but also unto all religious and spirituall exercises; Dissidentes mensa illa non suscipiat; Audiant qui cum inimicitiis ad altaris communionem, &c p. The Table of the Lord will not receive those who will not agree, or be reconciled; and therefore let all those feare and tremble, who bring their dissensions, hatred and discord along with them unto this holy Communion. But hereunto the Father addes, the sacrifices of Prayer and Almes, from Psal. 50. 14. 23. and of praise, Psal. 107. 22. and of a contrite heart, Psal. 51. 17. Yea, De omni pio opere, ad cultum Dei destinato, of every good worke which is injoyned as a part of Gods worship, as Stapleton himselfe (Antidot.) saith, which is his Explication of this verse, but rather our Application. And therefore how doth this belong unto an expiatorie Sacrifice?

p Chrys. s.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we willingly confesse that the Eucharist may be called a Sacrifice, and the Table an Altar; but gratulatorium, non expiatorium, a gratulatory, not expiatory sacrifice; as may be proved, first by the name of Eucharist, which is given to the Sacrament, which signifies as much as a sacrifice, or a religious exercise of thankesgiving and praise. Secondly, by the exposition of the Holy Ghost; Wee have (saith the Apostle) an Altar (to wit, Christ) whereof they have no right to eate (Heb. 13. 10.) By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thankes to his Name, (Heb. 13. 15.) Thirdly, because the Fathers did conjoyne the Sacrament with other holy exercises of Religion: And therefore this is a palpable perverting of the truth, to wrest this place to an expiatory sacrifice.

§. 2. That thy Brother hath ought against thee.] Sect. 2.

Our

Obser. Our Saviour in these words includes the reason, why reconciliation is necessarie, because God doth not tolerate dissensions amongst brethren. Teaching us that by the bond of Christian piety we are all brethren.

Quest. Why are all Christians to be esteemed and loved as brethren?

Answ. 1. First, because we are called unto this fraternitie: If any bee called a brother, saith the Apostle 1 Cor. 5. 11. hence Christ is called the first borne amongst brethren, Rom. 8. 29. And therefore all the members of Christ are brethren, and should so be prized and esteemed.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is necessary, and that in many regards, that all Christians should be beloved as brethren. First, hence we may know that we are translated from death unto life if wee love the bethren[q]. Secondly, hence wee know that we are borne of God, if we love one another[r]. Thirdly, because he that hateth his brother is in darkenesse; but he that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is no occasion of stumbling in him[s]. Fourthly, he that loveth not his brother is not of God[t]. Fifthly, he that loveth not his brother, loveth not Christ[v], for he that loveth Christ will love those that are his. Sixtly, hee that loveth not his brethren, loveth not God; and if any say hee loves God and not his brother, he is a lyer[u].

s 1 Iohn 2. 9. 10.
t 1 Iohn 3. 10.
v 1 Iohn 5. 1.
u 1 Iohn 4. 20.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wee are to esteeme and love all men as brethren, because the consideration and remembrance of this relation will preserve us from many evills; as for example.

First, this will make us carefull not to offend them: If meat (saith the Apostle) make my brother to offend, I will eate no flesh till the world ſtands[w]. Secondly, this will make us carefull to speake the truth one to another. Put away lying, and speake every man truth with his neighbour: for we are members (that is, brethren) one of another[x]. Thirdly, this would appease jarres, and mitigate contentions, and abate suites, and going to law one with another. Ye are brethren (saith Moses to the two Israelites) and therfore you must not fight. Brother must not goe to law with Brother (saith Saint Paul) for that is unseemely. 1 Cor. 6. And therefore they are much to blame who deride this phrase of Brethren, and note Schismatickes by that name; for it is a terme which is proper to the Church of Christ, and not to the Synagogue of Satan, as wee may see. Acts 10. 23. and 11. 1. 12. 29. But the new brotherhood of the Separatists excepted against Canon. 9. I speake not, nor allow not off.

w 1 Cor. 8. 13. and Rom. 14.
x Ephes. 4. 25.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Have ought against thee.]

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. If thou hast injured thy brother at all, if thou hast called him Racha, or foole, or beene angry with him, if thou hast wronged him in the least kinde, confesse thy offence, and bee reconciled unto him.

Quest. 2. Why must we be thus carefull to abstaine from all wronging of our neighbours, and to satisfie the least injury done unto them?

Answ. 1. First, because God is the avenger of all injuries and wrongs; and therefore out of our feare unto him, we should avoide all doing of wrong, and be ready to satisfie for that which we have done. Levit. 25. 17.

Answ. 2. Secondly, charity beginnes at home: and therefore we should doe to others as wee would they should doe unto us: and bee as carefull of wronging of others, as we would have others of injuring us.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is the nature of Charity, to doe no evill at all, Rom. 13. 10. neither to thinke evill, 1 Cor. 13. 5. and therefore where there is true brotherly love, there will be a true care to keepe the bound of charity entire, and to make up all breaches, which occasionally may be made.

Quest. 3. Must we satisfie our brother, if hee know not the injurie or wrong done unto him?

Answ. Yes.

Obiect. But against this it may be objected, If our brother be ignorant of the wrong which is done unto him, then we shall hurt him more by satisfying him; for so he will be more provoked and incensed, when he knowes what hath been done, and by whom.

Answ. 1. First, if there were onely in thee a purpose of mischief towards thy brother, or that thou wert onely angry with him in thy heart; then thou mayest conceale it, because the revealing of it may provoke him, and exasperate him more against thee.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if thy brother be truely injured and wronged, in deede, or word, it is necessary that thou shouldest make satisfaction, although hee neither before knew that hee was endangered, nor that he was harmed by thee; lest that the Judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou bee cast into prison.

Quest. 4. What must the party offended doe, if the offender will not make satisfaction, or come and seeke reconciliation.

Answ. 1. First, Augustine here answers, non est opus ad illum pergere; there is no neede that the offended should goe unto the offender; non veniam postulabis, sed dimittes; for it is enough for him to forgive the offence committed against him (and this is his duty to doe) he neede not goe to desire love and reconciliation. Of this opinion in a manner is Hierome.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Chrysostome answers, that our Saviour speakes here also to the party wronged, that hee must seeke to bee reconciled, if hee that hath done the wrong will not.

Quest. 5. Why must he that is injured seeke amity and reconciliation at his hand, who hath done the wrong?

Answ. 1. First, because thus wee imitate Christ, who seekes first unto us: We have greevously, and gracelesly offended our Christ, and yet hee is graciously pleased to seeke for reconciliation: We in Christs stead desire you to be reconciled unto God. 2 Cor. 5. 19.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because otherwise it is an argument that there is anger yet remaining in the heart of the offended towards the offender, if he will not seeke for peace and ensue after it.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, without this there can be in the person injured no love unto the soule of the injurious partie. The offended Christian should thus 206 thus consult with himselfe; He that doth wrong, and will not acknowledge it, yea satisfie for it, and bee reconciled unto him whom he hath abused; shall bee delivered unto the Judge and from him by the officers cast into Prison, from whence there is no redemption: But my brother hath injured and abused me, and knowes what I have against him, and yet will not come and seeke reconciliation and attonement; And therefore in love unto his soule I must stoope unto him, and desire betwixt us mutuall and Christian love, that so I may pluck him as a brand out of the fire, or else his obstinacie will at last bring him to eternall misery.

Obie. 11 Some may object here, I have done no wrong unto him, but he unto me; And therefore why should I seeke unto him?

Answ. 1 First, it may bee thou art part in fault, and although the first wrong came from him, yet perhaps it was occasioned by thy provocations; And therefore as halfe faulty thou shouldest seeke reconciliation.

Answ. 2. Secondly, although the wrong came wholy from thy brother, and not at all from thy selfe, yet if thou be provoked, incensed, or disquieted in thy mind, by reason of the injury offered, then it is requisite, that thou shouldst sue for peace, though thy brother will not: because otherwise the Spirit of God (who will not abide in a wrathfull, or angry, or revengfull soule) depart from thee. Now consider whither thou hadst rather loose the company and fellowship of that ever blessed Comforter, by not seeking unto thy brother; or retaine his presence in thy soule by submitting thy selfe to sue for reconciliation at the hands of him, who hath injured and wronged thee.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, although thou be not moved, or incensed against thy brother for the wrong done unto thee; yet it is fit for thee to desire reconciliation at thy brothers hands: And there is nothing hinders thee from it, except it bee thy pride, lofty mind, or stout stomacke: which are things not to bee commended, or connived at, or allowed, or given way unto by Christians, but rather to be withstood and striven against.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, to bee reconciled one unto another is a good worke; and therefore though thy brother bee backward in seeking it, who hath done the wrong unto thee, yet thou must not neglect it; because reconciliation is a Christian duty which God requires of thee as well as him: And therefore strive to outstrip him, for it will bee the greater praise and commendation unto thee.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because this onely is commended and rewarded by God: Si confessus ubi offendisti, quid meritus? veniam solam: At si humilies te, ubi tuipse læsus, veniam & præmium[x]. If thou have offended thy brother, and confesse thy fault unto him, what dost thou deserve? onely pardon from thy brother. If thou be wronged, and art content to pardon thy brother, and to be reconciled unto him, when hee acknowledgeth his offence unto thee, and desireth pardon and reconciliation from thee, what dost thou deserve? the praise of men: If thou bee unjustly injured by thy brother, and as soone as thou knowest the offence and the offender, thou runne unto him, desiring that the bond of love may not bee broken betwixt you, but that you may bee one in Christian love; what deservest thou, or what shalt thou have? praise, pardon, and a reward from God: the Lord will commend thee, whose praise is better then the praise of men: The Lord wil pardon thy offences unto thee, because so freely for his sake thou forgavest others: The Lord will reward thee with eternall honour and glory.

[x] Chrys. imperfect.

VERS. 24. Leave there thy gift before the Altar, and goe thy way, first be reconciled unto thy brother, and then come, and offer thy gift. Vers. 24.

§. 1. Leave there thy gift before the Altar, &c. Sect. 1.

Why must not the sacrifice bee offered, untill the parties be reconciled? Is it not better first to discharge our duty towards God, and then to be reconciled to our brother? Quest. 1.

First, as we must give no place to anger Ephes. 4. 26. so Christ will permit no time for the retaining of it: we must not harbour anger in our heart for so long a space, as wee might offer up a sacrifice unto God; but as soone as ever we remember our brother to have any thing against us, presently goe and be reconciled unto him. Answ. 1.

Secondly, Christ gives this charge, that thereby he might commend Christian love and unity unto us, yea also shew us, how highly hee loves this mutuall charity. We must rather dispense with the externall worship of God, then leave jarres and dissensions unreconciled; that is, of the two, this must first bee performed according to Christs doctrine in this verse. Answ. 2

Thirdly, our Saviour prescribes this injunctiō, that he might shewe the necessity of reconciliation, no sacrifice without that being pleasing or acceptable unto God: Teaching us hereby, that reconciliation with our brethren is the very soule of sacrifices, without which nothing is delightfull in the nostrils of the Lord. Answ. 3. Observ.

Are the workes of the second Table to bee preferred before those of the first? Quest. 2.

No, if the workes of the first bee true, but they can never bee true without those of the second. Answ.

Why doe not the exercises of religion please God, when they are performed by him, who is not at peace with his brother? Quest. 3.

First, because such duties doe not proceede from the love of God: That which doth not proceede from the love of God, the Lord likes not: but the exercises of religion which are performed by him who is not at peace or in charity with his brother, doe not proceede from the love of God. Ergo. This Saint Iohn confirmes in these words, He that saith, he loves God and hates his brother is a lyer, for how can hee love God whom hee hath not seene, and hate his brother whom he hath seene[y]? Answ. 1.

[y] 1 Iohn 4. 20.

Secondly, such duties are no better thē corrupt bribes, whereby we think so to bleare and blinde the eyes of the Lord that he shal not see the injuries Answ. 2.

ries and wrongs we have done unto our brethren. And therefore they never shall be gratefull or pleasing unto him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the excercises of religion performed by him who hath injured his brother, and not satisfied him, nor hath beene reconciled unto him, cannot bee acceptable unto the Lord, because the cries and complaints of his brother whom he hath offended doth stimulate and provoke the anger of God against him. Nil prodest orare, dum unus orat pro te, alter contrà[z]: what doth thy prayers availe thee, when one prayes for thee, another against thee?

[z] Chrys. imperf.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, onely Christian love commends our workes unto God, and therefore in whom that is wanting, nothing is pleasing[a].

[a] 1 Cor. 13. 1, 2.

Quest. 4. Whether is it lawfull to offer sacrifices unto God of our substance, that is, to dedicate, and consecrate some part of our estates unto pious uses?

Answ. 1. First, certainely it is, Si de bene partis, if it bee a portion of well got goods: If God hath blessed thee in thy honest calling, lawfully discharged; it is then lawfull for thee to returne backe a part thereof unto God againe.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Si de malè partis: If thy goods bee evill come by, then satisfaction is to bee made to ~~him that hath beene~~ wronged, not unto God, or the Church, or the poore: for that were to offer unto them a part of a spoyle unjustly acquired: But wee shall have more direct occasion elsse where to cleare this more fully: and therefore I thus here superficially leave it.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Goe thy way.]

Object. It may here bee objected, This departure could not be warrantable, being contrary to the expresse law, Ezech. 46. 10. where the Prince himselfe might not depart, till all were ended. The Prince shall goe in, when they goe in, and when they goe forth, he shall goe forth.

Answ. This rule might be understood of departure out of the outer court of the Temple, whether the people brought their sacrifices soone after they had presented thē, before they were begun to be offered: for untill the Priests had begunne this service, it was lawfull for the people to depart, especially upon this occasion which our Saviour here instanceth in.

Sect. 3. §. 3. And bee reconciled unto thy brother, and then offer.

The meaning of this is, compose your jarres, linke your selves together in the chaine and bond of Christian charity, and then offer your sacrifices unto the Lord.

Quest. 1. Why must we not offer sacrifices unto God untill we bereconciled unto men?

Answ. 1. First, because God accepteth nothing but that which issues from a pure heart: but wrongs and injuries doe corrupt and defile the Soule; and therefore nothing is gratefull unto God which comes from such men.

Answ. 2. Secondly, anger hinders our prayers, that is, makes us unfit to pray, and the petitions which we powre forth are unpleasing unto God: And therefore it is necessary, that we should be reconciled unto our brethren, before wee offer up the sacrifice of prayer unto God.

Thirdly, God loves concord and unity amongst his, he himselfe not being the authour of confusion, but of peace: yea commands us to love one another, to forgive those who injure us, to blesse those that curse us, to pray for those who persecute us, &c. And therefore both the person offending and offended, should seeke for peace and reconciliation Answ. 3.

Fourthly, wee are all brethren, yea, all members of one and the same mysticall body. Now no man ever hated his owne flesh (Ephes. 5. 29.) but nourisheth and cherisheth it; yea, though the hand should harme the eye, or foote, the body will not therefore hate the hand, but pardon it, and prize it as highly as ever it did before: Saint Peter useth this argument to perswade us to this duty: Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, bee pitifull, bee courteous. And therefore before wee can offer any acceptable sacrifice unto God wee must bee reconciled one unto another, that is, both the injurious person, and the party injured. Answ. 4.

He who hath beene unjustly injured, and palpably wronged by one who will not acknowledge his offence, neither sue for pardon or reconcilement; will here object, that it is a very hard thing to forgive such an one, but to seeke to him is so difficult, that flesh and blood cannot endure it. Object. 1

First, flesh and blood shall never inherit the kingdome of heaven, 1 Cor. 15. 50. and therefore desperately miserable is that mans condition, who can doe or suffer no more then flesh and blood can. Answ. 1

Secondly, all good and holy duties are difficult; and therefore if the difficulty of the worke discourage us, wee must give over working the worke of God, or walking in the waies of religion, for no spirituall duty can be done aright with facility and ease. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, the question is not what thy brother doth, or what he is, but what thou oughst to doe, namely, to be obedient to thy Lord and Soveraigne, in whatsoever he requires of thee: Now as hee commands thy brother to seeke peace and atonement at thy hands; so he commands thee to forgive thy brother as often as he offends thee, though it were 70. times 7. times, that is 490. times in a day[b]. Answ. 3.

[b] Matth. 18. 22.

Fourthly, suppose Christ should (as hee doth indeed) tell thee, that it is a very hard thing to obtaine or to bee made partakers of him; wouldest thou give him over for the difficulty of the worke; if thou wouldest not, as thou shouldest not, then no more forbeare this Christian duty of pardoning and seeking for reconciliation at thy brothers hands. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, the worke indeed is not difficult, because God will enable thee thereunto if thou from thy heart desire it, and with thy heart endeavour it. Answ. 5.

Sixtly, it is an excellent signe of a mind truely humbled for the offended to seeke reconciliation and agreement from him, that hath done the offence, Mich. 6. 8. Answ. 6.

Seventhly,

Seventhly, and lastly, if thou wilt not pardon thy brother no more will the Lord pardon thee, if thou wilt not seeke unto thy brother, no more will thy Father seeke unto thee, but leave thee unto thy selfe and thy proud perverse will.

Answ. 7.

Obiect. 2. The party who is injured may against this yet object, he hath done me wrong, yea harme, and therefore why should I either seeke to him, or forgive him, if he seeke not to me?

Answ. 1. First, hath he not formerly done thee more good then now hurt? if he have, then ballance the one against the other.

Answ. 2. Secondly, hast not thou wronged some other as much as he hath thee, yea hast thou not formerly beene as injurious unto him, as he is now unto thee? if the former, then think him to be an instrument of Gods anger unto thee for thy correction. If the latter, then there is no reason, but thou shouldest forgive him, as thou wouldest be forgiven by him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, what evill hast thou done unto Christ; how often hast thou transgressed his Lawes, and thereby incensed his anger against thee; how many talents dost thou owe unto him, which thou art not able to pay? And therefore if thou desirest to be forgiven, and to be received into favour, then doe so to thy brother Mat. 6. 14. and 18. 21.

Obiect. 3 But the unjustly injured person will yet object, I did not deserve this wrong at his hands, for I never did him hurt but good; And therefore he neither deserves to bee pardoned nor sought unto.

Answ. 1 First, if thou hadst deserved those wrongs which are offered unto thee, then thou deservest neither praise nor reward, though thou shouldst pardon them: For if a man doe evill, and being punished for his evill, take it patiently, what reward shall he have, Matthew 5. 46. and 1 Peter 3. 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, what hath Christ deserved at thy hands, that so injuriously thou dost daily and hourely exasperate him; he never deserved such dealing at thy hands, thou never didst so much good unto thy brother, as hee hath done for and unto thee: thy brother never wronged thee so much as thou hast wronged him: thou canst never be so readie to forgive thy brother, as he is to forgive thee. And therefore when thou callest to mind, how unthankfully thy brother deales with thee, reflect upon thy selfe, and remember how ungratfully thou hast dealt with thy deare Saviour, who tooke thy nature upon him, submitting himselfe unto the forme of a servant; yea, even unto death, that he might purchase life and immortality for thee.

Quest. 2. What is required of him that doth wrong unto his neighbour?

Answ. 1. First, he must aggravate, and not extenuate his fault: he must not goe about to excuse it, or lessen it, but rather amplifie it, that it may seeme worse in his eyes then in the sight of his brother.

Answ. 2. Secondly, he must labour to make ample satisfaction for the wrong done: that is, 1. If he have beene angry with his brother in his heart, hee must be heartily sorry for it. 2. If he have injured his brother by his words, hee must with his mouth confesse and acknowledge it. 3. If hee hath wronged his brother in his estate, he must make restitution, as Zacheus did.

§. 4. Then come and offer thy gift.]

Sect. 4. We see here, that as soone as we are reconciled unto our brethren, our Father is reconciled unto us.

Quest. Why is the Lord appeased towards us, as soone as our brother is pacified; and satisfied?

Answ. 1. First, because herein wee obey God; wee are obsequious unto his will, when we seeke peace, and sue for reconciliation at the hands of our brother whom wee have offended: and therefore the Lord will be appeased towards us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because he that submits himselfe to his brother, craving pardon for offences done, promising restitution of all wrongs, and purposing to injure him no more either in heart, or word, or deed, doth stoppe the mouth of his brother, who formerly cried unto God for revenge of the wrong done, and therefore his brother being satisfied, his Father passeth it by, and is reconciled.

VERS. 25, 26. Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him, lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the Judge, and the Judge deliver thee to the Officer, and thou be cast into prison, verily I say unto thee, thou shalt by no meanes come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

Vers. 25. 26.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Agree with thine adversary, (i to quickly.]

Quest. 1. What is the scope and drift of our Saviour in this word Quickely?

Answ. 1. First, he hence would have us to observe the brevity and uncertainty of life: Agree with him quickely, because thou dost not know, how quickly thou maist bee taken hence: It is the Divells craft to make us blind, insensible, obdurate, negligent, and full of delaies in the worke of grace: it is through the malice of our adversary, that we put off our repentance, crying, we will repent us in our old age. But our Saviour doth counsell & advise us not to procrastinate our conversion and repentance; because 1. many are dead before they bee sicke, dying suddenly, 2. many when they are sicke unto death, are either so oppressed with bodily paine and anguish, that they have no spare time seriously to call their sinnes to account; or if they doe, it is extorted from them through the paine of the body, not the compunction of the soule. 3. Because wicked men grow worse and worse; and the more they are in yeares the more they are setled upon their lees. Wherefore these things considered, Christ exhorts us, if we love our selves, and soules, to agree with our adversary quickly.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour hereby would teach us that reconciliation is not to be deferred or delayed: Agree with thine adversary quickly, that is procrastinate it not, but be made friends out of hand; and and seek to be reconciled maturely & betime: remembring I. if thou deferre it, then thou maist seeke it too late. Yea, II. the more quickly thou seekest reconciliation at thy brothers hands, the more pleasing and acceptable thou art unto God: for it argues that wee doe it willingly and readily without compulsion, which the Lord loves.

Obiect. Hee who hath injured his brother, may object against this, I have my whole life to turne me in, and if I bee reconciled unto my neighbour whom I have offended before I die, it is soone enough though it be many yeares hence: and therefore there is no necessity of this hasty and quicke reconciliation.

Answ. 1. First, thou art not certaine, whether thy life shall last untill to morrow or not; and therefore agree quickly, or thou maist deferre it too long.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the proposition is false, that thou hast totum vitæ spatium, the whole time of thy life to be reconciled in; for datur vita sola, non tota; thy life onely is given thee to be reconciled in, but not thy whole life: that is, there is no reconciliation after this life, and therefore either whilst thou livest or never thou must be atoned unto thy brother: but thou canst not be reconciled unto him at any time, when thou pleasest; Wherfore our Saviour commands thee to agree quickly.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, thou must respect more then thy owne life, to wit, thy brothers: Agree while thou art in the way with him, that is, while you are both alive: for if he die before the breach be made up, thou art in danger to be delivered up by the Judge unto the Officers, and by them to be cast into prison. Death makes a separation between thy brother and thee, and therefore agree quickly; because thou knowest not how quickly he may be taken away.

Quest. 2. Who are faulty in this particular?

Answ. 1. First, those who unwillingly seeke reconciliation; and though they have unjustly wronged their neighbours, yet can hardly bee perswaded by their dearest and best friends to sue for pardon and peace, at their hands whom they have offended.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they who never desire peace and unity, but before Easter, or when they are to come to the Table of the Lord.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, they who will never seeke to be accorded unto their brethren, untill they lie upon their death beds. All these grossely and egregiously erre from this rule of Christ, agree with thine adversary quickly.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they who onely respect their owne lives, & not at all the life of their brethren. I doe not altogether condemne the practise of those who (when death is approaching unto them) seek to be reconciled unto their brethren, because it is better to doe it then, than not at all: but I doe not commend it, for 1. it should be done quickly, as aforesaid, & 2. before the death of thy brother, lest hee should depart hence not being reconciled unto thee, or having forgiven thee.

Quest. 3. But the injurious person may here demand, what danger is there or can there be unto me; although he die before we are reconciled together? For First, in the world my fault shall be hid the better if he be gone to whom the wrong was done: Secondly, if he were a holy and good man, then I know hee would forgive me before he died; for he durst not then harbour vengeance or malice in his heart. Thirdly, if he were a wicked and ungodly man, then 1. hee dares not goe unto God to accuse me: or 2. if he durst, yet God would not heare him, for he heares not sinners. And therefore these things considered, what hurt or danger can it be unto me, though he die before our jarres be composed?

Answ. 1. First, what will it availe thee, that the wrong done by thee unto thy brother, should (by his death) be concealed from the world, considering that both God, the Devill, and thy owne conscience sees, knowes and remembers it?

Answ. 2. Secondly, if thy brother were a member of Christ, then certainely he would forgive thee; but it doth not hence follow that thy guilt is washed away, or thy sinnes pardoned by God, for before him thy sinne remaines unblotted out, because thou didst not reconcile thy selfe unto thy brother before hee was taken hence by death.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if thy neighbour against whom thou hast sinned were a wicked man, then First, hee dares goe unto God more impudently, and cry out unto him for vengeance more enviously, and with a greater and more perfect malice, then a holy man would or durst. Secondly, and although (if he be wicked) God will not heare him when hee praves for some blessing for himselfe, yet he will heare him when he complaines upon thee.

For { That were contrary to Gods justice not to heare the cry of him that is wronged. / This is according to Gods justice to heare the complaints of the oppressed, and to revenge them.

§. 2. While thou art in the way.] What is meant by these words? Sect. 2. Quest. 1.

Some understand them Allegorically; Dum in via, whileſt thou art in the way, that is, in hac vita, whileſt thou liveſt: Thus Chryſoſtome oper. imperf. And all the Fathers. Answ.

What doth our Saviour imply in these words, thus Allegorically understood? Quest. 2.

First, Christ hereby would teach us, that this life is the way both of good and evill men: of corne and chaffe, of wheate and tares: which God will not as yet separate. Answ. 1.

Secondly, our Saviour would teach us, that this life is the way unto Judgement: or that so long as we live here on earth, we are but travellers unto the tribunall seate of God. It is appointed unto all men once to die, and after death comes judgement [c], where wee see life brings us to death, and death unto Judgement. Answ. 2. [c] Hebr. 9. 27.

Thirdly, Christ would hereby teach us, that the remembrance of the Judgement of God should detaine us from jarres and discord one with another. Answ. 3.

The remembrance of the { Reward, will perswade us unto patience in wrongs. / Punishment, will terrifie us from seeking revenge.

What will it helpe a man to revenge himselfe upon his brother, and himselfe therefore to bee judged and condemned by God? and therefore we must so meditate of the severitie and terrour of the last day, that wee may avoid dissensions, and embrace Christian charity.

Quest. 3. From the second answer to the former question, it may bee doubted, why our judgement shall be no longer deferred then death?

Answ. 1. First, there is a double day of Judgement, to wit, first generall of all flesh; this shall not bee untill the end of the world, when all the elect shall be gathered together. Secondly, particular, of every individuall and numericall man, whether righteous or wicked; and this shall bee at their death, when the righteous shall goe unto rest, and the wicked unto woe; poore Lazarus as soone as he dieth, is carried into Paradise, but rich Dives into the painefull prison of eternall destruction [d].

[d] Luke 16. 22. 23.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this life is the very last period of Gods long suffering; and therefore the night of death being come, God will deferre Judgement no longer.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the justice of God cannot bee violated; neither shall it ever be made voide: Iustice and mercy hath kissed each other, but not crossed, thwarted, or contradicted each other; And therefore mercy at death gives way unto judgement. For the understanding hereof observe.

That there are 2 parts of Gods mercy, viz. { First, to pardon the penitent, and those who are reconciled. And here the suffering of Christ doth satisfie the mercy of God. / Secondly, to expect those who are obstinate, rebellious, and disobedient, that they laying hold upon mercy, and turning unto God, might be saved [e]. And this part of Gods mercy shall bee satisfied at the last dreadfull day. Rom. 2. 4. and 2 Thes. 1. 8.

[e] 1 Tim. 2. 9. and Pet. 3. 9.

Quest. 4. What must we doe to bee made partakers of everlasting mercies, as well after this life, as in this life?

Answ. Remember seriously, and frequently these three things: First, that wee are strangers and pilgrimes in this life, and altogether uncertaine, how neare we approach unto the gates of death. And though we see not our Judge, yet hee standeth before the dore [f].

[f] Iam. 5. 9.

Secondly, remember our life is lent us, not to sinne, or to corrupt our waies; but that wee might be converted [g], because our good and gracious God desireth not the death of a sinner, but rather that he would repent and live [h]. Thirdly remember that after death there is no mercy to be expected, by those who have not laid hold upon mercy while they were in the way: as the tree falls so it must lye: wherefore let us spend our lives. I. in striving, wrastling, and fighting against sinne, and our owne innate corruptions, Heb. 12. 4. II. In watchfulnesse and circumspection against evill and the occasions thereof, Ephes. 5. 15. III. In growing and encreasing in the waies of grace, 1 Pet. 2. 2. IV. In redeeming the time by-past of our lives, by being zealous of good workes, devoting our selves wholy and sincerely unto the service of the Lord.

[g] Rom. 2. 4.

[h] Ezech. 33. 11.

§. 3. He shall not come out, untill he have paid the uttermost farthing. Sect. 3.

Object. The Doway men undertake to prove Purgatory from hence, by the justice of God: because when any dieth penitent, and yet hath not made any full satisfaction, they must suffer for that which remaineth after death, and bee purged before they can enter into rest, which remnant of debt our Saviour calleth the last farthing, and saith here it must be paid; and therefore there is a purgatorie, wherein this satisfactorie punishment must be inflicted [i].

[i] Dowey Bible. pag. 33.

Answ. 1. First if a man die truely penitent, all his sinnes are forgiven him in Christ, and none of his transgressi ons shall bee mentioned unto him: Thus the thiefe was received unto mercy upon the crosse, there being no further satisfaction required of him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the satisfaction to Gods justice is not payed by us, but by Christ, who hath sufficiently satisfied for our sinnes: and unto the remission of sinnes, onely a lively faith in Christ is required of us. Therefore to say, that a man by his owne satisfaction must pay the utmost farthing of his debt unto God, is a blasphemous assertion, and derogatorie to the value of Christs death [k].

[k] Willet. Synops. fol. 410. initio.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this verse will not serve them to build Purgatory upon, as followes in the next section.

§. 4. Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him: lest the adversary deliver thee to the Iudge, and he to the officer, by whom thou shalt be cast into prison; and from thence thou shalt not come till thou have paid the uttermost farthing. Sect. 4.

Object. Bellarmine strongly urgeth this verse for the proofe of Purgatory, as doe also divers others of the Papists. There is mention say they of a prison, from whence the Captives shall in time come forth, which cannot bee possibly be meant of hell, because ex inferno nulla redemptio, from hell there is no redemption. Bellarmine more plainely argues thus, By the way is meant this life present; by the adversary is meant the law of God himselfe: by the Judge is meant Christ: by the Officers the good Angels, or the divels: by the Prison hell: by the last farthing, our lesser sinnes, for which wee are to satisfie either in hell or in Purgatorie. Bellarm. Tom. 1. fol. 1804 de Purgat. li. 1. Cap. 4.

Answ. 1. First, if we should grant the Cardinall all hee desires, but onely the last particle, wherein hee begs the question (or in Purgatorie) yet he could conclude nothing against us. Amesius. Tom. 2. pag. 200.

Secondly, this saying of our Saviour may safely be expounded according to the letter of, the affaires of this life, as Saint Chrysostome doth expound expound it, that men to prevent their further danger should be ready to compound their controversies betimes. And such counsell also the Wiseman giveth, That if a man have given his word, and is become a surety for another, he should not sleepe before he had delivered himselfe[l]. And this exposition is most agreeable to the Text; for the word is ἀντίδικος an adversary at the Law. And Luke 12. 58. where the same sentence of our Saviour is repeated, there is mention made of the Magistrate, and of the Jaylor, which are termes and Offices properly fitting the businesse of this life, Willet Synops. fol. 407.

[l] Pro. 6. 3.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, here is in this argumentation a sophisme, called Figura dictionis; for Bellarmine faines unto himselfe here an allegory (whereas Christ useth plaine, proper, and perspicuous words) especially in Saint Luke, where the Magistrate and Jaylor are named) and then from this unnecessary allegoricall sense, he frames an argument for the confirmation of an article of his faith, which is 1. against his owne rule delivered, lib. 3. cap. 3. De verbo Dei. 2. Against the rule delivered both by the ancient and moderne Divines. Diligenter cavendum esse, ne quæ dicta sunt allegoricè, tanquam propriè dicta intelligamus[m]. We must take speciall heede, that we expound not those things literally which are onely allegorically meant. Yea III. this practise of the Cardinall is contrary to that Axiome of the Schoolemen which Thomas so often repeates, viz. Symbolicam Theologiam non esse argumentativam: that is, certaine and necessary arguments cannot bee drawne from Allegories.

[m] Aug. doct. Chri. lib. 3. Cap. 10.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if this Allegoricall exposition of Bellarmines be true, and that men ought to satisfie for their sinnes event unto the last farthing; then it will follow that Christ hath in no sort satisfied for our transgressions: for it is well enough knowne, what is meant by this phrase of speech, I will keepe him in prison, untill hee have paid the last farthing: But this consequence is ἐτεροδοξον, ἀθεόλογον, false and impious: and therefore so also is the Antecedent. Sadeel fol. 250. adverse. human. satisfac.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, if we draw these words to a spirituall understanding, by the prison, hell must bee signified, a place of everlasting torment, and not Purgatorie, as appeares thus.

First, because the word φυλακὴ a prison is taken 1 Pet. 3. 19. for the place of the disobedient, which is Hell: for they doe not use to send obstinate sinners to purgatorie.

Secondly, he shall not come out till hee have paid the uttermost farthing: or as Saint Luke saith, the utmost mite; that is never: unlesse he dare say that a sinner is able by his punishment to satisfie the utmost mite of his debt, that is, his sinne unto God, which is great blasphemy to affirme, and contrary to the Scriptures: wee not being able to answer God one thing of a thousand[n].

[n] Iob 9. 3.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, this place may be expounded by that parable Mat. 18. where the unkind servant is cast into prison, till hee should pay all that was due, verse 34. that is, hee should lye there for ever; for the debt was ten thousand talents, too much for a Prince, much lesse for a servant to pay: and verse 25. hee had nothing to pay: and therefore his Master forgave him the debt, verse 32. Wherefore we see our debt is not payed unto God by us, but forgiven; and where it is not pardoned, it can never be paid. Againe, it followeth, verse 35. So shall my heavenly father doe unto you, if you forgive not from your hearts one another your trespasses: What is this, So shall my father doe unto you? sent them to Purgatorie? No, but unto hell: for uncharitable and malicious men which will not forgive others, I hope they will not ordaine unto a place of temporall punishment: for as Saint Iohn saith, he that hateth his brother, and so is a manslayer cannot have eternall life[o]. Chemnit. de Conc. trid. part. 3. fol. 135.

[o] 1 Iohn 3. 15.

Seventhly, although Bellarmine brag much of the Fathers, yet they favour not his opinion here, if faithfully dealt withall, as is clearely proved by Chem. concil. trid. part 3. pag. 135. a. Answ. 7.

Eightly, by the word Prison Bellarmine understands both Hell and Purgatorie, so that Donec untill, must signifie both nunquam, & aliquando, never, and sometimes, which is grossely absurd. Answ. 8

Lastly, although this place be objected by Bellarm. Coster. Valent. and others; yet it is sufficiently confuted by their owne Iansenius, (in hanc locum.) from Bishop Mortons appeale. fol. 15. fine. Answ. 9.

VERS. 27. Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, thou shalt not commit adultery. Vers. 27.

§. 1. Audivistis, ye have heard.] Sect. 1.

From whom did they heare this? Quæst. 1.

Not from the Vulgar sort, or common people, but from the Priests, that is, the Pharisees, who taught them, that there was nothing to be considered or looked unto in this Commandement (Thou shalt not commit adultery) but onely the actuall sinne: Teaching us, that errours in religion often proceede from the Priests and Pastors of the Church. Hence the Lord complaines, that the prophets Propheste lies, and the Priests take bribes. Ierim. 5. 31: yea both Priest and Prophet have erred through wine. Isay 28. 7. and by coveteousnesse, Ier. 6. 13. and 8. 10. Answ. Observ.

Why are the shepheards so often the causes of the sheepes going astray? Quæst. 2.

First, because they are enemies often unto reformation, although the Church stand in neede thereof. Here are two things to be distinguished, or particularly observed, namely, First, that the Church stands in neede of Reformation, which appeares thus. I. The whole truth is not revealed unto the Church at once, but by little and little: for there is nothing altogether perfect. II. There daily arise new blemishes and staines in the Church, by the corrupt lives of some therein. III. Reformation is like Sysphus stone, Answ. 1.

212 ſtone alwaies relapſing and falling backe either unto the former errours, or unto worſe. And therefore every particular nationall Church ever and anone ſtands in neede of Reformation. Secondly, the leaders and Rectors of the Church, are often the greateſt enemies unto this reformation: hee that deſires to ſee a true and cleare illuſtration of this, let him reade the Hiſtorie of the Councell of Trent, where hee ſhall ſee amply proved, that the reformation which was ſo carefully, inſtantly, and neceſſarily deſired by many, and for a long time, was ſtill oppoſed & withſtood by the Court of Rome & the Clergie. Thus the Phariſees were enemies unto Juſtification by faith in Chriſt, becauſe it was contrary to their eſtimation and credit.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, private ſpirits, by ſome evill ſpirit, have beene ſtill conjured up in the Church, amongſt the Doctours & Teachers, who either by private jarres, diſpleaſures, diſſenſions, ambition, coveteouſneſſe, and pride have diſturbed the peace of the Church. We have many examples hereof in all ages. I. Wee reade how the ſonnes of Eli troubled, vexed and diſquieted the Church [o]. II. How the Prieſts in Ieremias time ſeduced the people and oppoſed the Prophets [p]. III. How the Phariſees oppoſed Chriſt, Iohn 7. 47, &c. and withſtood his Apoſtles, Acts 4. 1. and 5. 17. and 7. 51. IV. How great a combuſtion did Arrius kindle in the Church becauſe he obtained not a Biſhopricke? ſuch a fire as made the whole world weepe, before it could be quenched. V. What ſhall we ſay of the ring-leaders of the Browniſts and Separatiſts, who have withdrawne many ſubjects from their true Chriſtian obedience, not ſuffering them to pray, heare, or communicate with us. VI. God no ſooner ſowes Wheate, but the devill ſowes tares: The Lord had no ſooner raiſed up Luther and Zwinglius, but the devill conjured up Zwenkfeldus, Servetus, Oſiander, David-Georgius, and divers others. VII. If wee looke upon the Papiſts, wee ſhall behold a Mappe of miſery in this kinde: For firſt, their Prieſts ſeduce the people unto Idolatry, making them ſay to a ſtocke, thou art my father, and to a ſtone, thou haſt brought me forth [q]. Secondly, they will not bee reformed in what is amiſſe, holding this opinion, that nothing muſt be changed or altered in their Church or Religion, leſt they ſhould ſeeme formerly to have erred; grounding this their infallibilitie upon that of the Prophet: The law ſhall not depart from the Prieſt, Ier. 18. 18. and that ſpeech of our Saviour unto Peter; The gates of hell ſhall never prevaile againſt my Church; but how falſely they ground this opinion upon theſe places, we ſhall ſee God willing in their proper places. Thirdly, ſuch enemies are the Papiſts unto Reformation, that they perſecute thoſe who are reformed: In Jeruſalem the blood of the juſt was ſhed by the Prieſts and Prophets [r]; and ſo alſo in the Popes juriſdiction; how great was their rage, againſt Luther, Zwinglius, and all thoſe who were by their Miniſtry reformed both in opinion and practiſe. Fourthly, their principall care is to ſeduce people, and to leade them into errors: As Chriſt ſaid of the Phariſees, ſo wee may ſay juſtly of the Popiſh Clergie, They compaſſe heaven and earth to pervert and divert a ſoule from the waies of truth, ſuch zealots, and zealous factors are they for the devill: what nation is there where true religion is profeſſed; but ſome of their Jeſuites, and Seminaries, or Secular Prieſts, are ſent thither privately, to ſeduce and corrupt ſimple ſoules, bringing them from light unto darkeneſſe: How our land hath long groaned under theſe ſoule-devouring locuſts is well knowne, who creepe into mens houſes, polluting and defiling both the bodies and ſoules of poore credulous, and ignorant women. The Prophet Hoſea threatnes the Prieſts, that God will power vengeance upon them, Becauſe they were a ſnare on Mizpah, and a net ſpread upon Tabor: And therefore let the ſeducing Prieſts of the Romiſh Church conſider, how by this their wickedneſſe they provoke God unto anger, who will require the blood of all thoſe, whom they have corrupted, at their hands. Hoſe. 5. 1.

Queſt. 3. If errours and hereſies begin ſo often at the Prieſts and Paſtors of the Church, then how may or can the people be preſerved from erring, and being miſ-lead?

Anſw. 1. They muſt not be toſſed to and fro with every blaſt of doctrine (Epheſ. 4. 14.) like the waves of the ſea (Iam. 1. 6.) but walke wiſely and circumſpectly, according to theſe enſuing rules:

Rule 1. Firſt, labour for a ſure foundation; that is, firſt, hearken unto the pure, unſpotted, and infallible word and truth of God; that thereby yee may grow up (1 Pet. 2. 2) in grace, ſtrength, and knowledge: that thereby you may be made perfect (2 Tim. 3. 16.) that being the true light by which we muſt walke, 2 Pet. 1. 20. Secondly, adde nothing unto the word of God, neither 1. the chaffe of ſuperſtition with the Papiſts [s]: for what hath the chaffe to doe with the corne? neither 2. new opinions, as the Sectaries, who daily beget and breed new Minervaes in their owne braine: but remember, God and Dagon will not dwell together; and therefore adde nothing unto the true and pure word of God. [s] Ierem. 23. 28.

Rule 2. Secondly take heede of all ſeducings; that is, Firſt love not to heare Invectives, novelties, and ſtrange doctrines; for although this be pleaſing to our corrupt nature, and delightfull to itching eares, yet it is not profitable for the edifying of our ſoules: wherefore Saint Paul exhorts holy Timothy to bee inſtant in Preaching the pure word of God: for the time will come when men will not endure ſound doctrine, but having itching eares, will turne away their eares from the truth unto fables [t]. Secondly, never embrace wreſted, conſtrained, and forced interpretations of the word; which will not agree with the proportion of faith, or good manners, or the ſcope of the place. [t] 2 Tim. 4. 2. 3.

Rule 3. Thirdly, let us love and labour for the peace of Syon; that is, firſt let us eſteeme the Church to be our Mother, obeying her in thoſe injunctions which are not contrary to the Mandates of God our Father; for otherwiſe wee are not the true [o] 1 Sam. 2. 12.

[p] Ierem. 1. 18. and 20. 1. and 28. 1. and 26. 11.

[q] Ier. 2. 27

true children of God. Children must bee obedient unto Parents, & therefore when the Mother injoynes that which the Father doth not forbid, the child must subscribe to the practise of it: Here observe that there are three Churches. I. The Primitive Church. II. The Moderne Churches, where our religion is professed; And these two we reverence and submit unto, where they doe not oppose the law of God. III. The Popish Church; Now this we doe not so hate, that we will refuse to embrace things worthy to bee received, because they used them. They have the Word, Sacraments, Ministers, and a Ministerie, yea and use all these; shall we therefore refuse them?

Secondly, for the peace of the Church, let us be of the same mind with Saint Paul, to become all things to all men (in lawfull and indifferent things) that thereby wee might winne some. Wee should not rend Christs seamelesse coate in twaine, or breake a gap in the hedge of the Church for Adiophorall things, lest in avoyding the use of them, we fall into a direct breach of the fifth commandement.

Sect. 2. §. 2. That it hath beene said.]

The Pharisees here alleadge and urge the words of the precept, for the confirming of an errour, namely, that no man sinneth against the seventh Commandement, but hee that actually committeth the sinne of uncleanesse.

Quest. 1. Can errour be founded upon Scriptures?

Answ. 1. First, it may by wresting and wrong expounding of them: Many (saith Saint Peter) pervert the Scriptures to their owne damnation, 2 Pet. 3. 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, although the Scriptures speake alwaies the truth, yet they doe not utter this truth alwaies one and the same way: For I. sometimes they speake Allegorically, sometimes literally. II. Sometimes they barely and historically recite a thing: sometimes they command and injoyne a thing; sometimes they counsell and advise unto a thing. III. Sometimes they speake indefinitely and generally to all men; sometimes particularly to some certaine time, people, and persons. And therefore if these should not rightly bee applyed according to the sense and meaning of the Blessed Spirit, wee should quickly runne into an errour.

Quest. 2. If the Scripture speake so many waies unto us, doe not the Papists (Pighius and Perresius) then say truely, that they are like a nose of wax, which a man may tutne which way hee list; or like a shipmans drawers, which will fit any person; yea the causes of heresies, because they may bee expounded according to every mans judgement, opinion, and affection?

Answ. 1. First, it is maliciously and wickedly spoken of Pighius, for the Scriptures in themselves are not such: but onely are perverted by wicked men unto their destruction.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Perresius, from a true proposition collects a false conclusion: Heresies (saith hee) are founded upon the Scriptures: men still alleadging Scripture for the proofe of their opinions, whether true or false (this is true). Therefore (he concludes) the Scripture is not to be reade by the laicks; this is false; as was shewed before verse 7. Chap. 4. Wee must not refuse to sucke hony out of the sweet flowers, because the spider from thence extracts poison; wee must not forbeare the use of Scriptures, because wicked men abuse them, but reade them, study them, and learne to understand them.

Quest 3. How may we bee enabled to understand the Scriptures, and to learne their true sense and meaning?

Answ. Interpret them according to these few plaine rules: to wit,

Rule 1. First, hold fast the Analogie of faith, this is a great and principall rule: for that exposition of the word which doth overthrow any Article of our faith, is not sound, solide, or orthodoxe.

Quest. 1. Which is the Analogie of faith? are the principles of Catechisme? or the three Creedes, namely, the Apostles, Nicene, and Athanasius, or any of them?

Answ. 1. First, wee must wade warily through this ford, because otherwise wee may fall into a gulfe.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the grounds and principales of Catechisme are certaine truthes, and true rudiments: because they are agreeable unto the holy Scriptures.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but yet the grounds and principles of Catechisme are not fit foundations of our faith; because then the holy Scriptures should be judged by them: Cujus contrarium est verum, that is, the principles and grounds of Catechisme are to bee judged by the Scriptures, not the word by them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, wee say therefore, that there is no undoubted analogie, ἀυτόπιστον, which is of it selfe to bee beleeved, but onely the harmony of the sacred Scriptures in themselves.

Answ. 5. Fiftly, two things are here therefore to be observed, viz. First the true expositor, of Scripture is Scripture onely: for the understanding hereof take notice of foure Interpreters, namely, I. The opinion of some one private man: this is not much to be regarded. II. The judgement of the Moderne Church; this is venerable, but is to be assented unto no further then the Scripture will allow: for the Church was once an Arrian; yea the East Churches, and Popish Church are in many things false and erroneous. III. There is the consent of Antiquitie; this is much to bee revereniced, but yet with some reservations and cautions; because all things were not revealed at once. IV. The exposition and consent of other places in Scripture.

Rule 2. Secondly, we must not so ground any opinion upon one place of Scripture, that wee overthrow another: for that is no true sense of Scripture, which doth make any sentence in Scripture false.

Secondly, attend diligently to the scope of the Holy Ghost, that thou extend and stretch the place no further then was meant by him: In this rule many things are carefully to bee attended unto; namely, First whether is the place Allegoricall or literall? For I. to wring Allego-

214 ries out of plaine and cleare truthes, is both ridiculous, and impious: and inſtead of that ſincere milke which is therein truely contained for our nouriſhment, is preſented unto us the unwholſome blood of mans perverting braine. This is the fault of the Origeniſtes and Anabaptiſts. II. If the place bee literall, then let the expoſition thereof accord with the analogie of faith, and ſeeke not for Allegories. III. To exact a literall expoſition or interpretation of every place, is full of danger, yea more perillous then the former:

For if the place bee
- Literall, then he who expounds it Allegorically doth onely looſe the true ſenſe, and overthrow the germane and genuine meaning of the words; but not eſtabliſh untruthes. As for example, we reade in Geneſis, that when Abraham was old, and it ceaſed to bee with Sarah after the manner of women, that unto them was borne Iſaac: Origen expounds this thus; By Abraham is meant a Wiſeman, and by Sarah, Vertue; to whom is borne Iſacke, that is pleaſure, when it ceaſed to be with her after the manner of women, that is, when all carnall affections and deſires, were mortified in her: And hence he concludes, Vera voluptas ex virtute naſcitur. The fruits of true joy ſpring from the roote of vertue; which concluſion is true, although the true ſenſe of the place be loſt.
- Allegoricall, then hee who expounds it literally, doth not onely pervert the true ſenſe and meaning of the place, but doth alſo eſtabliſh a falſehood and untruth; for thus a man might prove Chriſt to be bread, yea to be a ſtone, which none are ſo ſtony or blockiſh to beleeve.

Secondly, obſerve whether is it a rule or an hiſtoricall narration; we reade of Iephtah who offered his daughter; of the Midwives who lied unto Pharaoh, of the adulterie, and ſubornation to drunkenneſſe and murder in David; of Noahs drunkenneſſe, and Lots inceſt: Now if theſe hiſtoricall narrations ſhould bee by ſome underſtood to bee rules of directions, how diabolicall would their lives and converſations become? And therefore we muſt not drawe a rule A facto ad jus; from a deede done to the equitie thereof, for by that rule all things were lawfull.

Thirdly, obſerve, if it be a Rule, then whether is it given as a Command and Precept, or as a counſell and advice? Paul would have all to live unmarried, [t] but this he ſpeakes by permiſſion onely (that is by way of counſell and advice) not by a poſitive command from God. Verſe 6. For concerning Virginity, he had no commandement from the Lord; but onely ſuppoſed it to be good for the preſent diſtreſſe to remaine unmarried. Verſe 25. 26.

[t] 1 Cor. 7.7.8.

Fourthly, conſider, if it bee a precept and a command, then whether is it generall or particular? That is, I. Whether was it given to one man onely, or to all? Thus God commands Abraham to ſlay Iſaac, and this precept is not to bee extended further then to him. II. Whether doth the precept reſpect ſome one particular action, which is onely once to be performed; or a worke which is frequently to be practiſed? Thus the Iſraelites were commanded to ſpoile the Egyptians; which precept was neither to bee ſtretched unto any other, nor unto them at another time: that is, by this command, no other perſons were allowed to robbe the Egyptians, neither were the Iſraelits warranted to do it at any other time. III. Whether were the Precepts given onely unto ſome one particular people, or unto all nations? Thus the judiciall Law was given unto the Iewes onely, and not unto the Gentiles. IV. Whether did the Command concerne ſome certaine time onely, or was it to be extended alſo unto all times? Thus Circumciſion, Sacrifices, and the Ceremoniall law are not now to be urged, becauſe they were to continue but unto the death of Chriſt. Thus we muſt carefully obſerve the ſcope of the Holy Spirit, and urge nothing beyond that.

Rule 3. Thirdly in the reading and expounding of the Scripture take heede of all groſſe conſequences; which are very frequent with the erroneous. I. ſome thus expound poſitiva; privativè, poſitive things privatively. Thou maiſt hate thy enemie becauſe thou muſt love thy brother. Mat. 5.43.

Secondly, ſome expound Confutativa, confirmativè, thoſe things which are ſpoken by way of Confutation, as though they were ſpoken by way of confirmation; as for example, Saint Paul ſaith, The doers of the Law ſhall be juſtified. [u] Rom. 2.13.

From whence
- The Apoſtle concludes, that none ſhall be juſtified by the workes of the law.
- The Papiſts conclude that we may bee juſtified by the workes of the law.

Thirdly, ſome expound Scriptures ſo, as that there is no conſequence at all; but a palpable non ſequitur: Thus Hooker obſerves the Separatiſts and Browniſts to doe daily: And thus the Papiſts doe hourely, I have prayed for thee Peter (ſaith Chriſt) therefore the Pope cannot erre. Maſter (ſaith Peter) here are two ſwords: therefore the Pope hath both Eccleſiaſticall and Civill juriſdiction; both over King and People, and many the like. But wee muſt take heede of theſe ſophiſmes, and of this begging the queſtion.

Rule 4. Fourthly, be never obſtinate in thy owne opinion: but let the ſpirits of the Prophets bee ſubject to the Prophets. [v] 1 Cor. 14.32. Great is the errour here of the Papiſts, who will change nothing, retract nothing, leſt they ſhould ſeeme formerly to have erred. Great are the blemiſhes hereof of the Lutherans with the Zwinglians, concerning the corporeall Concomitancie; who rather then they they will recant or confeſſe their errour, will (which is too greate) confeſſe the Ubiquitie of Chriſts humanity.

Certainely, this obſtinacie in opinion in generall doth hinder the progreſſe of faith, and of religion: and therefore all Chriſtians ſhould be carefull to obſerve this rule, not to bee too ſtiffe in their owne tenets, or obſtinate in their owne opinions.

Rule 5. Fiftly, adde to the reading a frequent meditation of the word thou readeſt; reade, ſtudie, and contemplate the Scripture night and day: be not a ſtranger in Iſrael: he that frequenteth a path daily, will not lightly goe wrong or erre therein. David became wiſer then his teachers, becauſe hee had reſpect unto the Teſtimonies of the Lord [w]. And therefore if any thing be difficult, ſuſpend thy judgement, reade it over againe, turne unto other places like unto it, and compare them together, and haply God will reveale it unto thee at the laſt [x].

[x] Phil. 3. 15.

Rule 6. Sixtly, to reading and meditation adjoyne prayer: this was the Prophet Davids frequent practiſe: Shew me thy waies, oh Lord: teach mee thy pathes: leade me in thy truth, and teach mee; Pſal. 25.4 5. Againe, Teach me O Lord the way of thy ſtatutes, yea give thou me underſtanding, and I ſhall keepe thy law, Pſal. 119. 33. 34. And againe, Make thou me to underſtand the way of thy precepts verſe 27. yea Make thy face to ſhine upon thy ſervant, and teach me thy ſtatutes, verſe 135. for my lips ſhall utter praiſe, when thou haſt taught me thy precepts, verſe 171. Thus pray fervently unto the Lord, to enlighten thy underſtanding, to anoint thy blind eyes with the true eye-ſalve of the bleſſed Spirit; and to leade thee in his truth: and then reſt certainely aſſured, that faithfull is hee who hath promiſed, who will at length reveale himſelfe and his truth, to him who doth his endeavour, to know the Lord, and the way, and truth whereby he may be brought unto him, by reading, hearing, meditating, and a willing ſubjecting of his opinion and judgement to the word of God.

Sect. 3. Argum. §. 3. Of old time.]

The Papiſts ſay the conſent of the Fathers is the true rule of interpreting the Scriptures; or the word is to bee expounded according to the minde and judgement of the Ancients. Againſt this Chamierus [y] urgeth this place thus: If the conſent of the Fathers were a certaine rule of interpreting the Scriptures, then it ſhould never be reprooved and blamed (this is manifeſt by it ſelfe) But the conſent of the Ancients in the expounding and opening of Scripture, hath beene reprehended and refuſed. Therefore their conſent and agreement is not the true rule of interpretation. The Minor propoſition is proved from this verſe 21 31.33.38.43. where our Saviour doth plainely and directly oppoſe himſelfe againſt the expoſitions of the Ancients, It hath beene ſaid of old thus, but I ſay thus unto you.

Sect. 4. Queſt. 1. §. 4. Thou ſhalt not commit adultery.]

Whether did the Law of Moſes only reſtraine and forbid the outward act of ſinne?

Anſw. The law did not onely reſtraine the body but the mind alſo; not onely the outward action, but alſo the inward affection.

Obiect. Againſt this, it is obiected, our Saviour ſaith here it was ſaid unto you of old, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery; But I ſay, &c. ſo that it appeareth the law onely reſtrained the outward act, but Chriſt doth forbid more, even the inward affection and deſire.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, our bleſſed Saviour ſpeaketh according to their opinion, becauſe they thought they were onely obliged and tied to the outward act, and therefore he doth deliver the law from their corrupt interpretations, not giving a new expoſition, as appeareth plainely, verſe 43. ye have heard that it hath beene ſaid, thou ſhalt love thy neighbour and hate thy enemie: but in all the old Teſtament there is no ſuch precept given by God, or liberty for any to hate their enemie: our Saviour then meaneth not ſuch ſayings as were found in the law, but ſuch expoſitions as they made among themſelves.

Anſw. 2 Secondly, the law of Moſes did bind not only the hand and externall act, but alſo the inward will and deſire, as appeares thus.

Firſt, none are ſaid to repent but of that which is evill: but they under the law were to repent, and to ſhew themſelves contrite, even for the internall acts of their minde: as appeares, Pſalme 4.4. Tremble and ſinne not, examine your hearts upon your bed, &c. Therefore the law did reſtraine the inward will and deſire.

Secondly, it is directly forbidden. Thou ſhalt not hate thy brother in thy heart [z]: which was an internall act; and many other ſuch like ſinnes of the heart are reprooved by the Prophets, Ierem. 14.4.

[z] Levit. 19.17.

Thirdly the Law doth not juſtifie that which is naturally unjuſt but forbiddeth it. Therfore the extends law it ſelfe to the hidden man of the heart, not only tying mens hands. The aſſumptiõ is proved thus; Firſt, he that coveteth his Neighbours wife, faileth in the end, coveting her onely out of luſt, not for procreation, which was the principall end of the inſtitution and ordination of marriage. Secondly, Matrimonie is grounded even upon the law of nature: if then to breake and violate matrimonie bee againſt the law of nature; then to will, and purpoſe ſo to doe, is againſt nature alſo: yea the will and purpoſe is rather ſinne then the act it ſelfe; for it may fall out that the externall act is ſometime without ſinne. as when a man ignorantly lieth with another woman, taking her to be his wife, as Iacob tooke Leah for Rachel: but the will and deſire is never without ſinne; as ſaith Toſtatus himſelfe. ſ. exod. 20. præc. 7.

Fourthly, our Saviour ſaith that this precept, Thou ſhalt not kill, is tranſgreſſed by the anger and hatred of the heart, verſe 22. Therefore the law intendeth even by the externall act to forbid the internall alſo.

Queſt. 2 How doth Chriſt oppoſe himſelfe to this precept, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery?

Anſw. Not by denying it, but by adding ſomething unto it; not by retracting it, or by adding a bridle unto luſt and uncleanneſſe; but by ſpurring 216 ring them forward to a ſpirituall ſenſe, which is to be extended beyond the literall: as if our Saviour would ſay; It was ſaid of old. Thou ſhalt not commit adultery; and this is true, but this is not the whole truth, for there is more then this here meant.

What uncleaneneſſe is here meant? Queſt.3.

Vncleannes is twofold, either
- Internall in the heart,
- Externall, which is either
  - Circumſtantiall, in geſture, and voice.
  - Subſtantiall, which is
    - Indirect.
    - Direct, viz.
      - Againſt, or contrary to nature, namely Sodomy, either with
        - Brute beaſts, called τετραποδα πης.
        - Men, that is ἀρσενοκοίτης.
        - Males, called παιδεραστης.
      - According to nature & is committed either
        - Violently, and is called a Rape.
        - Voluntarily and is either
          - Cõplicata, because it is
            - With a kinſewoman & is called Inceſt,
            - With a married woman and is called Adultery.
          - Simple and that either
            - With a ſtrumpet, called πορνεια.
            - With a Virgin, called Stuprum.

I will not here ſpeake at all, either I. of the Internall uncleanneſſe; or II of the Circumſtantiall; or III. of the Indirect, becauſe I will underſtand the place as the Phariſees underſtood it, namely onely of actuall uncleanneſſe: and for the horrour & odiouſneſſe of the name, I will omit Sodomy.

Thou ſhalt not commit adultery.]

Queſt.4. Why muſt Chriſtians hate, avoide and ſhun fornication and adultery?

Anſw. Becauſe God hath forbidden it. Reade Exod. 20.14. *Deut.*23.17. *Prov.*5.8. *Heb.*13.4.

Obie.1. It may be objected, ſimple fornication is no ſuch great matter; Adultery indeede is a great ſinne, but fornication is but a ſwall evill: yea this the heathens could ſee by the light of na-

Anſw.1. ture. Firſt, certainely, fornication is a moſt greevous ſinne in it ſelfe, although not ſo great Anſw.2. as adultery, if therewith compared. Secondly, true it is, fornication by no poſitive law of God was puniſhed with temporall death; but what was that, ſeeing by the word of God it ſhall bee puniſhed with eternall. Bee not deceived (ſaith the Apoſtle) for neither fornicators nor adulterers ſhall ever enter into the kingdome of heaven.

Anſw.3. Thirdly, although ſimple fornication with an harlot (whereof the former anſwer ſpeakes) were not by any poſitive law adjudged to bee puniſhed with temporall death; yet there was a ſimple fornication which was: If a damoſell play the whore in her Fathers houſe; they ſhall bring her out to the doore of her fathers dwelling, and the men of her citie ſhall ſtone her with ſtones that ſhee die, becauſe ſhee hath wrought folly in Iſrael[a].

a Deut. 22.21.

Anſw.4 Fourthly, although by no poſitive law God commandeth Moſes to puniſh πορνια, fornication with a ſtrumpet with death; yet the Lord himſelfe doth; cutting off foure and twenty thouſand in one plague for this ſimple fornication. *Numb.*25.1. and 1 *Cor.*10.8. And therefore wee ſhould not thinke that a light thing, which the Lord (who is juſt in all his judgements) puniſheth ſo ſeverely.

Obiect.2 Harding objects here, that it is no great matter to permit ſtewes or brothell houſes, or to goe unto them; for they had better doe that then deflower virgins: yea their countrey of Italy being hot, there is a certaine neceſſitie of ſuffering them.

Anſw.1 Firſt, certainely it is moſt falſe that the permitting of thoſe publique places of uncleanneſſe doth prevent greater miſchiefes; for experience teacheth, that it makes men more prone unto fornication; it makes ſinne ſeeme the leſſe: it takes away the ſenſe of ſinne, it hardens the conſcience, it is an allurement unto matrons and wives: yea if wee may give credit to the report of travellers, married wives are no where more unchaſt, and more eaſily drawne unto adultery, then there wher thoſe ungodly houſes are tolerated, or not ſuppreſſed.

Anſw.2. Secondly, if Hardings argument were true, that their countrey is hot, and that it prevents Stuprum, the defiling of maids; yet it would not hence follow that they were to bee ſuffered there, or in any other countrey; For wee muſt not doe evill, that good may come of it[b]. No neceſſitie of health or life can or ought perſwade hereunto: Ludovicus the King of France undertaking a long pilgrimage, and his Queene not being with him, his health begunne to impaire; which his Phyſitians obſerving, and knowing the reaſon of it, perſwaded him in the abſence of the Queene, to take unto him another woman, becauſe his health and ſafety required it: which he did utterly refuſe, proteſting hee had rather die, then have his life preſerved by ſuch an ungodly meanes: But wee ſee our Harding would never have ſtucke at this. I will relate here one remarkable example. The inhabitants of the city Baſil in Germany, embracing the Goſpell of Chriſt, for the ſpace of foure yeares expelled the harlots out of the city, and pulled downe all their Stewes: afterwards ſome perſwade to erect and new build them up againe, for the redreſſing and allaying of thoſe private adulteries, fornications, and uncleanneſſes which were obſerved to abound more then formerly: Oecolam padius reſiſts a long time, but in vain; for they build and reedifie one faire publique houſe for that lewd and wicked purpoſe: The houſe being finiſhed, and the aire very cleare, a cloud not to be ſeene, thunder frõ heaven falles upon a tower adjoyning to the new brothell houſe, fires

certaine barrels of Gunpowder, which were kept therein, ruins and razeth the Caſtle from the very foundation, and layes flat with the ground alſo the new ſtewes: which ſtrang and remarkeable accident the Magiſtrates obſerving, and being ſtrucke with a great feare and amazement, embraced the Apoſtles counſell: That it was not good to doe evill, that good might come of it. [c]

[c] Theatr. hum. vite. vol. 7. lib. 3. fol. 1270.

Queſt. 5. What are the effects and fruites of fornication and adultery?

Anſw. The effects are either to be conſidered of in regard of the perſon thus offending (whereof in the next queſtion) or in regard of others; where wee muſt obſerve, that beſides the Lord, who is offended by the tranſgreſſion of his Law, the adulterer and uncleane perſon offends many others, namely:

First, he ſinnes againſt and offends his owne wife, he not having power over his owne body, but his wife, [d] yea if a man may not abſtaine from the naturall uſe of the wife, except it be I. for a time onely. And II. with a mutuall conſent of both parties: And III. for faſting and prayer, that they might give themſelves thereunto: [e] Then much leſſe hath a man power over himſelfe to uſe his body unto adultery. And therefore the adulterer is a thiefe unto his wife; and the adultereſſe a thiefe unto her husband; giving that unto another, which is not theirs to give.

[e] Verſ. 5.

Secondly, the adulterer ſinnes againſt his neighbour, whoſe wife he defiles: and that three manner of wayes. First, hee injures him in the higheſt degree, this being a wrong which cannot be borne: Iealouſie is the rage of a man; therefore hee will not ſpare in the day of vengeance [f]. Secondly, he wrongs him in his fame, reputation and credite. Thirdly, he doth injure him in his children, making them to be ſuppoſed by others to bee baſtards: It is obſerved, that the cuckow never ſits upō her own eggs, but deſtroys the eggs of another bird, and then layes eggs of her owne in the neaſt, which the other ſuppoſing to be her owne, ſits upon them, hatcheth them, and feeds them as her owne: And hence it is that men whoſe wives violate their conjugall love, oath, and bond; carry that reprochfull name, becauſe they educate, nouriſh, feede, give portions, yea, leave their inheritances often to other mens children, ſuppoſing them to bee their owne. And thus as the adulterer is a thiefe to his wife, ſo he is alſo to his neighbour, robbing him of his inheritance.

[f] Pro. 6. 34.

Thirdly, the adulterer ſinnes againſt his neighbours wife whom he allures; thus tempting her unto condemnation; and hereby proving himſelfe to be the worſt enemie ſhee hath: unto his brother and his children hee is a thiefe, but unto his brothers wife he is a plaine divell, a direct Tempter: the great Dragon drawes ſtarres from Heaven; and the adulterer drawes ſoules to Hell. This is worſe then Rape, Homicide, Theft, to ſteale and murder a poore ſoule; they doe rejoyce and have cauſe to be glad, who gaine ſoules, [g] but they that deſtroy them have cauſe to mourne, becauſe they will b required at their hands. Yea, in other ſinnes true and unfaigned repentance doth cure the whole ſinne, and heales the whole wound; but not in this: For the woman being partaker of the ſinne, it is not wholy healed or ſalvede, xcept both the parties repent.

[g] Heb. 13. 17.

Lam. 5. 20.

Fourthly, the uncleane perſon ſinnes againſt the children he begets, making them baſtards; from whence, First followes infamie, ignominie, and reproach, yea ſuch a diſgrace, that the name of Baſtard will beare an action in our law, where many other opprobrious names will not. Secondly, from hence followes a curſe upon the children unlawfully begotten: Baſtard ſlips ſhall take no deepe roote [h] but ſhall quickly bee rooted out. (Wiſdom. 3. 16) Hence the ſeede of the uncleane bed were to bee rejected and caſt out (Ezra. 10. 44. compared with 1. Eſdras. 9. 36.) And the children of Iſrael (that is, which were lawfully begotten) muſt bee ſeparated from ſtrange children, that is, the fruite of fornication: [i] yea this is founded upon the direct law of God; who hath ſaid: A Baſtard ſhall not enter into the congregation of the Lord, even to his tenth generation. [k] And therefore, I. We may hence ſee the greatneſſe of the ſinne, that brings a puniſhment upon the innocent partie; as wee ſee in Davids childe. [l] II. We may ſee the crueltie of adulterers and fornicators, who ſow their ſeede, that they may bring up fruite, and ſet plants, for the divell; who labour that their iſſue may bee briars and thornes, and ſo fit fuell for the fire of Gods wrath. And therefore all luſtfull and laſcivious perſons ſhould here remember, how many ill ſounding, and unpleaſing peales, will daily be rung in their eares in Hell, by the divell, by their owne conſciences, by the ſoules of the parties whom they have defiled, by the children which unlawfully they have begotten, and whom they have addicted unto death and deſtruction, as much as in them lieth.

[h] Wiſd. 4. 3.

[i] Nehem. 9. 2.

[k] Deut. 23. 2.

[l] 2 Sam. 12. 14.

Fifthly, the uncleane perſon ſinneth againſt the Church and Common-wealth wherein hee lives; becauſe hee corrupts it by his example: as did Zimri, Numb. 25. 6. And thus we ſee, how woefull the effects of adultery and fornication are, both in regard of God, the wife of the partie offending, the neighbour, whoſe wife is abuſed, the neighbours wife who is defiled, the children that are begotten in a polluted bed, and the Church and Common-wealth, wherein the offender lives.

Queſt. 6. What puniſhments are due vnto the violaters of this precept: Thou ſhalt not commit adultery?

Anſw.

The puniſhments are either { Humane. / Divine, which are either { Corporall, which are either { Ordinarie. / Extraordinarie. } / Spirituall. }

First, there are Humane puniſhments, which are inflicted by the lawes of the Gentiles, or by the Civill law, or by the Canon law. First by the lawes of the Gentiles a three-fold puniſhment was inflicted upon ſuch offenders. I. Some of them punished it with death: thus did the Arabians, (Eusebius) and the Parthians[m], and the ancient Saxons, who hanged both parties[n]. Plato, leg. 3. ordained also death for such transgressors: Charles of Burgundy caused an Earle, first to marry a countrey wench whom hee had forced, and then made him to be beheaded[o]. Sesostres, King of the Egyptians, caused many uncleane & adulterous women to be taken and shut up in a little village, & then burnt the village and them together[p]. II. Some of them inflicted corporall punishment, but not death: Thus Zaleuchus ordained, that hee who was taken with a married woman should loose both his eyes, and after in part inflicted the same law upon his owne sonne taken tardie in that sinne[q]. The Egyptians in this case appointed, that the man should have a thousand stripes, and the woman her nose cut off, that wanting the chiefe grace and ornament of her face, shee might enflame and allure no more[r]. The Germans were accustomed to shave the mans head, to strip him out of his garments, and then to scourge him through the streets[s]. Mahomet himselfe commanded, that an adulterer should receive an hundred lashes in a great assembly, forbidding any man so much as to pitty him. III. Some of the Gentiles punished this sinne with infamie and shame. The Cumani, set such as were either taken in the act of uncleannesse, or were convicted of it, upon a stone in the market-place, and after they had sitten there a while to be a spectacle unto all, they were set upon an Asse, and carried up and downe the market place, and some chiefe streets that they might bee a laughing stocke unto all; and then afterwards were set upon the stone againe, and held as infamous varlets all their lives after; whereupon it was called lapis detestabilis[t], the abominable stone. The Ostregothes, caused the man to be drawne about the market by the privie parts, and then banished him[u]. If any desire to know the customes of divers other nations in this particular, let him reade Rhodingius, 27. 4. and Alexander ab Ales. 4. 1. and Stobæus. Thus wee see how adultery and fornication was punished by the Gentiles, either with death, or some other corporall punishment, or disgrace.

Secondly, the Civill law punisheth this crime thus. The Iulian law punished it with death: Aurelian hanged those that were herein guilty[v]. P. Attilius slew his owne Daughter, because she had suffered her selfe to bee defiled[w]. Augustus banished for this his daughter Iulia. Tacit. & Dion.

Thirdly Canon Law punished it thus: first with seven yeares Penance, Concil. Ancyranum. I. Can. 20. and Concil. Wormacience. Can. 9. Secondly, others Concil. Elibertinum. can. 64. & 69. punished it thus, I. if the woman committed adultery but once, shee was to doe penance five yeares. II. If she continued long in adultery, but left it at length; shee was injoyned ten yeares penance. III. If she continued in her sinne, she was never to be admitted to the communion, nor injoyned any penance.

Secondly, there are besides these Humane Punishments, others which are called Divine; and these are either Corporall or Spirituall; and the Corporall are either Ordinary, or Extraordinary. The Ordinary punishments are those which are injoyned by the law of God: as for example, I. Adultery was punished by the death of both parties, Levit. 20. 10. II. Vncleannesse committed with one that was espoused or contracted unto a husband, but not as yet knowne by him, was punished with the death of both parties also. Deut. 22. 24. III. He that lay with a woman in her monethes must die and she also. Levit. 20. 18. IV. He that defiled the daughter of a Priest must die. V. The damosell that workes folly in her fathers house, and is afterwards married unto another must die, Deuter. 22. 21. Thus wee see how the law of God punished this sinne with death.

Thirdly, there are Extraordinarie punishments, here observe I. God approves sometimes of severe punishment which is inflicted by others upon this sinne: thus he approues of Phineas Act who slew that couple, Zimry and Cozbi. Numb. 25. 10. By which it appeares how odious and detestable this sinne of uncleannesse is unto God. II. Sometimes God shewes and reveales his severe anger against this sinne by inflicting many severall punishments upon the transgressors thereby: and that either in regard of the estate or of the credite, or of the body.

First, God punisheth uncleane persons in their estates; for it rooteth out all the encrease of our substance[x], it brings a man to a crust of bread, Prov. 6. 26. and 23. 27. because he that keepeth company with harlots spendeth his substance, Pro. 29. 3. Strumpets for the most part are costly, and therefore quickly consume and waste those, who maintaine them: And againe God by a just vengance doth not blesse any thing that such a person takes in hand: And therefore those who desire to be blessed in their estates, let them take heede of Adultery and fornication.

Secondly, the Lord punisheth such in their good name, credite, and reputation; whence the Apostle entreats both the Corinthians and the Ephesians, not to be companions of fornicators[y], because that would be a blemish to their reputations: this evidently appeares thus. I. none can endure to be called Adulterers, or Adulteresses, whatsoever they are; shewing thereby that it is a disgrace to be such. II. Whatsoever men are, yet they would not be knowne to be such; thus they that are wicked in this kinde, doe yet desire that their sinne might be concealed from others, because it were a shame for them to bee knowne to be such. III. Those are chast will not associate themselves with such, yea though they be but suspected to be such. IV. Except it be those who are obdurate in wickednes, all men are ashamed publiquely to frequent the familiarity & society of harlots: all which shewes that it is a blemish & staine to reputation of any to be tainted with uncleannesse: and therefore those who are charie of their credit, and desire fame amongst men, let them take heede of fornication and adultery.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, God puniſheth the breakers of this ſeventh Commandement in their bodies: as for example.

First, Fornication and Adultery ſpiritually pollutes and defileth the body [z]. Secondly, it ſubjects the body often to many impure and loathſome diſeaſes, which conſume the fleſh [a].

Thirdly, hence it brings a man more quickly to his end. Wherein wee may ſee the remarkable Juſtice of God. I. Thoſe who would have their lives unlawfully pleaſant and ſweete, ſhall be cut off the ſooner. II. Thoſe who give themſelves to theſe ſecret ſinnes ſhall bee unmasked and diſcloſed by ſome loathſome ſickneſſe or diſeaſe. III. They who leade lewd and filthy lives, ſhall be branded with filthy markes, and the French or Neapolitane diſeaſe, which makes them odious (almoſt) unto all men: IV. It brings a man often in danger of death and deſtruction: Hee that goeth after the ſtrange woman goeth as an oxe to the ſlaughter [b], ſhee being as a deepe ditch, and a narrow pit [c]. We ſee how the luſt of Hamor brought the city to deſtruction, Gen. 34. and the proſtituting of the Levites wife coſt the Benjamites full deare, Iudg. 20. And therefore if a man neither regard God nor the devill; heaven nor hell, yet hee ſhould regard his owne life, calling to mind how many have periſhed through Adultery and fornication: ſometimes by thoſe whom they have violently abuſed, as often in warre: ſometimes by the parents of thoſe who ſecretly have beene ſeduced: ſometimes by their corrivals: ſometimes by the husband, whoſe wife hath beene defiled: infinite are the examples that might bee ſhewed in all theſe, but I forbeare it. V. God ſometimes puniſheth this ſinne himſelfe; thus he plagued the Iſraelites for their fornication, ſo that foure and twenty thouſand of them periſhed at once. 1 Cor. 10. 8.

Fourthly, God puniſheth adultery and fornication with ſpirituall evils: and that foure manner of waies.

First, Permittendo, by not reſtraining them from evill; but giving them over to a reprobate ſenſe to worke all manner of uncleanneſſe [e]. This is a grievous puniſhment, becauſe men being left unto themſelves, doe runne headlong to evill: committing ſinne even with greedineſſe, yea juſtifying their wicked doings, and boaſting of their ſinnes.

Secondly, Dementando, by ſuffering them to be beſotted, and bewitched with their ſinnes: this followes from the former: for whoredome takes away the heart [d], and therefore hee who goes after the ſtrange woman is called a foole [e]; wee ſay love is blinde, becauſe luſt puts out the eye of reaſon. Auguſtine propounds this Quere, why in uncleanneſſe men not fearing the puniſhment thereof, doe yet notwithſtanding deſire to be more ſecret in the committing of that ſinne, then in others, and are more aſhamed to be taken in that ſinne then in others? And hee anſwers, Quia appetitus regit, ratio erubeſcit ſe captivam fieri. Becauſe the carnall apperite doth rule and beare ſway, and reaſon is aſhamed to confeſſe that ſhee is captivated and overcome by affection. Experience teacheth us, that there are many, who are prudent, wiſe, and of underſtanding enough in other things; and here mere fooles and ſots; neither reſpecting their eſtates, good name, or lawfull iſſue. This is a greevous puniſhment, for a man to bee ſo beſotted that although hee ſeeth his danger, yet hee cannot avoid it, but runneth headlong thereinto.

Thirdly, Captivando, by ſuffering the laſcivious perſon to bee taken captive of his luſt; this followes from the former; for when we are beſotted upon beauty, we willingly yeeld our ſelves thereunto, and ſo come to that height, that wee cannot ceaſe to ſinne, 2 Pet. 2. 14. Cuſtome of evill taking away the ſenſe thereof. And this evill given way unto doth more and more envaſſaile us, getting dayly more ſtrength in us, and power over us, while in the meane time we grow weaker and weaker.

Fourthly, Damnando, by puniſhing theſe ſins with eternall death and condemnation. Reade 1 Cor. 6. 9. Epheſ. 5. 5. and Heb. 13. 4 and Apoc. 21. 8. and 22. 15. and Iob 31. 12. and Prov 6. 29. and 7. 27. and 5. 5. and 9. 18. And thus we ſee how the Lord puniſheth this ſinne of uncleanneſſe ſpiritually. I. He leaves us unto our ſelves. II. Wee being thus left are preſently beſotted with the face of beautie, and pleaſures of ſinne. III. Being thus bewitched with the love of harlots, we are eaſily ſeduced by them, and captivated. IV. Being thus linked, wrapped, and buried in the grave of luſt, and chaines of uncleanneſſe, that we will not ceaſe to ſinne, the juſtice of God requires that we ſhould bee eternally puniſhed.

Queſt. 7. What are the remedies againſt theſe ſinnes? Anſw. The remedies are either θεραπευτικὰ. Medicative. or φυλακτικὰ. Preſervativa.

First, there are remedia Medicative; Phyſicall, or Medicinable remedies: namely, to leave and forſake all manner of uncleanneſſe; this is the onely healing plaiſter, and curing potion; this if thou canſt doe, Captivum te redimis, thou haſt freed thy ſelfe from the fetters of ſinne, and bondage of Sathan.

Queſt. 8. How may wee bee enabled to doe this? by which way may we beſt leave luſt and uncleanneſſe?

Anſw. Uſe carefully, diligently, and conſtantly theſe enſuing meanes; namely.

First, liſten more to reaſon, leſſe to affection: ſtrengthen and backe thy reaſon with religion, and the Commandement of the Lord: when thou art tempted unto laſciviouſneſſe, ſay thus unto thy ſelfe, ſhall I preferre a fooliſh deſire and corrupt appetite of nature before reaſon, and religion? If I doe thus, I ſhall ſhew my ſelfe to be but weake, not able to moderate, rule, governe, and ſubdue my owne affections; yea herein ſhew my ſelfe more like a beaſt then a man, for they are led onely by their ſenſitive appetites: Thus conſider with thy ſelfe, what a ſhame it will be for thee, to let thy luſt overbeare both religion and reaſon.

Secondly

[z] 1 Cor. 6. 16. 1 Theſ. 4. 4.

[d] Oſe 4. 11.
[e] Prov. 7. and 9. 16.

220 Secondly, learne to hate fornication and Adultery: ſo long as thou loveſt them, thou wilt be ready to turne with the dogge to his vomit; and they are never truely hated ſo long as they are followed.

Thirdly, doe this by and by, while the yron is hot, give no ſleepe unto thy eyes, nor ſlumber unto thy eye-lids, untill thou have ſued a divorce from thy ſinnes: luſt gets ſtrength, the longer it remaines, and therefore labour to ſubdue it at firſt.

Fourthly, ordaine and appoint unto thy ſelfe certaine Law-daies; wherein thou maieſt examine thy conſcience, viſite thy ſelfe, thy heart, thy body; and ſee how they accord with the law of God. For ſinne cannot take deepe roote in our heart, ſo long as we are thus carefull daily to prevent it.

Secondly, there are Remedia Præſervativa, meanes to preſerve us from uncleanneſſe; and theſe are firſt in order of nature: that which is uſually diſtinguiſhed by the Phyſitians in their Preſervatives, neede not here bee diſtinguiſhed by us: they ſay there is a double preſervation, the firſt is of thoſe who are ſound, ſtrong, and healthy, that they may bee preſerved in that healthfull and good conſtitution: the ſecond is of thoſe who are inclining and dropping into ſome ſickneſſe and maladie, if it bee not prevented by ſome medicinable helpes. We (I ſay) forbeare this diſtinction, becauſe I ſuppoſe that all are in ſome ſort inclining, or inclinable unto this evill, there beeing a concupiſcible facultie in all. Now concupiſcence is a fire, and therefore the onely preſervative remedie here will bee to quench, ſtint, and put out this fire. Here then obſerve

The fire of Concupiſcence is extinguiſhed, three manner of waies, namely either
- First, by throwing on water, to wit, either
  - Meditation, namely
    - First of the brevitie of the pleaſure; which is ſhort and momentarie:
    - Secondly, of the place, where thou commits folly: to wit, in the ſight of an infinite pure God; remember here, an adulterous thought condemnes, becauſe God ſeeth it; how dareſt thou then act uncleanneſſe in Gods preſence.
    - Thirdly, of the evills which proceede from hence, to wit either
      - Of the Effects, both Ab
        - Extrà, in regard of others; remember how thou hurteſt. I. The Church of Chriſt. II. Thy owne wife. III. Thy neighbour. IV. Thy children. V. Thy neighbours wife.
        - Intrà: in regard of thy ſelfe; conſider how lamentably thou injureſt and harme:
          - eſt, thy ſelfe, both in thy
            - Eſtate.
            - Credit.
            - Body, and that both
              - Spiritually, by contamminating it.
              - Temporally, and that either
                - Violently, by expoſing thy ſelfe unto ſome violent death.
                - Naturally causing
                  - Either ſome ſickneſſe. Or
                  - Some untimely death. Or
                  - Some odious contagion.
            - Spirit becauſe
              - First, thou doſt beſot thy ſpirit.
              - Secondly, thou doſt captivate, & enthrall thy ſpirit.
      - Of the punishments, either
        - Humane; which are inflicted either. I. by the lawes of the Gentiles; or II. by the Civill law: or III. by the Canon law.
        - Divine which are either
          - Corporall, which are either
            - Ordinarie: appointed in the law of God.
            - Extraordinarie which are either
              - Inflicted or Approved
              - by God.
          - Spirituall, w^ch^ either concerne
            - The Minde, by leaving and forſaking it.
            - The Soule, by damning it.
  - Or Devotion; namely prayers and teares: certainely, this water is very effectuall for the qualifing of this fire: for the conſcience being truely elevated by prayer unto God, cannot cloſe with ſuch baſe luſts; Fornication and Adultery is frequent, becauſe prayers and ſtrong cries are very rare.
  - Or an holy converſation; to wit 1. the ſociety of thoſe who are good, godly, and zealous: make choiſe of thoſe for thy companions who are ſober, grave, and auſter; not thoſe who are jocund and light. This is a hard ſaying to fleſh and blood, but unto him whoſe blood is inflamed through the luſts of the fleſh, it is better to goe into the houſe of mourning then of mirth, Eccleſ. 5. 2. Confeſſe and make knowne thy temptations to ſome pious and faithfull friend, or rather ſome pious, prudent, and grave Miniſter; Then this benefit and commoditie would be reaped from it: 1. He would gaine holy, wholeſome and ſound counſell, for his direction. 2. The participation of the prayers of him to whom he makes his griefe knowne, for his ſupportation. Yea 3. this will increaſe

Secondly by abating the fewell, namely both

The nourisher of the flame in the concupiscence: to wit, idlenesse, which begets impure cogitations. Otia si tollas: and therefore we should take in hand some honest calling, and imployment, which might preserve us from all evill occasions.

The nourishers of the heate in the flesh, which are

First, Gluttony, which is to be tamed by frequent fasting, which is an excellent remedy against it. Concupiscence is a Devill which is not cast out but by fasting and prayer: and therefore it may justly be suspected, that fornication and adultery is more frequent, because fasting is so rare: As in the Church of Rome, ever since their fasting from all meats, was turned into a fasting with junkets, wine, and dainties; the fire of lust hath extreamely raged amongst them.

e Hose. 4. 11. 18 and Esa. 5. 11.

Secondly, Drunkennesse; wine is the tinder of lust, which presently enflames and sets it on fire e, as we see an example in Lot, who being overtaken with wine, was overcome with incest f. And therefore the wise man gives the intemperate man this counsell, looke not thou upon the wine; for then thine eyes shall behold strange women g.

g Pro. 23. 33.

Thirdly separate thy selfe from the fire by avoiding carefully,

First, the societie of women: whereof there are three sorts,

First, Harlots, and suspected women; from these thou must altogether estrange thy selfe; for they are crafty to allure.

Secondly, chast Matrons; these are to be highly esteemed, and valued; but their companies are to bee frequented warily and circumspectly; Non sæpe visitandæ (Hier) neither are they too often to be visited.

Thirdly, weake vessels, or young women, whose beauties may enflame thee; The society of these also thou must eschew.

Secondly, all allurements, of sight, hearing, meditation, and the like; of which afterwards.

Quest. 9. Some here may say, lewde, lascivious, and wanton persons, finde a great deale of joy and delight in wallowing in these filthie puddles of pollution. But what joy have those who are chast, and pure, here in this life; what consolations have they whereby they may be supported in the way of vertue, and chastity? They have many causes of rejoycing even in this life: Answ. Namely, First, they shall be cloathed in white rayments in the kingdome of God (Revel. 3. 4.) For this white garment is, I. Sometimes a type of Martyrdome. (Revel. 7. 11. 13.) And II. Sometimes a type of chastitie. (Revel. 14. 4.) Secondly those who are pure shall bee presented unto Christ. h Thirdly, they are the members of Christ. i Fourthly, they are the vessels of the Holy Ghost, and the Temple of God. Esa. 52. 11. and 1. Corinth. 6. 19. Fifthly, they shall be like unto the Angels in the kingdom of God. k Sixthly, they shall be like unto God himselfe, who is puritie it selfe: Thus happy and blessed is hee that is chaste, pure and unspotted; but with the adulterer and uncleane person, it shall not be thus.

VERS. 28. But I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her alreadie in his heart.

Vers. 28.

§. 1. Whosoever looketh on a woman.

Is it a sinne to looke upon a woman?

Sect. 1. Quest. 1. Answ. Simply to behold a woman is not a sinne, but curiously and with a sinfull eye to looke after a woman, and lust after her, that is a sinne: as appeares by this verse. The Apostle saith, looke not at things which are seene, but at things which are not seene. l Where wee may observe, that σκοπέω, is so to looke as the Archer looketh to the marke; hee that beholdeth a woman thus, hath an adulterous eye; yea the word here used βλέπειν) is not onely to looke with the eye, but with the heart, signifying more then ὁρᾶν for this onely signifies the beholding of an object simply, which way a man may behold a woman without sinne; but that signifies the intention of the minde, which goes along with the eye; and thus to behold a woman, with the sight of the eye, and the lust of the heart, as evill is here forbidden. If the sight of the eye be thus dangerous, and readie to convcye lust unto the heart; is it not then good to plucke out, or put out our eyes?

l 2 Cor. 4. 18.

Quest. 2.

First, some of the Heathen knowing how unruly the eye was, have pulled out their eyes, thinking them most happy who were so blinde: of which minde was Seneca when he said, Nonne intelligis partem felicitatis nostræ esse cæcitatem: It addes no small deale unto our happinesse that wee are blinde. Answ. 1.

Secondly, these were mistaken, for Christ requireth not this of us, to plucke out our bodily seeing eyes; but to pull out our sinfull eye (in the next verse) that is, to take lust from our eye, which is a Member of our sinfull body, and then the eye of it selfe is a good member of the body. Answ. 2.

§. 2. He that looketh upon a woman, to lust after, hath committed adulterie with her already in his heart.]

Sect. 2.

Queſt. It is queſtioned here by many: Whether the uncleane deſires of the heart bee a breach of this Commandement, thou ſhalt not commit adultery; or of the laſt: Thou ſhalt not covet?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome of the Fathers have thought, that the uncleanneſſe of the heart doth not belong unto this ſeaventh Precept: God doth not by this Commandement cut off the ſinfull thoughts; but the ſinfull act; ſaid Gregor. in Ezech. hom 13. Yea, Auguſtine alſo is of this opinion: That in this ſeaventh Commandement the worke of uncleanneſſe onely is noted; but in the tenth, the very concupiſcence. [m] m Aug. in. qu 71. in Exod.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the inward ſanctimonie and puiity of the minde is here commanded, and the contrary forbidden, as appeares by theſe particulars. Firſt, by the definition of puritie and chaſtitie, which is to be holy both in body and ſpirit; thus Saint Paul deſcribeth a true Virgin. [n] And thus he exhorts us to bee. [o] Secondly, both the ſoules and bodies of the faithfull are the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt, and therefore ought to be kept holy. [p] Thirdly, Chryſoſtome urgeth theſe foure reaſons; I. From the interpretation of our bleſſed Saviour, who ſheweth that this Commandement is broken in the very inward luſt and concupiſcence, in this verſe. II. From the analogie and correſpondencie, which it hath with other Commandements: To bee angry with our brother without a cauſe, is a breach of the precedent Commandement: Thou ſhalt not kill; So to deſire a ſtrange woman, though the act of concupiſcence follow not, is againſt this Precept. III. In reſpect of God, who doth not ſo much looke to the worke of man as to his heart. IV. Becauſe concupiſcence is the cauſe of adulterie: all adultery proceeding from concupiſcence. [q] Chryſoſtom. hom. 12. in Mat. And therefore ſeeing the effect, that is, adultery, and outward uncleanneſſe is forbidden in this Precept, it followeth alſo that the very cauſe thereof, which is concupiſcence, ſhould be reſtrained.

Sect. 3. §. III. Whoſoever ſhall looke upon a woman, &c. hath committed adultery with her.]

Queſt. 1 Why doth our Saviour here aſcribe Adultery to the eye, and a wanton looke?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe the ſence provokes unto act: as the Apoſtle ſaith, he plants, and Apollo waters unto good. (1 Cor. 3. 6.) So we may ſay the eye plants, and the tongue and ſpeech waters, unto impurity and uncleanneſſe.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe the eye is the moſt quick ſenſe, ut vidi ut pery; ſometimes a glade of the eye brings a glance to the heart, which ſets on fire the whole courſe of nature. Obſerve here that a man hath two eyes, to wit: I. Oculus informans, the right eye whereby ſometimes he caſually beholds a woman; this is not ſimply condemned, as was ſhewed before. §. 1. II. There is Oculus depaſcens, the left eye, which delights in the beholding of beauty, and is never glutted therewith; this is faultie and here forbidden, as was ſhewed before. Indeede the firſt ſight is ſometimes a baite, and proves at laſt mortall; as we ſee in Evah, whoſe ſight of the Apple coſt the world deare, [r] afterwards the ſight of women cauſed thoſe ſinnes, that at length brought the Dleuge: [ſ] The ſight of Dinah coſt the Shechemites their lives. [t] And the ſight of Joſeph unto his Miſtreſſe brought her to forget all woman-hood. [u] And Davids eye firſt caſually beholding Bathſheba, occaſioned adultery, ſubornation to drunkenneſſe and murder.

Thirdly, becauſe the beholding of beautie is evill, and doth pollute in it ſelfe, if it be with delight and deſire after it: And hence in the law, the brother and ſiſter were to be cut off, if they ſaw, and did contemplate (that is, willingly and with delight) one anothers nakedneſſe. [v] And therefore with Iob we ſhould make a covenant with our eyes, and not give way to alaſcivious looke. Anſw. 3

v Levit. 20. 17

What lookes muſt we principally avoide? Queſt. 2.

There is a three-fold aſpect of women, namely, Firſt there is, Viſus ſolicitans; a ſight which perſwadeth and counſelleth unto evill; and this is wicked: Solomon ſaith; He winketh with his eyes, [w] that is, he laboures by wanton lookes, winkes, ſmiles, and the like to ſeduce and allure. Theſe as abſolutely wicked, are to bee avoided. Secondly, there is Viſus ruminans, a pleaſing and delightfull looke; this Solomon forbids: Let not thine eyes behold ſtrange women. [x] And his father David telleth us, it is a vanitie, and therefore we ſhould turne our face from it. [y] This is βλέπειν not ὁρᾶν the very thing which is here forbidden. Noli aſpicere quod non licet concupiſcere: Doe not looke earneſtly upon that which it is not lawfull for thee at all to covet. (Bern.) Oculus impudicus impudici cordis nuntius (Auguſtin.) Such lookes are often the fore-runners of unchaſte actions, and doe preſage an unchaſte heart. Anſw.

w Pro. 6. 13.
x Pro. 23. 33
y Pſal. 119. 37

Thirdly, there is Viſus caſualis, an accidentall or caſuall aſpect; this is not evill in it ſelfe, yet even in this wee muſt be warie, and watchfull, and not let our heart goe along with our eye.

§. 4. To luſt after her in his heart, hath committed adultery:] Sect. 4.

Is the concupiſcence of the heart ſinne? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, the Papiſts ſay the ſecond Concupiſcence is ſinne, but not the firſt: ſee before, Math. 4. 1. §. 3. Object. 1. 2. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, the Father ſaith; Non quicunque concupiſcit, ſed qui aſpicit ad concupiſcentiam. (Auguſt.) It is not every one who luſteth or deſireth his neighbours wife, that commits adultery, but he that therefore lookes upon her, that he may luſt after her: And here Auguſtine makes three degrees, namely, I. Suggeſtion. II. Delectation. III. Conſent: reſembling theſe three to the Serpent, Evah and Adam; or 1. to the motion of the fleſh; 2. to the delight of the minde; 3. to the conſent of reaſon, and here it is perfect; as Saint Iames ſayth: Concupiſcence brings forth ſinne. [z] Suggeſtion is the temptation of the Serpent, ye ſhall not die, but bee like God. [a] This was not ſinne unto Eve. Delectation reſembles Anſw. 2.

z Iam. 1. 15.
a Gen. 3. 4.

sembles Evahs listening unto the Serpent, and beleeving him, Shee saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to bee desired to make one wise: [b] neither was this sinne unto her. Consent resembles Adam and Eves eating of the Apple, which was a sinne unto them: And thus the Father seemes to meane. That, I. the motion of the flesh unto sinne, is not sinne. II. That the delight of the minde, is not sinne neither. But onely the III. the Consent of reason. And Saint Hierome differs not much from him (upon this verse) saying, that there is a difference between πάθος & προπάθεια, passio & propassio, the first being a sin, the second not.

b Gen. 3. 6.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is most certaine that it is a sin, as may thus be evidenced:

First, the Scripture forbids it in the Morall law: Thou shalt not covet. Exod. 20. 17. which Prohibition makes Paul know that it is a sinne, which otherwise he had not understood. (Rom. 7. 7.) I had not knowne lust, (that is, to have beene sinne,) except the law had said: Thou shalt not covet.

Secondly, Saint Iames speakes of sinne accomplished, that is, of externall and actuall sinne.

Thirdly, the Fathers above mentioned, imply as much: For (with Hierome) Passio is a sin, and Propassio hath the guilt and staine of sin in it, although it bee not simply esteemed a sin in it selfe: Now this Propassio he calles Titillationem carnis, cum delectatione mentis; The motion of the flesh accompanied with the delight of the minde: Now is not this sinne? Againe, Saint Augustine hath three degrees of sinne; but wee must here observe as hee himselfe doth there: [c] That every suggestion doth not arise from Sathan, but sometimes from the memorie, sometimes from the senses: Now, as it comes from Sathan it is not ours, and so is not sinne; but as it springs either from our memorie, or senses, so it is ours, and proceeds from the Originall corruption of our nature, and is sinne unto us. Yea, Augustine himselfe condemnes all Concupiscence, Quis dubitat omnem malam concupiscentiam reatè, vocari fornicationem. Who makes question but all evill Concupiscence may justly bee called Fornication? And another [d] most plainly, In evangelicis motus oculi adæquatur adulterio, & illecebrosa affectio visus transcurrentis cum opere fornicationis punitur. In the Gospell the lascivious motion of the eye is resembled and equalled with adultery: And the enticing affection of a glancing looke equally punished with actuall fornication.

c de serm. Dom. s.

d Hylar. s.

Fourthly, it appeares that Concupiscence is sinne by this reason, because sinne is not in the eye, but in the heart, or the motion, or mover unto sinne: Yea more plainly; because our Saviour doth not here say, hee hath committed adultery with a woman in his heart, who lookes upon a woman, that he may commit adultery, but that lookes and lusts after her: Teaching this unto us, that the concupiscence of the heart, makes us guilty of the violation of the law, and eternall death.

Obser.

Why is the lust of the heart sinne before God? and how doth it more evidently appeare to bee such? 223

Quest. 2.

First, because God requires the heart (Prov. 23. 26.) and commands that the heart be circumcised (Deut. 10. 16. and 30. 6.) yea he requires the heart as his owne right, because hee hath bought it, 1 Cor. 6. 20. and therefore hee will be glorified therewith, 1 Cor. 7. 34. Answ. 1.

Secondly, the lust of the heart is sinne, although it be resisted: for the concupiscence of the flesh is condemned and reproved, where the spirit strives against it; [e] yea we hence argue against the Papists: It is praise-worthy strongly to resist concupiscence and the first motions unto sinne; therefore that is evill which thus wee resist. Answ. 2. e Gal. 5. 16.

Thirdly, originall concupiscence is sinne in the unregenerate (as the Papists themselves confesse) therefore in the regenerate it hath the same nature, although it shall not bee imputed unto them as it shall unto the former. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, this appeares by the example of Paul, who cryes out, Oh wretched man, who shall deliver me from this body of death, and this law of my members, Rom. 7. 24. and yet hee solemnly protests, that he would not sinne, nor give way unto these corruptions, vers. 16. 19. yea it appeares he would not, because when he is assaulted he prayes many times against it, 2 Cor. 12. 7. And therefore give no place unto lust at all, but remember that not onely they who consent unto sinne, and commit it actually, are guilty before God, but also those who ruminate, meditate, and delight in the thoughts thereof. Answ. 4.

How must we resist this internall lust? or by what meanes must we withstand it? Quest. 3.

First, remember, that it is the root of all sin: for from the heart proceed adulteries, &c. Mat. 15. 19. These thoughts and suggestions are the seeds of all manner of evill, and therefore if thou wouldest not have thy life over-spread with the weeds of wickednesse, root out and destroy this seed. Answ. 1.

Secondly, remember all is nothing thou dost, so long as thy heart is not upright; it is to no purpose to serve God outwardly, or to draw neere unto him with thy mouth, if thy heart be farre from him: to what end serves a pure life and a polluted heart? God cares not for painted Tombes, although they be gorgeous without, because they are within but filth and rottennesse: Man cares not for Sodomes fruit, although they be faire and pleasant to the eye, because they are but ashes within: And therefore if we desire that any thing we doe may be acceptable unto God, we must be carefull to purge and purifie our hearts. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, remember that all thy thoughts are conspicuous unto God, and when thou giv'st way unto any wicked thought, hee stands by, sees it, observes it, frownes at it, and prepares the arrowes of vengeance against thee for it. Reade Psal. 94 11. Jerem. 17. 9, 10. and 11. 20. Psal. 7. 9. and 1 Sam. 16 7. Consider how miserable thy condition is, if thou be careless or Answ. 3.

224 feareleſſe of theſe thoughts; for it argues that thou feareſt the Devill more than God, and man more than both: thou dareſt not commit the act of uncleanneſſe before men, but thou dareſt ruminate and delight in unclean thoughts before the preſence of God. Read 1 Chron. 28.9. and Apoc. 2.23.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, be watchfull over thy wayes, and ſober (1 Pet. 5.8.) wee muſt be very carefull and circumſpect, both in regard of the allurements of the world, and the aſſaults of Satan, and the corruption of our actions, and the deceit of wicked occaſions, but principally in regard of our affections: for as by the ſenſe tentation enters, ſo by affection ſin breakes forth.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, let us acknowledge the pollution and evill of internall luſt by and by, out of hand, and ſpeedily reſiſt it: Sometimes theſe thoughts come veiled with the veile of honeſty and lawfulneſſe; but let us acknowledge them to be no other than the Divels baites, and his fiery darts, that ſo we may the better reſiſt them. A wiſe man will be ready alwayes to ſuſpect a knowne flatterer, and therefore wee had much more neede ſuſpect the Divell and our corrupt nature, which are knowne Traytors. Wee may be aſſured that they are no better becauſe there is in Our concupiſcence, a certain ſweetneſſe and delight. Our mind, a certaine pronneſſe to give way thereunto, Non poſſum adverſari meis. And therefore withſtand it betime.

Sixthly, accuſtome thy ſelfe to contrary meditations and thoughts; fill thy mind with ſpirituall animativerſions; for a full veſſell can hold no more. Anſw. 6. I will for the inſtruction of the ordinary Reader lay downe ſome few.

We ſhould meditate of ſome things in Generall, where wee muſt remember both our Naturall eſtate and condition wherein we are: namely, firſt wee are now ſold under ſinne, and the captives of Satan. Secondly, wee are altogether by nature barren of grace, and deſtitute of every good thing; we are like fruitfull fields unto evill, abounding with weeds, and therefore we are neere unto a curſe [d]. Thirdly, our underſtanding is prone to be ſeduced: That wee may be thorowly convinced of this truth, let us obſerve how many there are every where who erre and goe aſtray: either 1. through curioſity, as many doe. Or 2. through ſuperſtition, as more doe. Or 3. through profaneneſſe, as the moſt doe: And therefore we had need be ſober and watchfull. Fourthly, remember, how naturally our deſire and will are averſe from every thing that is good, and violently carried after every thing which is evill. Fifthly, conſider, although our preſent eſtate and condition be ſo miſerable, that we cannot but ſee it and know it, yet we are not able to redreſſe it.

d Heb. 6 8

Danger, and that both in Life, wherein all things are ſnares to intrap us, and ſtumbling ſtones to cauſe us to fall: our actions, words, ſociety, friends, and the evill examples of others, are all of them as ſo many baites of ſinne, and allurements unto iniquitie, yea impediments from good. The world gives and affords temptations, Satan urges and perſwades us to bite at thoſe ſugred baites, and our owne corrupt nature doth long after them, and luſt for them: Thus we have enemies within us and without us, never being ſafe: and therefore we had not need be ſecure, but watchfull and ſober.

Death, the time thereof being altogether unknowne unto us: we know not how ſuddenly we may be arreſted, and caſt into the priſon of the grave, and the dungeon of death: we know not how ſhort the time is which wee have to live unto the Lord; and therefore wee muſt bee carefull to redeeme the time.

After death, here remember, 1. How ſuddenly we may be plunged into perpetuall paine, as Iob ſaith the wicked doe, who ſpend their dayes in good things, and in a moment goe downe into the pit [e]. 2. How impoſſible it is for us there to repent or finde mercy; yea though with Eſau we ſeek it with ſighes and teares.

In particular, to wit,

First, meditate upon thy preſent eſtate and condition; examining carefully theſe three things, namely, Firſt, whether art thou in the ſtate of nature or of grace; whether art thou rooted in faith, and built upon the true Rocke Chriſt Jeſus, or as yet a member of old Adam? Secondly, whether haſt thou ſtrictly obliged thy ſelfe to the ſervice of God, and a courſe of piety, reſolving with thy ſelfe that henceforth thou wilt ſerve ſinne no more, becauſe thou wert borne, created, redeemed, inſtructed, and enlightned for the glory of God? Or whether doſt thou trifle away thy precious time, in and for thoſe things which will not benefit thee at all? Thirdly, art thou daily carefull to ſowe the ſeeds of piety in thy heart, that the fruites of Religion may ſhew themſelves in thy life and converſation? Or doſt thou ſowe wicked thoughts and impure deſires in thy ſoule, which will bring forth nothing but bryers and thiſtles the fruits of corruption? Or doſt thou ſtrive to weed all wicked, wanton, idle, and carnall deſires, luſts, and thoughts out of thy ſoule, that ſo the ſeed of grace and godlineſſe may thrive the better?

Secondly, examine thy daily life & therin theſe particulars:

- First, whether haſt thou the Spirit of God or not, to bee thy guide and conducter? 1. If thou haſt him not, tremble, feare, and labour for him. 2. If thou haſt him, then grieve him not, but be willingly obedient unto him.
- Secondly, whether doſt thou daily increaſe in grace, repentance and faith?
- Thirdly, which are the principall errours of thy life, and the chiefeſt enemies which warre within thee?
- Fourthly, how are thy corruptions and luſts wont to deceive thee, and overcome thee? that is, 1. How often doe they prevaile againſt thee? 2. By what wayes and meanes doe they overcome thee?
- Fifthly, how ſhalt thou overcome thy enemies? whoſe helpe, what meanes ſtandeſt thou in need of for the conquering of them?
- Sixthly, whether haſt thou beene accuſtomed to examine the errours of every day, or weeke, or month?
- Seventhly, whether doſt thou daily pray unto God for ſtrength againſt ſinne, and carefully reconcile thy ſoule unto him for thy daily offences?

Thirdly, whatſoever tentation doth aſſault thee, reſiſt it ſtill with the Sword of the Spirit. 1. Art thou tempted unto wantonneſſe, and fornication? then ſay, Oh but fornicatours and uncleane perſons ſhall never enter into the Kingdome of Heaven[i]. 2. Art thou tempted to contemne and ſleight the Word of God? then ſay, Oh but the fire of the Lords anger ſhall burne and conſume all thoſe who deſpiſe the Law of the Lord, or ſet at nought the Word of the Holy one of Iſrael[k]. 3. Art thou weary with abſtaining from ſinne, or is the perſeverance which is required of thee in the ſervice of the Lord tedious unto thee? reſiſt this, by remembring how ſhort mans life is, how much of thy time is paſt, how little is to come, and how great the reward is of thoſe who continue unto the end?

Thus much for the sixt answer, and remedie against the internall lust and concupiscence of the heart.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, and lastly, pray fervently and frequently unto God for pardon of all thy private sinnes, and sinfull thoughts already committed; and for strength against them for the time to come: Here by the way observe a difference betweene a carnall man, an Hypocrite, and a godly man.

First, the Carnall man prayes earnestly for temporall things, for his corne, cattell, ships, faire weather and the like. Secondly, the Hypocrite prayes that hee may bee kept and preserved from the infamie and disgrace of the world, and all grosse and enormious sinnes. Thirdly, the truely religious man sends forth strong cryes unto God to forgive him his secret sinnes [l], to create in him a cleane heart [m], yea to search and know his heart, to try and know his thoughts [n]. And this is an approved remedie against internall lust.

And if thy right hand offend thee cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not thy whole body should be cast into hell.*

Sect. 1. Obiec. §. 1. And if thy right eye offend thee.] The Papists to prove their Evangelicall counsels to perfection, gives us this distinction.

There are some things which are
- Contrary to love, charity, and purity; and concerning these, Precepts are to bee given, and not Counsels.
- Onely impediments unto love, puritie, and religion; and concerning these Counsels are to be given, and not Precepts.

But against this we hold out these two verses as a buckler to defend us withall; wherein wee see our Saviour doth give a direct precept against the impediments of sinne: If thy eye bee unto thee an occasion of falling, then pluck it out, &c.

Answ.

§. 2. Pluck it out, &c.] It is a rule given by Divines, That that cannot be the true literall sense of Scripture which is contrary to the analogie of faith, either in credendis, in those things which are to bee beleeved, or in faciendis, in those things which are to bee done; that is, if it be contrary to the Articles of our faith, or any of the Commandements, then that cannot be the literall sense, as for example, If thy right eye offend thee, plucke it out and cast it from thee; Here the words are not to bee taken literally (for this were contrary to the sixt commandement, Thou shalt not kill) but figuratively.

Sect. 2.

§. 3. If thy right hand offend thee cut it off: If thy right eye offend thee plucke it out &c.] Here observe that our Saviour speakes not of the eye and hand Electivè, as though this precept were not to bee extended to any other part of the body; but he names them vice omnium, as we say one or two for all; for not onely the hand and eye are unto us occasions of sinning, but also the tongue, and eare, and foote, and the rest [o]. Now these two are only named, because they are most profitable and most worthy of all the externall parts of the body.

Sect. 3.

[o] Mat. 18. 8. and Marke 9. 47.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of these words, If thy hand and eye offend thee, &c.

Answ. 1 First, some understand by hand and eye our friends, because we are all members of the same mysticall body, Rom. 12. 5. and 1 Cor. 12. 27. as if our Saviour would say, if thy nearest neighbours, or thy dearest friends should seduce thee unto evill, cast of their acquaintance, and leave their societie.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Augustine more particularly understands
- By eyes, friends who counsell and advise, that is, by
  - Right eyes, those who counsell and advise us in divine things.
  - Left eyes, those who counsell and advise us in humane things.
- By Hands, friends who ayd & assist viz. by
  - Right hand, those who helpe us in spirituall things.
  - Left hands, those who succour and assist us in temporall things.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, some understand the first motions of the affections and will (so Hierom. ſ.) that if these cause us to offend, we must bee carefull to subdue them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, some understand these of the use of the senses, that they must be bridled, curbed, and restrained (Calvin. ſ.) by setting a watch over our eares, hands, eyes, tongues, and the rest.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, some understand by these the externall occasions of sinne, which solicite us unto evill. (Muscul. ſ.)

Answ. 6. Sixthly, some understand all these; that we must flie from, leave, and avoid whatsoever may be an occasion of stumbling unto us though it be unto us never so deare. Thus Aug. Beza, Aret.

Quest. 2. Why doth our Saviour here command us onely to plucke out the right eye; and cut off the right hand, if they cause us to sinne? must we not doe thus also with the left upon the like occasion?

Answ. 1. First, our Saviour doth not speake this onely of the right, but also of the left, and that much more: if wee must forsake those things which are more deare, profitable, and better, then much more those things which are lesse deare, or commodious unto us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour names onely the Right hand and eye, and not the Left, for these causes.

First,

First, some say because the right is more prone unto evill: but this holds onely in the hand, not in the eye.

Secondly, some say, because the right hand and eye are more dearely beloved of us then the left. [p] p August. Beza. Muscul. f.

Thirdly, some say, because the right are more profitable, and more apt to use, then the left.

Fourthly, Christ names these two, to teach two things unto us, namely, I. That we must leave the most deareſt things for God, of which else where. II. That the most profitable things, may bee unto us impediments of religion. Observ.

How can those things which are profitable unto us hinder us from Religion? Quest. 3.

First sometimes as occasions unto evill, either by blinding the minde, or by alluring our affections: Premit afflictio dum timetur, prosperitas dum amatur. (Gregor.) Adversitie sometimes drives us to murmuring and despaire; Prosperitie, sometimes to pride and the love of the world. Answ. 1.

Secondly, sometimes as Tempters unto evill; and thus friends sometimes by their counsell tempt hereunto: Christ foretelleth that he must goe to Ierusalem and suffer there; but Peter perswadeth him rather to stay where he was, and not goe thither: [q] although hee was sent by his death to purchase our redemption. Answ. 2. q Mat. 16. 22.

Whence comes it that those things which are good for us in themselves, become unto us impediments, and lets unto religion? Quest. 4

This comes from the craft and subtiltie of the Divell, who like a crafty fisher, baites the hooke with that meate which the fish loves best: The Divell tempts us in all things, by all meanes; I. Sometimes he tempts us to abuse the good creatures of God unto excesse. II. Sometimes unto revenge. III. Sometimes hee bewitcheth us with the love of them. IV. Sometimes through feare of our lives, estates, or the like, hee labours to hinder us from the profession and practise of religion. Answ.

How may we avoide this? Quest. 5

First, in thy actions doe not propound thy owne Pleasure, or Profit, or Gaine; but let the glory and honour of God, be the maine scope in all things whatsoever thou dost. Answ. 1.

Secondly, love nothing too much, but enjoy the world as if thou possessedst it not. (1 Cor. 7. 30.) If the Lord so blesse and prosper thee, that thy riches encrease; yet set not thy heart upon them [r]. Take heede thou dost not love thy friends too much, lest thou be drawne to say, as they say, and doe, as they doe, and that in evill: Set not thy heart upon thy Children, lest thy affections oversway thy judgement: Neither set thy heart upon thy Wife, lest she turne it from God; as Salomons wife did. Answ. 2. [r] Psal. 62. 10.

VERS. 31. 32. It hath beene said, whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: But I say unto you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication; causeth her to commit adultery: And whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery. Vers. 31. 32.

§. 1. It hath beene said:] Sect. 1.

Our Saviour here changeth his former forme of speech; for hee neither saith: Audivisti is, yee have heard that it hath beene said: neither ab antiquis, that it hath beene said of old; but onely ἐρρέθη Dictum autem fuit, but it hath beene said; where Sed, But doth shew that these words doe belong unto those which went before; as if our Saviour would say, It hath beene said by you, Thou shalt not commit adultery, but thou maiest give a bill of divorcement to thy wife and send her away, and then lawfully marry another, and so under a pretext of marriage, thou maiest doe what thy heart lusts after. Thus said the Scribes and Pharisees, but this Christ taxeth, and denies; shewing that notwithstanding these, pretences their fact was no other then adultery. Quest. 1.

Why doth our Saviour condemne every pretence of impuritie to be adultery? Quest. 1.

First, in generall; because deceit doth not loose but binde perjurie: Pretextes makes all things worse; because men thus thinke that they can deceive and mocke God. Answ. 1.

Secondly, in particular, because God expects and requires exact puritie at our hands; we being the vessels of the holy Ghost, ordained and called unto holinesse: and therefore all impuritie is esteemed as adultery in his sight. Reade Esay 52. 11. and 1 Thes. 4. 4. and Ephes. 5. 3. &c. and 4. 29. Answ. 2.

Is hee an Adulterer before God, who under a pretence of marriage doth commit fornication, and afterwards marrieth her whom hee hath so defiled? Quest. 2.

He is; It was not Shechems marrying of Dina, that could make him guiltlesse before God. Gen. 34. as we may gather by that heavie judgement which fell presently after upon him and all his people for it. Answ.

Is it not good to satisfie the partie who hath beene deflowred by marrying of her? Quest. 3.

First, this is good, but that was evill; the end was good, but the beginning starke naught; it is good to marry the partie defiled, but it is evill first to use her as an harlot. Answ. 1.

Secondly, wee here may further distinguish the point thus. Answ. 2.

Some

228

Betweene their contracting and the consummation of their marriage; without doubt this is sinne in Gods sight.

Some commit fornication — Without any contract where consider — Firſt, the purpoſe, which is manifold: 1. Some pretend and intend marriage: Theſe are much to blame to begin thus prepoſterouſly, viz. at fornication; for thus they firſt celebrate their Eſpouſals with the Divell, and then afterwards with God, and therefore cannot expect that God ſhould bleſſe it at all, or give them joy in that eſtate. 2. Some pretend marriage, if the woman abuſed and enticed prove with child, but not otherwiſe: theſe are worſe than the former. 3. Some intend to abuſe a woman unto fornication, but not to marry her at all, though ſhe ſhould bee with child: Theſe are by much the worſt of all.

Secondly, the end; here obſerve, — Some refuſe to marry thoſe whom they have committed fornication withall, and theſe (as was ſaid) are the worſt of all. Some conſent and agree to marry thoſe whom they have defiled, but yet this doth not ſatisfie for the fornication committed; and therefore thou muſt yet acknowledge thy ſelfe to be impure.

Queſt. 4. Who are guilty of adultery before God by reaſon of theſe falſe pretences? or what pretexts of uncleanneſſe doe the ſonnes of Belial make unto themſelves, who ſhall notwithſtanding be condemned by God for adultery?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, thoſe who marry in unlawfull and prohibited degrees, as they are not linked by God, but againſt his Lawes, ſo they cannot expect any other verdict then the doome of Adulterers.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe who being in other Lands marry wives, having wives alive in their owne Nations; theſe are direct Adulterers by this Text.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, thoſe who pretend a certaine neceſſitie of thus ſinning; as for example, Firſt, ſome pretend a neceſſity of committing fornication or adultery for iſſues ſake: thus Lots daughters cauſe their father to commit inceſt that they might have children[r]; and therefore they who rather deſire to have baſtards than to be childeleſſe, are adulterers before God. Secondly, ſome pretend a neceſsity of uncleanneſſe for the preſerving of life. Here obſerve, women ſometimes pretend a neceſsity of committing fornication or adultery, for the ſaving of a three-fold life; namely, 1. Of themſelves, becauſe being aſſaulted, they were neceſsitated either to ſatisfie the luſt of ſome uncleane adulterer, or to be ſlaine by him: Many have rather ſlaine themſelves, then they would ſuffer themſelves to be thus diſtained, as did Pelagia, Sophronia, two Virgins, with their mother, whom Ambroſe commends for it[s]. And Hieronme (ſ. Ionam.) thinkes that they ſhould doe thus, but Auguſtine (de Civ. Dei. l. 1.) doth piouſly confute it, Seneſſ. ibid. True it is, they muſt not to avoid one ſin, runne into another, by killing themſelves; but yet they muſt rather ſuffer themſelves to bee murdered, than willingly proſtitute themſelves for the ſafety of their lives; for the life of the body is ill ſaved with the deſtruction of the ſoule.

II. Sometimes women pretend a neceſſity of adultery, for the ſaving of the life of ſome laſcivious perſon, becauſe he ſware to kill himſelfe, except they yeelded unto his luſt: this they muſt not doe, becauſe if they proſtitute themſelves, that is their ſinne; but if the other murder himſelfe, being enraged for their conſtant and unmoveable chaſtity, that is none of their ſinne: And therefore they muſt not redeeme the life of an adulterers body with the death of their owne ſoule.

III. Some pretend a neceſſity for the preſerving of their husbands life, becauſe hee was threatned to be murdered, except ſhee yeelded unto adultery: Auguſtine (upon this verſe) here ſtaggers in his judgement, not knowing how to reſolve this queſtion; and ſeemes to incline unto this; That if a man and his wife were laid in wait for and were betrayed, and the man threatned to be murdered, except his wife ſuffer her ſelfe to be defiled; ſhee may lawfully doe it, if her husband will permit and conſent thereunto, or command her to doe it, becauſe the man hath power over his wife; but the man hath not the whole and ſole power, and therefore neither husband nor wife hath power lawfully to doe that which God forbids: And a curſe hangs over the heads of all thoſe, who doe evill that good may come of it.

Queſt. 1. Whether was this Law enacted and ordained by Moſes, or not, for a man upon any diſlike to put away his wife, and to give her a bill of divorcement?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome abſolutely deny, that ever Moſes eſtabliſhed any ſuch thing as a Law unto the Jewes; but we reade that it was injoyned, If a man hate his wife becauſe hee hath found ſome uncleanneſſe in her, then let him write her a bill of divorcement and ſend her away (Deut. 24. 1.) And this our Saviour calls ἐντολὴ a precept (Mark. 10. 5.)

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome urge this as a poſitive Law commanded unto all, as not lawfull for a man to retaine a wife, whom hee hath found to commit adultery: But the Phariſees themſelves ſay, Moſes permiſit, Moſes ſuffered or permitted to write a bill of divorcement[t], not Moſes commanded, &c.

[t] Mar. 10. 4.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly,

Answ.3. Thirdly, it is the safest walking in a middle path, and therefore I distinguish betweene Divortium and Libellum. 1. There is divortium, a separation, or a putting away of the wife, this is no where commanded by Moses at all. 2. There is libellus, a bill of divorcement, and this is commanded: Thus the Pharisees say, Moses imperavit libellum, Moses commanded to give a writing of divorcement[u]. And Christ saith, Permisit (non imperavit) divortium, Moses suffered (not commanded) you to put away your wives. 3. And this Commandement was but politicall and civill, not morall, and therefore did not binde all.

[u] Mat.19. 7.

Quest.2. Wherein did the Jewes offend concerning this putting away of wives?

Answ. They erred herein, that which Moses suffered for the hardnesse of their hearts, they take Observ. for a morall precept: That which Moses permitted, they thinke ought to be done as a thing good in the court of conscience: Teaching us, that many things are tolerated by humane and civill Lawes, which are neither religious nor warrantable before God: Men respect the greater evill and therefore tolerate the lesse for the avoiding of the greater, according to that vulgar saying, Ex duobus malis minus malum est eligendum, of two evils we must chuse the least.

Quest.3. Is this lawfull? is it not forbidden to doe evill, that good may come of it? Rom.3.8.

Answ.1. First, that is a certaine rule, wee must not doe that which is evill, that some good may spring from thence: we must not lye to save our brothers life.

Answ.2. Secondly, we may distinguish between a command and a connivence: no evill is to be commanded to be done by man or by humane and civill Lawes, but a lesse evill may be winked at: Although Magistrates in generall be commanded to punish sinners and transgressors, yet it is lawfull for them sometimes to connive at some things, and to spare the punishing of some degrees of sinne.

Quest.4. Whether is usury lawfull or not, for wee see the Lawes permit it, and punish it not, except it be above eight in the hundred?

Answ. I will here only conferre usury with the Jewes putting away of their wives. First, this was suffered and tolerated for the hardnesse of their hearts (Matth. 19.8.) lest otherwise in their hatred unto their wives, they should kill them. So I. Because men are so hard-hearted, that they will rather see their brother suffer, yea perish, then lend him gratis to supply his want: And II. because a Land could not subsist, not trading flourish without borrowing and lending sometimes; therefore the Lawes of Nations do permit Usury.

Secondly, from the beginning it was not lawfull for a man to put away his wife[w]. And this is the case of Usury also; as appeares thus. 1. it was directly forbidden, Thou shalt not lay usury upon thy brother, neither shalt thou bite him as an usurer: Read Exod. 22. 25. Deut. 23. 19. Nehem. 5. 7, 8. 2. He is promised a place in the Lords Tabernacle, who putteth not out his money to usury[x]; as if the Kingly Prophet would say, usurers shall never come unto Gods holy Hill. 3. He is pronounced a just man who taketh not usury (Ezech. 18. 8, 9.) and an unjust, who giveth forth his money upon usury, vers.13. 4. The Lord severely threatens to punish usurers, Ezech. 22. 12. &c. All these shewe that usury was not from the beginning, neither was ever lawfull by Gods Law among brethren, as all Christians now are; wherefore it is a great shame, that the Jewes should refuse to take usury one of another, and yet Christians hereby eate out the bowels one of another.

[w] Mat.19. 8.

[x] Psal.15. 5.

Thirdly, Christ crosseth their ancient opinion concerning the putting away of their wives, telling them it is not lawfull to doe it, except it be for fornication: So also in this our Saviour saith; Lend, looking for nothing againe[y]: and verses 39.42. of this chapter.

[y] Luke 6. 35.

§. 3. Let him give her a bill of divorcement.] Sect.3.

What was the use of this Bill? Quest.

First, it was a remedy of a greater evill, as was shewed before. Answ.1.

Secondly, it was to terrifie them from separation, or putting of their wives away, because if once they had given them that Bill of divorcement, it was then never lawfull afterwards to take them againe. Answ.2.

§. 4. But I say unto you] Sect.4.

Whether doth Christ here oppose Moses or the Pharisees? Quest.

First, some say that Moses commanded these things, but not from God: It was Hominis consilium, non Dei imperium (Hier. ſ. Matth. 19.) the counsell of man, not the command of God, as that Father saith: but Moses was faithfull in all Gods house, and therefore I dare not subscribe to Hieromes opinion. Answ.1.

Secondly, Christ doth not deny that this came from Moses, but denies that it was a true rule of direction, being indeede but a bare permission, as was shewed before. Answ.2.

§. 5. Whosoever shall put away his wife.] Sect.5.

Bellarmine (de Matrim. lib.1. cap.14.) saith that it is lawfull for the parties married to bee dismissed each from other, for divers causes besides fornication, as for heresie, for avoiding of offence, and for the vow of continencie: Christ here saith plainly the contrary, Whosoever doth put away his wife, except it be for fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: And therefore whether Christ or the Cardinall deserve better to be beleeved, sub judice lis est, let the world judge.

§. 6. Except it be for fornication.] Sect.6.

Is it lawfull for a man to be divorced from his wife for adultery? Quest.1.

It is of this more amply by and by. Answ.

How many causes were there of this separation among the Jewes? Quest.2.

Three, namely first, there was Causa levis, a light cause, when the wife did not like nor please her husband; this was altogether unlawfull. Secondly, there was Causa necessaria, a necessary cause, and that in case of murder; when the hatred of the man grew so extreme that the woman Answ.

230 man ſtood in feare or perill of her life: then a divorce was permitted. Thirdly, there was cauſa legitima, a lawfull cauſe of divorce, and that was fornication and adultery; which was lawful unto the Jewes in the old Teſtament, and is allowable unto us in the new.

Queſt. 3. For what cauſes are married perſons now to be divorced?

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome things diſſolve mariage.
- Annihilando, by diſanulling of it: to wit,
  - First, error which is two-fold.
    - First, of the ſexe, if a man marry a man, or a woman a woman, being deceived by the habit, this marriage is void.
    - Secondly, of the perſon, if a man marry in the darke one for another, as Iacob did Leah for Rachel, the marriage is annihilated, if the error be perceived before carnall knowledge.
  - Secondly, affinity and kindred: Thus the marriage of King Henry the 8 with Queene Katharine, was juſtly diſanulled, becauſe it was not lawfull for him to take to wife, her who had beene married to his brother Philip, Mark. 6. 18.
  - Thirdly, a precontract, or former marriage with carnall knowledge, makes void the ſecond marriage.
- Diſrumpendo, by breaking of it, viz.
  - First Religion, If the unbeleever will depart, let him depart, ſaith Saint Paul, 1 Cor. 7. 15.
  - Secondly, fornication, as in this verſe and Mat. 19. 9. where for adultery and fornication, it is lawfull for a man to put away his wife: Cum illa carnem unam fornicando ſeparavit, non debet teneri, &c. ‡ Gualter here includes all greater things, as poyſon, offering to ſtab, and the like: but this is doubtfull, and the Scripture herein ſilent, and therefore Pet. Mart. (2. 10. §.) holds the contrary.

‡ Hier. ſ. Matth. 19. 9.

Queſt. 4. Whether is metaphoricall and ſpirituall fornication, namely, idolatry and covetouſneſſe here underſtood? yea is not internall fornication and adultery, the luſt of the heart, and the wanton lookes of the eyes, a juſt cauſe of divorce and ſeparation?

Anſw. Chriſt here ſpeakes onely of literall fornication, and of the breach and diſſolution of an actuall bond, wherefore the breach muſt be actuall, not intentionall.

Queſt. 5. Is it lawfull alwayes for a man to put away his wife for fornication?

Anſw. Thomas Aquinas (in 1 Cor. 7.) following herein Saint Auguſtine, addeth ſeven caſes, wherein it is not lawfull for a man to put away his wife for fornication. First, if he have proſtituted her before marriage. Secondly, if he be alſo a fornicator. Thirdly, if he have denyed his body unto her. Fourthly, if ſhe upon good ground beleeving her husband to be dead, hath married with another. Fifthly, if it hath beene with violence, that is, if violently againſt her will ſhee hath beene raviſhed. Sixthly, if another fraudulently hath deceived her under the colour of her husband. Seventhly, if after the adultery manifeſtly found out, ſhe hath been ſtill detained or carnally known by her husband.

Object. 1. The Papiſts object againſt this place, that although our Saviour ſaith here, a man muſt not put away his wife but for adultery; yet elſewhere hee ſaith, whoſoever ſhall forſake fathers, or mothers, or wife &c. where he allowes it, commendeth, and promiſeth reward unto thoſe who put away their wives for his ſake: And therefore divorce for Religion is warrantable, and a woman may leave her husband to come into a Nunnery, and a man may leave his wife to come into holy Orders, and ought to forſake them, being entred into Orders ‖.

‖ Bellarm. lib. 1. de Cleric. cap. 19.

Anſw. 1. First, Romulus allowed a man to put away his wife for any of theſe foure cauſes; to wit, either I. If ſhee were given to drunkenneſſe: Or II. If ſhe got falſe keyes made for opening of her husbands Doores, or Cheſts, or Cup-boordes: Or III. If ſhee went about to Poiſon him. Or IV. If ſhe plaid the harlot.

Anſw. 1. First, Chriſt by forſaking, meaneth not that ſeparation which is made by giving a bill of divorcement, but that which is cauſed by impriſonment, baniſhment, or death.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, as the Apoſtles forſooke not the company of their wives, after they were called and choſen of Chriſt; ſo neither the Miniſters of the Goſpel ought to renounce, abandon, and forſweare the ſociety and fellowſhip of their wives: but rather to live with them in all temperance and ſobriety, for the good example of others.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, this objection is cleane contrary to Scripture; as appeares thus, First, our Saviour ſaith, Whoſoever putteth away his wife, except it be for fornication, cauſeth her to commit adultery (in this verſe) By which rule a Miniſter ought not for any other cauſe, to put away, and diſmiſſe his wife, but for fornication. And therefore it is not lawfull, becauſe of his calling, or upon any other colour to ſend her away. Secondly, St. Paul ſaith, that married couples ſhould not defraud one another but for a time, and that with conſent ‖. Therefore if the wife will not conſent, her husband cannot goe from her; nay, though there be conſent, yet they muſt be ſeparated but for a time, leſt the Divell ſhould tempt them.

‖ 1 Cor. 7. 5.

Queſt. 6. Whether may the guiltleſſe partie, being lawfully divorced, marry againe during the life of the adulterous, or not?

Anſw. For no other cauſe in the world, but onely for fornications may there be either a finall ſeparation, or cleane diſſolution of marriage by way of divorce: But for that cauſe our Saviour hath granted liberty, both to diſſolve matrimonie, and a Mat. 19.

and to marry againe. Because this is questioned (or rather plainely denyed) by the Papists, I will first confirme it, and then answer what they can object against it. Our proposition is this, In the case of fornication, it is not unlawfull to marry againe, that is, those who are lawfully divorced for fornication and adultery, may marry againe with others, but never one with another. The truth hereof appeares thus; First, the bond is broken, they are not now one flesh [d]; and therefore may lawfully contract marriage with others. Secondly, because under the Law, divorce was never without liberty of a new choise. Deut. 24. 1, 2. all that were divorced, had freedome to marry againe; and therefore in a lawfull divorce this is not debarred under the Gospel. Thirdly, because otherwise the guiltlesse party should be punished, and that grievously; It is better to marry than to burne, saith the Apostle, thereby shewing that marriage is left us by God, as a remedy against lust; now if the guiltlesse party could not containe, neither might marry another, neither take her unto him who hath beene divorced; Deut. 24. 4. then he were necessitated to sinne, which the Lord never doth unto any by any law. Fourthly, we might confirme this from the Fathers (Ambros. Tertull.) 2. From the Councels, (Concil. Moguntin. Triburiens.) 3. From the consent of many Bishops in Origens time 4. From the opinion of the Papists (Zach. Papa Cajetan Ambros. Compsa.) 5. Of our men (Pet. Mart. 2. 10. § 37, 38, 58.) But this I omit, comming to the last and best proof. Fifthly, that it is lawfull for the guiltlesse partie to marry (for I now meddle not with the guilty) appeares plainly from our Saviours words in this verse, and Mat. 19. 7, 8, 9. Whosoever putteth away his wife (except it be for fornication) committeth adultery: Therefore for fornication, it is lawfull for a man to dismisse his wife. Matth. 19. 9. Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for whoredome, and marry another, committeth adultery: Therefore for adultery it is lawfull for the man both to put away and renounce his wife, and the wife likewise her husband (there being the like reason for both) and for them to marry againe.

The Papists hold, that married persons may dismisse one another for adultery, but neither party may marry againe, for any cause, during life: And because they are sore pressed with this place, they object many things, both against the place, and point by us propounded.

Object. 2. First, Durand answereth, that when Christ uttered these words, the Law of the Jewes was, that the adulterous woman should bee put to death, and so the husband might have liberty to marry againe. Bellarmine overthroweth this answer, by a three-fold reason, to wit;

Answ. First, because Christ here giveth a rule not only to the Jewes, but to all Christians; not being ignorant, how that in every Nation the law of putting the adulteresse to death, should not be in force.

Secondly, Christ might as well have excepted other crimes that were punished by death, as murder and the like, that in those cases they might marry againe, because by the Law their wives were to die, as well as in the case of fornication. 231

Thirdly, Christ speaketh of dismission; but properly the wife is not said to bee dismissed, when she is put to death: And therefore Christ is not thus here to be understood.

Secondly, Bellarmine would have the exception (except it be for fornication) restrained to the first clause, in this sense: Hee that putteth away his wife, which is not lawfull to doe but for fornication; so that the crime of fornication maketh it lawfull to dismisse, but not after dismission to marry againe. Obiect. 3

First, the Jesuite is here contrary unto himselfe, for he elsewhere alloweth a separation of matrimony in other cases, as of heresie, infidelity, and vow of continencie: but here he saith, that separation and dismission is to be made in the case of fornication onely. Answ. 1.

Secondly, Christs answer had not satisfied, if he had spoken onely of divorce, and not of liberty to marry againe: for the Pharisees moved the question, concerning the manner of divorce permitted by Moses Law, after the which it was lawfull for them to marry againe; And therefore it was expected that our Savior should answer to both these points; both in what cases they might dismisse their wives, and marry againe. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, the Apostle saith, If a woman depart from her husband, let her abide unmarried, or bee reconciled (1 Cor. 7. 10, 11.) Therefore it is not lawfull after divorce, to marry so long as both parties live. Obiect. 4

The Apostle speakes not there of a lawfull departure or separation, to wit, by reason of fornication and adultery (for then he should diametrally have opposed his Master Christ saying here, for adultery there may be a divorce, and departure; Paul there, I command, ne discedat, let not the wife depart from her husband) but of a separation for Religions sake, or for afflictions, or for the cares of those times. Answ.

§. 7. Causeth her to commit adultery.] Sect. 7.

How, or how many wayes is that Divorce which is not for fornication, an occasion of adultery? Quest.

First, if she which is divorced, being deprived of the company of her husband, is not able to containe her selfe, but falls unto whoredome, her divorce is an occasion of adultery unto her; for the separation not being lawfull, the bond of matrimony is not broken, wherefore her whoredome is adultery. Answ. 1.

Secondly, if she which is thus unlawfully (that is, not for fornication) separated, marry another husband, she commits adultery, because she is yet the former mans wife; and thus also her divorce is an occasion of adultery. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, hee who marries a woman that is thus unlawfully separated from her husband, commits adultery, because he coupleth himselfe with another mans wife: and thus this divorce is unto him an occasion of adultery. Answ. 3.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, he who puts away his wife, but not for fornication and joynes himselfe in marriage unto another, doth commit adultery, because he is yet the former womans husband, and causeth her whom he secondly marries to commit adulterie, because shee lyeth with another womans husband. And thus we see how an unlawful separation is the cause of much mischiefe, and roote of many evils; and therefore is carefully to be avoided[f].

Obiect.

§. 8. Whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery.]

Bellarmine (de Matrim. cap. 16. Arg. 1.) urgeth these words for the proofe of their former assertion, that for adultery one may dismisse another, but neither party can marry againe, for any cause, during life: Christ here saith, Whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery: These words (saith the Jesuite) must be understood generally, without the exception of fornication; for if it be lawfull to marry an adultresse, who is divorced for adultery; and the innocent party who is dismissed, but not for adultery; then should the case of the adultresse be better than of the other.

Answ. 1. First, the adultresse is not straite way to be admitted to second marriage, but it is fit that some restraint should bee made in the discretion of the Magistrate, lest it might bee made an usuall practise for incontinent persons to change their wives: Therefore in this behalfe the adultresse Answ. 2. case is not so good.

Secondly, the innocent persons case is much better, because she is free from so great a sinne as Answ. 3. the adultresse is guiltie of.

Thirdly, the innocent partie may be reconciled to her first husband: 1 Corinthians, 7. 11. Which is better then to have a new husband. Answ. 4.

Fourthly, If she cannot be reconciled, and the froward partie fall into the sinne of incontinencie, as he is most like in this case (refusing the company of an honest wife) to be given over, then hath the innocent partie the same remedie, which the adultresse hath, but upon much better conditions then she. Answ. 5.

Fifthly, the exception in the first clause of the sentence, (except it be for fornication) must be supplied also in the latter. Willet Synops. fol. 780. Arg. 2.

Vers. 33.

VERS. 33. Againe, yee have heard that it hath beene said by them of old time: Thou shalt not forsweare thy selfe, but shalt performe unto the Lord thine oathes.

Sect. 1.

§. 1. Thou shalt not forsweare thy selfe.]

Wee see here that Perjurie is so infamous and notorious, that it is condemned by the wicked Scribes and Pharisees, as a grievous sin.

Quest. 1. What is Perjurie?

Answ. Pejerare non est falsum jurare, sed quod ex animi tui sententia juraris id non facere perjurium est: Cicero offic. 3. Perjurie is not to sweare falsly, but not to performe what one hath sworne: And this definition evidently appeares to bee true by this verse. Thou shalt not forsweare thy selfe, but shalt performe unto the Lord thine oathes: But of this more by and by.

Quest. 2. How many sorts of Perjurie are there? Answ. As there are two kindes of oathes; so there is a double perjurie; namely, First, Assertorium, whose subject is an indicative proposition, which shewes something; this perjurie is called, Ψευδοπία. Secondly, Obligatorium, whose subject is a Promissorie proposition, which promiseth to doe some thing; and this perjurie is called, ἐπιορκία. The first of these is more palpable, and therefore the Jewes rather taught the second; as appeares plainly by this verse. But of these more particularly.

Perjurie is two-folde, { First, Apertum, manifest and palpable. Secondly, Palliatum, cloaked and palliated.

First, there is Perjurium apertum, manifest, and palpable Perjurie.

Quest. 3. Why doe men thus forsweare themselves? Answ. 1. First, some doe it for lucres sake, using it in buying and selling; but this gaine will bring leannesse unto the soule: and bee like Gehezi's prey, which was rewarded with a cleaving Lepro-sie. (2 King. 5. 27.)

Answ. 2. Secondly, some doe it that they may avoide the punishment of the law, when they are examined concerning some crime before either Ecclesiasticall or Civill Judges.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some forsweare themselves, that so they may be free from paying their debts, which they truely owe.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, some that they may not restore things that have beene betrusted unto them to keepe.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, some that they may by their perjurie gratifie their friends.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, some forsweare themselves out of hatred unto others: and although this be a very divelish practise, yet it is too ordinary, in Warrants for the Peace, and diverse the like cases: wherein men care not what they sweare, so they may but have those punished whom they hate.

Quest. 4. Why must we be thus carefull to avoide this perjurie?

Answ. 1. First, because otherwise we shall destroy our soules unprofitably; for hee that useth to forsweare himselfe, will not bee beleeved, nor credited.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because if we should be overtaken herewith, we should be a disgrace & a by-word unto the Papists, Turkes, and Heathens. Amurath perceiving how Vladislaus the King of Hungary had shamefully broken Truce with him; opened the Booke wherein the League was written, (and which Vladislaus had sworne to observe) unto Christ, praying him to take notice of the disloyaltie of his servant, and to revenge his Perjurie, which hee did indeede. The Papists bragge (but their equivocations and mentall reservations make mee call the truth of it in question) that in the dayes and places of Popery, men were and are more true of their their words, and faithfull in their oathes, then we Protestants are. And therefore if wee desire to adorne that Profession, which wee have undertaken, wee must carefully avoide Periurie.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because this is an indignitie which man could not suffer, then much lesse God: No good or honest man could endure that his name should be thus abused unto periurie, how detestable then is it unto the Lord, for men to sweare falsly by his name.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because by periurie men doe strive with their Maker, hoping to deceive him by their fraud and craft: They call him to witnesse that, which they know to be false, thus hoping to beguile the Lord.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because hee that sweares falsly by Gods name, doth call God to avenge himselfe upon him, and doth thus hasten judgement, which comes upon such wicked men fast enough: And therefore let us not by calling God to witnesse our untruthes, provoke him unto anger; for, wee are not stronger then hee is. [g] 1 Cor. 10. 22.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because the Lord will never acquite such an one in Judgement. The Lord will not holde him guiltlesse, who taketh his name in vaine, much lesse him who abuseth it by swearing thereby falsly: yea he hath threatned, that hee will bee a swift witnesse against the false sweara- [h] Mal. 3. 5 rer. [h] And therefore if we desire estimation and credit amongst men, if we desire to honour our Profession, if wee desire to offer no indignitie to our God, by which hee may bee provoked justly to bee angry with us, to condemne us, and severely to punish us; then let us carefully avoide all Periurie and false swearing.

Secondly, there is periurium palliatum, a palliated and subtile periurie, when men take an oath either in such a forme, as they can interpret their oath which way they will, or els have their private reservations, and craftie equivocations; all which are usuall with the Papists; Many examples might be given of this which I passe by, reciting onely one or two: Albertus Duke of Franconia having slaine Conrade the Earle of Lotharingia, brother to Lewis the fourth then Emperour; and finding the Emperours wrath incensed against him for the same, betooke himselfe to a strong castle at Bamberge; from whence the Emperor neither by force nor policie could remove him for seven yeares space, untill Atto the Bishop of Mentz by treacherie delivered him into his hands. This Atto, under shew of friendship, repaired to the castle, and gave his faith unto the Earle, that if hee would come downe and parle with the Emperour, he should safely returne into his hold: The Earle mistrusting no fraud, went out of the Castle gates with the Bishop towards the Emperour; but Atto (as it were suddenly remembring himselfe, when indeede it was his devised plot) desireth to returne backe and dine ere hee went, because it was somewhat late: so they did, and having dined returne: The Earle was no sooner come unto the Emperour, but hee caused him to bee presently put to death, notwithstanding he urged the Bishops oath and promise for his returne; for unto that allegation it was answered, that his oath was quit by returning back to dine, as he had promised him. And thus by this craftie perjurie the Earle was betrayed, and the treacherous Bishop shortly after killed with a thunderbolt from heaven [i]. [i] Melanct. Chr. lib. 4.

Cleomenes King of Lacedemonia making warre upon the Argives, surprised them by this subtilty: he tooke truce with them for seven dayes, and the third night whilst they lay secure, and unwarie in their tents by reason of the truce, hee oppressed them with a great slaughter; saying that the truce was made for dayes onely and not for nights: The reason of this perjurie was, because hee thought thus to take the city Argos, but missed of his purpose, for the Argive women being enraged for the death and slaughter of their husbands, tooke armes like Amasons, Telesilla being their Captainesse, and compassing their citie walles, repelled Cleomenes, halfe amazed with the strangenesse of the sight. After this he was banished into Egypt, and there miserably and desperately slew himselfe [k]. [k] Campo. fulgos. l. 7. c. 3.

I passe by the equivocation of Arrius, who subscribing with on oath to the truth of the Articles which were presented unto him, meant the Articles which he had secretly hid and conveyed into his bosome, which were contrary unto the other: for which by and by he voided his entralles, easing himselfe, and so miserably died.

These examples should make us feare all false and deceitfull oathes, and learne to sweare in truth, in judgement, and in righteousnesse [l]. [l] Jer. 4. 2.

Quest. 8. Why is all periurie, and forswearing, and false swearing, in generall such an odious sinne both unto God and man, that men regard not, and God punisheth, such as use it?

Answ. 1. First, because it overthrowes all policie, and trading, and commerce; no man knowes how to beleeve, or deale with that man who makes no conscience of an oath; and therefore the Egyptians did punish the purjured person with death, because he had broken his faith plighted both with God and man [m]. An oath is for the end of controversies [n], and therefore he who sweares falsely overthrowes the greatest testimonie amongst men. [m] Diodo. sic. l. 6. [n] Heb. 6. 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because this prophanes the ordinance of God: An oath is a part of Gods worship, yea ordained by God for the deciding and ending of brawles, and composing of jarres; Exod. 22. 11. and Numb. 5. 19, 21. And therefore he who makes no account of an oath, slights a principall and weighty ordinance of God, and kindles the anger of God against him for it: Lisander the Lacedemonian was wont to say, that when the Lyons skin (meaning fortitude, power and valour,) would not serve, it was needfull then to sowe unto it the Foxes case, meaning subtiltie and fraud: Yea, so little reckoning made hee of forswearing himselfe, that hee would often say: That children were to bee

234 couſened with triſles, and men with oathes. But we muſt take heede of this Maxime, for whoſoever uſeth it, will finde at laſt, that none is worſe couſened by it then himſelfe, as this Fox Liſander did; who warring againſt the Thebans, was taken in a trap, and ſlaine at the foot of their walls [o].

o Plutar. b.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, becauſe perjurie abuſeth the name of God, and diſhonoureth the Lord of hoaſts, by calling him to bee a witneſſe of a falſehoode, and of the perjurie: And therefore the Lord will never let it goe unpuniſhed.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Thou ſhalt performe unto the Lord thine oathes, that is, thy vowes.]

Wee ſee how the Scribes and Phariſees doe here apply periurie to vowes; whence two queſtions may ariſe.

Queſt. 1. What is a lawfull Vow?

Answ. It is a promiſe made unto God, by one who is free, and upon mature deliberation; whereby hee doth oblige himſelfe to doe ſomething which is good, and fitting to bee done, and in his power to doe, and that for ſome good and religious end.

Queſt. 2. How many ſorts and kindes of vowes are there?

Answ. Vowes are either of:

- Duety, as the promiſes and vowes made in Baptiſme, and the Lords Supper; and theſe are not properly Vowes; neither agree with the definition expreſſed in the former queſtion.
- Libertie, and Freedome, and theſe are properly called Vowes, and are diſtinguiſhed either: Answ.
  - According to the Thing Vowed; And ſo they conſiſt in a particular obſervance of our generall duties: to wit, either 1. In doing that which is good: Or, 2. In giving good things to others; Or, 3. In abſtaining from ſinne, and the occaſions thereof. But of theſe elſe-where.
  - According to the Manner of the vow, and ſo they are twofold. Answ. 2.
    - First abſolute, for grace given, or favour ſhewed; thus David vowed to have a religious care of the Arke, for Gods care of him. [p]
    - Secondly, conditionall, for the obtaining of grace; thus Iacob vowed to give the tenth of his Poſſeſſions unto the Lord, if hee will bee pleaſed but to bleſſe and proſper him in his journey. [q]

Verſ. 34. 35. VERSE. 34. 35. But I ſay unto you, ſweare not at all, neither by heaven, for it is Gods throne: nor by the earth, for it is his footſtoole: neither by Ieruſalem, for it is the Cittie of the great King.

Sect. 1. §. 1. But I ſay unto you.]

Queſt. 1. Was not that well ſayed, which was ſpoken by the Jewes, in the former verſe? And if ſo then, why doth Chriſt oppoſe it, or finde fault with it?

Answ. Our Saviour blames them, I. Becauſe they taught not the whole truth concerning ſweareing. II. Becauſe they taxed onely the more groſſe kindes of ſwearing and externall ſinnes, but did not ſee the internall and more ſecrete.

Firſt, Chriſt here reproves and findes fault with the Scribes and Phariſees, becauſe they taught not the whole truth concerning the breach of the third Commandement.

Queſt. 2. Why is it not ſufficient to teach the truth in ſome things, except we doe it in all?

Answ. 1. Firſt, becauſe the truth is but one, and therefore the whole truth is to bee knowne: As in obedience the whole law is to be performed, or elſe wee are guiltie of the breach of all the Commandements. [r] So the Catholike faith is to bee kept whole and undefiled, or wee cannot bee ſaved. (Athanaſius in his Creede) And therefore the whole truth and doctrine of religion ſhould bee taught. Hence Moſes is commended, becauſe hee ſpake unto the children of Iſrael, according to all that the Lord had given him in Commandement to ſay unto them. [s] And ſo Paul appeales unto the people, that they know, how that hee kept backe nothing from them: But taught unto them all the will of the Lord. [t] r Iam. 2. 10.

t Act. 20. 26.

Answ. 2. Secondly, truth ſhould not be mingled with falſhood or lying; for they are like the Iron and the Clay that will not cleave together. (Daniel 2 43.) And therefore ſaith Saint Paul, I ſpeake the truth in the Lord I lye not. (Rom. 9. 1.) Becauſe all Miniſters ſhould bee carefull to avoide all lying, and teach nothing but the truth, and the whole truth unto their people.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, becauſe it is the ſubtletie and the craft of the Divell to hide and conceale lyes under ſome truthes: Thus Sathan by keeping backe part of the truth, would have perſwaded Chriſt, that hee might lawfully have caſt himſelfe from the top of the Pinacle [u]. Thus the Phariſees ſay Chriſt blaſphemes, becauſe hee makes himſelfe equall with God: [v] and undertakes to forgive ſinnes which none but God can doe; [w] hiding untruthes under veritie, Chriſt being God, as well as man, and therefore might pardon ſinnes, and without robbing of God, make himſelfe equall with him. And therefore if we deſire not to erre, we muſt labour to know the whole truth of God, in things neceſſarie unto ſalvation.

Is

Queſt. 3. Is every truth profitable to be taught?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, oftentimes ſome truthes are leſſe profitably taught in things De facto.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, in hard and difficult things the teaching of the truth is ſometimes leſſe profitable, and therefore thoſe things which are more hardly underſtood, ſhould bee more rarely taught. Yea, hence Saint Paul would not have the Romans to receive him, who was weake in faith, unto doubtfull diſputations. Romans 14. 1.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, there are many nice and curious queſtions, which being not neceſſarie unto ſalvation, are leſſe profitable to be taught.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, but thoſe fundamentall truthes which are neceſſarie to bee knowne, and beleeved, and practiſed, are profitable for us, and thoſe muſt bee taught one after another; that ſo wee may adde line unto line, and precept unto precept, getting now a little and then a little, untill we come to the perfect meaſure of perfect men in Jeſus Chriſt.

Secondly, Chriſt reproves and blames the Scribes and Phariſees, becauſe they taxe the more groſſe ſinnes, but ſee not the inferiour.

Queſt. 4. Whence comes, it that the carnall man can condemne the greater and more criminall ſinnes of the world, and land, as the corrupt Scribes and Phariſees doe here?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe the light of nature teacheth this; for thoſe things which the Law of God forbids as ſinne, the law of nature condemnes as vice.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the very tradition of Religion, and practiſe of Morall honeſtie amongſt men, teacheth them to condemne groſſe and enormious ſinnes.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the frequent and daily preaching of the Word in theſe places, doth diſſwade us from ſenſible ſinnes and teacheth us to condemn outward evill actions.

Queſt. 5. Why doth not the naturall and carnall man condemne internall ſinnes as well as outward, for the Word teacheth and diſcovereth thoſe as well as the other?

Anſw. Becauſe ſpirituall things are ſpiritually diſcerned, and the naturall man cannot underſtand them (1 Cor. 2. 14, 15.) Yee have that unction of the Holy Ghoſt, therefore you know all things, ſaith the Apoſtle (1 Iohn 2. 20, 27.) as if he would ſay, untill we be endued with grace from above, wee cannot know or be truely convinced of our true and ſpirituall duty unto God.

Queſt. 6. What outward duties may a meere carnall man performe?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, hee may be an honeſt man: many Philoſophers were very honeſt men, and yet but naturall men.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, hee may heare the Word of God, as Herod did, and many doe daily.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, hee may heare the Word of God with joy, as did Herod, and the ſtony ground, who brought forth a blade, that is expreſſed ſome ſhewes of delight in the hearing thereof, either externall or internall.

Fourthly, he may confeſſe and acknowledge his ſinnes, as did Caine and Saul. 235

Fifthly, he may humble himſelfe, as did Ahab, who although a King, yet ſits in ſack-cloth and aſhes, when God threatens him. Anſw. 4. Anſw. 5.

Sixthly, he may make ſome ſatisfaction and reſtitution, as did Iudas who brought backe the peeces of ſilver againe. Anſw. 6.

Seventhly, he may reforme himſelfe and life in ſome things, as did Ioas (for a time) and Iehu and Herod, who did many things. Anſw. 7.

Eightly, hee may have ſome generall gifts of the Spirit, as of prophecie with Balaam, or of miracles with divers, Mat. 7. 22. Anſw. 8.

Ninthly, he may joyne himſelfe to the ſocietie of the profeſſors of the Goſpel; thus did Simon Magus, Acts 8. 13. and Nicholas, Acts 6. 5. and Rev. 2. 6. and many who at length left them 1 John 2. 19. Anſw. 9.

If the naturall mans eſtate be thus deplorable, how may he be truely humbled in and under it? for for the moſt part they are as feareleſſe and hopefull as the beſt. Queſt. 7.

Anſw. True it is, that the naturall, civill, morall honeſt man is ſo well conceited of himſelfe for the moſt part, that hee will not ſuffer himſelfe to be checked or reproved; and therefore that hee may learne to be humble and lowly in his owne eyes, and labour to come out of his miſerable blinde and corrupt condition, let him carefully marke and obſerve theſe five things.

Firſt, the multitude of his ſinnes; let him here ſumme up 1. His uſuall and daily offences which he commits, and yet thinkes not of at all. 2. His idle and vaine words, yea his obſcene and blaſphemous ſpeeches. 3. The eruptions of his affections and paſſions, which are ſometimes tranſported with anger, pride, revenge, covetouſneſſe, and wantonneſſe. 4. His unknowne ſinnes, which are therefore unknowne, becauſe he doth not obſerve and marke his actions: and therefore unknowne ſinnes, becauſe as yet hee thinkes them lawfull, not knowing them to bee prohibited by God.

Secondly, let him conſider his great neglect of good workes and duties: as 1. how many duties he hath omitted and left undone, both towards God, his Countrey, the Church, the poore, his parents, kindred, children, and ſervants. 2. How weakly and unworthily he performes thoſe duties which he doth; how farre ſhort they come of that divine perfection which God requires in every good work; yea how the outward good workes which hee performes are ſtained and blotted with pride, vaine boaſting, oſtentation, and ſelfe-love.

Thirdly, let him diligently obſerve the ſtupiditie of his conſcience, how bold, and obſtinate, and ſenſeleſſe it is; as for example. 1. He never doubts of his condition. 2. He never feares the wrath and judgements of God. 3. He never ſeekes to be delivered from the wrath to come. 4. Hee never trembles with the ſight of his ſinnes (his heart not being circumciſed) he is never touched with a ſenſe of his iniquities. The Children of God are ever and anon in heavineſſe, 236 vineſſe and teares for the ſinnes they commit againſt ſo gracious a God, and ſo beloved a Father, thinking in this kinde every mole-hill a mountaine; but the naturall man although hee be never ſure, yet he is alwaies ſecure, ſinging peace unto his owne ſoule, and ſaying, no evill ſhall come unto him.

Fourthly, let him truely know and acknowledge the end of his obedience; and what his aime and ſcope is in all the good duties which he performes; namely, alwaies either his gaine, or eſtimation of the world, or vaine glory; ever obeying for himſelfe, never for God; ever ſeeking himſelfe, never ſeeking the glory of his heavenly Father.

Fifthly and laſtly, let him conſider his weakeneſſe (or rather want) of faith: let him examine what ſpirit he hath; well may he have the Spirit of ſlumber, and a deceivable preſumption; but that internall ſweetneſſe and ſpirituall peace, which might corroborate him againſt terrors, dangers, and death; or comfort him in afflictions, or make him victorious over the greateſt tryals, Rom. 8. 38. he never had the leaſt taſt or reliſh of.

Queſt. 8. Muſt we only judge our ſelves by our works?

Anſw. We muſt not onely judge our ſelves by our externall actions, but alſo by our internall; by our thoughts, conſciences, and leaſt ſinnes; as for example:

Firſt, if thou be not a thiefe, then ſee whether thou art not unmercifull, or coveteous, or deſirous of ſomething which is thy neighbours. Secondly, if thou bee no murtherer, then ſee if thou haſt not beene angry with thy brother without a cauſe, if thou haſt not hated him, if thou haſt not endeavoured, at leaſt deſired to bee revenged, if thou haſt not contended with him for ſome petty trifles, if thou haſt not called him Racha or foole in thy anger; yea examine whether thou loveſt him or not. Thirdly, if thou bee no adulterer, then ſee if thou haſt not either with thy hands, or eyes, or heart, or affection, luſted after ſome, or ſhewed ſome wanton tokens. Fourthly, if thou be no perjured perſon, or one who hath horribly prophanned the name of God by blaſphemies; then ſee if thou haſt not ſometimes without an oath, ſpoken raſhly or irreverently of God, or of the Goſpel, or of holy things; yea, haſt thou not had unreverend thoughts of God? Thus examine thy ſelfe both by thy outward and inward man.

Queſt. 9. If this ſtrictneſſe be now required of us under the Goſpel, then who can be ſaved?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, by the workes of the law no man living can be juſtified or ſaved.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, every one is then made the child of God, when the ſpirit of God ſpeakes unto him by faith.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, this evidence and teſtimonie of the Spirit is by and by confirmed unto us, by a holy converſation of life, which is performed in the ſincerity of the heart, all our actions proceeding from ſincere affections.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, and from hence we are aſſured by the ſame bleſſed Spirit, that our infirmities ſhall not be imputed unto us, but covered by that precious garment of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, Rom. 8. 2. and 4. 5, 6. from Pſal. 32. And therefore our failings ſhall not make us fall ſhort of eternall life, if we doe but in ſincerity of heart ſtrive and endeavour to ſerve the Lord in whatſoever he requires, for he graciouſly doth accept of the will for the deede.

§. 2. Sweare not at all: Sect. 2.

Why is this generall negation added? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, ſomething is here to bee underſtood in the anſwer of the Phariſees: They ſay, Thou ſhalt not forſweare thy ſelfe, but ſhalt performe unto the Lord thine oathes; as if they would ſay, thou ſhalt pay unto God what thou ſweareſt (By God) to give unto him; but if thou ſweareſt by any thing elſe (namely, either by heaven, or earth, or Ieruſalem, or thy head, or eye, &c.) then thou needeſt not to performe thine oath except thou wilt: This was the Phariſees gloſſe upon that ſaying which is mentioned before verſe 33. and ſo our Saviour gives us a touch of it, Mat. 23. 16. Hereunto our Saviour in this verſe, and the two following anſwers, that by thoſe things, to wit, heaven, earth, &c. it is neither lawfull to forſweare nor to ſweare: this he layes downe, and collects that. Anſw.

Wherein were the Scribes and Phariſees faultie concerning this third Commandement? Queſt. 2

Firſt in generall, Gualter (upon theſe words) obſerves that both they might be, and many amongſt us are guiltie here of abuſing the name of God, and violating this precept many waies without an oath: as for example; Anſw. 1.

Firſt, when we ſpeake irreverently of divine things, to wit, either I. of God himſelfe; or II. of his law; or III. of his threatnings; or IV. by wreſting and perverting the examples of Gods judgements; or V. by jeſting of Scripture inter ſocios, in our mirth.

Secondly, when wee abuſe it unto inchantments, and ſpels; as is done with Saint Iohns Goſpel, and Pſal. 50. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, when we abuſe it unto Execration and curſing; as God quite it, or the vengeance of God light upon him for it, or the like.

Fourthly, when it is abuſed for gaine; thus I. Beggars daily and houtely profane the name of God: II. thoſe alſo who pretend religion, that they may deceive the better. III. And they who teach chaffe for wheate, the inventions of man for the word of God.

Fifthly, Magiſtrates are here faultie, when they doe not uſe the power which is given them by God unto the glory of God and his truth: All theſe are tranſgreſſors of this precept, and yet without an oath: But theſe being more remote from our Saviours ſcope, in this verſe, I leave them.

Secondly, more particularly there is here a double fault, which our Saviour meetes withall in the Phariſees, to wit, firſt, that they condemned no raſh oathes by the name of God but only Perjurie; if a man did not ſweare falſely, then they thought him not faulty, although hee ſwore by God. Secondly, as they condemned not not thoſe oathes, which were dierctly ſworne by God, except they forſweare themſelves: ſo neither did they blame thoſe oathes which were indirectly ſworne by God, to wit, by his creatures: of both which particularly.

First, the Jewes thought that they were not bound to performe their oathes except the oath were by God, or by the gold of the Temple, or by the gift upon the altar, Mat. 23. 16, 17, 18. Obſerv. This our Saviour here oppoſeth, Teaching us that it is not enough to ſweare truely, except alſo we ſweare lawfully.

Queſt. 3. Who are faulty here?

Anſw. 1. First, they that ſweare falſe oathes, wicked oathes, ſophiſticall and equivocating oathes, yea they who ſweare to doe impoſſible things.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, they who ſweare by Idols, and falſe Gods: of this by and by, when wee ſpeake of ſwearing by the creatures:

Onely here a queſtion may be moved, Whether it be lawfull to accept of ſuch an oath at an heathens hand or not? Queſt. 4.

Saint Auguſtine (ad Publicolam) grants and allowes it: and Peter Martyr, fol. 239. §. 11. ſeemes to aſſent unto it. Yea except this be admitted, there can bee no bargaines or covenants ratified or confirmed with them: for an oath is the ſtrongeſt tie and bound that men have, and the heathens have no knowledge of the true God; and therefore what can they ſweare by, but by thoſe things which they hold as Gods: Thus Vladiſlaus tooke an oath of Amurath though it were by Mahomet: And thus Iacob takes an oath of Laban. Gen. 31. Anſw. 3.

Thirdly, they are faulty who ſweare by God indirectly: and theſe oathes are twofold viz.

- Secondly, an indirect naming of the perſon, by whom the oath is taken;
  - This is done ſometimes Re, in the thing atteſted. Thus the Phariſees thought they might ſweare by Heaven (becauſe that was not by God) but Chriſt ſaith it is Gods throne, and therefore it is an indirect ſwearing by him.
  - This is done ſometimes Voce, by a Metatheſis, putting one name or word for another; thus prophane perſons will ſweare by Cockes bones, or Dogges death, and yet thinke they ſweare not; but this is an indirect ſwearing by God alſo.
- First, by wreſting or winding the thing affirmed, or by ſpeaking deceitfully thereof; this is called equivocation, of which before.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, all raſh ſwearers are here guiltie, and this is chiefely heare meant. The Hebrewes have two words principally for ſwearing, namely Laſchaker, and Leſchane; the firſt forbidden. Levit 9. 12. the ſecond, Exod. 20. 7. and are thus diſtinguiſhed; Laſchaker ſignifies a falſe oath; Leſchane ſignifies a raſh oath, both which are forbidden here, the firſt verſe 33. the ſecond verſe 34.

We are commanded to ſweare in truth, judgement, and righteouſneſſe [a]; now wee ſweare in truth and righteouſneſſe, when wee ſweare that which is true, conſiderately, and upon mature deliberation, an oath being required of us by a lawfull Magiſtrate in a waighty cauſe [b]; If Vzzah were ſtrucken with death becauſe raſhly hee put his hand to the Arke, what may they expect that thus raſhly upon every ſleight and light occaſion dare prophane Gods holy name. Hence Auguſtine ſaith, Iuramentum non in bonis, ſed neceſſarijs: that is, the practiſe of ſwearing is not to be praiſed, but, neceſſitie urging, it is to be approved.

[b] Simler. ſ. Exod. 20.

Queſt. 5. How muſt we ſweare, not onely Verè ſed etiam legitimè, truely, but alſo lawfully?

Anſw. Moderate and ſquare thy oathes by theſe rules, namely;

Rule 1. First, refraine this uſe of ſwearing as much as thou canſt, accuſtome not thy ſelfe unto it.

Rule 2. Secondly, when thou ſweareſt, let the cauſe mooving thee thereunto bee waighty, yea concerning a thing which is neceſſary to be known.

Rule 3. Thirdly, take not an oath, except hee whom thou ſpeakeſt unto will not beleeve thee without an oath: neither by any other way canſt thou poſſibly perſwade him; & joyne the former rule with this, that is, let the thing be neceſſary to be knowne, for wee muſt not ſweare for every thing, becauſe our neighbour without an oath will not beleeve us.

Fourthly, when ſuch a cauſe moveth thee to ſweare, let thy oath bee taken after a holy forme and manner, and not after a ſuperſtitious: wee muſt not ſweare by the life of Pharaoh, but by the holy one of Iſrael. Rule 4.

Fifthly, let thy oath be undertaken conſiderately, not ſlightly or lightly, as the cuſtome is with the vulgar ſort. Rule 5.

Sixthly, and with a reverend meditation of the preſence of God, whom thou takeſt to witneſſe, as alſo with the aſſent of thy conſcience. Rule 6.

§. 3. Non omninò jurabis: ſweare not at all.] Sect. 3.

Chriſt meaning is not here to forbid all ſwearing ſimply, but all ſwearing after the Iewiſh manner and cuſtome, that is in common talke and communication (of which by and by) as appeares in the following words, let your communication be yea and nay, verſe 37. for this is a rule to be obſerved in the interpretation of Scripture, That things generally ſpoken muſt particularly bee underſtood according to the circumſtances of the preſent matter in hand: As when Paul ſaith 1 Cor. 9. 22. hee became all things to all men; if it ſhould be taken generally, we might ſay, that with blaſphemers he became a blaſphemer, &c. And therefore that ſpeech muſt bee reſtrained to the uſe of things indifferent, in all which he yeelded to the weakeneſſe of all, that he might winne ſome: And ſo here, ſweare not at all, muſt be reſtrained to the Jewiſh cuſtome, which was to ſweare by the name of God in 238 their common talke, and by other creatures; both which Christ doth here utterly condemne and forbid.

Object. The Anabaptists alleadge this place to prove that all swearing, is forbidden and therefore it is not lawfull to take an oath before a Magistrate: because Christ saith sweare not at all: thus thought also some heretiks (namely the Pelagians & Waldenses) in the primitive Church, yea also some of the Ancient Fathers, Hierom, Theophylact, and Chrysostome thought, that the Lord in the old Testament did onely permit swearing, as he did some other things which were evill, that he approved not of, and that Christ now did quite take away the same.

Answ. 1. First, that our Saviour doth not take away all swearing, in here saying, non omnino jurabis, Thou shalt not sweare at all, appeares thus.

First, it is allowed in the Old Testament and commanded as a part of Gods worship: and a meanes to cease strife, and contentions among brethren, Reade Exod. 22. 11. and Deut. 6. 13 and 10. 20.

Secondly, it was allowed of in the New Testament: The Prophet Esay prophecying of the times of the Gospel, saith, He that sweareth in the earth shall sweare by the God of truth [c]. And the Apostle first teacheth us that swearing is lawfull by the Lords example, who having no greater to sweare by, sware by himselfe [d]: then secondly he telleth that men sweare by the greater, and an oath among them is an end of all strife, verse 16.

[c] Esay 65. 16.
[d] Heb. 6. 13.

Thirdly, that all swearing is not forbidden or unlawfull, appeares by the examples of the Saints both in the Old and New Testament; Abraham sweares to Abimelech, Gen. 21. 24. and so Isaac also, Gen. 26. 31. And the Prophet Esay saith, five cities in the land of Egypt shall speake the language of Canaan (that is, shall embrace the true religion) and shall sweare by the Lord of hostes [e].

[e] Esay 19. 18.

Fourthly, that Christ doth not quite take away all swearing, appeares by these reasons.

I. Because he saith himselfe, he came not to destroy the law; now if he had condemned and forbidden all oathes, hee had dissolved the law and the Commandement of God which saith, Thou shalt sweare by my name [f]; And therefore Christ here saying, Thou shalt not sweare at all, doth not destroy the law but fulfill it, because hee taught them the way and meanes how to fulfill it, namely, to take heede of all perjurie and rash oathes, as we shall see amply by and by.

[f] Deut. 6. 13. and 10. 20.

II. This will appeare by the consideration of the nature of an oath; because an oath is nothing else but an invocating of God, whereby we desire, that he who is the onely καρδιογνώστης searcher and knower of the heart, would give testimony of the truth, and punish him who sweares, if willingly or wittingly, he affirmeth any thing which is false: Now none without blasphemie can say that Christ forbids and condemnes invocation of God.

III. The truth hereof appeares by the end and use of an oath; both in regard of God and man. First, an oath ascribes unto God, 1. the laude and praise of infinite wisedome, because he onely knowes the most secret corners and passages of the heart, and understandeth all truth; and therefore we implore his presence, to testifie the truth of that which is delivered. 2. an oath doth ascribe unto God the praise of infinite goodnesse and justice, because hee is the onely defender of truth, and avenger of falsehood: and therefore we desire in swearing, that if wee utter any falsehood, God would judge us and make us examples unto others.

Secondly, in regard of man, swearing is the very bond of all humane societie and civill government, which cannot subsist without truth: therefore the Apostle saith, that among men swearing is the end of all strife; as if hee would say, there is no greater, better, nor surer way to be beleeved then by taking a lawfull oath: because he who makes no conscience of an oath, makes conscience of nothing: And therefore to condemne and forbid all swearing were to detract from Gods glory, and to destroy and dissolve the bond of humane societie [g]. g Pareus.

IV. That Christ doth not quite take away all oathes appeares, because there was nothing commanded in the law of Moses, which was sin in it selfe; and therefore Christ would not forbid that which was good.

V. Because swearing is commended, as a speciall part of Gods worship, and an excellent signe of an upright man; yea, hath a promise of blessednesse: whence I argue thus.

That which God the holy Ghost commends in Scripture as a part of Gods worship, and a signe of an upright and holy man; and which God the Father promiseth to reward with eternall happinesse: that God the Sonne will never quite take away, condemne, or prohibite:

But swearing truely and lawfully by God, is commended by God the Holy Ghost as a part of Gods worship, and a signe of an upright and holy man; and hath a promise from God the Father of eternall glory. Therefore God the Sonne will never quite take it away.

The first proposition I take as granted, because I hope none will deny it: The second may be thus confirmed; Every one that sweareth by God shall glory; but the mouth of them that speake lies shall bee stopped; here is both an Antithesis betweene the wicked and those who sweare by God; as also a promise made unto such [h]. Thou shalt sweare (saith Ieremiah) the Lord liveth, &c. and thou shalt turne from thy abominations, and then thou shalt not remove, Ierem. 4 1, 2. But most plainely the Prophet David, Psal. 15. propounds a double quere.

[h] Psal. 63. 11.

First, Oh Lord, who shall dwell in thy Tabernacle? who shall abide in thy holy hill? that is, who shall be made partakers of eternall happinesse? Quest. 1.

Answer, He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousnesse, and speaketh the truth from his heart. Answ.

Secondly, who walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousnesse, and speaketh the truth? Quest. 2.

Answer, Hee that sweareth and changeth not, Answ.

though it bee to his owne hurt.

VI. It further appeares that Christ condemns not all swearing, because hee saith here, Thou shalt not sweare by Heaven, or by Earth, or by Ierusalem, or by thy Head; but he doth not say, Thou shalt not sweare by God, and we allow of no other oathes. And thus much for the first generall answer to the second objection, that our Saviour doth not prohibit all swearing, in saying, Thou shalt not sweare at all.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the meaning of our Saviours words is, Thou shalt not sweare at all ordinarily in thy common talke; And thus Saint Iames is to be understood, when he saith, Sweare not neither by heaven, nor by earth, nor by any other oath[1].

[1] James 5. 12.

Quest. 3. Why is all swearing forbidden in ordinary communication and discourse?

Answ. 1. First, because it comes from Satan, vers. 37. Whatsoever (in our common talke) is more than yea or nay, comes of evill, that is, from that evill one, the devill.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because swearing ariseth from no interiall concupiscence, and therefore is more inexcusable: It proceedeth not from any desire of honour, or pleasure, or gaine, or ease and idlenesse; for there is none of these to be acquired by common swearing, it onely proceedes from a perverse nature: And therefore as he is the best Christian who loves, serves, and desires God for himselfe, and not for any reward; so he is the worst Christian who blasphemes, disobeyes, displeases, and dishonours God for himselfe, and not for any thing whereby hee may have either pleasure, or profit, or honour, or ease; for the swearer is both more wicked, and more foolish, then either the drunkard, thiefe, or adulterer, because there is pleasure and profit in these, but in that, nothing but a corrupt and perverse disposition.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, this pollutes and profanes the Name of God, the mercy of God, the justice of God, yea all the Attributes of the Lord, to attest his presence and testimony, upon every trifle, brabble, and sleight occasion.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, this profanes the worship of God, a religious oath is a part of Gods worship, as was said before; therefore this customary and usuall swearing, profanes this worship: So prayer is a part of Gods worship, but hee who at Dice shall pray God to send him a good cast, profanes that worship.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because by this usuall swearing wee defile and pollute our tongues, which are given us for the glory of God: David saith, Hee will praise God with the best member he hath, that is, his tongue, because it was given us by God, that thereby we might laud, praise, magnifie, and honour his holy Name; now by swearing we dishonour both God and our tongues.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because God will never hold him guiltlesse, that thus prophanes his Name, Exod. 20. 7. but will cut off the swearer from the face of the earth, Zach. 5. 3. and Hosea 4. 2.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because of all other sinnes, it is committed without shame; the Thiefe blusheth if he be taken stealing; the deceitfull person, if hee be taken lying, or using false waights and false measures; the Drunkard is ashamed of his drunkennesse after he is himselfe; the Usurer is partly ashamed of his trade, as appeares by his privacie therein, and excuses thereof, and protestations that if he were certainly convinced that it were sinne, he would leave it; the Adulterer is ashamed to be taken in the act, or to be known to have committed folly with a Harlot; but the ordinary swearer never seeketh to hide his sin, never goeth about to excuse his sinne, never blusheth for his sinne.

Answ. 8 Eighthly, because of all other sinnes it is against the face, Name, and honour of God.

Answ. 9. Ninthly, it is a thing condemned by all Religions, the Turkes, Papists, Anabaptists, and who not, doe utterly condemne, dislike, disallow, and prohibit it.

Ans. 10. Tenthly, because it is a thing very hard to be left: Nemo novit, nisi qui expertus, quam difficile extinguere jurandi consuetudinem (August. ſ.) None can imagine how hard a thing it is to leave the habit and custome of swearing, but onely hee who hath beene a common swearer, and hath laboured to leave it.

Ans. 11. Eleventhly, because hee who accustometh himselfe to swearing, cannot be free from perjury: He who speakes much, cannot but speake something too much; hee who useth many words, must needes use some unseasonable words; so hee who accustometh himselfe to sweare often, cannot but sometimes sweare falsely: And therefore we had need be carefull this vulgar horrid impiety of common to avoid swearing.

Object. 3. Some object againe, men will not beleeve me except I sweare: and therefore what should I doe?

Answ. 1. Chrysostome (sup.) gives three answers hereunto. First, rather let them not beleeve thee, then offend thy God: It is better that others should call the truth of that in question which thou affirmest, then thou be questioned by God in his wrath, for affirming it unto them, with an unlawfull oath.

Answ. 2. Secondly, men will beleeve thee the worse for swearing: oftentimes a man is not beleeved when he sweares the truth, because hee sweares it, or because swearing is customary unto him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, rather loose (saith the Father) the thing in question, then sweare for it: if thou canst not have thy own without swearing, then lose it. This must be understood, 1. of light and triviall things, which are of no great moment, neither will hurt us though wee lose them. 2. Of rash oathes, not of oathes solemnely and seriously taken before a lawfull Magistrate.

Quest. 4. Whether is it lawfull to enforce one to swear, and take an oath or not?

Answ. For a Magistrate to impose an oath, cannot be altogether forbidden or disliked, with these limitations: 1. If the thing be waighty. 2. If otherwise it cannot be knowne.

§. 4. Neither by Heaven, nor by Earth, nor by by

240 by Ierusalem, nor by thy head, that is, by no creature at all.]

Quest. 1. Why is it not lawfull to sweare by any creature at all?

Answ. 1. First, because they are none of ours; But of this afterwards.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it was never lawfull, nor warrantable: sometimes it was, and is allowed to sweare by the Name of God, upon some weighty occasion, but never by any creature.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because hee who sweares by any creature, sinnes in a double regard; namely, I. Because he sweares, which he should not at all, in his usuall discourse. II. Because he doth idolize a creature, and deifie the thing which hee sweares by. For the understanding of the second particular, observe that hee that sweares, performes three things. First, hee calls God to witnesse the truth of that which hee affirmes. Secondly, he doth oblige himselfe herein to honour God, for an oath is a part of Gods worship, as we may see, Psal. 63. 10. Esa. 45. 23. and 48. 1. and Ierem. 4. 2. Thirdly, he desires God to be revenged of him, if he speake not the truth, or if he performe not his oath: And thus hee who sweares by any creature, doth I. call it to witnesse the thing affirmed. II. Doth oblige himselfe to worship it as a God. And III. Doth entreat it to punish him, if he falsifie his oath; and so doth idolize and deifie a creature, setting it up as a God.

Quest. 2. Is it not lawfull to sweare by the Creatures indirectly? Have not many deare and precious Saints done this? Did not Elisha say unto Elijah, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soule liveth, I will not leave thee, 2 King. 2. 4. and repeates the same words againe, vers. 6. So the good Shunamite saith to Elisha, as the Lord liveth, and as thy soule liveth, I will not leave thee, 2 King. 4. 30. And so Paul, I protest by your rejoycing that I dye daily, 1 Cor. 5. 31. So good Hannah saith to old Eli, as thy soule liveth, my Lord, I am the woman, that stood here before thee, &c. 1 Sam. 1. 26. And thus Abner saith to Saul, concerning David, as thy soule liveth, oh King, I cannot tell, 1 Sam. 17. 55. Now all these are indirect swearing by the creatures, and therefore may not we by their examples obliquely sweare by them also?

Answ. 1. First, in generall, if any of the Fathers or Saints have sworne amisse, wee must not therefore imitate them therein, for we have Lawes to be regulated by, and not the examples of men, though holy.

Answ. 2. Secondly, these phrases, as thy soule lives, or, as my soule lives, or, as I live, is no more than if we should say; in truth, or the thing which wee affirme is as true, as our soules live; and so is no oath, except we sweare by it, as Ioseph did, By the life of Pharaoh.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Peter Martyr answers, that the name of a creature may be added two manner of wayes, to wit, 1. activè, actively, as here when a man sweares by the heaven, or earth, &c. and this is never lawfull, for so a man makes the creature his Judge. 2. Passivè, passively, which may be lawfull: For the understanding hereof observe,

That some oathes are { First, Simple, namely a direct and plaine attestation or calling upon God, or some creature, for witnesse of what is said, as by Heaven, or Pharaohs life. / Secondly, compounded, & that either with a { Blessing, as Pharaoh said, so let the Lord be with you, as I will let you goe, Exod. 10. 10. / Curse, as David said, God doe so and more also, if I destroy him not[1].

[1] 1 Sa. 25. 21.

Now in this sense it is lawfull to adde the name of a creature, that is, with this addition, saxit Deus: The Lord grant that thy soule may live: and thus Ioseph had not sinned, if hee had said no more but this, The Lord grant that Pharaoh may live.

Thus we see how carefully wee should avoid all swearing by the creatures, because all attestation of them is prohibited, A folio ad capillum, a maximo ad minimum, August. sup.

Quest. 3. Whether is it worse to sweare by God or by a creature in our common talke?

Answ. It is a very hard question for me to resolve: And the difficulty lies here: First, because in thesi it is a greater sinne to sweare by the creature, because it is peccatum, in thesi, simply a sin, and never lawfull to sweare thereby.

Secondly, but yet in hypothesi, there are two things to be looked into and observed, besides the sinne committed by swearing.

To wit, { First, the prophanation of the Name of God, and so that is the greater sin, which is sworn by the Name of God. } this is { Blasphemy to prophane Gods name. / Secondly, the Idolatry which is committed: and so it is the greater sin to sweare by a creature; for } this is { Idolatry to sweare by a creature.

Quest. 4. By what creatures doe men usually sweare?

Answ. 1. First, amongst the Gentiles there were divers customes. Homer saith, Kings sware by their Scepters, and others tell us, that the Turkes sweare by their Swords; the Scythians by the wind, and sometimes by the Kings Throne: Zeno by the caper bush; Socrates sometimes by a Dogge, sometimes by an Oake, sometimes by a Goat.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Jewes did usually sweare by Heaven, by the Elements, and by Jerusalem. Hierom.

Thirdly, Christians have extremely exceeded here also, some swearing by the Kings head, others by Otboes beard, others by the Saints, others by the Heaven, by the light, by the day, others by the earth, bread, sword, or whatsoever is in their hands or eyes, others by the head, soule, life, hand; And therefore to conclude this section, remember these three things.

First,

First, from whence comes this wicked swearing by the creatures? It comes neither from the Spirit of God, nor from a holy zeale, nor from a pure conscience, but from evill, that is, 1. either from the Divell; Or 2. From an unbridled desire of sinning: Or 3. From a wicked custome.

Secondly, whom dost thou resemble in thus doing? not beleevers, but infidels; not righteous, but wicked men.

Thirdly, what dost thou when thou sweareſt by a creature? thou makeſt a God of that which thou sweareſt by: And therefore let all those be ashamed of using these oathes, who would bee ashamed to make a God with their hands, and to fall downe and worship it, Psal. 115.4,5,6,7.

Sect. 5. §. 5. For it is Gods Throne.]

Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour adde this and the following reasons, against these oathes used by the Jewes?

Answ. 1. First, some say because these were no Gods; as if Christ would say, you must sweare onely by God, but these are no Gods, therefore you must not sweare by them: And hence (perhaps) came that vulgar errour among the Jewes, that the oathes which were sworne by these were not obligatory, because they were no Gods.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say, because they are the creatures of God, and therefore are not to bee profaned, August. s.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some say our Saviour confirmes this with strong reasons that we must not sweare by the creatures, because swearing directly by them, we sweare indirectly by God, Calvin.

Quest. 2. What is the meaning of this reason why wee must not sweare by heaven, namely, because it is the seate and Tribunall of God?

Answ. 1. First, some expound this of the Saints, as if our Saviour would say, Thou shalt not sweare by the Saints, because God is in the middest of them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some expound these words Allegorically: Heaven is the soule of the righteous, earth of the wicked, that is Gods Throne, this is his foot-stoole, August. s.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, it is understood of the presence of the Majesty of God, which shewes it selfe there in most excellent beauty and glory. Where (with Chrysostome) we may observe, that Christ doth not praise the earth, because it is fruitfull, or the Elements, for the purity of their natur; or the Heaven for his excellency; but hee commends the { Earth, because it is subject to God. / Heaven, for the presence of God; because it is the place where the glory of God is revealed: he dwels in the Heaven, Psal. 2.4. and 113.4,5. our God is in the Heavens, Psal. 115.3. Reade Psal. 123. and Matth. 6.9. and 1 Tim. 6.16. and Psal. 15.1. and 2 Cor. 5.6.

Obser.

Quest. 3. Doth not God dwell in the earth? Is not hee every where?

Answ. Hee is not included in the heaven (because earth is his foot-stoole) but he speakes according to our capacity, that wee may understand the full and perfect fruition of God to bee in Heaven.

Obiect. But God is said to dwell amongst us, to abide in his Temple, and to remaine in Sion: And therfore his Seate and Throne is not in Heaven?

Answ. The habitation and dwelling of God is manifold; namely, First, in his Temple, I have loved the habitation of thy house, and the place where thine honour dwelleth [l]. Secondly, amongst his people, In Salem also is his Tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Sion: that is, in the assemblies of his children [m]. Thirdly, in the hearts of the poore and humble: I am the Lord whom the Heavens cannot containe, with whom then shall I dwell? even with him that is of an humble and contrite heart [n]. Fourthly, in Heaven, and this is Gods proper Mansion: But of this more in Mat. 6.9.

Sect. 6. §. 6. Neither by the earth, for it is his foot-stoole.]

Quest. 1. Why are these words added, Earth is his foot-stoole?

Answ. 1 First, to teach us, that God governs all things in Heaven and Earth.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to teach us, that God is so immense and infinite, that he fills Heaven and Earth; The Heaven (saith Salomon) and the heaven of heavens cannot containe him, 1 King. 8.27. Reade Acts 7.48,49. and 17.24. Esa. 66.1. The person of the Lord is infinite, and Ubiquitie is proper unto him. Hee is 1. As water in the Sea. 2. As the eye of man over the earth. 3. As the ayre in the world. 4. As the knowledge of man, which extends it selfe unto all things. 5. Or as the soul in the body, which is in the whole body, and in every part thereof.

Quest. 2. What benefit may wee reape from this Infiniteneſſe and Ubiquity of God?

Answ. It should teach us to have no base, or low, or carnall thoughts of God, but observe what hee is, that it may breed and beget in us a greater reverence of his sacred Majesty: And that 1. in our prayers. 2. In the hearing of his Word. 3. In the use of his Name, as the Jewes called it τετραγράμματον. And therefore let us frequently meditate,

First, of the glory, beauty, and excellencie of his Majesty.

Secondly, how great respect, and reverence we owe unto him.

Thirdly, his anger and jealousie if wee provoke him.

Fourthly, how infinite the reward is both of mercy and justice, which he hath in his power: How abundantly able hee is to reward all those who serve him, and to punish all those who offend him.

Fifthly, remember in how great need we stand of his mercy, and how miserable we are without it.

Sect. 7. §. 7. Neither by Ierusalem, for that is the city of the great King.]

Quest. 1. Why doth not our Saviour say, Sweare not by Ierusalem, because that is my title, or my Fathers citie, but the city of the great King.

First,

242

First, the Iewes did not acknowledge Christ, and therefore hee urgeth that which they acknowledge.

Answ. 1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because Christ had rejected the Citie, Iohn 4. and the people. Rom. 11.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, he saith this, that he might give the glory to God his Father, and not take it to himselfe.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because the Iewes respected Herod, and Pilate and the Romans more then Christ; and therefore he shewes that all their power, authoritie and dignitie, is nothing in comparison of this prerogative to bee the citie of the great King: because all other things are uncertaine, onely this is solide.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, to teach us, that all Christians should and ought to labour to bee the citie of the great King; and a kingly Priesthood, 1 Pet. 2 9.

Quest. 2. Why should Christians thus labour to bee a holy citie unto God?

Answ. 1. First, because we are of God, 1 Iohn 5.19. and therefore we must serve and obey our King.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because those which are without, and strangers from God are of the synagogue of Sathan, Revel. 2. 9. and therefore are not to be imitated.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, hereafter we shall be separate from others in glory, and therefore here wee must in grace. Wherefore let us alwaies remember this citie (that is, heaven) and comforme our selves thereunto: making that the scope of our life, and care, and of all our endeavours: yea hence let us labour 1. for spirituall knowledge, that in heaven we may know as we are knowne. 1 Cor. 13 12. 2. For purity, because no uncleane thing shall come into heaven, Revel. 21. the last verse. and 22. 25. 3. For good affections, because evill lusts warre against the soule, and would debarre us from heaven. 4. That wee may be made spirituall, because flesh and blood shall not inherite the Kingdome of God, 1 Cor. 15. 50. 5. Let us labour to be zealous for Gods glory, because we are created unto his service, and wee shall receive the inheritance of sonnes, if by our service we glorifie him.

Vers. 36. VERS. 36. Neither shalt thou sweare by thy head, because thou canst not make one haire white or blacke.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Neither shalt thou sweare by thy head.]

Quest. 1. Why may wee not sweare by our owne head?

Answ. Because God hath given it unto us, and therfore we must not idolize it by swearing thereby.

Quest. 2. Why doth Christ forbid us to sweare by our head?

Answ. Because it is a very childish thing to sweare by creatures, as bread, light, hand, head, and the like: as appeares by these reasons. First, because (as our Lord else-where expoundeth himselfe) He that sweareth by the Temple, sweareth by him that dwelleth therein: So hee that sweareth by creatures, sweareth by God who created them, and yet by no meanes hee will sweare by the sacred name of the Lord; as if a child abhorring any bitter thing or poyson, should notwithstanding take the same under a little sugar.

Secondly, because he calleth upon dumbe things that cannot heare, hee bringeth them to patronize his cause, who can neither hurt nor helpe: like infants that prate unto babies made of clouts: or like Baals Priests, unto whom he was not able to give answer, though they called upon him from morning, till noone tide.

§. 2. Because thou canst not make one haire white or blacke.] Sect. 2.

Quest. Why doth our Saviour name here onely the haire of the head?

Answ. To teach us that the least things must be directed unto the service of God; or that we must not take any liberty at all for swearing: Christ could have observed greater things in the head, then this, namely, I. That it is the seate of the minde, judgement, and memory. II. That it is the receptacle of the five senses, the other parts having onely the sense of Touching. III. That it is the place of Speech, whereby we are distinguished from bruit beasts. IV. That the office of the head, is to nourish the whole body; it being the conveiance both of meate and drink unto the stomacke. But Christ passeth by all these, onely naming the haire, the excrements of the head, that he might shew unto us that no freedome or liberty is to be given to swearing at all.

§. 3. White or blacke.] Sect. 3.

Quest. What shall we thinke of those who by powdring of their haire, and painting of their faces can make themselves white, though naturally blacke?

Ans. 1. First, in generall, Pet. Mart. 342. saith fucus which signifies painting, signifies also a Droane, because none but idle droanes, (who doe not belong unto the Beehive of Gods Church, neither employ themselves in any lawfull or commendable course of life) use it. Cyprian saith it was invented, and devised by the devill: And Hierome (de veland. virg.) saith, Non sunt membra quæ Deus fecit sed fathan inficit. The painted face is a member not of Gods making, but of the Devills marring: He who desires to see the opinion of Tertullian, (Cyprian, Ambrose, Chrysostom, Hierom, and Augustine herein, and what they thought of powdring and crisping of the haire, and painting of the face; let him reade Peter Martyr 2. 11 §. 75. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly, I expresse what we thinke of this practise in these particulars. I. Thou teachest thy face to lie, and to speak and to shew what it is not: And therefore if lying, fraud, and dissimulation be evill, no better is painting. II. Thou corrects Gods handy work, as though thou couldest make thy selfe more perfect then God hath made thee; this is pride in thee, and a tempting of God, to perswade thy selfe; that thou canst make thy selfe better then God hath made thee. III. It is the usuall practise of harlots, and therefore those who would not be thought to bee such should not use this scandalous and offensive practise. IV. Women must not not be more carefull to pleaſe men than God, and therefore they avoid this painting. V. The end certainely, is either firſt pride, or ſecondly a temptation unto luſt: And therefore the thing cannot be good.

Verſ.37. VERS. 37. But let your communication be yea, yea; nay, nay, for whatſoever is more than theſe, commeth of evill.

Sect.1. §. 1. But let your communication be yea, &c.] The ſcope of our bleſſed Lord in theſe words, is to forbid all common ſwearing, or all ſwearing in our common diſcourſe; and therefore I will adde ſomething to what hath beene ſaid before, verſ. 34.

Queſt.1. Why doth our Saviour forbid ſwearing in our ordinary talke, as an ungodly and wicked thing?

Anſw.1. Firſt, becauſe the Divell is the author hereof, as will appeare in the laſt ſection of this verſe: yea, as ſwearing comes from him, ſo it bringeth to him, as was probably ſhewed in the example of a Gentleman, riding over a bridge in Cornewall, who was a notorious common ſwearer, and upon the ſtumbling of his horſe, ſwore at him, and preſently fell with his horſe into the River, and was drowned, ſaying as hee fell, Horſe and man, and all to the Devill.

Anſw.2. Secondly, becauſe it is an argument of a prophane perſon: All things fall out alike to all (ſaith the wiſe man) to the cleane and the uncleane, to him that ſweareth, and that feareth an oath: In which words he maketh ſwearing an evident proofe of a prophane perſon, Eccleſ 9.2.

Anſw.3. Thirdly, becauſe God ſometimes remarkably judgeth this common ſwearing, as we reade hee did in a ſerving man in Lincolnſhire, who uſed to ſweare commonly by Gods Blood; for when he lay upon his death bed, continuing ſtill in that ſinne, hee finally heard the Bell toule, and therewith ſware, Gods Blood this Bell touleth for me, and preſently the blood guſhing out on all parts of his body, he dyed.

Queſt.2. What may we thinke of the practiſe of thoſe who ſweare by the Maſſe, and by the Rood?

Anſw. This is a wicked thing in a very high degree; becauſe they have beene made Idols, and conſequently Gods greateſt enemies; if a ſubject ſhould give that royall honour which is due only unto the King, unto a profeſſed and proclaimed Traytor, he deſerved to dye, and were unworthy to live, that ſhould thus eſteeme his Soveraignes greateſt enemy: ſo they deſerve that God ſhould never hold them guiltleſſe, that thus in Gods ſteade ſet up theſe ſuperſtitiouſly uſed idols, and then ſweare by them, as if they were Gods.

This makes the Lord breake into ſuch impatience againſt the Iſraelites: How ſhould I ſpare thee, thy children have forſaken me, and ſworn by them who are no Gods[o]. And againe, They that ſweare by the ſin of Samaria, ſaying, Thy God, O Dan, liveth, ſhall fall and not riſe againe[p].

[o] Jer.5.7.

[p] Amos 8. 14.

Sect.2. §. 2. But yea, yea, and nay, nay.]

What doth our Saviour meane by this affirmation and negation? 243

Queſt. The Ancients did expound this doubling of the words, yea, yea; nay, nay, three manner of wayes, namely. Anſw.1.

Firſt, as in the conſcience the thing either is or not, ſo alſo it ſhould be in the tongue.

Secondly, as the thing indeed either is or not, ſo alſo it ſhould be in the ſpeech.

Thirdly, as in the mouth there is yea, or nay, ſo there ſhould be in the deed or worke: that is, according to the truth of the thing, and our knowledge thereof, ſhould our words be; and then according to our words ſpoken, our works ſhould be performed.

Secondly, our Saviour hereby would teach us carefully to avoid both all ſuperfluitie of ſpeech, and all manner of oathes, anſwering all queſtions either by a ſimple affirmation or negation. Anſw.2.

§. 3. For whatſoever is more then this.] Sect.3.

περισσον, the word here uſed, ſometimes ſignifies excellent, ſometimes abundant, ſometimes ſuperfluous, comming from περι, ſupra, as if we ſhould ſay, above that which is neceſſary: and ſo it is taken in this place, whatſoever is ſuperfluous, or more than needs, avoid it, for it commeth of evill.

The Anabaptiſts hence object, that all ſwearing (yea even before a Magiſtrate) is forbidden, becauſe it is ſuperfluous, and more than needs; for the thing enquired after, may ſimply be affirmed or denyed. Object.1.

Firſt, neceſſary oathes are not ſuperfluous oathes: thus Beza. Anſw.1.

Secondly, our Saviour ſaith, Let your ſpeech be yea and nay: but when the Magiſtrate impoſeth, injoyneth, and commandeth an oath, then it is not ours, that is, in our power (Ames. part. 1. probl. 66.) Our Saviours ſcope is here, to forewarne us of all levitie, and vanity in our ordinary talk, and not to forbid all ſwearing when a weightie neceſſity urgeth thereunto. Anſw.2.

They object againe, our Saviour ſaith here, Whatſoever is more than theſe, commeth of evill: And therefore to ſweare by God before a Magiſtrate, is unlawfull. Object.2.

This followes not it proceeds from evill; therefore it is evill: And thus Saint Auguſtine ſaith (ſup.) Non dicit malum eſt, ſed a malo procedit: Chriſt doth not ſay, that it is evill to ſweare by God in it ſelfe, but that it comes from evill, thus ordinarily, and without any neceſſity to call God to witneſſe the truth of what wee affirme. Anſw.

Can that be abuſed in uſing which is lawfull? Queſt.

Wee may deprave and pollute the beſt things by too much liberty: as for example, 1. Externall good things may bee abuſed. 2. Internall. Anſw.

Firſt, there are many externall and outward good things which may be abuſed, as for example. Firſt, Honour is good, but yet, It is not good to eate much Honey, nor for men to ſeeke their owne glory too much. Secondly, riches are good, but yet a man may ſo ſet his heart upon, Prov.25. 16.

upon them, that they may become a ſnare unto him[r]; and therfore, as we muſt not ſeek honour too much, ſo muſt we not labour too faſt to bee rich. Thirdly, Meat and Wine are good, and yet they may be abuſed unto gluttony and drunkenneſſe[s]. Fourthly, apparell are good, and yet they may be abuſed unto pride, Luke 16 19: Act. 12.21.&c. Fifthly, pleaſure and delight is good, and yet they may be abuſed, Luke 16.25. Prov. 25.16. Sixthly, eaſe and reſt are good ſometimes, and yet the abundance of eaſe is the cauſe of much evill[t]. Seventhly, time is good, but it may be miſ-ſpent and abuſed.

[r] Mat. 6. 19.

[s] Eze. 16. 49. Epheſ. 5. 18.

[t] Eze. 16. 49.

Secondly, there are many internall and inward good things, which may be abuſed: as for example.

Firſt, joy is good, and yet a man may give himſelfe too much to jollity and mirth, Eccleſ. 3.4. and 7.4. and 1 Cor. 7.29.

Secondly, ſorrow is good, and yet a man may be too ſad, and dejected, giving too much way to ſadneſſe and griefe, Eccleſ. 3.4. and 1 Cor. 7.29. and 2 Cor. 7 10.

Thirdly, feare is good, and yet a man may be too fearefull, 1 Chron. 21.31.

Fourthly, knowledge is good, and yet ſometimes it puffes up, 1 Cor. 8.1. and Eccleſ. 1.18.&c. Rom. 12.3.

Fifthly, Juſtice is good, and yet a man may be too juſt[u]; that is, a man may be too cruell, ſevere, and rigid, preſſing the Law alwayes to the uttermoſt, and ſo Summum jus ſumma injuria.

[u] Eccl. 7. 18.

Sixthly, divine Revelations are good, and yet Paul was in danger to have bin puft up through abundance of them[v]. And therefore let us labour to be ſober and moderate, Rom. 12 3.

[v] 2 Cor. 12.7.

§. 4. Commeth of evill, or, a malo illo.] Sect. 4.

Some reade theſe words, Neutraliter, commeth from evill; ſome more rightly Maſculinè, of the Divell, whatſoever is more than theſe, commeth of the evill one. Thus Beza, Muſculus, Gualter: The reaſon of this reading is, Firſt, becauſe the article is here added, τοῦ πονηροῦ a malo illo: Secondly, becauſe it is thus taken elſewhere, when one heareth the Word of God, and underſtandeth it not, then commeth ὁ πονηρὸς that wicked one, &c. Mat. 13.19.

Our Saviour here teacheth us, that as every one in generall who workes wickedneſſe, is of the Divell (as John 8 44. and 1 John 3.8.) ſo particularly every cuſtomary ſwearing is from that evill one. Obſer.

How is uſuall ſwearing from the Divell? Queſt. 1.

Theſe ordinary oaths come from Satan two manner of wayes: Anſw.

To wit,
- Firſt, immediately, becauſe he tempts thereunto.
- Secondly, mediately, becauſe hath a hād in the occaſions of ſwearing, whether in our
  - Selves, which are theſe
    - Firſt, lightneſſe and vanity of ſpeech, or a proneſſe unto ſwearing.
    - Secondly, a cuſtome of lying, whence it comes to paſſe, that wee are not beleeved except we ſweare.
    - Thirdly, an habit, or evill cuſtome of ſwearing.
    - Fourthly, unbridled anger, which makes us oft breake forth into ſwearing.
    - Fifthly, covetouſneſſe, whence thou wilt rather ſweare, then want what thou wouldeſt or ſhouldeſt have. Theſe things are wrought in us by Satan, and are occaſions unto us of ſwearing.
  - Brethren which are two, viz.
    - Firſt, incredulity, wee ſweare becauſe our brother will not beleeve us by yea and nay.
    - Secondly, perſwaſion, thus Iob was perſwaded by his wife, to curſe God and dye: and many are perſwaded by their friends to take many an unneceſſary oath.

Queſt. 2. What are the remedies againſt this uſuall ſwearing?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſet a watch over thy mouth, keepe thy tongue as with a bridle, that is, ſpeake not raſhly.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, give no place to this wicked cuſtom of ſwearing at all; for if thou doſt, thou wilt ſweare when thou knoweſt not, and breake out into oathes, and never marke it.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, be true in all thy words and deedes, and then none will ſuſpect thee of falſehood, but beleeve thy yea and nay as well as an oath.

Anſw. 4. Give no place to wrath and anger, leſt it occaſion oathes.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, bee not covetous, leſt avarice ſpurre thee on to ſwearing, rather looſe a part of thy ſubſtance then deſtroy by ſwearing thy beſt part, thy ſoule.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, bee not ſuſpicious, but beleeve all things, untill thou know the contrary, leſt through thy incredulity thy brother ſinne by ſwearing.

Seventhly, remember that by ſwearing, I. Thou ſerveſt and pleaſeſt Satan. II. Thou pleaſeſt and ſerveſt him that ſeekes and deſires nothing ſo much as thy deſtruction, 1 Pet. 5.8. Yea, III. A cuſtome of ſwearing will bring thee to horrible blaſphemy. Anſw. 7.

VERS. 38. Yee have heard that it hath beene ſaid, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth. Verſ. 38.

This was a Law given unto the Jewes by God, how then did they abuſe or pervert it, that our Saviour here oppoſeth their opinion or practiſe of it? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, in generall, they hence thought revenge Anſw. 1.

was

was lawfull, and that by this Law, liberty was allowed, par pari reponere, to recompense evill with evill.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in particular they apply that unto themselves, which is onely peculiar and proper unto the Magistrate.

Quest. 2. Are not these the very words of the law, an eye for an eye, &c?

Answ. They are, but they are not a true rule to private persons, because they were not given unto them.

Quest. 3. How doe men so abuse Scripture, that from the truth thereof lies are often concluded?

Answ. This is done many waies, namely, first, Omittendo, by omitting something; as they did, verse 33. Thou shalt not forsweare thy selfe: but omitt the words of the law, Thou shalt not sweare.

Secondly, Addendo, by adding something unto the word: thus they doe, verse 43. Thou shalt love thy friend, and hate thy enemie: the last clause thereof was added: this is a cursed thing, to adde to Gods word.

Thirdly, Sensus nostros ingerendo, by wresting the words to our owne purpose: Thus the Papists say, the Apostles had five loaves and two fishes. Therefore there are seven Sacraments w. Christ said to Peter, feede my sheepe; Therefore the Pope had absolute power to governe the Church, binding and loosing, excommunicating and deposing whom he pleases: These are grosse consequences.

w Mat. 14 17.

Fourthly, Verba premendo, by straining the word beyond his meaning; Thus the Papists enforme those words, This is my body: So others, to wit, the Libertines presse those words, all things are lawfull, stretching them as broad as their consciences are large.

Fifthly, Malè applicando, by a wrong application, & this is the Jewes fault in this place: they apply this law unto themselves, which was given onely to the Rulers and Judges.

Quest. 4. How must wee so reade the Scriptures, that we may understand them, and not pervert and abuse them?

Answ. In the reading of the sacred bookes, observe heedefully these rules.

Rule 1. First, distinguish betwixt that which is lawfull, and that which is necessary: It was not lawfull for David (according to the Leviticall law) to eate of the shew-bread, but it was necessary in regard of his and his young mens present hunger.

Rule 2. Secondly, distinguish betwixt that which is Inconvenient and that which is evill: Here the Separatists are very faultie, because those things which are inconvenient onely, they take as unlawfull in themselves, Rule 3. Thirdly, distinguish betwixt those that are Temporall, and those that are Perpetuall: Women have beene Propheteesses, but now a woman is forbidden to speake in the Church.

Rule 4. Fourthly, distinguish betwixt things particular examples, and generall rules; Senacherib was slaine by his two sonnes, but it is not therefore lawfull for children to be Patricides.

Fiftly, apply the word aright: but of this we spake before, Chap. 4. vers. 6. 245

VERS. 39. But I say unto you, resist not evill; but whosoever shall smite thee on the left checke, turne unto him the other also. Vers. 39.

§. 1. But I say unto you, resist not evill.] Sect. 1.

Wherein doth Christ here oppose himselfe unto the Jewes? Quest. 1.

First, they thinke, the law expressed in the former verse, was given unto private persons, yea unto all, thus Beza, sup. Answ. 1.

Secondly, at least they thought that it was lawfull for them out of a malicious minde, to desire revenge of the Magistrate; according to this law: namely, an eye for an eye, &c. Now our Saviour opposeth himself to both these, shewing that neither of thē are lawfull: I say resist not evill. Answ. 2.

What is meant by this word Evill? or what Evill is it that must not be resisted? Quest. 2.

First, Beza understands it Masculinè, of that evill person who offers the injury or wrong: but I subscribe not to this, because the Article is annexed with it, τῷ πονηρῷ. Answ. 1.

Secondly, others take it Neutraliter, of evill: Here wee must distinguish of a double evill, namely, I. Pœna, the evil of punishment, this we must endure patiently for Christs sake. II. Culpa, The evill of sinne, here this generall rule must be laid downe: We must give no place unto sinne, or we must not yeeld to sinne at all, but altogether resist it: every sinne is from Sathan (1 Ioh. 3. 8.) but wee must resist the devill to the face, giving no place unto him, Ephes. 4. 27. That is, first, wee must resist the motions of sinne in our selves: Secondly, wee must resist the perswasions of sin which come from others. Thirdly, we must resist the commands of superiours if they be sinfull; that is, no cōmand must make us do that which God forbids: children are not to obey Fathers, servants are not to obey Masters; Schollers are not to obey Teachers, when they injoyne the performance of that which God prohibites in his word. Answ. 2.

Fourthly, we must resist our brothers sinne, that is, reprove and blame it, and not seeme to allow of it.

What is meant by this word, Resist? Quest. 3.

First, sometimes it is taken in the best sense: as elsewhere we are commanded to put on the whole armour of a Christian, that wee may resist sinne, sathan, and temptation (Ephes. 6. 13. Iames 4. 7. and 1 Pet 5. 3.) and thus the evill of sinne is to bee resisted, as was shewed even now. Answ. 1.

Secondly, sometimes it is taken in the worst sense: and that according to a double exposition, namely, First it signifies Rebellare, to Resist, which is manifold in Scripture, to wit, I. Some resist the will of God. Rom. 9. 19. II. Some resist the Spirit of God. Acts 7. 51. III. Some resist the truth of God. 2 Tim. 3. 8. IV. Some resist the Preaching of the Gospel. 2 Tim. 4. 15. V. Some resist the Magistrate, Rom. 13. 2. Answ. 2.

Secondly, it signifies Contradicere, to contradict

246 dict and gainesay: Thus our Saviour promiseth to give unto his Apostles such a mouth and wisedome, that their adversaries should not bee x Luke 21. 15. able to gainesay nor resist x. And thus they who disputed with Stephen, were not able to resist the wisedome, and Spirit by which hee y Acts 6. 10. spake y. So Elymas withstood Paul, Acts 13. 8. and Paul, Peter, Gal. 2. 11.

Quest. 4. Is no evill of punishment to be resisted?

Answ. Evills are of two sorts. I. Naturall, as sicknesse, diseases, poverty, and the like: the generall rule here is; where meanes may bee used for the relieving of our necessities or griefes, there they must bee used: and therefore meate and medicines are not to be despised. II. Worldly evils; here the generall rule is, where charitie is violated, there sinne is committed: and therefore all contentions are to be laid aside: hence two questions arise, of which briefely, because we shall handle them more largely in the next Section.

Quest. 5. Are warres then lawfull at all?

Answ. 1. First, Kings and Princes may lawfully undertake warres; observing these foure things. I. let the cause moving them unto warre bee lawfull. II. Let it be weighty and of great importance. III. Let it bee undertaken in Christian love and charitie. IV. Let it be the last remedie of seeking to obtaine their rights; that is, let them first trie by all meanes, that restitution and satisfaction may be made for their wrongs, before they wage warre.

Answ. 2. Secondly, for the Subject, it is his part to protect and defend both his King and Kingdome to the uttermost of his power and ability.

Quest. 6. Is it lawfull to goe to law at all?

Answ. 1. First, the Anabaptists deny al Magistracie, and consequently hold all suites unlawfull.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some hold, that it is never a sinne to goe to law.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, both these erre, and therefore that a meane may bee found out betwixt these extreames, I should lay downe here some Rules, but they follow in the next Section.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheeke, turne to him the other also.]

Quest. 1. Is this dutie of suffering and pardoning of injuries so necessarily required of every Christian, that it is never lawfull for them to right themselves, or to seeke justice from the Magistrate, by desiring, that the offender may bee punished?

Answ. 1. First, it is not lawfull for private persons either to revenge themselves, or to desire the Magistrate to punish the offender according to their prescription; for men must not be both Judges and Parties.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is never lawfull for the offended to seek to be revenged (by the Magistrate) of the offender out of a corrupt and exulcerated mind; that is, out of a desire of anger, hatred, and revenge towards his neighbour: Men for the most part goe to law that they may be revenged, and (as they say) have their will of him, who hath injured them: this is not to be allowed.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is lawfull for him who is injured, to seeke justice at the Magistrates hand, according as he in equitie shall judge of his cause and wrong; if he seeke it out of a love of justice, and a meeke minde, and with a desire, that his neighbour may be the better by it; as followes by and by.

We shewed before that this truth was que- Quest. 2. stioned by the Anabaptists, and therefore it may here bee demanded, How it appeares that those who are injured may justly and lawfully repaire unto the Magistrate for redres of their wrongs?

First, because God hath instituted and ordai- Answ. 1. ned Magistrates, Tribunalls, and Judgement seates, who yet approves of nothing which is contrary to christian love: and therefore it is lawfull for the injured to appeale unto the Magistrate for succour against the injurious person.

Secondly, because in all civill, religion, and Answ. 2. well ordered Common-wealthes, there are lawes enacted for the punishment of offenders, and the recompence of wrongs; which lawes were altogether vaine and idle, if it were never lawfull to use the benefit of them against malefactors.

Thirdly, because it is profitable for the evill Answ. 3. doers, that they should be punished for their evill deeds, & that the pray which they have unjustly got should be taken from betwixt their teeth: whence it appeares that it is a worke of charitie sometimes to procure offenders to be corrected, that so they may be amended. Bishop Davenant f. Coloss. 3. 13.

We shewed before that some thought it ne- Quest. 3. ver a sinne to goe to law; and therefore it may here be questioned, when it is not, and when it is?

First, (as was said in the former question) hee Answ. 1. sins who out of a malicious & revengefull mind implores the aid of the Magistrate for the punishing of him who hath injured him.

Secondly, the Magistrate is justly implored Answ. 2. by the injured person to take vengeance, or to punish the injurious in these regards, namely; I. That he who hath done the injurie may be corrected, but without any malice to his person at al. II. That by this meanes he may be repressed, lest other wise hee should wrong others in the like manner. III. That for the time to come he may be perserved frō wrongs, who hath already been injured. IV. That others by their examples may learne to feare the injuring of others: If an egregious malefactor, or grosse injurious person should escape unpunished, it would hearten on others to the like wickednesse; but when others perceive, how severely such offenders are punished, it makes them feare to fall into the same transgression, for feare of the same correction. V. Hee who is injured may justly complaine to the Magistrate, propter justiciam, out of a love to that rare vertue Justice; it is a just thing that offenders should be punished, according to Gods owne ordinance; that wee may thereby have a Testimonie, that there is a God, who judgeth justly in the earth, either immediately by himself or mediately by his substitutes and deputies,

Kings,

Kings, Judges, and Magistrates [c].

Obiect. Against all which hath beene said, this verse will be objected, Resist not evill; but whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheeke, turne to him the other also: and if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coate, let him have thy cloake also: Therefore it seemes, that it is not lawfull for a Christian to defend himselfe from danger, or to sue any upon any cause.

Answ. 1. First, this place was grossely mistaken, and blasphemously abused by Iulian the Apostate, who would boxe the Christians upon the one cheeke, and then bid them hold up the other also.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ doth not here take away all Judicatories; as we may perceive by another example; Paul forbiddeth the Corinthians to goe before heathen Judges to pleade; but yet himselfe being enforced appealed to Cæsar. So that the law taketh not away lawfull meanes from a man to defend himselfe, but onely sheweth when, and how he should use those meanes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christ in this place speaketh not of every sort of injuries, but onely of light injuries, such as are a boxe, or a blow, or loosing of a coate, or cloake: They say in the Schooles, Virtus moralis non consistit in puncto Mathematico sed habet suam latitudinem. Morall vertues are not to be strictly interpreted according to the letter, but may bee further extended; So here, our Saviour telleth us, that in lighter offences and wrongs, we should remit something of our right, and not to stand punctally upon our right in every thing. So thou must goe two miles with a man, if he compell thee; but not an hundred; Thou must not stand for a coate, or a cloake; but if a man should take all that thou hast from thee, then thou art to resist him, and seeke remedie by order of law. So the words following, verse 42. Give to him that asketh, and from him that would borrow, turne not away thy face: if they should be extended to the furthest, there were nothing more hard.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Christ here in bidding them hold up the other cheeke, doth not meane so literally, but that they should be patient in suffering of injuries; as Lament. 3. 30. Hee giveth his cheekes to him that smiteth him; that is, he suffereth patiently, Answ. 5. Fifthly, Christ himselfe when hee was smitten did not hold up the other cheeke, but sayd, Why smitest thou mee? Iohn 18. 23. Therefore these words are not to be taken literally, but are to be understood, that we should carry a Christian heart, ready to forgive, and not to prosecut all injuries.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, the meaning of our Saviour in these words, is not positive but comparative; that is, rather then thou shouldest bee provoked to reward evill with evill, suffer a double injurie.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, these words are to be understood with this limitation; If thou beest injured and wronged, and by thy bearing and forbearing, Christian peace may be continued, the Gospel may be honored, thy profession adorned, thy brother bettered, and God thy Father glorified; Then thou must suffer two injuries rather then revenge one.

VERS. 40. 41. And if any man shall sue thee at the law, and take away thy coate, let him have thy cloake also: And whosoever compelleth thee to goe with him a mile, goe with him twaine. Vers. 40. 41.

§. 1. Whosoever shall sue thee at the law, &c. Sect. 1.

Observ. The scope of our Saviour here is this; if any by a false pretence, or claime doe take away thy coate from thee, let him take also thy cloake, rather then contend and strive with him: Buy peace with a little losse, rather then follow jarres and contentions.

Quest. 1. Why must all Christians bee thus carefull to avoide going to law one with another?

Answ. 1. First, because peace is more excellent then gaine; amitie, love, and concord is better then riches. Better is a dry morsell and quietnesse therewith, then an house full of sacrifices with strife, Pro. 17. 1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is an honour for a man to cease from strife: Prov. 20. 3.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because by sutes we bite one another, and are consumed one of another. Galat. 5. 15.

Answ. 4 Fourthly, because all Christians are brethren: Abraham would not contend with Lot because they were brethren, Gen. 13. 8. Moses would not have the Israelites strive, because they were brethren: Ioseph would not have his brethren fall out, because they were all sonnes of one Father [d]. [d] Gen. 45. 24.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because strife and contention is a work of the flesh. Galat. 5. 20. yea bitter envying and strife in the heart, is not spirituall, but earthly, sensuall, and devillish; for where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evill worke [e]. [e] Iames 3. 14. 15. 16

Answ. 6. Sixthly, it is a signe of a carnall man: There is among you envying, strife, and divisions, are yee not then carnall, walking as men? 1 Cor. 3. 3.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because God is not the author of contention but of peace. 1 Cor. 14. 33.

Quest. 2. Who sinnes against this direction of our Saviour?

Ans. 1. First, those who will contend for every trifle: who will have Processe for a words or the least wrong: yea binde a man to the peace for a matter of nothing, although they cannot doe it without perjurie.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who thinke they may without any blame sue, if the other partie begin: for as was said before, It is an honour for a man to cease from strife. Prov. 20. 3. yea we must seeke peace of those who have done the wrong, as was shewed before, verse 24.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who will rather appeale to a Judge then to Arbitrators, for the deciding and composing of their jarres.

Quest. 3. It is not lawfull to appeale unto a godly Magistrate, yea in necessitie may we not repaire unto an ungodly?

Answer. All things must be done in their right order; that is; First, Magistrates certainely are to bee 248 honored. Secondly, but first of all put thy case to Arbitratours: This Saint Paul blames very tartly in the Corinthians, Is there not a wise man amongst you to compose your wrongs (I speake it to your shame) but ye goe to law, &c.[f]. Alexander Severus, by an edict forbad them to be called Christians, who lawed one with another. And Julian the Apostate did urge this text against those, who were Christians and yet sued one another.

f 1 Cor. 6. 1.

Thirdly, if thou canst not referre thy cause to Arbitrators, because thy adversary by no meanes will yeeld thereunto; then repaire and appeale unto a pious Magistrate.

Fourthly, before Ethnickes and Infidels Christians should not contend, except it bee upon a very urgent necessitie; that is, I. for a weightie matter, not for a trifle, as Paul appeales to Cæsar for his life. II. If thy adversarie will not put the case to the Arbitration of Christians. III. When and where there are no Christian and religious Magistrates. IV. When heathenish Magistrates are thy Magistrates, that is, when thou livest under them: as some Christians under the Turkes.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Whosoever shall compell thee to goe a mile.]

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. The word here used is ἀγγαρεύει now ἀγγαροι were the Persian Kings letter carriers; like our pow Posts; & their custome was, to take sometimes mens horses, sometimes ships, ye somtimes men themselves for the service of the King; and sometimes imposed burdens upon men to bee borne, as they commanded Simon of Syrene to carry Christs Crosse. Mat. 27. 23. The meaning therefore is, If any (by authority from the King) shall endeavour to oppresse, or to lay any heavie loade upon thee: thou shalt not only willingly beare what is laid upon thee, but (if occasion serve) thou shalt doe more then is injoyned.

Quest. 2. Why must Christians thus willingly undergoe the injunctions, imposts, taxes, and tributes of Superiours, not too much questioning the equitie of them?

Answ. 1. First, because the Magistrate is the Minister of God, Rom. 13. 6.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because hee is a Minister for thy good, Rom. 13 4.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because men are not competent Judges in their owne causes: for every mans way seemes good in his owne eyes, Prov. 16. 2.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, wee must obey the Magistrate in these things, because it is our duty to avoid giving of offence. Thus our Saviour payeth Tribute, lest he should offend them, Mat. 17. 27.

Quest. 3. Who are faultie here?

Ans. 1. First, those who denie to pay Subsidies in the time of warre, withstanding them with all their might; although the danger bee generall, and the supporting of the warres be for their good: These are very obnoxious to the Commonwealth.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who refuse to pay tole, custome, and taxes, but of these afterwards, Mat. 17. 25, 26, 27.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who murmur to pay their Assesments for the poore: Many pay what they are sessed, but it is with continuall murmuring and repining: This is vaine and foolish thus to strive against the streame, murmuring and repining at that which in the meane time we doe.

Quest. 4. Why may wee not grudge and complaine when we are sessed too much, although we cannot hinder the payment of it?

Answ. 1. First, because herein thou art injurious unto thy neighbours, taxing them with partialitie and injustice.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because hereby thou betrayest and shewest thy selfe to be hard-hearted, and close-handed, niggardly, and void of charity.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because Oleum et operam perdis, thou neither gainest nor savest thereby; thou loosest thy credit among men, and depriv'st thy selfe of comfort within: thou neither savest thy purse (because still thou payest what is allotted) neither gainest the praise either of God or men, because thou payest still with grudging and repining.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because thus thou art a stumbling stone and rocke of offence unto others, who are harmed by thy example, and taught by thee to murmure in the like case.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, thou hereby hastenest judgement: He shall have judgement without mercy, who wil shew no mercy, but he that grudgeth to relieve the poore is unmercifull[h]. He who sowes sparingly, shall reape sparingly[i], but he who scattereth unwillingly shall gather nothing: yea backwardnesse to relieve the necessities of the poore is threatned with a curse: There is that scattereth and yet increaseth: and there is that withholdeth more then is meete, but it tendeth to poverty[k].

h Iames 2. 13.
i 2 Cor. 9. 6.
k Prov. 11. 24.

Quest. 5. What is our blessed Saviours principall scope in these words, if thou beest compelled to goe a mile, goe with him two?

Answ. 1. First, that publike burdens are to bee borne if imposed upon us by authority, although it seeme hard unto us: this belongs unto that which was mentioned before, quest. 2. 3. 4.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that hard impositions may bee injoyned by law.

Quest. 6. Who are they that pretend the law of man for that which is not by Gods law lawfull?

Answ. 1. First, they who take the forfeitures of bonds.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who detaine morrgages, and things pawned.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, they who deny secret right, that is either private contracts and bargaines, or things committed to their trust; putting them to prove it, and denying to sweare against themselves.

VERS. 42. Give to him that asketh thee: and from him that would borrow of thee, turne thou not away. Ver. 42.

And from him that would borrow of thee, turne thou not away.]

Quest. 1. What is the scope of our Saviour in these words?

Answ. 1. First, to exhort his children unto liberalitie and love one towards another.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to teach Christians that they have not discharged their duties, when they have given something to the poore; but that they must must be ready both to give and lend as often as a necessary occasion offers it selfe.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, to teach us that in lending one unto another wee doe not discharge our duties, if that we reape gaine and benefit by our lending: for first wee must bee better then the Heathens, now they will lend to their brother for their owne profit: And therefore if we refuse to lend gratis we are no better then they. Secondly, our righteousnesse must exceed the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisees, and therefore wee must bee more ready to give, and more willing to lend then they were.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, to teach us that we must not refuse to lend, because we shall receive nothing againe, lend, saith Christ, looking for nothing againe, Luke 6. 35.

Quest. 2. What is meant by this place, Luke 6. 35.

Answ. 1. First, some expound it thus, lend not looking for the principall againe; thus Beza, and the Marginall notes.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some expound this of usury, lend not looking for any increase; this way the common streame of Interpreters runne.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Calvine goes a little further, expounding these words thus, doe not say, usury is forbidden, and therefore I will onely lend to him, who is able to lend to me: But lend to him from whom thou canst expect no such thing; as wee must feast those who cannot feast us againe; Luk. 14. 12 But I shall speake more fully of this place when I come thereunto.

Quest. 3. Why must we not lend upon usury?

Answ. 1. First, because this deserves no praise; and if yee lend to them, of whom yee hope to receive, what thanke have yee. Luk. 6. 34.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because by thus lending wee so loose the best reward. Numquater aut Deus potest melius pensare, Chrysost. s. Hee that lends upon Usury is rewarded by his brother, hee that lends to the poore freely, shall be rewarded by God: Now whether is the reward of God or man better.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because he who lends upon Usury, lends not for Christs sake, but for his own gaine, and advantage.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because that which is freely given should freely bee disposed of: Mutua quod a deo mutuatus es (Hilar. s.) Lend thou to thy brother that which God hath lent to thee; lend to thy brother as God hath lent to thee, that is, freely, not upon Usury.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because Usury is an unnaturall thing. Nummi non parturiunt (Aristot. polit. l. 7.) It is against nature that mony should beget mony, & that inanimate things should thus increase.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because Usury is against humanity, or contrary to humane societie; for thereby one man gaines by another mans losse.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because it was a thing odious to the Gentiles; Cato, Cicero, Lucullus, Lycurgus, Agesilaus, & divers others, did utterly condemne it: yea, some of them punished a thiefe by making him to restore what he had stolne twofold, but an Usurer fourefold.

Answ. 8. Eightly, because it is both against the law of the Gentiles, and the Canon law.

But here Usurers object that the Civill law allowes it. Object. 1.

Answ. 1. First, the Civill law grants and permits Usury, but it is with a preface, that it had rather Christians would follow the faith of Peter simply, and lend freely.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the maine and plaine scope of the law is thereby to take away a greater evill (as Moses suffered them to give a bill of divorce) Molem veterem gravissimam deducere ad mediocritatem (Justin.)

Answ. 9. Ninthly, because it is contrary to the law of Christ; doe to others (saith he) as you would others should doe unto you: Now who is there that would not freely borrow rather then upon Usury?

Ans. 10. Tenthly, because Usury is no vocation; yea, it hinders many men from their callings, who sell their land and give themselves wholly unto Usury, making that their vocation whereby they live; hereby resembling droanes in the Bee-hives, who live upon the sweat and sweet of other mens labours.

Ans. 11. Eleventhly, because hereby thou hurtest thy brother; videris dare, revera aufers (Chrysost. imperf.) Thou seemest to give, but indeed takest away from thy brother. Hee who is bitten with the Aspe first laughs, then sleepes, then dies; so the usurer under a shew and colour of friendship and helpe doth bite and kill his brother, whose substance doth daily decrease by the use, he payes.

Object. 2. It is objected that onely Neshek is prohibited, that is biting Usury, Exod. 22. 25.

Answ. 1. First, the word is very proper and fit; for all Usury is biting unto a poore man.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we must not strictly contend about words: In the seventh Commandement it is said Thou shalt not commit adultery; must wee therefore say that onely μοιχεία, adultery forbidden? Neshek wee know is used both by the Jewes and Christians for all manner of Usury.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Neshek is not onely forbidden, but also Tarbith.

Object. 3. To this some replie, that Tarbith signifies Usury of Usuries: as Ezekiell 22. 12. Thou hast taken Vsury and increase; where the word used is Tarbith which signifies (say they) one of the worst kinds of Usury.

Answ. 1. This appeares not from the text; Thou hast taken (saith the Prophet) Neshek Vetarbith, usuram & superabundantiam (Arias Montanus) usury and encrease, or an overplus, which seemes to be onely an exaggeration of the former word, as may appeare by another place in the same Propheſie: He hath not given forth upon Neshek, usury, neither hath taken Tarbith, increase, Ezech. 18. 8. that is, the righteous is so farre from biting usury, that he will not so much as take any increase or augmentation of what he lends: where we see I. that Tarbith is a lesse kind of usury then Neshek is, II. that God threatens them for Tarbith as well as Neshek: and III. that the righteous man will avoide one as well as another 250 nother; and therefore it is not onely Neshek biting usury which is forbidden, but all manner of augmentation by contract.

Answ. 2. Secondly, these two words Neshek and Tarbith are sometimes thus differenced: Neshek, respects money, Tarbith respects victuals: Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase: Where we see they are both forbidden, and Tarbith seemes to bee lesse.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, these two words are sometimes used as Synonyma, Hee that by usury and unjust gaine increaseth his substance, &c. Where usury and increase seem to signifie one & the same thing: And therefore the Jewes who desired to walke according to the precepts of the law did refuse all increase.

Object. 4 They object againe, the Jewes were onely forbidden to take usury of the poore: If thou lend money to any of my people that is poore by thee, thou shalt not bee to him as an Usurer, neither shalt

b Exod. 22 25. thou lay upon him usury [b], as if the Lord would say, thou maist lay usury upon the rich, and lend to them upon usury: Againe, If thy brother be waxen poore, and fallen in decay with thee, then thou shalt relieve him, but thou shalt take no usury of c Lev. 25. 35,36,37 him, or increase [c], neither for money or victuals: Where the Lord forbids both Neshek and Tarbith, to be used or imposed upon the poore: And therefore wee may take usury of the rich.

Answ. 1. First, the poore are not alwaies named where usury is spoken of. Read Deut. 23.19. Ezech. 18. 8. and 22. 12.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the consequence is naught. Thou must not lend upon usury to thy brother, therefor thou maist to a stranger, followes not: Thou must not bee to the poore an usurer, therefore thou maist to the rich, follows not; for hee is promised to dwell in Gods Tabernacle who lendeth not upon usury at all.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, non distinguendum ubi lex non distinguit: Wee must not subtily distinguish wher the law doth not: but rather satisfie our selves thus, usury in thesi, in the generall is simply forbidden, therefore we should forbeare every particular practise of it.

Quest. 4. Is it not lawful for men to take usury of those, who gaine by the money lent unto them? for so they neither bite them, nor hurt them, taking onely a part of their profit.

Ans. 1. First, there is no equity in this; because hee hath taken paines, and therefore his labour is to be reckoned: thou hast taken no paines, and therefore how unequall is it for thee to partake the profit of another mans labour.

Answ. 2. Secondly, thou incurrest no danger at all, being sure both of usury and principall; but hee stands liable to all dangers.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, thou extendest this word gaine too farre, saying thy brother gaineth, when hee but onely saveth; as for example, thou saiest if I had not lent him money, his lands or lease had beene forfeited, but now hee hath redeemed them: this is no gaine, but onely hereby hee is preserved from a losse.

Quest. 5. Is it not lawfull for widowes, guardians of orphans, and those who are (through weakenesse and sickenesse) unable to follow any calling, to put out their money unto usury?

Answ. Truly I conceive that they may lend their money for a participation of gaine, with an equall condition of hazard and losse: that is, if the party employing their money loose, they will beare a proportionable share of his losse, according to that proportion of gaine, which they should have if he gaine by it.

Quest. 6. This point of usury being so much controverted among divines, some holding one thing, some another, where may we find a place to rest our foote upon? what may we certainely thinke or know concerning it by which we may be informed?

Answ. All cleare and orthodoxe divines agree and accord in these things concerning usury. I. That wee must not take usury of any poore man. II. Thou must not deny to lend to poore men, what thou canst well spare, neither in lending preferre the rich before the poore. III. Thou must take no usury or increase of him who gaineth nothing by thy mony. IV. Thou must not of any take more then the law allowes, to wit, eight in the hundred. V. Thou must avoid all biting usury, which impoverisheth and consumeth thy neighbour. VI. All agree that usury is no lawfull function or calling. VII. That those who are rich, and can live sufficiently without putting forth their money, should not use it. VIII. That if there be an equall condition of losse as well as gaine, a man may take a part of the profit. IX. That with tradesmen it is lawfull in regard of the forbearance of their money; that is, they may sell dearer if they sell for a longer time, because they loose by the forbearance of their money: and so if a man desire his money in bargaines before the day, he who payes may justly demand an abatement according to the time. These are agreed on by all, and therefore those who desire to bee resolved in that which they doe, let them not goe further herein.

VERS. 43. Ye have heard that it hath beene said, thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemie. Vers. 43.

S. 1. Ye have heard that it hath beene said, &c. Sect. 1.

Quest. 1. How do the Jewes infer this that enemies are to be hated?

Answ. The text alleadged doth directly forbid hatred; Thou shalt not hate thy brother, but love him as thy selfe, Levit. 19. 17,18. And yet they from hence (by the rule of contraries) doe collect, that because friends are to be loved, therefore enemies are to be hated.

Quest. 2. Wherein were they faulty by this collection or inference.

Answ. They were guilty of a double crime, namely. First, boldnesse, or audaciousnesse, that durst thus adde to the sacred Canon of Scripture. Secondly, foolishnesse, and ignorance, that collect dominoy'sluon, soloecismes: for they loose the sense and and meaning of the place by pressing too much the words: The Law doth not say (said the Scribes and Pharisees) Thou shalt love all men, but thou shalt love thy Brother and thy Neighbour, therefore strangers and enemies we are not commanded to love. And thus by their additions and corrupt expositions, they would found error upon the sacred Scriptures, for which our Saviour blames them in this place.

Quest. 3. How may wee so give the sense of Scripture, that we doe not deduce or collect things from thence contrary to the mind and meaning of the Holy Ghost?

Answ. The Rules observable hereunto, are either probable or certaine.

First, if we desire so to expound the Word of God, that we may not mistake the drift of the Holy Ghost, wee must then observe diligently these probable Rules.

Rule 1. First, let not the exposition be thine, that is, some new invention of thy owne, never heard of before; but an interpretation confirmed by many.

Rule 2. Secondly, let thy exposition have the assent of the first and most ancient Church, for the Church is our Mother, and that exposition is much to be suspected, which doth crosse the minde of the whole Primitive Church.

Rule 3. Thirdly, if thy interpretation be assented unto by all Protestants and Professors, wee may then walke the more safely, and rely the better upon it.

Rule 4. Fourthly, if our Protestant Divines differ in any point, or exposition of any place, then hold with that opinion which is most holy: Indeed sometimes a shew of sanctitie may deceive, as wee see in the Monkes and Anabaptists, who would perswade men to assent unto them, because their lives are so pure, when for the most part both of them are like to painted sepulchers; And therefore we must not looke to the outside of holinesse in the opinionists, but to the true sanctitie and puritie of the opinion, and hold that which without question is most holy; as for example.

It is questioned and disputed amongst our selves, pro & contra, whether usury be lawfull or no? here it is granted by all, that it is certainly lawfull to lend gratis, but it is disputable, and undecided, what Usury is lawfull by the Word of God (for herein Divines differ) and therefore the most sure and pure course will be, to lend freely.

Secondly, if we desire to open the Scriptures, that the mind and meaning of the Holy Ghost may evidently appeare unto us, then wee must carefully and diligently walke according to these few certaine and true Rules.

Rule 1. First, study and reade the Scriptures without any prejudice, for if once the braine bee bound, it will easily pervert the sense: as wee see in the Jewes, who will beleeve nothing of Christ, bee the place never so plaine; as also in the Papists, who will beleeve nothing against images, or the Popes supremacie, or infallibilitie, or the merit of workes, or invocation of Saints, and the like; although they be directly contrary to Scripture. And therefore take heed of this resolution, this I hold, and this I will hold, whatsoever I reade or heare to the contrary. 251

Secondly, pray daily for a right and informed judgement, lay downe thy owne opinion and sense, praying heartily unto God to give thee an understanding heart. Rule 2.

Thirdly, let the exposition agree with the circumstances of the place, not adhering too much to the Letter of the Text, as the Euchets did, who thought men should doe nothing but pray, because the Apostle saith, Pray continually, 1 Thess. 5.17. Rule 3.

Fourthly, doe not too generally extend any passage of Scripture; thus some expound these words, our brother must not be offended, therefore wee must doe nothing that may displease him; we must abstaine from every appearance of evill, therefore we must disobey, and resist the Magistrate, rather than yeeld to such ceremonies as seeme evill to some: This is to strain the Scripture beyond his native sense, and to make it speake a strange language. Rule 4.

§. 2. Thou shalt love thy Neighbour.] Sect. 2.

How many degrees of love are there one towards another? Quest.

The Ancients have these eight degrees. I. Some love those who love them, this is naturall love. II. Some love those from whom they have received, or hope to receive some good turne, this is mercenary love: As Augustine saith, Qui amicum amat propter commodum, non amicum convincitur amare, sed commodum: Hee who loves his friend for his gaine, thinkes gaine worth loving, but not his friend. III. Some love others, because they trace the same path of impiety that they doe; thus drunkards love drunkards, and Hereticks love those who maintaine the same Heresie that they doe; this is a wicked and diabolicall love. IV. Some love others for some good worke that they have done, or because they see them to be good men; this love is commendable. V. Some love others because they are members of the same body with them, that is, the children of their heavenly Father; this is a spirituall love. VI. Some love those who love not them; and this is a gratious love. There are two degrees more which the Ancients have ranked with these, but they cannot be called degrees of love, but rather of hatred; namely, VII. Some love not those who love them; and these are perverse persons. VIII. Some love not entirely any, but are lovers of themselves; and this is an humane corruption and infirmitie. Answ. Ghem. Harm. c. 51. p. 586.

§. 3. And hate thy enemy.] Sect. 3.

The Scribes and Pharisees say this, but Christ rejects it; and therefore we may easily affirme it to be false, and this to be true, That the true Christian must hate none. Observ.

Why must we hate none? Quest. 1.

First, because hatred is alwayes forbidden, and ranked with those things which are evill: The workes of the flesh (saith the Apostle) are these, adultery, fornication, &c. hatred, variance, &c. Answ. 1.

Secondly,

252

Secondly, becauſe God loves all his creatures (as followes verſe 45.) and therefore wee ſhould herein imitate him, hating none.

Anſw. 2.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe the bleſſed Spirit of God teacheth us to hate none; and Chriſtians ought to practiſe no other things then he teacheth unto them.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, the Scribes and Phariſees acknowledge that we muſt love our brethren; now unto Chriſtians all men are brethren, either in Chriſt or for Chriſt (as was ſhewed before, verſe 7. of this chapter) and therefore we muſt love all, and hate none.

Obiect. But againſt this it will be objected, the Iſraelites were commanded to hate the ſeven Nations, to ſmite them, to deſtroy them, to make no covenant with them, to ſhew no mercy unto them, Deut. 7. 1, 2. Ioſh. 23. 7, 12.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, this was a peculiar precept, and therefore is no generall rule, neither concludes any thing againſt what hath beene formerly affirmed.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, although it be not allowed to hate any man for the evill that is in him, yet it is lawfull to hate the evill that is in men.

Queſt. 2. How farre, and in what regards is it lwafull for a man to hate his enemy?

There are two ſorts of enemies, to wit, ours, and Gods.

Anſw. Firſt, if they be our enemies, then wee muſt not hate them at all: Indeed it is lawfull for us to pray againſt them, as David did, ariſe O Lord, diſappoint him, caſt him down, and deliver my ſoule from him [d]. And againe, O Lord overthrow thou the counſell of Achitophel.

[d] Pſal. 17. 13.

Secondly, if they be wicked men, and ſo Gods enemies, then theſe things are required of us, namely:

Firſt, we muſt hate their wicked workes; yee that love the Lord hate evill, Pſal. 97. 10. The fleſh that toucheth any uncleane thing muſt not be eaten [e], nor the ſociety of ſinners muſt be delighted in [f]; but wee muſt hate the wickedneſſe of the wicked with a perfect hatred [g].

[e] Levit. 7. 19.
[f] Prov. 1. 10. 15.
[g] Pſa. 139 21.

Secondly, it is lawfull for us to pray againſt their malice; whether it be 1. againſt God. Or 2. Religion. Or 3. Our brethren.

Thirdly, we muſt decline familiarity, and all intimacie with thoſe who are Gods enemies: Davids delight was in the Saints [h], and ſo muſt ours be; not in the wicked, for their company we muſt avoid [i], and that for theſe three cauſes. 1. Leſt by their ſociety we ſhould be drawne into ſinne, as Salomon was. 2. Leſt we ſhould bee puniſhed with them. Read Numb. 16. 26. Prov. 13. 20. and 22. 24. Apoc. 18. 4. 3. Leſt (at leaſt) our hearts ſhould be grieved, and our eyes and eares offended with their wickedneſſe: Thus Lots righteous ſoule was grieved with ſeeing and hearing the abomination of the wicked Sodomites [k].

[h] Pſal. 16. 3.
[i] Pſal. 26. 4, 5. and 101. 6. Eſa. 52. 11
[k] 2 Pet. 2. 9.

Here wee muſt diſtinguiſh between thoſe who

Oppoſe themſelves obſtinately againſt all goodneſſe and Religion, theſe are to be avoided, and their company not to be frequented.

Are blind and ignorant, doing evil, becauſe they know no better; theſe are not altogether to bee ſhunned, but as occaſion offers it ſelfe to be inſtructed and exhorted.

Fourthly, but whatſoever they be, though never ſo bad, yet they are to be loved; 1. Becauſe they are fleſh of our fleſh, of the ſame ſpecies with us. 2. Becauſe it may be they ſhall be converted hereafter: And therefore love them for that hopes ſake which thou maiſt have of them.

VERS. 44. But I ſay unto you, love your enemies, bleſſe them that curſe you, doe good to them that hate you, and pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you, and perſecute you. Verſ. 44.

§. 1. Love your enemies. Sect. 1.

How doth it appeare that our enemies are to be loved? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, from Levit. 19. 17, 18. Thou ſhalt not hate thy brother in thy heart, thou ſhalt in any wiſe rebuke thy Neighbour, and not ſuffer ſinne upon him. Thou ſhalt not avenge nor beare any grudge againſt the children of my people, &c. Where we ſee, 1. Our enemies muſt be reproved, and wee muſt not ſuffer them to ſinne, verſ. 17. 2. We muſt not avenge our ſelves upon them. 3. We muſt not remember the injuries, they have done unto us, verſ. 18. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, it appeares from Rom. 13. 9. Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, thou ſhalt not kill, thou ſhalt not ſteale, all is comprehended in this, thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour as thy ſelfe: And therefore Saint Auguſtine ſaith [l], this precept of loving our enemies belongs unto all. Anſw. 2. [l] De doct. 1. 30.

Thirdly, it appeares from Rom. 12. 20, 21. If thine enemy hunger, feed him, if hee thirſt, give him drinke, and be not overcome of evill, but overcome evill with good. Anſw. 3.

If we muſt love God with all our heart, and with all our minde, and ſoule, and might, and ſtrength, as we are commanded, Deut. 6. 5. and Mat. 22. 37. then where is there any place left for the love of our Neighbour? Queſt. 2.

Firſt, it is certaine that we muſt love none but onely in the Lord: we muſt not love any ſupra, contra, aut prater Deum, either above God, or beſides God, or contrary to the command of God. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, but in the Lord we may and ought to love men, as a man is ſaid to love his wife only, and yet he loves his children alſo. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, yea thoſe who love not men, cannot love God. Reade 1 Iohn 2. 9. and 3. 10. and 4. 20. Anſw. 3.

How muſt we love our enemies? Queſt. 3.

First, affirmatively, we muſt love them thus, namely, I. As they are men, and ſo fleſh of our fleſh. II. As they are our enemies, we muſt not covet or deſire to be avenged of them. III. Yet we may lovingly reprove them, for their amendment. Anſw. 1.

Secondly,

Answ. 2. Secondly negatively, thus we may not love them, to wit, I. as wicked men, leſt ſo we be found to love wickedneſſe which God hates. II. as the enemies of God, for thus wee are by Davids example to hate them: Doe not I hate them oh Lord, that hate thee; yea I hate them with a perfect hatred[m]? III. we muſt not love them unto death, that is, ſo love them that our love be a meanes to bring them unto perdition: we muſt not flatter them in evill, but labour by gentle reproofes to reduce them from their errours.

[m] Pſa 139. 21, 22.

Queſt. 4. If to love be to eſteeme as a friend, then how can this agree with an enemy? to love our neighbour is to hold him our friend, how then can a man love his enemy, that is, hold him as his friend; for to be a friend, and an enemy are contraries?

Answ. We muſt not hold any man our enemy, but every one our brother, friend, and neighbour: This our Saviour teacheth us by the parable of the man who was wounded betwixt Ieruſalem and Iericho, and was helped by the Samaritane; concluding that we muſt hold every man our neighbour [n] and none our enemy: yea under the Goſpell we are taught, That all men are our brethren either { By Regeneration / or / By Creation. } either { Indeed, / or / In hope. } either { In the Lord, / or / For the Lord. } And therefore none are to bee held as enemies.

Queſt. 5. Why muſt we love thoſe who by their deeds ſhew themſelves to be our enemies?

Answ. 1. Firſt, becauſe herein wee ſhall imitate our God, who is an examplar hereof unto us, verſe 45.

Answ. 2. Secondly, becauſe otherwiſe wee cannot love God: If any man ſay, he loves God and hates his brother is a lyar: for how can hee love God whom he hath not ſeene, and hate his brother whom he hath ſeene? 1 Iohn 4.20.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, becauſe otherwiſe wee have not the Spirit of God: for every one who is borne of God loveth his neighbour. 1 Iohn 4. 7.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, becauſe now none are enemies: we are all one body (1 Corinth. 12.12.) the partition wall being broken downe; ſo that there is now neither Iew nor Gentile which are to be hated, but all muſt be loved. Rom. 12.18. And therefore they who hate the perſons of thoſe who are without, know not what Spirit they are of.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, the bond of peace is to bee preferred before all other things, and therefore wee muſt ſuffer any thing rather than diſſolve and break it.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, if there were any cauſe why wee ſhould hate any it were for their hatred and hoſtilitie againſt us: but this is no cauſe of hatred, we being to looke upon God, not man: And therefore for his ſake we muſt love thoſe who hate us.

Queſt. 6. What are the impediments which hinder us from taking out this hard leſſon, of loving our enemies?

Answ. The Remoraes or hinderances are theſe:

Impediment. 1. Firſt, an apathia of the love of Chriſt; were men truely ſenſible or heartily affected with the love of Chriſt towards them when they were enemies, then they would not think it ſo ſtrange to love their enemies: but men are not ſenſible of this, what love Chriſt hath borne towards them, and therefore they are kept backe from the love of their enemies.

Imped. 2. Secondly, ἀσυγγια want of affection towards their brethren: Love covers a multitude of ſins, and therefore the lacke of this Chriſtian charity is an impediment which hinders us from the love of our enemies.

Imped. 3. Thirdly, the errour in judging of love and charity: we neither know the excellencie or valew of this Evangelicall vertue of brotherly affection: neither the neceſſity thereof: but thinke it to bee like a free-will offering; and hence we are not ſo carefull to practiſe it as we ought.

Imped. 4. Fourthly, the love of the world, and ſelfe-love is another thing which hinders us from the love of our enemies.

Imped. 5. Fifthly, too deep an apprehenſion of the wrongs and injuries that have beene offered us.

Imped. 6. Sixthly, an innate and naturall proneneſſe unto anger, envie, and hatred.

Imped. 7. Seventhly, the difficulty of ſhewing and doing the workes of mercy and charity.

Queſt. 7. What are the remedies againſt theſe impediments?

Answ. Reme. 1. The remedies or meanes by which we may be helped forward in this duty of love towards our enemies are theſe. Firſt, Love God, and preferre God before thy ſelfe, thy own will, and all things elſe: and then for his ſake thou wilt not be unwilling to doe any thing which he requites of thee.

Reme. 2. Secondly, learne to ſee thy brother in thy God, and to love him as a child of God; and then thou wilt eaſily be induced to be reconciled unto him, though he have offended thee.

Reme. 3. Thirdly, deſpiſe and contemne the world; love thy profit and gaine leſſe than thou haſt done, and then thou wilt not be ſo ſenſible of any injury offred unto thee in temporall things.

Reme. 4. Fourthly, undervalew thy ſelfe, eſteeme baſely of thy ſelfe; and conſider if thou hateſt thy brother for ſome wrong done unto thee, doſt not thou deſerve to bee hated of ſome others for the like injury done unto them? at leaſt doſt not thou deſerve that the Lord ſhould looke upon thee as an enemy, and hate thee as an adverſary, ſeeing thou haſt offended him more often and more grievouſly than all the world hath, or can doe thee?

Reme. 5. Fifthly, Let thy converſation be in heaven, let thy affections bee ſet upon thoſe things which 254 which are above: walk continually in the paths of love, charitie, patience, humility, and meekneſſe, and then thou wilt be the more ready to love thoſe who hate thee; and to doe good unto thoſe, who doe evill unto thee.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Bleſſe them that curſe you, doe good to them that hate you, pray for them which perſecute you.]

Queſt. 1. Why doth our Saviour expreſſe or adde theſe particulars? doth not this generall exhortation. Love your enemies, imply and include all theſe? Fruſtrà fit per plura quod fieri poteſt per pauciora: is not this unneceſſarily to multiply words?

Anſw. This our Saviour doth for the hardneſſe, and ſenſeleſneſſe, and dulneſſe of our hearts; becauſe ſpirituall things are difficultly aright underſtood, except they be very plainely and clearly laid downe: wee can ſometimes underſtand generalls, but are not able to inferre thoſe particulars which are therein included.

Queſt. 2. Why are ſpirituall things ſo hard to bee underſtood by us?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe they cannot be perceived without the helpe of the Holy Spirit, 1 Corinthians 2. 14.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe we can eaſily find a knot in a ruſh; we can find ſomething to cavill at, or to object againſt; being in the reading and ſtudy of Scripture prompted hereunto by Satan, and carnall reaſon, who will invent ſome arguments againſt the truth of Gods ſacred volume.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, becauſe ſpirituall things are contrary to our natures and naturall affections; wee can eaſily underſtand thoſe things which ſuite with our diſpoſitions, and are deare unto our affections; but thoſe things which are oppoſite unto them we cannot underſtand.

Verſ. 45. VERS. 45. That yee may be the children of your Father which is in Heaven, for he maketh his Sunne to riſe on the evill and on the good, and ſendeth raine on the juſt and on the unjuſt.

Sect. 1. Object. §. 1. That ye may be the children of your Father.] Stapleton urgeth and objecteth this place, to prove the merit of charitie, becauſe our Saviour commandeth us to love both our Neighbours, and enemies, in the former verſes; Vt ſiamus filii patris, that ſo we may be made the children of our heavenly Father.

Anſw. 1 Firſt, we deny that any merits of counſell or command, or ſupererogatory workes can make us the ſonnes of God.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, we ſay that merits follow our filiation, and doe not goe before it.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, the ſenſe therefore of this place is one or both of theſe: I. Shew thy ſelf to be the ſon of God, by thy love unto all: Approba filiationem (Calvin, Beza, Muſcul. Marlor) approve thy filiation to be true by thy love unto thy enemies, and by doing good unto thoſe who doe evill unto thee. II. Walke worthy of thy adoption and ſonne-ſhip; as if our bleſſed Saviour would ſay, walke in your Fathers ſteps who doth good unto all.

There are here two things conſiderable, namely, Firſt, the Argument. Secondly, the Conſequence. Firſt, the Argument which our Saviour here uſeth, is this: Becauſe ye are ſons therefore, &c. as if hee would ſay, The chiefeſt care of man is (or ſhould be) that hee may bee made the ſonne of God. Obſer.

Why ſhould we principally endeavour to be made the children of our heavenly Father? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, in generall, becauſe all the promiſes of the Goſpel depend upon this: we cannot bee made partakers of any promiſe of God, untill wee are his children, for all the promiſes are made to ſuch. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, becauſe adoption and filiation are ſeales of ſalvation: we never can be aſſured that we ſhall be ſaved, untill we are aſſured of our filiation. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, becauſe it is the greateſt dignitie in the world, to be made the ſonne of God. David thought it a great honour to be an earthly Kings ſonne in Law, how much greater is it then, to be the adopted ſonne our heavenly Father which is the King of Kings, and a Lord of Lords: The bleſſed Virgin Mary was more bleſſed in being Gods daughter, then Chriſts mother. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, becauſe Chriſt onely loves thoſe who are the children of God. Anſw. 4.

Fifthly, becauſe Chriſt died for this end, that he might gather together in one, the children of God that were ſcattered abroad, Iohn 11. 52. Anſw. 5.

Sixthly, becauſe if we be not the children of God, we are the children of the Divell, Ioh. 8. 44. Anſw. 6.

Seventhly, becauſe if we be the ſonnes of God, wee ſhall be directed by his holy Spirit in our lives and converſations, for as many as are led by the Spirit are the Sonnes of God, Rom. 8. 14. and contrarily. Anſw. 7.

Eighthly, becauſe if we be the ſonnes of God by adoption, wee ſhall then have communion with God, and fellowſhip with his naturall and eternall Sonne Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 9. and 1 Iohn 3. 2. Anſw. 8.

Ninthly, if we be ſonnes wee are heires, yea heires of glory; if we be here adopted into the fellowſhip of ſonnes, we ſhall hereafter be crowned with a wreath of glory, and raigne with Chriſt for ever and ever. Reade Rom. 5. 2. and 8. 17, 21. and Gal. 4. 7. Anſw. 9.

And therefore to conclude this Queſtion; If we deſire. 1. To bee aſſured, that all the gracious and comfortable promiſes of the Goſpel belong particularly unto us. If 2. wee deſire to be aſſured that we are of the number of thoſe who ſhall be ſaved. If 3. We deſire to be promoted unto the greateſt honour in the world. If 4. Wee deſire to be aſſured of Chriſts love unto us. If 5. we long to be gathered by Chriſt into his fold. If 6. We would not be the ſonnes of Satan. If 7. We deſire the direction and conduct of the bleſſed Spirit. If 8. We deſire union and communion with God and Chriſt, we muſt then labour and endevour to be made the ſonnes of God.

We hope we are the ſonnes of God, and not of Satan, but how may we be not only well perſwaded, but alſo certainely aſſured hereof? Queſt. 2

Wee

Answ. Wee may undoubtedly know, whether we be the children of the most High, by these signes.

Signe 1. First, faith is a note of the sonne of God: and therefore we must try whether we have faith or not, Wee are the children of God by faith in Christ Iesus, Gal. 3. 28. And therefore if we have no faith, we are strangers from God and the Covenant of grace, Ephes. 2. 12. and 4. 18.

Signe 2. The next Signe is the Spirit, and the testimony of the same: he who is adopted into the fellowship of Sonnes, is endued with the Spirit, which unto his spirit testifieth the truth of his filiation. Reade Rom. 8. 16. and Gal. 4. 6. And therefore we must examine what manner of certainty we have of our adoption. I. If we have no assurance hereof, we are very miserable. II. If our perswasion be a lying presumption, and our hope without any solid ground, then our condition is much more miserable. III. If our assurance be weake, like a smoaking flax, or bruised reede, then we must labour that it may be more strengthned. IV. If our assurance be strong, and built upon that never-failing Rocke, then wee are happy and blessed, Rom. 8. 38. and 2 Tim. 4. 8.

Signe 3. The third Signe is this, if wee be the children of God, we are led by the Spirit, Gal. 5. 25. and Rom. 8 14. wherefore we should examine all our actions, and see whether wee live in the Spirit and walke in the Spirit or not: when wee give way unto sinne, and avoid not the occasions unto evill, wee should consider, whether herein are wee led by the Spirit of God, or by flesh and blood?

Signe 4. Fourthly, we may try our adoption by our affection; for if we love God, and are zealous for his glory, and would by no meanes displease him, but are carefull by our sincere obedience of him, to approve our love unto him, then wee are his Sonnes.

Signe 5. The next Signe, is the love of holy things, that is, 1. Of holy men, the faithfull, Saints, and sincere professors of the Gospel. 2. Of holy duties, and the exercises of Religion. Certainly those who are in deed and in truth the sonnes of God, they will love both good men, and good meanes unto goodnesse.

Signe 6. Lastly, if we be the children of our heavenly Father, we will love even our enemies; but this comes to be considered of in the next particular: And thus much for the Argument.

Secondly, the next thing considerable, is the Consequence: The Argument was this, Because ye are the children of God. The Consequence is this: therefore love your enemies as becomes the children of God; as if our Saviour would say, none is the child of God who doth not love his enemies.

Quest. 3. Why must we love our enemies?

Answ. 1. First, because he who loves none but friends, is guided onely by a humane spirit; for wicked men can love those who love them, and do good to those, who doe good unto them, vers. 46.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because herein we imitate Christ, who loved us when we were enemies, Rom. 5. 8. yea prayed for those, who were the instruments of cruelty, even his bloody murderers, Luke 23, 34. 255

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because this is a divine thing, and an argument of a minde guided by a divine Spirit, to love those who hate us, and doe good unto those that doe evill unto us. If wee love those who deserve to be beloved of us, or those who never deserved any evill from us, what reward shall we have? But if we love those who have deserved evill at our hands, this will be grateful and pleasing unto God.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Which is in Heaven.]

Quest. 1. Why are these words added, Which is in Heaven?

Answ. To teach us, that the love of our enemies is not true, except it be founded upon our obedience towards God: Or there is no true and right love unto any, but onely that which is for Gods sake: And therefore our Saviour teacheth us not to love for other respects, to wit, either for game, or praise, or our owne quiet, but for the Lords sake. Christ doth not say, love thy enemy, 1. Because he is a man of the same kind that thou art: Or 2. Because he is ignorant, and foolish, for otherwise he would never have injured thee as he hath: Or 3. Because he is but a dead man, for if there were any life of grace in him, hee would labour to be reconciled unto thee, and acknowledge his wrong, and who would be angry at the barking of a Dogge, or for any thing that is done or said by a foole, or a dead man? Christ I say urgeth none of these; but onely 4. The imitation of God; because ye are the children of your Father which is in Heaven, who doth good both to bad and good: therefore from him learne to love your enemies.

Observ.

Quest. 2. Why must we love our enemies?

Answ. In God there are three reasons, why wee must love them:

First, because God suffers him to be our enemy, and permitted him to doe the injury which is done unto us; and therefore we must confesse and acknowledge it to be just, both in regard of God and us; that is, the Lord did justly permit it, and we justly deserve it. And therefore hate not thy Brother, because he is but the instrument, and the stone which is throwne at thee.

Secondly, if thou be the sonne of God, then thy enemy cannot harme thee, because the Lord will preserve thee: And therefore why shouldest thou hate him who cannot hurt thee?

Thirdly, though thou be injured and harmed by thy enemy, yet it shall be profitable for thee, either, 1. Probando, by trying thy faith and patience: Or 2. Corroborando, by strengthning thee more and more to undergoe, whatsoever the Lord shall lay upon thee: Or 3. Coronando, by crowning of us; because all the crosses which we endure for the Lords sake shall be rewarded: And therefore why should wee hate those who doe that unto us which is thus profitable for us?

Sect. 3. §. 3. For he maketh his sun to rise.]

Quest. What is observable in the Sunne?

Answ. 1. First, the Philosophers gave it many high praises

256 praises and phrases, as some of them called it the heart, some the eye of the world; some the fountaine of light, the eye of heaven, and the mind of the world: some a heavenly fire, a sempiternall living creature, a vitall or animate planet (Speusippus.)

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Heathens supposed it to bee a God: Agamemnon prayed unto it, the Persians adored it, the Egyptians called it a God: Plato (de republ.) cals it the Image (or Vicar) of God, I forbeare here to shew how some of the Gentiles worshipped the Sun, how some of them painted it, how some built Temples unto it, yea how others in many things compared it to a Lyon.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Christians have called a day by it; to wit, the first day of the world, or the Lords day, hath beene for a long time called Sunday.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, wee may from the Sunne observe these things: I. It is a body, or substance full of splendor and glory, yea, comfortable to every creature, read to this purpose these places, Eccle. 11.17. Cantic. 6.9. Psal. 19.5. Mat. 13.43. and 17.2. and Act. 26.13. and 1 Cor. 15.41. Rev. 1. 16. and 10. 1. and 12. 1. and 21. 23. In these places wee may see 1. the glory and excellency of the Sunne; and 2. what glorious things are compared thereunto.

II. the Sunne runnes continually; never abating his course at all, Read Psalme 104 and Cant. 1.5.

III. It enlightens the world; whence it is called magnum luminare[a], the great light.

[a] Gen. 1.6. & Psal. 136.8.

IV. The Sunne divides the times and seasons, Winter and Summer, Gen 1.14.

V. It ripens fruit, by his heat and warmth, as we see, by experience every yeare.

VI. It is a meanes of mans generation, Sol & homo generat hominem (Aristot.)

VII. The Sunne animates, quickens, and vivifies the world: yea, without the Sunne the world (in nature) could not subsist. But I enlarge not these things.

Sect. 4. Quest. §. 4. And his raine to fall.] What is observable in the raine.

Answ. 1. First, we might speake here of the water philosophically, as namely, I. That it is the embleme of purity, both in the law of Moses, as also, 1 Pet. 3.21. and Tit. 3.5.

II. Water is the carrier away of the meate, what we eate, is not sent away, without drinke: whence we see how great a plague it was to be without water, and how great the blessing was to be made partakers of it, 1 King. 17. & 2 King. 3.9. &c. Psal. 105. 41.

III. It is medicinable for many sicknesses, as feavers and those which are of feaverous natures, which cannot be endured without the frequent taking of some moist and liquid coole things.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we might observe many things in Raine, as for example,

Wee might observe, how the raine hangs above, and yet drownes not the world: whence it is said, The Lord opened the windowes of heaven,[b] and it rained untill the whole world was destroyed; and therefore it appeares that there is alwaies water enough above us to drowne us, if the Lord should permit it to fall upon us.

[b] Gen. 7. 11.

II. We might note, how although the clouds weekely drop downe their showres, and the water in the springs and wells bee continually drawne, yet neither of them are exhausted or drawne drie. III. Admirable is the change which is observd in this element, sometimes water becomes Ice, sometimes Ice, becomes water; sometimes vapours become raine, sometimes raine becomes vapours. IV. Great is the necessity and salubrity of showers, as might appeare thus: 1. by Gods promising of them as blessings, as Lev. 26.4. Deut. 28.12.13, and 11. 14. and Psal. 147. 8. and 1 King. 8.35. and Esa. 44. 14. and Ezech. 34. 26. 2. by Gods threatning to withhold them in anger, Deut. 11.17. and Ierem. 4.4. and 2 Sam. 1.21. 3 by those good things which are compared unto raine, and showres, as Job 29.23. Psal. 72.6. Deut. 32.2. Malach. 3.10.

Sect. 5. §. 5. He maketh his Sunne to rise, and his raine to fall.]

Quest. Why doth our Saviour only name these two, the Sun and Raine?

Ans. 1. First, for the reforming of an old errour: the Philosophers and some of the Rabbies thought, that those things which are more casuall were ordained and disposed of by God, but that these two Sun and Raine are naturall; our Saviour therefore teacheth that God doth direct nature, and dispose of naturall things.

Answ. 2. Secondly, other things are terrestriall, these two are celestiall; therefore our Saviour names them, that our minds might be replenished with spirituall meditations.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because wee thinke, we can procure other things, as health, riches, honour, and the like, by our owne industry, or paines; but these two wee all confesse, we are not able to obtaine by any endeavour of ours, and therefore against these two instances no objections can bee made.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, our Saviour names these, for our example and instruction, to wit, 1. As God gives these two unto all, so we should be ready to performe the duties of love and charity unto all. 2. As God gives these two unto all for nothing; so wee should bee ready to exercise the workes of love, mercy, pitty, and charity to those who stand in need, although from them we are like to reape nothing, we should not grudge and repine to give to those who cannot give to us; for our Father doth so unto us, wee must not love our money better then our brethren, and for the saving of that loose them. 3. God would have us give such things unto our poore brethren, as he gives unto us: namely, First, he causeth his Sunne to rise; so must wee looke with a cheerefull countenance upon those to whom we either give or forgive. Secondly, hee causeth his raine to fall, which is profitable unto the earth, and nourisheth both trees, hearbs, and corne, yea, distilleth it selfe into every cranny and chinke of the earth; so wee must 1. nourish the poore; 2. give them those things things which are profitable for and unto them: yea, 3. give them plentifully for the supplying of their wants.

Sect. 6. §. 6. His Sun to rise.] Quest. Why doth our Saviour name onely Solem orientem the rising sun?

Answ. Because the east or morning Sun is preferred before the south or meridian sun in three respects. First, the light is most acceptable after thicke darkenesse, the light is sweete, and it is a pleasant thing for the eyes to behold the Sunne, that is, in the morning, when the darkenesse is therby expelled [q]. Secondly, because wee are quickely cloyed with the best things, and therefore the Sunne is not so delightfull unto us, at noone, as it is in the morning.

[q] Eccles. 11.7.

Thirdly, because in the morning the Sunne warmes and cherisheth us; but at noone, burneth, harmeth, and causeth those who are abroad often through heate to faint: and therefore in the hottest inhabited climates of the world, the people well brooke the morning sun, but shelter themselves from his heate when hee comes to his height.

Sect. 7. §. 7. God makes his sunne to rise.] Deus facit oriri: The rising of the sunne seemes to be a worke of nature, but it is indeed the worke of God; Teaching us that the course of nature is moved and governed by God.

Obser.

Quest. 1. How doth this appeare that the course of nature is governed, moved, and directed by God?

Answ. 1. First, Tollere providentiam est negare Deum, to take away providence fro God, is to deny God himself, or that there is a God, or that there was a creation. For I. The word teacheth us that God made all things Gen. 1. 1 2. and Psal. 104. 5. And II. That he preserveth all things which he hath made. And therefore to deny his providence in governing all things, is to deny his power in creating of all things.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the truth of this that God orders, directs, governes and disposeth of all things appeares by an induction of particulars: I. Hee governes the Heavens, drop downe yee heavens from above, and let the skies powre downe righteousnesse, Esay 45. 8. II. He governes the Starres, Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou guide Arcturus with his Sonnes? Iob 38. 32. III. He treasureth up the snow and haile, and therefore sendeth them at his pleasure, Iob 38. 22. IV. He made Summer and Winter, and causeth them to keepe their appointed times [r]. V. He governeth the Sea: Thou rulest the raging of the Sea; when the waves of the Sea arise, thou stillest them [s]: yea thou divideste the Sea when the waves thereof roare [t]. VI. He by his providence ordaineth, and disposeth of the birds; that is, First he plumes them, Thou gavest the goodly wings unto the Peacocke, and wings and feathers unto the Ostrich [u]. Secondly, hee moveth them; The Hawke flieth by thy wisedome, and the Eagle mounteth up at thy command [x]. Thirdly, hee feedeth them; The young ravens call upon him, and hee giveth them meate, Psal. 147. 9. yea hee provides for the fowles of the heavens [y]. VII. Hee cloathes the lillies of the field, Mat. 6. 30. VIII. He feedes the beasts of the field, Psal. 147. 9. And the wild beasts of the forest [z]. IX. He feedeth men, giving them grasse for their cattle, and hearbs, and wine, and oile, and bread, Psal. 114. 14. X. He feedeth all things; Every creature expects his foode from him [a]. The eyes of all creatures looke unto him, and he giveth them their meate in due season [b]. XI. He governeth all things: and giveth to all things life, and spirit, and breath, and all things, Acts 17. 25. therefore in him we live, moove, and have our being, Acts 16. 28. yea by him all things consist, Colos. 1. 17. and by his mighty word all things are sustained, Heb. 1. 3.

[r] Psal. 74. 17.
[s] Psal. 89. 9.
[t] Ier 30, 35.
[u] Iob 39. 13.
[x] Iob 39. 26. 27.
[y] Mat. 6. 26.
[z] Iob 39. 1. 2. &c.
[a] Psalme 104. 15. 16.
[b] Psalme 145. 15. 16.

Quest. 2. May we ascribe nothing to chance or fortune, but all to the providence of God?

Answ. The name of Fortune should be banished from all Christian countries, because all things whatsoever are ordered and disposed of by God:

Whether things { Animate. I. or / Inanimate. II. } Whether things { Good. III. or / Evill. IIII. }

I. Animate things are disposed of by God; and therefore a sparrow falleth not to the ground without the providence of God, Mat. 10. 29.

II. Inanimate things are guided by God: The Lot is cast into the lap, but the disposing thereof is from the Lord, Prov. 16. 33.

III. Good things come unto us from our God: Thus Ioseph saith, God sent me hither for your good [c]; and therefore we must never sacrifice unto our owne nets, or ascribe any thing unto our selves.

[c] Gen. 45. 7. 8.

IV. Evill things are ordered and disposed of by God: If a man casually murther his neighbour, he shall flie to the citie of refuge; because I the Lord delivered him into his hand [d]; for a haire cannot fall from your heads, without the providence of God, Luke 21. 18. And therefore wee must not murmur or complaine for any crosses, but see the hand of the Lord in all things.

[d] Exod. 21. 13.

Thus we see that both things animate and inanimate; good and evill, are disposed of by God, and therefore no place is left at all for Fortune.

Quest. If all things bee ruled by Gods providence, then whether needs wee feare the event of things?

Answ. We must not be careless in any thing of importance, but we may be fearelesse of the event: as for example. I. Dost thou feare hunger and thirst? God will provide for thee. Psal. 107. 6. II. Dost thou feare imprisonment, God will either preserve thee or bring thee out, Psal. 107. 10. &c. III. Dost thou feare Plague? God will deliver thee, Psal. 107. 11, &c. IV. Dost thou feare danger? Hee will give his Angels charge of thee, and they shall pitch their tents about thee, Psal. 34. 7. and 91. 11. yea the Lord will preserve thee as the apple of his eye [e]. VI. Dost thou feare wild beasts? Thou shalt tread upon the Lyon and adder, [e] Zach. 2. 8.

258 and they shall not hurt thee, Psal. 91. 13. VII. Dost thou feare death? God will deliver thee, Psal 91.7. Et sic de cæteris: Thus the children of God are happie and blessed, and neede not feare the event of any thing, because all things are ordained and disposed by their heavenly Father.

Sect. 8. §. 8. His Sunne to rise, suum Solem.]

Quest. Why is it called Gods Sunne?

Answ. 1. First, because he created it: The Lord gave the Sunne for a light by day, Ier. 31. 35.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because hee maketh it to rise; the naturall course thereof being guided by him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is called His Sunne, because hee gives it freely unto us, and not of debt.

Sect. 9. §. 9. On the evill and on the unjust.]

Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour adde this?

Answ. To teach us that he doth give, and we ought to give good things to those who are evill.

Quest. 2. First, Christ addes here the object of Gods mercy; to teach us, that God gives outward things unto wicked men.

Answ. Have wicked men any interest in or right unto any temporall blessing? is not temporall right onely founded in grace?

Those who never were endued with faith or supernaturall grace may have a true and a just title unto temporall things: This may be confirmed by Gods owne gifts, and who can have a more sure, or just title unto a thing, then hee who receiveth it from God, who is Lord of all, and gives nothing but his owne? But God gives externall good things to the wicked and unbeleevers: This is proved by our Saviour here himselfe; God makes his Sunne to rise upon the evill, and raineth upon the unjust. Hence then I argue. He who receiveth a gift from God, hath a true title thereunto.

But wicked men receive many temporall gifts from God: Therefore they have a true and just title unto them.

Indeede the manner how wicked men and unbeleevers use temporal blessings is oftentimes unjust, & yet the title therunto may be most just [d].

[d] Bishop Davenat. quest. 30. Pag. 137. initio.

Secondly, our Saviour here addes Evill and Unjust, to teach us, That we must doe good even unto those who are evill, remembring that the object of Mercy is misery, and not merit; & therfore we must not enquire after the goodnes of the object, but looke unto his want and poverty. True it is wee must chiefly regard the houshold of faith; not forgetting the rest, Gal. 6.10.

Ver. 46.

VERS. 46. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? doe not even the Publicans the same?

Sect. 1. Object. 1 §. 1. What reward have ye.]

The Papists object this place to prove the merit of our workes; because our Saviour here implies, that God will give us according to our workes.

Answ. 1. It is true, that God wil give us according to our workes, but not for our merits; ut præmium non ut meritum; that which God gives unto us is given as a reward, not as a thing deserved: God will reward our workes, but wee doe not merit that reward, being (in our best performances) unprofitable servants [e].

[e] Luk. 17. 10.

That wee doe not merit that reward which shall be given unto us, appeares thus.

First, because this is to derogate from God and to arrogate unto men: or as the Apostle saith most plainely; If salvation be of works, then it is not of grace; and if of grace, then it is not of workes, otherwise grace is no grace. [f]

[f] Rom. 11 6. Ephes. 2. 1. 8.

Secondly, if salvation were of workes, then rich men would buy heaven as they doe earth; because they are the workes, the Popish Clergie looke principally after.

Thirdly, there is no proportion betwixt our workes and heaven; and therefore nothing that we doe can merit heaven.

Fourthly, that which is heere called μισθὸς (reward) is called χάρις thanks, Luke 6.32.

Object. 2 But they thus object against this. If evill works merit death, then good workes merit life; if wicked workes deserve hell, then good workes deserve heaven: for contrariorum eadem est ratio, there is for contraries one and the same reason.

Answer. Good and evill workes are not adæquate contraries; For wicked workes are 1. in themselves perfectly wicked, but good workes are imperfectly good, being blotted with many infirmities. And 2. evill workes are eternall in will, that is, if we should live for ever, we should sin for ever; but good workes are performed only by starts, with a fraile and wavering affection, and unconstantly: wherefore there is no equall proportion between good works and evill: as we may see evidently in that difference which Saint Paul makes, The wages of sinne is death, but the gift of God is eternall life [f].

[f] Rom. 6. 23.

Quest. 1. What doth our Saviour meane by this interrogation, What reward have ye?

Answ. This question shewes, that there is a reward of workes, truely good; the word here used, ἔχετε is of the present time; as if our Saviour would say, if your workes be truely good, then you have now a reward in certaine hope; but in these things which Publicanes and wicked men performe, what reward can you hope for or expect? Christ hereby teaching us, that the good workes of the godly shall certainely be rewarded: this is confirmed further from Gen. 4. 7. Psal. 19.12. Pro. 11.21. Esay 3. 10. Mat. 10.41.

Observ.

Quest. 2. Why shall the workes of the righteous bee thus rewarded by God?

Answ. 1. First, because they confirme their faith: the holy works of the faith full argue a living faith: And therefore they shall never goe unrewarded.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because God doth accept of those things which are done for his sake, as though they were done unto himselfe: In as much as you did it to them, you did it to me, Mat. 25. 40.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because God hath ordained, that those who glorifie him in this life by their good workes, Mat. 5. 16. should be crowned in heaven with eternall glory, Rom. 8. 17. And therefore the Papists shamefully belie us in saying, that we destroy destroy good workes; for Meritum non Mercedem destruimus, we labour to overthrow Mans Merit, not Gods reward.

Obiect. 3. Here they object, They who say worke, but ye shall have nothing, discourage men from working:

But Protestants say so: Therefore they are hinderers of good workes.

Answ. The Major wee grant, but deny the Minor; for we doe not bid men work, and tell them they shall have no reward: but we perswade men to worke chearefully the worke of the Lord, and they shall have more then they have deserved: yea although they have merited nothing by their workes, yet they shall be plentifully rewarded: We tell men that although their workes be imperfect, and weake, yet if they bee but sincere, God will accept of them, God will reward them, even to a cup of cold water [g]: onely we prohibite men to brag or boast of their merits or workes.

[g] Mar. 10. 42.

Quest. 3. To performe good workes so well that wee may be sure they shall be rewarded is very hard; And therefore how may this difficultie be overcome?

Answ. 1. First in generall, the difficultie of sanctitie may be overcome by this Argument; that an ample reward shall be given thereto: working for nothing makes men lazie, but the hope of a liberall reward, will encourage and spurre forward a sluggard to worke: Moses was encouraged by this argument to neglect and refuse honour and pleasure [h]. Christ hereby was encouraged to endure the crosse, and to despise the shame [i]. And the Apostles for this immortall, and incorruptible reward did cheerefully undergoe affliction and persecution, Reade 2 Tim. 4. 8. Iam. 1. 12. and 5. 7, 8. and 2 Cor. 4. 17. and 1 Pet. 4. 13. Revel. 22. 12.

[h] Heb. 11 26.

[i] Heb. 12. 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, more particularly, the difficultie of good workes and sanctitie will the better bee endured and overcome, by the consideration of the severall pul-backes we have, and the encouragements against them: as for example; I. In the waies of grace thou shalt meete with many dangers: but here is thy comfort, that thy God will be with thee, and therfore thou needest not care who is against thee, Rom. 8. 32. II. thou shalt bee hated of men: but thy comfort is, that God, and Christ, and the Saints will love thee. III. If thou addict thy selfe wholy unto the service of the Lord, it may bee thou shalt loose many a friend which now thou hast: but thy consolation is, God hath said I will never faile thee, nor forsake thee, Heb. 13. from Iosh. 1. 5. IV. In the way of religion perhaps thou maist walke alone, unaccompanied by any; but bee not any whit herewith dismayed; for Elias thought thus, but God telleth him, that there were seven thousand who served the Lord and not idoles: yea thou shalt bee accompanied by God, the Saints, and Angels, who are ministring spirits for the consolation of the godly. V. It may be thou maiest meete with derision, taunts, scoffes, and mockes by the world and worldlings, for thy good workes and sanctitie: but remember thou art deare, and acceptable unto God, who doth commend & praise thee for thy obedience. VI. Thou maist thinke that it is a hard thing to forgive him, that hath done thee wrong; but thou maist be encouraged hereunto by this, that if thou pardon him, God will pardon thee, Mat. 6. 14. VII. It may seeme hard unto thee to give over all unlawfull pleasure; but here is thy comfort, that if thou dost this on earth for Gods sake, thou shalt bee rewarded by him in heaven with everlasting joy. VIII. If thou thinke it difficult to renounce the world, who is like a beautifull harlot; then remember that if thou dost it, thou shalt in the world to come be made partaker of those joyes, which eye hath not seene, nor eare heard, &c. 1 Cor. 2. 9. IX. If it seeme much unto thee to impaire thy substance by imparting thereof to the fatherlesse and widdowes: then consider, that hereby thou dost lay up treasure for thy selfe in heaven; yea thou treasurest up hereby riches for thy children. Thus consider how great blessings the Lord promiseth to bestow upon us, if we labour to bee rich in good workes both towards God and man; and this will be a meanes to overcome the difficultie of good workes?

Quest. 4. What workes shall be rewarded by God?

Answ. 1. First, the worship and service of God: ye shall serve the Lord your God, and then he will blesse your bread, and your water; and take sickenesse from you, Exod. 23. 25.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the hearing and obeying of the word of God: If thou shalt indeede obey his voice, and doe all that I shall speake, then I will be an enemie unto thy enemies, &c. Exod. 23. 22.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the observation of the Sabbath: If thou call the Sabbath a delight, and shalt forbeare to doe thy owne pleasure and will, &c. Then I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feede thee with the heritage of Iacob, Esay 58. 13, 14.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, the preaching of the word; he that planteth and that watereth are one: and every man shall receive his owne reward according to his owne labour, 1 Cor. 3. 8.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, a spirituall life; He that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reape life everlasting, Gal. 6. 8.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, righteousnesse; In every nation he that feareth God, and worketh righteousnesse is accepted of him. Acts 10. 35.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, Constancie and perseverance in piety; Be ye stedfast and unmoveable, alwaies abounding in the worke of the Lord, for your labour is not in vaine in the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. 58.

Answ. 8. Eighthly, the workes of mercy, and charity; God is not unrighteous to forget your worke and labour of love, which ye have shewed towards his name, in that ye have ministred to his Saints, Heb. 6. 10.

Answ. 9. Ninthly, patience and confidence in tribulation; Rejoyce and be exceeding glad (when you are persecuted and reviled) for great is your reward in heaven, Mat. 5. 12. And againe, cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward. Heb. 10. 35.

And therefore if wee desire to bee crowned

260 with temporall blessings in this life, and with eternall glory in the life to come, wee must then I. Worship the Lord. II. heare his voice and obey it. III. sanctifie his Sabbath. IV. If we bee called unto that high calling, wee must preach the word faithfully, and constantly. V. We must live and leade a spirituall life. VI. be righteous towards men. VII. be constant in the service of God unto the end. VIII. be charitable unto the poore. IX. be patient and confident in all adversitie whatsoever.

Quest. 5. Many men performe many of these workes, who yet never receive the reward promised; How therefore must we so worke, that we may be assured that our labour shall be rewarded?

Answ. 1. First, if our obedience be regulated according to the law and commandements of God: I have inclined my heart to performe thy statutes, Psal. 119. 112.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if our obedience and good workes proceede from faith: otherwise not, Heb. 11. 6.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if our good workes bee performed for Gods sake, not for our owne.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if they proceede not from an hypocriticall, but a sincere heart, not to be seene of men, Mat. 6. 1. but out of a pure heart, desiring to approve our selves unto God thereby, Psal. 119. 1.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, if we obey God with a cheerefull heart, Thy testimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever; for they are the rejoycing of my heart, Psal. 119. 111.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, if we serve God constantly through the whole course of our life, Psalme 1. 2. Then wee shall certainely bee rewarded in life, and death, and after death.

Sect. 2. §. 2. What reward shall ye have?]

Quest. 1. We have heard that by this Interrogation our Saviour would shew, that certainely there is a reward for the good workes of the righteous: It may now further be demanded, If there bee nothing else meant heere by this question, What reward shall ye have?

Answ. Christ hereby on the contrary doth shew that for the workes of the Pharisees there is no reward, because they doe no other things then naturall men may doe.

Quest. 2. Shall not the workes of naturall men bee rewarded?

Answ. 1. First, the best works of those who are no better then flesh and blood, naturall and carnall; are neither acceptable unto God, nor shall bee rewarded by him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, reward is either
- Humane; this naturall men may have; yea Hypocrites and formall professors have the praise of men, or estimation in the world, Mat. 6. 2. 5. 16.
- Divine which is either of
  - Justice, and thus God will give them what they desire; namely, a temporall reward and recompense, for a temporall worke.
  - Mercy, and this reward the naturall man shall never receive.

Quest. 3. The naturall man may here demand, Quid faciam? What shall I doe that my workes may be accepted and rewarded by God?

Answ. 1. First, dedicate thy selfe wholy unto the Lord, forsaking all other things; applying thy selfe wholy unto him and his service, making that thy chiefest care, because God hath bought thee with a great and deare price, even the precious blood of his deareſt Sonne, 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, labour that thou maist bee made a vessell of honour, a new and regenerated vessell; a new creature: renewed both in thy mind, affections, judgement, inclinations and life.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, labour for the feare of God, and learne to stand in awe of him; for thereby thou wilt be carefull to avoid what hee forbids thee, and to obey what he commands thee.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, labour for faith in Christ, endeavour to bee built upon that rocke and corner stone.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, watch over thy waies, and be sincere and serious in thy endeavours all thy dayes; And then the Lord will accept of what thou doest, and plentifully reward thy workes.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Doe not even the Publicans the same?]

Quest. 1. What were the Publicans?

Answ. They were officers that gathered toll and tribute, taxes, and rents of the Jewes for the Roman Emperour, to whom the Jewes were in subjection; Now in the gathering hereof they used much injustice and oppression, for which cause they were hated of the Jewes, aboue all other people, and esteemed most basely off; and yet these (saith Christ) will love their friends.

Quest. 2. Doth our Saviour here condemne the function and office of the Publicans?

Answ. 1. First, the office and vocation is lawfull, and therefore our Saviour doth not reproove that: That the function was lawfull, appeares thus: Christ looking upon the tribute money doth say, Give unto Cæsar that which is Cæsars[b]. And Saint Paul, render tribute to whom tribute is due, and custome to whom custome is due[i]. And therefore without doubt it is lawfull to gather toll and tribute.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but they are blamed, taxed, condemned, pointed at, and observed as infamous, almost by all: The Pharisee scorned to be like the Publicane, Luke 18. 11. The Jewes despise and reject Christ because he did eate with the Publicanes, Mat. 9. 11. and 11. 19. Yea Christ himselfe seemes to slight them, and brand them as notorious sinners, both when he saith, let him who neglects to heare the Church, be unto thee as a Publican, Mat. 18. 17. and also when he conjoynes Publicans and Harlots together, Mat. 21. 31, &c.

Quest. 3. Why were the Publicans generally thus odious and infamous amongst all?

Answ. 1. First, because they were like Ieroboams Priests, to wit, of the lowest of the people; they were of the most abject, base, and inferiour sort.

Secondly,

b Mat. 22. 21.
i Rom. 13. 7.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because commonly they were a cruell, and hard hearted kind of people; oppressing all, extorting & extraordinary tribute from all, even from children, that is, natives, Mat. 17.26. and hence good Zacheus (when he repented) made restitution of the injuries and wrongs he had done, when he was a Publicane [k], yea hence they were reckoned up with sinners, Luke 6 32. and exhorted to take no more then was their due, Luk. 3. 13.

[k] Luke 19. 8.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because forthe most part they were Romans, and so ignorant of God, and the Jewish religion.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because they were but Ministers of the Romane tyranny unto the Jewes.

Quest. 4. Why doth our Saviour use this Phrase unto the Scribes and Pharisees, Doe not the Publicans the same?

Answ. 1. First, to teach us, that those whom we cannot convince by conscience, we must convince with shame: Doe not the Publicans (saith Christ) the same? as if he would say, what a shame is it for you that are Teachers, to do no more then such base, vile, and naughtie people as Publicans doe.

Answ. 2. Secondly, to teach us, that it is a shame for superiours not to excell inferiours in pietie and religion; as for example. I. It is a shame for Ministers, if their hearers excell them in knowledge, in zeale, in a holy conversation, in private duties, and the like. II. If those who are children, excell parents in religion, it is a shame unto parents. III. If those who are Masters bee outstripped by their servants in the wayes and workes of grace, is it not a shame for those Masters? IV. If inferiour persons, be more honest, true, religious, and vertuous, then superiours, and great ones, it is a shame for great ones.

VERS. 47. [a] And if ye salute your brethren onely, what doe you more then others? doe not even the Publicans so? Ver. 47.

§. 1. And if ye salute your brethren onely.] Sect. 1.

Quest. 1. How doth this verse differ from the former?

Answ. It seemes to bee the same with the former, and the difference is onely this; That speakes of the internall affection, this of the externall conversation: as if our Saviour would say, the Pharisees teach that you must not love your enemies; but I say you must not onely love them, but also outwardly carry your selves courteously and humanely towards them.

Quest. 2. What is meant by this word Salute?

Answ. ἀσπάζεσθαι the word here used signifies to embrace and that with a kisse, as 1 Thess. 5. 26. and 1 Pet. 5. 14. according to the manner and custome of those times, and the Orientall nations. Beza. f.

Quest. 3. How many sorts of Kisses are there?

Answ. There are two kinds of kisses in the Scripture:

- First, wicked, which is threefold, viz.
  - Idolatrous; thus the Israelites kisse Baal, 1 King. 19. 18.
  - Adulterous; thus the harlot kisseth the young man, Prov. 7. 13.
  - Treacherous; examples whereof are, 2 Sam. 20. Mat. 26. 44. Prov. 27. 6.
- Secondly, lawfull, and is threefold, viz.
  - First, Benedictionis, of Blessing; thus Isaac kisseth Iacob, Gen. 27. 27. and 31. 55.
  - Secondly, salutationis of salutation, and is either when - Friends are met withall and that either
      - Ordinarily; thus did Abraham to those who came unto him [l], and Mary Magdalen to Christ, Luke 7. 45. Or
      - After a long separation; or when friends first see one another: Thus Iacob kisseth Rachel; Genes. 29. 11. and Laban him, ver. 13. Reade also Gen. 33. 4. and 45. 14.
    - Friends depart one from another: thus Laban complaines of Iacob, that he would not suffer him to kisse his children before they departed [m]. Reade more examples of these parting kisses in thse places. 1 King. 19. 20. and Ruth 1. 14. and Acts 20. 27.
  - Thirdly, Affectionis, of affection; these are either
    - Divine; let him kisse me with the kisses of his lipps, Cantic. 1. 1. Now all these kisses above mentioned are strangers to this verse.
    - Humane which are either of
      - Love; thus Ionathan and David kisse one another [n], and examples hereof we have in the New Testament [o].
      - Reconciliation; thus Ioseph kisseth his brethren, Gen. 45. 15. and David kisseth Absalom, 2 Sam. 14. 33. and Luke 15. 20.

[l] 2 Sam. 15. 5.

[m] Gen. 31 18.

[n] 1 Sam. 20. 41.

[o] Rom. 16 16. and 1 Cor. 16. 20. and 1 Thess. 5. 26. and 1 Pet. 5. 14.

What would our Saviour teach us from this custome of theirs, of saluting one another?

Quest. 4. First, that not all the customes of the world are to bee declined, but that wee may in some things apply our selves to the manners of the nations wherein we are: Namely, I. in ceremonies, thus Ambrose perswades Augustine for the peace of the Church to fast upon that day which is used in the place where he is: that is, if he be in a place where they use to fast upon the Saturday, let him doe so; and when hee is present with those who use to fast upon Friday, let him doe so also. II. In outward things; here observe, the manners and customes of nations are threefold, viz.

Answ. 1. First, vicious and impious, these are never to be imitated: none are to bee followed in drinking, or whoring, or pride, or murther, or truce-breaking, or the like: though it bee a nationall sinne.

262 Secondly, some manners and customes are vaine, phantasticall, idle, and ridiculous; as the fashion of apparell, and complements, and the like, which ingenuous natures affect not, but slight.

Thirdly, some customes there are which are lawfull and laudable enough, and in these wee may apply our selves to those amongst whom we live: for here onely the rule holdes true and warrantable.

Cum fueris Romæ, Romano vivito more.
Cum fueris alibi, vivito more loci.

If thou in Rome doe range,
A Roman seeme to bee:
If thou thy dwelling change,
Live like them that live with thee.

Secondly, our Saviour would teach us by this Answ. 2. custome of Salutation, that we ought to crray our selves gently, lovingly, courteously, and meekely towards all.

Sect. 2. Obiect. §. 2. Doe not the Publicans the same?] Bellarmine objecteth this place to prove, that unbeleevers may performe good workes: our Saviour saith, if you love those who love you, and salute your brethren onely, what doe you more then the heathen and infidels: Therefore the heathens may shew some signes of love and good will towards their brethren and friends; which is a good worke; for otherwise Christ would not have said, What doe ye more? but why doe ye this?

Anſ. 1. First, workes are called Good either materialiter or formaliter, either quoad operis ſubſtantiam, or quoad rationem boni: that is, In good workes there are two things to bee considered of, the Matter or substance of the worke, and the manner of doing it well; as for example, when a man gives bread to the hungry, or loves his friends, or salutes his neighbours, he performes a good worke for the substance or matter of it: when a man doth this, with a good will, or with a good intention, or out of a love unto God or vertue; hee performes a good worke for the manner of it.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those workes which are good not onely in regard of the substance and matter of them, but also in regard of the manner of doing; we grant that they are good, and not sin: but those which are good onely in regard of the substance, we say are stayned with sinne: And this Bellarmine himself confesseth, when he saith Potest ſervari præceptum ſecundum ſubſtantiam operis, etiam cum peccato.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, wee grant that heathens and infidels may performe workes which are good in respect of the matter of the worke, but not those which are good in respect of the manner of doing; that is, they doe bonum non bene, a good thing but not well: he who desires to see a Jesuiticall conflict, let him reade Maldonate upon this verse, where hee shall see him fighting for us against his brother Jesuite; affirming boldly that none shall bee rewarded for anie of these workes here mentioned, except they doe them propter Deum, for Gods sake.

Fourthly, Bellarmines proofe is frivolous, in Answ. 4. saying, if the worke had not beene good, Christ would have said Cur hoc facitis? Why doe ye this? and not, quid amplius facitis? what doe ye more? for they are both one in effect: for if every good worke be rewarded by God; and these to love our friends, or to salute our neighbours, are not rewarded by him; and are denied a reward because Pagans & Publicans do thē: Then it must needes follow, that these workes shall not bee rewarded by God in Pagans and Publicans; neither in them are good workes [p].

VERS. 48. Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father, which is in heaven is perfect. Vers. 48. Sect. 1. Queſt.

§. 1. Be ye therefore.] These words having reference unto those which goe before, it may be demanded, By what degree our Saviour ascended to perfection?

Answ. 1. First, hee would not have his to offer wrong unto their neighbours or brethren.

Answ. 2. Secondly, not to be revenged more then the wrong suffered, or sustained requireth.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, not to bee revenged so much as the wrong done requireth, but to be quiet.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, to suffer further injury, rather then revenge any.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, to doe more then he requireth, that doth him wrong.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, not to hate him that doth him wrong: but even to love him.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, to be beneficiall unto him, and to pray to God for him. Chryſoſt. Homil. 18. ſ.

Argu. We produce this place against that Popish distinction of Precepts and Counsells: Our Saviour here saith, ye shall be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect: Therefore all Counsels tending to perfection are Commandements. If there be any thing, whereby we may more neerely attaine unto perfection, wee are commanded and bound to doe it: as for example, if a man can better obtaine this perfection of godlinesse, by living single, if he have the gift, hee ought to doe it.

Replie. Bellarmine (lib. 2. de Monach. Cap. 9. Arg. 5.) distinguisheth: There are (saith he) two kindes of Perfection; a lesse which consisteth in the full keeping of the law, which is necessary to salvation: & this perfection is commanded in this vers. There is a greater perfectiō not simply necessarie unto salvation, but required for the obtaining of a more excellent degree of glory; and this perfection consists in the observation of counsels; and this our Saviour meaneth, when he biddeth the young man to sell all that he hath, that he may be perfect, Mark. 10. 21.

Answ. 1. First, there can be no greater perfection, then the absolute fulfilling of the law, which is in love; wherefore that which he calleth the lesse perfection is the best, seeing it fulfilleth the law [q].

[q] Rom. 13. 10. and 1 Iohn 4. 12, 16, 17

Answ. 2. Secondly, the perfection spoken of in this verse verse is the best perfection; we must labour to be perfect as God is perfect: now what greater perfection: can there be, than to be perfect according to the example of God?

Answ. 3. Thirdly, that perfection which our Saviour in this verse speaketh of, is that which is described before verse 44. Love your enemies, &c. which perfection all the Papists referre unto a Counsel, not unto a precept, as doth also Bellarmine himselfe (de Justificat. lib. 4. cap. 3.) and therefore according unto himselfe his distinction is false and frivolous. Bellarm. enervat. Amesi. tom. 2. fol. 163.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, that thing whereunto Christ exhorteth the young man, is not so great a point of perfection as this whereof Christ speaketh, that we should love our enemies; for a man may give all his goods to the poore, and yet bee without love[r], but a man cannot love his enemies, unlesse he have love: And therefore that exhortation to perfection, containeth not onely a Counsell, but a command.

[r] 1 Cor. 13. 3. [f] Willet. synops. fol. 323. Sect. 2.

§. 2. Be ye therefore perfect.]

Quest. 1. What is meant by this exhortation unto perfection?

Answ. 1. First, some understand it particularly, of love and mercy towards our enemies; because the true praise of Christian perfection doth consist in the power of pardoning, and loving our enemies with our heart.

Why doth Christian perfection consist herein?

First, because there is nothing more difficult to nature than to pardon and love our enemies.

Secondly, because there is nothing more opposite unto Sathan than this is, to love those who hate us.

Thirdly, because there is nothing wherein we more resemble (or come neere unto) our God than this, to forgive those who have injured us, and to love them who hate us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand this exhortation generally: as if our Saviour would say, study, and labour after every degree and kind of perfection which is in your Father.

Obiect. But none are or can be perfect so long as they live here; for none are good (Matth. 19. 17.) but in many things sinnefull (Iames 3. 2.) and if any deny this, and say he is no sinner, Iohn will tell him he is a lyar[t].

[t] 1 Iohn 1. 8, 10. Answ.

There is a double perfection, to wit, either

- First, Absolute, which is an herb growing onely in heaven: and is found in God, the Angels, and glorified Saints: this perfection is spoken of in 1 Corinth. 13. 10. Heb. 12. 23. and Phil. 3. 12. This we cannot attaine unto in this life, but must endeavour unto, as long as we live.
- Secondly, limited, which consists in sincerity, when the heart is upright: examples whereof we have 1 King. 15. 14. and Phil. 3. 15. Now this is required in us, and is called perfection, in a three-fold regard; namely, I. Because there is in us a sincere purpose to obey and please the Lord in all things. II. Because we have the seeds of all vertue in us. III. Because we endeavour daily, to bee more holy, more pure, more perfect, Ephes. 4. 13.

Quest. 2. Why must we thus labour after this perfection of sinceritie?

Answ. 1. First, because it is commanded, and that both in the Law, and Gospell: I. In the Old Testament, it is required of Abraham, be perfect, Gen. 17. 1. and of all the people of God, Deut. 18. 13. and of Solomon[u]. II In the New Testament, Be ye perfect. 2 Cor. 13. 11.

[u] 1 Chron. 28. 9.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is commended, and that both, I. In the Old Testament, as in Noah, Gen. 6. 9 and in Hezekiah. 2 King. 20. 3. and Asa. 1 King. 15. 14. II. In the New Testament, Zachary and Elizabeth were both perfect, Luke 1. 6.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the contrary is condemned; I. In the Old Testament, Amaziah is reproved, because he sought not God with a perfect heart. 2 Chron. 25. 2. And II. in the New Testament, Simon Magus is reproached because his heart was not perfect in the sight of the Lord. Acts 8. 21.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because this is the end of the Ministery of the Gospel: Ministers teach that their people may be perfect, Col. 1 28, that as pure virgins they may present them unto God. 2 Cor. 11 2.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because this the godly pray for: Epaphras striveth fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand perfect, and compleat in all the will of God, Colos. 4. 12.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because we must labour to regulate and conforme our lives according to the will of God, but that is perfect: Rom. 12. 2. study to know, what the good, and absolute, and perfect will of God is.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because God loves those which are perfect, and will helpe them, in the time of need. The eyes of the Lord run to and fro thorowout the whole earth, to shew himselfe strong in the behalfe of them whose heart is perfect towards him. 2 Chron. 16. 9.

Quest. 3. What kind of perfection must we endeavour after?

Perfection is two-fold; Generall, which is

- First, Fide, in faith: gird up the loynes of your mind, that you may believe perfectly[u]. Answer. [u] 1 Pet. 1. 13.
- Secondly, Penitentiâ, in Repentance, Resolution, and a true Purpose of the heart;
  - First to hate, leave, and forsake all sins, the least as well as greatest
  - Secondly, to abstaine from the appearances of evill (1 Thess. 5. 22.) that is, the circumstances of sin, and all scandalous actions.
  - Thirdly, to detest all evill, even in the hidden man of the heart.
  - Fourthly, to loath and leave all sin for ever, even untill death.

fold;

Particular, and that both fold, to wit, either:
- Within, in:
  - A right heart; which is called juſtitia veritatis, holineſſe of truth w and ſincerity and truth: Ioſh. 24.14. and 1 Chron. 29.9. and 2 Chron. 19.9.
  - A good conſcience, 2 Corinth. 1.12.
  - Knowledge, Rom. 16.19. and 1 Corinth. 2.6. and 14.20. and Heb. 5.14.
- Without both, in:
  - Our life and converſation: here read theſe places 2 Samuel 22. 24. Epheſ. 6.13. Phillip. 3.15. and 2 Tim. 3.17. & 1 Iohn 2.5. and 4.12. and 1 King. 11.4. and 15.3.
  - Our words, ſee James 3.2.
  - Patience, in wrongs, injuries, tribulations, and the like, Iames 1.4.
  - The circumſtances of puritie: following after thoſe things which are honeſt, and of good report x, labouring to doe that which is good, and to doe it well.

w Epheſ 4 24.

x Phil. 4.8

Queſt. 4 By what meanes may wee attaine unto this perfection of ſincerity?

Anſw. 1. First, be watchfull over thy wayes, and life, ſtand upon thy watch-Tower, be a perpetuall Centinell, becauſe thy enemies are both many, and crafty, and ſtrong, and very vigilant.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, have regard unto the Law of God, let that be thy Judge; marke and obſerve that ſtrict purity which is therein required, and remember, thy duty is to labour to fulfill all righteouſneſſe.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, looke upon the godly, and Saints upon earth, and imitate them: Brethren follow me, and together with me, them alſo who walke according to our example. Phil. 3.17.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, meditate upon the infinite purity, and perfection of God: but of this in the next Section.

Sect. 3. §. 3. As your Father is perfect.]

Queſt. 1. Muſt we labour to aſpire to the infinite purity, and perfection of God? is not this inſolent impiety (as Gualter thinkes) little leſſe than the ſinne of Lucifer?

Anſw. 1. First, to thinke that wee can bee ſo perfect as God is, is the errour of the Novatians, and Adamites: contradicted by Saint Paul in theſe places, 1 Corinth. 15.10,57. and 2 Cor. 3.5. and 5.7.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, but to aſpire, and ſtrive unto this perfection is pious; and to grieve becauſe we are ſo imperfect is a good thing, for thus doth David, Pſalme 120.5. and Paul Rom. 7.24.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, and for us not to reſt, but as long as we live to endeavour to be nearer unto God, to be more perfect, and more and more reſemble our God in righteouſneſſe, and true holines, is laudable and commendable, yea commanded in this verſe: Ad ſimilitudinem non equalitatem, Calvin.

Queſt. 2. Wherein muſt we imitate our God?

Anſw. 1. First, in love and charity towards our brethren, and that many ſeverall wayes: namely, we muſt imitate him I. In the object of love, that is, first we muſt love our enemies, for he loved us when we were enemies. Secondly, wee muſt love the poore, for he raiſeth up the poore out of the duſt, &c Pſalme 113.7,8. II. in the degree of love, wee muſt love them as brethren; for the Lord loved as a Father doth his children, read Pſalm 27.10. and 103.13. and Eſa. 49.15. III. in patience towards thoſe that wrong us; for God is patient towards us, though we provoke him daily. IV. in our actions: God gives us good things not evill, and therefore we ſhould doe good not evill unto others. V. God never puniſheth but for good: he in all his corrections reſpects the end, chaſtening us as a Father doth his children, that wee might be amended a. Herein alſo wee ſhould imitate our God, never deſiring that thoſe who have offended us ſhould be puniſhed out of revenge, but corrected that they might learne to amend. VI. We muſt imitate God in affection; he is loath to puniſh, and grieves when he corrects, but he rejoyceth to ſhew mercy, Pſalme 103.8. Ezech. 18.23,31, Thus ſhould wee doe. VII. God in rigour and juſtice remembers mercy. Mic. 7 18. ſo muſt we, remembring ſummum jus, ſumma injuria, to uſe the extremity of the Law is hard and unchriſtian-like meaſure.

a Pro. 3. 12. and Heb. 12.5.

Secondly, we muſt imitate the perfection of God in generall, that is, labour I. to be pure from evill, yea from all evill, and that alwayes: II. to be compleate in all good things, whether towards God, or towards our neighbour, or in our ſelves, Tit. 2.11. Taking no liberty to doe any thing that is evill, or to leave undone any thing that is good: That ſo we may be perfect according to the ſimilitude of our Father. Anſw. 2.

§. 4. As your Father which is in heaven.] Sect. 4.

Why doth our Saviour adde this amplification, Qui es in cœlis, Which is in heaven? had not the mention of the exemplar, your Father, been ſufficient? Queſt. 1.

Our Saviour addes theſe words to teach us, That the meditation of heaven ought to incite us unto the imitation of that perfection which is in God. Anſw.

What glory, felicity, or excellency is there in heaven, that the remembrance thereof ſhould excite and provoke us unto ſo hard a worke, as this is here mentioned? Queſt. 2.

The glory of heaven may be conjectured, and amplified, both from the Answ. Price which it cost, namely the blood of Christ[b], wherein note,

- Quis? Who bought it? God the Father, who best of all knew the value and worth of it.
- Quomodo? How was this price paid? not unwillingly, but willingly.
- Pro quibus? For whom was it bought; not for himself but for us.

Names and elegancies thereof: I. Because life is sweet unto all, therefore it is called life eternall, Mat. 25.44. The righteous goe into eternall life. II. Because all men desire some certaine estate, therefore it is called an Inheritance, immortall, incorruptible, and undefiled, 1 Pet. 1. 4. III. Because all men have some ambition and aspiring thoughts in them, therefore it is called a Kingdome[c], and a crowne of glory, 2 Tim. 4. 8. IV. Because all men delight in the light, therefore it is called light inaccessible[d]. V. Because all men desire honour and glory, therefore it is called a weight of glory[e]. Circumstances, and that both of the Place: Here observe, men generally desire stately houses, and love them so much the more, if they were built by some rare and famous Architectour, principally if they bee safe, healthfull, delightfull, and pleasant habitations: Now heaven is a glorious place in all these regards both in respect of the

- Creation, and fabrique therof; it being the Lords Master-peece, in inanimate things so beautified and adorned with Sunne, Moone, and Starres, that we may well say, Si tanta extrà quid intus? if the outside be so glorious; what is the inside?
- Creator and builder of it, it being a prime peece of the best Architectour in the world: to wit, the worke-manship of God[h].
- Habitation and situation thereof, it being free from all danger, anoyances, greevances, and evils whatsoever, it is a pleasant place in it selfe, and a place free from the assaults of enemies, or danger of sicknesse, or the like.

Meate, we shall then be fed with Nectar and Ambrosia, Angels food; yea heaven shall be unto us as a continuall banquet.

- And glory.

Perpetuall possession thereof: it being an inheritance that never fadeth away[i].

[i] 1 Pet. 1. 4.

Thus we see the reason why our Saviour addes these words, Which is in heaven, that the meditation of heaven, and the joy and glory thereof may spurre us forward to strive and endeavour to bee perfect as our heavenly Father is perfect.

Quest. 3. What benefit or fruit can we reape from these meditations of the glory of heaven?

Answ. 1. First, the remembrance hereof will expell other thoughts from our hearts.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it will be a means to terrifie us from sinne: the remembrance hereof will make us say unto our selves: shall I loose heaven, and deprive my selfe of such glory for sinne? or doe I thinke that ever I shal enter into that pure place, if I thus pollute my selfe.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the meditation of heaven and the glory thereof will move and provoke us unto that which is good, yea, facilitate the worke and exercises of religion.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, these thoughts seriously ruminated will facilitate all afflictions, and make us beare our burthens with a great deale more ease: The good Martyre did patiently indure his sharpe break-fast because he should have a sweete supper: and Saint Paul all his tribulations because of that heavenly recompence of reward, Rom. 8.18. and 1 Corinthians 4. 17. &c. 2 Timothy 4. 8.

CHAP.

CHAPTER VI.

Vers. 1. VERS. 1. Take heed that ye doe not your almes before men, to be seene of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in Heaven.

OUR Saviour in this Chapter doth reprove the Scribes and Pharisees, 1. For their Hypocrisie in giving, praying, and fasting: 2. For their care of the world: because these spoile the best worke which is performed.

Quest. 1. What are wee to avoid and abstaine from in the performance of good workes, according to our Saviours present institution and Doctrine?

Answ. From good workes these things ought to bee expelled: namely, First, Hypocrisie, or a conformity of the outward actions onely, wanting the true internall motions of the heart. Secondly, ambition, or the seeking of the praise and glory of men. Thirdly, pride, puffing up the mind for the works wrought either before God or men.

Quest. 2. How ought good workes to bee performed, according to Christs present purpose?

Answ. It appeares by an Antithesis of the former question: namely, First, they must be done ex animo; that is, there must be a conformity betweene the internall motions of the heart, and the externall good actions. Secondly, principally, because it is Gods will and commandement, therefore that we may performe that obedience which is due unto him, we must labour in good workes. Thirdly, in our best performances we must labour to retaine an humble minde, confessing we have done no more then was our duty to doe, Chem. harm. f. 591. fine.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Take heed that yee doe not your Almes before men.]

Some (Vulg. & Beza) reade here τὴν ἐλεημοσύνην Almes; some Manuscripts have δικαιοσύνην μὴ ποιεῖν (sic Augustin. de serm. in Monte. cap. 2.) doe not your righteousnesse before men; the sense is one and the same, for to doe righteousnesse is sometimes with the Hebrewes to give almes; yea, they called Almes righteousnesse, as wee see, Deut. 24. 13. If thou restore unto the poore his raiment, it shall be righteousnesse unto thee before the Lord thy God: The word there used is (Tsedakah) which the Septuagints renders not δικαιοσύνην, but ἐλεημοσύνην Almes, so also Daniel 4. 25. So Salomon saith, Righteousnesse delivers from death (Prov. 10. 2. and 11. 4.) but Tobit 12. 9. It is almes delivers from death, Tsedakah being there expounded by ἐλεημοσύνη; so also Psal. 112. 3. 9. and 2 Cor. 9. 9. it is said, His righteousnesse endureth for ever, that is, his almes.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Before men.]

Is this absolutely commanded, or are we injoyned never to give before men? Quest. 1.

No, as thus appeares, 1. The Apostolicall Church used contributions in their publike meetings and assemblies. 2. In the Apostles time they sent reliefe publikly to other Churches. 3. Christ commands, that our light should shine before others: that is, that our good workes may be done in the sight of others, Mat. 5. 16. And therefore from these three particulars it is cleere, that wee are not absolutely forbidden to give almes before men. Answ.

We give almes because God commands us, and we expect a reward from him; what need we then doe them before men? if God see them is it not sufficient? Quest. 2.

There is a good and necessary use of holding and shewing forth good workes, both in generall and particular. Answ.

First, there is a necessary use of holding forth good workes in generall, and that in a foure-fold regard; namely, 1. Of our God. 2. Of our Neighbour. 3. Of our selves. 4. Of our profession.

First, in respect of God, it is requisite to doe good before men, that so hee may be glorified, Matth. 5. 16.

Secondly, in respect of our brethren, it is necessary, that so we may be as lights and good examples unto them, to encourage them in the way of God, and to provoke them unto good workes, Phil. 2. 15, Thirdly, in regard of our selves, that we may procure a good name and fame unto our selves, we must be carefull to procure things honest in the sight of all men, Rom. 12. 17. and 2 Cor. 8. 21. and 1 Tim. 3. 7.

Fourthly, we must shew forth outward good workes, in respect of the Gospel which wee professe; we must strive that the mouthes of all men may be stopped, and that the glory of the Gospel may be advanced.

Whose mouthes is it, that we must be principally carefull to stop? Quest. 3.

First, of Papists, who brag and boast of their workes, both of charity and religious exercises; let those who professe Christ, be ready to give to him that lackes, and frequent in reading, hearing, meditating, and praying; let not Papists doe more in a blind zeale superstitiously, then professours in a true zeale religiously. Answ. 1.

Secondly, they must stop the mouthes of prophane persons, who are ready scandalously to say, that they are outwardly holy, but inwardly prophane; they seeme without religious, but within are vicious. Let our lives, actions, and conversations be such, that they may have no cause thus to detract us. Answ. 2.

Secondly,

Secondly, more particularly, there is a necessary use of shewing forth this worke of Almes even before others; for hee which is able to give much may give publikely: and that for these two causes; First, that the poore knowing, thou wilt give, may beg of thee, and make their wants knowne unto thee. Secondly, that thou mayst remove the imputation of covetousnesse and hard-heartednesse from thee, which would bee cast upon thee, if thou wert knowne to be rich in goods, and not knowne to bee rich in good workes.

Quest. 4. Who are faulty in this particular?

Answ. 1. First, those who pretend a love unto the poor, and seeme to pitty them, but give them nothing.

Answ. 2. Secondly, those who say they give in private, and either doe not, or else give so little, that they would be ashamed to have it publikely beheld.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, those who deny to relieve the poore when they beg, with this excuse, they will not give publikely; but this should not hinder them at all, for it is lawfull to give publikely, if so bee we doe it not for the praise of men.

Vers. 2. VERS. 2. Therefore, when thou doest thine Almes, doe not sound a Trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do, in the Synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward.

Sect. 1. §. 1. When thou doest thine Almes.

Objct. The Papists say, Almes must be done, Intentione placendi Deo, with an intention to please God thereby: And for the proofe hereof object this place, thus; Our Saviour here reproveth the Pharisees because they gave Almes to be seene of men: but we must give our almes in secret, that God may reward us, vers. 5. as they seeke the praise of men, so wee must seeke the praise of God[f].

[f] Bellarm. de bonis operibus in particular. li. 3. cap. 13.

Answ. Our Saviour Christ biddeth us not in this place in giving our almes, to propound and set before us the praise and reward of God, but only to take heed of the praise of men, and to shunne the same by giving in secret, and the praise or reward of God followeth upon this simplicitie and singlenesse of heart in giving of almes: We grant that our almes-deeds are well pleasing and acceptable unto God through Christ; for with such sacrifices God is well pleased, (Heb. 13. 16.) but yet we must not doe them onely for hope of a reward, or the like respect, but for conscience sake, and out of duty towards God.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Sound not a Trumpet.

Obser. 1. We see here, Christ 1. taxeth the accustomed vices. And 2. particularly, names, Trumpets, Synagogues and streets. Yea 3. reproveth them, calling them Hypocrites; teaching us hereby, that it is lawfull publikely to reprehend the sins of our dayes, and the sinnes of our hearers.

Quest. 1. What benefit reape hearers by being reproved, for it should rather seeme to doe hurt then good?

Answ. 1. First, it tries hearers, whether they be the children of God, or not; for many men deceive both themselves and others in many things, who are discovered by spurning at reproofe: the children of God are like David, who takes kindly a particular reprehension (2 Sam. 12. 12.) but wicked men cannot endure thus to be touched to the quicke.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is a meanes to humble hearers; for it opens the eyes, and awakes out of sleepe: Reade 1 Cor. 14. 24. &c. being reproved he falls downe: so the Prophet Esaiah telleth the people, that their carnall security shall be talked of and reproved, and it shall be a vexation to understand the report[g].

[g] Esa. 28. 19.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is a meanes to make sinne odious unto us: there is a certaine false sweetnesse in sinne, which reproofe doth discover and often removes; as we may see in Ahab, who being reproved, seemed by his sorrow to loath the sinnes, which he had committed.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, it doth excite us to amend: gentle reproofe makes a man carefull to reforme what is amisse.

Quest. 2. What is meant by this phrase, Sound not a Trumpet?

Answ. 1. First, some thinke that it was a Proverbe, whereby was signified, that they must not publish in the eyes of the world their almes-deeds: thus Gualtherus.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the phrase was not proverbiall, but was derived from the custome of the Jewes, who were called by a Trumpet to these kind of assemblies.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is observable, that this was commanded by God in generall, who caused Moses to make two silver Trumpets, that by the sound thereof, the assembly might assemble together at the doore of the Tabernacle: yea by the Trumpet they were assembled unto battell, vers. 19. 10. whence a Feast of the blowing of Trumpets was instituted[i]. We might observe two things from hence; namely.

[h] Numb. 10. 1. &c. vers. 9. 10

[i] Num. 29. 1.

Obser. 2. First, that holy and divine institutions may be corrupted and abused, as was the brazen Serpent.

Obser. 3. Secondly, that all kinds of hunting after vaine glory is prohibited, principally in the performance of any good duties. But I enlarge not these in this place.

Sect. 3. §. 3. As doe the Hypocrites, or Pharisees.

The meaning of these words is, that in the performance of good duties, we must not be like unto them.

Quest. What was the manner of the Pharisees and Hypocrites in morall worship?

Answ. 1. First, the Pharisees were diligent in small things, but negligent in great, Matth. 23. 23. but wee must principally respect the greater things of the Law, not neglecting the lesse.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Pharisees in their good workes sought their owne glory, but wee must seeke the glory of God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Pharisees performed externall worship, but neglected internall; but wee must both.

VERS.

Vers. 3. VERS. 3. But when thou doſt almes, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doth.

Sect. 1. § 1. When thou doſt almes.] Chriſt wee ſee here doth not reprove giving of almes, neither forbid it, but allowes it when thou giveſt almes: Teaching us that almes deeds are to be done, it being a good worke; although ſome abuſe them. Obſerv.

Are all almes good, and to be done? Queſt. 1.

Anſw. Almes are either Good, and theſe are twofold, viz. Evill and counterfeite, whereof ſomething hath beene ſaid afore, Chap. 5. verſ. 8. and ſomething remaines elſwhere to be ſpoken of. Good, and theſe are twofold, viz. Publike: theſe belong unto the Magiſtrate, (ſee Gualt. ſup. fol. 198. Private: theſe being unto us, and are to be done ſecretly, according to our Saviour Chriſts preſent injunction.

Queſt. 2. Why muſt we give almes?

Anſw. 1. First, becauſe God hath commanded it; If there bee among you a poore man, thou ſhalt not harden thy heart againſt him, but open thy hand wide unto him, Deut. 15. 7. Hence I argue, that which God doth command man muſt obey: but God commands us to give almes: Therefore we muſt obey him herein.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe God hath commended it. That which the Lord commends all men ſhould practiſe which deſire the praiſe of God. But God commends almes deeds, He hath diſtributed, hee hath given to the poore, his righteouſneſſe remaineth for ever, Pſal. 112. 6.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, God hath taken ſpeciall care of the poore, giving particular charges for their proviſion, and therefore by no meanes we muſt neglect them. 1. The Lord ordained that the poore ſhould have all that grew the ſeventh yeare. k Exo. 23. 11. 2. The tenths of the third yeare, Deut. 14. 28. 3. Every yeare they muſt have ſome gleanings left for them; yea ſome ſheaves, Levit. 14. 9. and 23. 22. and Deut. 24. 19.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, becauſe the principall care of the Apoſtles was, to make proviſion for the poore; and therefore if wee would follow ſuch famous leaders, we muſt be ready to diſtribute. Read theſe places, and you ſhall ſee the great care the Apoſtles had of the poore, Act. 2. 45. and 4. 32, 35. and 6. 1. and 11. 29. and Rom. 12. 13. and 15. 26. and 2 Cor. 8. 1. &c. and 9. Chapter. and Gal. 2. 10.

Queſt. 3. Why will the Lord permit poore men to be? cannot he give unto all, and provide for all?

Anſw. 1. First, God made both the poore man and the rich, Prov. 22. 2. and can make the poore rich if he pleaſe.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Lord ordaines and ſuffers poore men to be for our ſake; that thereby he might both teach and prove us: for God hereby doth teach unto The poore theſe two things. First Humilitie. Secondly Patience. Others, theſe two things, namely, 1. Compaſſion. 2. Bounty.

Queſt. 4. It is ſomething hard for a man to diſtribute and impart that, which by his owne labour hee hath gotten, unto others: how therefore may we be moved or encouraged unto this duty of almes giving?

Anſw. 1. First, remember hereby thou ſhalt ſhew thy ſelfe a Chriſtian: he that is not mercifull is no Chriſtian: and he that gives not (being able) is not mercifull, Reade Iames 2. 15. and 1 Iohn 3. 17, 18. and therefore thoſe who make a profeſſion of the Goſpel, and yet are hard hearted doe argue their religion to be in vaine, their hearts not being ſoftened with the fire of love, Iam. 1. 26, 27.

Secondly, conſider thy owne eſtate and condition; how that either thou or thine may want, and therefore that pittie thou couldeſt deſire might be ſhewed unto thee in that caſe, thou ſhouldeſt ſhew unto others, Heb. 13. 3. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, labour to ſee God and Chriſt in the poore, (In as much as ye did it to them, ye did it to me) when thou ſeeſt thy poore brother in want, ſuppoſe thou ſaw thy eldeſt brother (Chriſt) in need, and looke what thou wouldeſt doe unto him, doe unto the poore, for that is as done unto Chriſt. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, looke upon the primitive times, and Chriſtians whereof that miſcreant ſaid; Impij Galilæi & ſuos & noſtros nutriunt (Iulian. Apoſt. Euſeb.) Theſe Chriſtians are merciful both to their owne ſort and ſect, and alſo to heathens and infidels: And doe thou likewiſe. Anſw. 4.

Fifthly, remember the puniſhment is due unto thee if thou bee not charitable: Thou ſhalt have judgement without mercy, if thou ſhew no mercy, James 2. 13. Anſw. 5.

Sixthly, conſider that thou ſhalt not looſe what thou giveſt, but ſhalt gaine thereby, Prov. 11. 25. and 19. 17. Anſw. 6.

What are the Impediments which hinder us from giving of almes, and the remedies againſt thoſe Impediments? Queſt. 5.

Anſw. The Remora are many, and therefore for brevities ſake I will carry a long together, both the one and the other, the hinderance and the helpe, the impediment and the remedy.

Impediment. 1. Firſt, the love of riches hinders us from relieving our brethren, becauſe thoſe thornes choake the ſeeds of charity and mercy (Mat. 13. 20.) And therefore let us not love riches (1 Joh. 2. 15.) leſt the love of them bring us into temptations and ſnares (1 Tim. 6. 9. 10. 17.) and make us preferre our mony before our God, and before our brother.

Imped. 2. Secondly, the care of the world, and the feare of poverty, often hinders us from almes deeds; we are loath to give, being fearefull to want: And therefore we ſhould learne to walke, and live by faith, 2 Cor. 5. 17. to labour to be good, and doe good, and then we ſhall not want, Mat. 6. 33.

Imped. 3. Thirdly, the care of and for our children doth doth often hinder us from the workes of mercy; we are unwilling to diſtribute, leſt they ſhould lacke. But this is an errour and fault: indeed parents ſhould be carefull not to be idle, or prodigall, waſting their eſtates with riotous living, or contentions, exhauſting their wealth by brawles and ſutes; but they muſt not feare to give almes: for he that doth ſo, ſpareth he knowes not for whom [m], on the contrary, neither the liberall, nor his ſhall lacke [n]. A man cannot better provide for his children, then by giving a part of their portion unto the Lord to keepe, who will certainely returne it unto them with advantage.

m Pſa. 39. 6.
n Pſal. 37. 25.

Imped. 4. Fourthly, the opinion of our proper and peculiar intereſt in that which we poſſeſſe, is an impediment often unto us, as we ſee in Nabal, ſhall I take my bread and give it to others? 1 Sam. 25. 11. But what haſt thou, which thou haſt not received [o]? yea what art thou? not the proper owner, but onely a ſteward who muſt give account of every peny given unto thee.

o 1 Cor. 4. 7.

Imped. 5. Fifthly, ſometimes the ſmalneſſe of the gift hinders the giver; many ſay they are not able to give much, and therefore they may as well give nothing, as ſo little as they are able to give: But feare not that; for a ſmall almes ſhall bee accepted if given willingly, as followeth afterwards.

Imped. 6. Sixthly, the multitude of poore hinders a multitude from helping the poore: but men muſt doe what they can, giving as much, and to as many as they can, and God will accept of it.

Imped. 7. Seventhly, ſome are diſcouraged from doing good in this kinde by reaſon of the paucitie and rarity of examples, they ſee ſo few liberall, that they withhold their hands from the poore, fearing leſt they ſhould be thought ſingular: But here we ſhould not ſtay for others, but remember that it is an honour to goe before, and to be an example unto others; becauſe in a good worke a man had better be firſt then ſecond, yea, conſider that although there are but few that are charitable, yet there are ſome: and it is a ſhame, that we ſhould not be excited by thoſe who are good, and yet bee hindered by thoſe who ate evill.

Imped. 8. Eightly, the unworthineſſe and wickedneſſe of the poore; this was anſwered before, Matth. 5. 8.

Imped. 9. Ninthly, ſome refuſe to give by reaſon of ſome private grudge and ſpleene againſt the poore; but here we muſt remember 1. that this is an unworthy thing to bee angry or to beare a grudge unto a poore man: Non dignum irâ Cæſaris: yea, 2. conſider that the charity is ſo much the greater, which is extended unto an unworthy perſon.

Imp. 10. Tenthly, ἀσυμπλία, the want of naturall affection, or an inſenſibility of the ſympathy of parts: And therefore wee ſhould remember 1. that they and wee are but all one body; 2. that Chriſt is the head of this body. And therefore 3. We ſhould ſee Chriſt in our brother. And 4. Be as ſenſible of our brothers want, as one member is ſenſible of the paine and anguiſh of another.

What is the meaning of theſe words? 269

First, ſome allegorize them thus, we muſt doe nothing ſiniſterly, but all things dexterouſly, or in a dexterous worke, let no ſiniſter thing bee mingled: as for example, Almes is a good worke, and therefore it muſt be free from covetouſneſſe, anger, diſgracefull tearmes, vaine-glory, opinion of merit, partiality, and the like [p]. Queſt. 1. Anſw. 1.

p Gualt. ſ. Anſw. 2.

Secondly, ſome oppoſe theſe words onely to publike almes; as if our Saviour would ſay, give in ſecret, of which afterwards in his proper place.

Thirdly, ſome further ſtretch the words; as if our Saviour meant an abſolute concealing of the workes of mercy, let not thy left hand know, &c. That is, let none know it at all; or do not onely conceale what thou doſt in part, but altogether. Anſw 3.

Fourthly, ſome underſtand theſe words of hiding our almes-deeds from our ſelves: let not thy left hand, &c. As if our Saviour would ſay, thy good deeds muſt be concealed from thy ſelfe, if it be poſſible, leſt thou ſhouldeſt be proud of them in thy ſelfe. Anſ. 4.

Why may we not behold, and looke upon the good duties which we performe? and delight in that good which is done by us? Queſt. 2.

Firſt, becauſe for the moſt part they are hypocrites that bragge of their good deeds. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, becauſe they ſeldome ſtand who bragge and boaſt: Peter makes a galiant promiſe, That though all the world forſake Chriſt yet he will never forſake him, Mat. 26. 33. 35. but hee performes it badly, verſe 69. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, becauſe this will make us bee ready to truſt in our ſelves, and ſo come the more ſpeedily into danger. Sub hoſte quem proſtravit moritur, qui de bono quod geſſerat elevatur. Greg. Mor. lib. 20. He periſheth by his enemie whom hee hath ſubdued, who is puffed up with that good worke, which he hath performed. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, for a man to behold the good works which he hath done with a delight in them as his, is a pride no leſſe, then outwardly to bragge and boaſt of them: for there is a double pride, viz. I. to be outwardly puffed up for ſomething done, or for ſome naturall parts or endowments: II. to be inwardly proud of ſome good worke, although no pride appeare outwardly: this is alſo carefully to be avoided: The fault (in both theſe) is not in him who praiſeth and commendeth the good worke done, but in him who is proud, either of the praiſe given, or of the deede done. Iactantia non eſt vitium laudis humanæ, ſed perverſæ animæ, laudem amantis [q]. Boaſting is not the vice of the man who praiſeth, but of the perverſe minde which loveth the praiſe of men. And therfore let us not accuſtome our ſelves to reade over and over the Bookes of our good deedes, for that is a Catalogue which will puffe us up, and make us with Pygmalion fall in love with our owne handiworke; for good workes are often like beautie, wit, learning, and knowledge, which are known, and being known puffe up, 1 Cor. 8. 1. Anſw. 4.

q Auguſt. de civit. Dei, 14.

Is it never lawfull for us to looke upon or to Queſt. 3.

270 ſpeake of the good deedes we doe?

Anſ. 1. Firſt ſometime the aſpect of our good works is lawfull & profitable, namely, in a threefold time; I. in the time of accuſation; when ſathan ſtrongly aſſaults, and we are not ſenſible of the ſhield of faith wherewith we ſhould reſiſt him; then it is good and neceſſary for us, to prove our faith by our works, w^ch we cannot do without the looking upon our good workes. II. In our daily examination; we ſhould ſeriouſly examine whether we be in nature or in grace, in old Adam or in new[r]. Now the tree is knowne by his fruit, Mat. 7. 16. 20. and Iames 2. 17. and therefore for the attaining unto the true knowledge of our eſtates, it is profitable to looke unto our good workes. III. When the heart growes dull and too forgetfull of rendring thankes unto the Lord for his great mercies, then wee may conſider how he hath waſhed us from our former pollutions, how he hath renewed our ſtrength, how he hath mortified ſinne in us, how he hath freed us from the ſnares of death, and how he enables us in ſome weake meaſure to obey him in that which is good.

[r] 2 Cor. 13. 5.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, but in all theſe times, whatſoever we ſee in our ſelves we muſt adde, we are yet but unprofitable ſervants, Luk. 17. 10. & we have not as yet attained unto that perfection we ought to have. Phil. 3. 12. 13. Happie is that man who ſeemes little in his own eyes but great in the eyes of others: who ſhines unto others & yet ſeemes darke unto himſelfe, and in that regard deſpiſeth the praiſes of men.

Queſt. 4 The ſweeteſt Muſicke is a mans owne praiſe, and therefore how may our hearts and eares bee ſtopped againſt theſe bewitching enchantmẽts? what ſhall we doe to be preſerved both from the flatterie of others, and from affectation in our ſelves;

Anſw. 1. Firſt, doe not delight thy ſelfe in reading or repeating the catalogue of thy good deedes, as the proud Phariſee did, Luke 18. 11. Averte oculos ne capiâris formâ: leſt thou grow proud.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, looke downe to thy feet, and conſider the filthineſſe and errors of thy former life.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, reade the booke of thy daily ſinnes, for this is a profitable catalogue to humble the ſoule.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, if flatterers ſhould fill thy eares with thy owne commendations; then remember, they ſee what is without, but not what is within: they know not the many corrupt thoughts, and deſires, and purpoſes that are in thy heart; they are ignorant of thy many neglects in good duties, and of divers ſiniſter reſpects and ends which are frequently in the good workes thou doſt.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, if thy owne heart and thoughts ſhould tell thee, that thou art good, and there are not many better; then meditate upon the puritie of God and his law, looke unto thy copie, compare thy ſelfe with thy exemplar, Mat. 5. 48. and thou wilt acknowledge, that the Eaſt is not ſo farre diſtant from the Weſt, as thou art from what thou ſhouldeſt and oughteſt to be.

Sixthly, remember the many blots and defects that are in the beſt worke thou performeſt: Who would brag of good wine if it were mixed with poyſon? And our beſt workes as comming from us are but like wine in a poyſoned cup. Anſw. 6.

Seventhly, whatſoever thou haſt it is the gift of God: and by his grace thou art what thou art, 1 Cor. 15. 10. and therefore why ſhouldeſt thou thy ſelfe boaſt, or any other make thee proud of that which is not thine? for at the beſt thou paieſt but God with his owne coyne. Anſw. 7.

VERS. 4. That thine almes may be in ſecret; and thy Father which ſeeth in ſecret, himſelfe ſhall reward thee openly. Ver. 4 §. 1. That thine almes may be in ſecret. Sect. 1.

The ſcope of our Saviour here is, that *pro viri*li, as much as in us lies, we muſt endeavour to hide and conceale the good workes which wee performe from the eye of the world. Queſt. 1.

Why may we not reveale our good workes unto men, but thus hide them from them?

First, becauſe wee performe them for Gods ſake, not for mans, and therefore if God ſee them, it is enough though men know not of them. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, it is not equall and faire dealing, to reveale unto men our good deeds, and conceale from them our bad: and therefore either tell both or neither. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, veſſels that ſound moſt, are moſt empty: Come (ſaith Iehu unto Iehonadab) and ſee my zeale for the Lord, 2 King. 10. 16. and yet verſ. 31. it is ſaid, Iehu tooke no heed to walke in the Law of the Lord God of Iſrael with all his heart: for he departed not from the ſinnes of Ieroboam, which made Iſrael to ſinne. So the young man ſaith unto Chriſt, Omnia feci, all theſe things have I done, Mat. 19. 20. and yet hee will leave Chriſt rather than his riches: So Peter ſpeakes moſt boldly, but falls moſt fowly, Mat. 26. And therefore take heed of vaine oſtentation in the performance of good workes. Anſw. 3.

Doth not this verſe croſſe Mat. 5. 16? is there not a direct Antitheſis and contrariety betwixt theſe two verſes? { Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good works; And { Let your almes be done in ſecret, that men may not ſee them. Queſt. 2.

They differ in two things; 1. In re, in the thing done. 2. In modo, in the manner of doing. Anſw.

Firſt, theſe two verſes differ in the thing. Here obſerve, that ſome good works cannot be concealed; ſome may.

First, there are ſome good workes which cannot be hid, as for example, I. When a publike worke is commanded, as the worke of the Lords day the preaching and hearing of the word, and publike prayers; theſe cannot bee concealed. II. When the omiſſion of duties may ſcandalize religion, then they are not to be concealed. III. When wee are ſeriouſly asked by our brethren what what good workes we performe, wee must not lie; but yet there is a difference to be observed, by whom we are asked: For First if the question be asked by a Saint and holy man, who hath no need of our example, then we must rather urge our omissions and neglects of good duties; and our answer must savour of the confession of our sinnes, rather then of our good workes. Secondly, if the question be asked by one who is weake, then build him up by thy example, yet let it be done modestly. Ostendens non Ostentans, shewing him what thou dost but without all ostentation, yea extenuating what thou shewest him, and not amplifying of it; nor taking any thing unto thy selfe, but ascribing all the glory of thy good workes unto God.

Secondly, there are some good workes which may bee concealed; and yet in some cases may and ought to be manifested, otherwise not; as for example, I. There are some workes which procure praise, some which beget shame. First, some workes will humble us, and affect us with blushing to lay them open; as the sense and profession of our infirmities, whether of anger, covetousnesse, wantonnesse, idlenesse and remissnesse in our callings. These a man may shew unto a holy and faithfull friend modestly.

Secondly, some workes beget praise, as honest and beautifull workes, such as almes is; these must be concealed as much as we can. II. Sometimes it is necessary that wee should hold forth our workes, and be examples unto others: As First, when thou livest among those who are wicked, who altogether neglect religious workes. Secondly, when the worke is difficult, and rare; as the daily examination of our selves, and the pardoning of injuries, and the like, that so others by our examples may bee encouraged thereunto. Thirdly, when the worke is perillous as the profession of Christ among heretikes: In these there is need of our example, and therefore we should herein shew our selves. III. Sometimes the glory of God is dishonoured by sinne; here shew all the might and power thou hast: If sinne be committed with a high hand, then let religion be professed so also, that is openly and undauntedly, but yet with modesty; for constancy and boldnesse in religion differ much from boasting and vaine ostentation.

Secondly, this verse and Mat. 5. 16. differ In modo, in the manner of doing of good workes? For

I. They are held forth sometimes unto Gods glory.
II. Sometimes for the honour of religion.
III. Sometimes for the example of our brother.
IV. Sometimes for the removall of the scandall of impiety from our selves.
} All these are lawfull.

V. Sometimes wee hold forth our good workes, for the setting forth of our owne praise. And this onely is faulty, phanslaicall, and to bee avoided.

§. 2. And thy Father which seeth in secret, himselfe shall reward thee openly.] 271

Sect. 2.

In generall wee may observe how God doth accommodate and apply himselfe unto us: For

First, the Pharisees desire to be seene.	To this Christ answers	God seeth us.
Secondly, the Pharisees desire to be rewarded.		God will reward us.
Thirdly, to be honoured before the people.		God will give us our reward openly.

Obser. Our Saviour hereby teaching us, that there is no temporall good or gaine so great in sinne, but the Lord can and will give us greater in spirituall things.

Quest. 1. How doth the truth of this appeare, that there is as much gaine and pleasure to be found in the wayes of grace as of sinne, in the service of God, as in the service of Sathan; for experience seemes daily to shew the contrary?

Answ. First, God can give what he will unto his children. For 1. His power is infinite, and greater then the power of Satan, and therefore hee can give more then Satan can give. 2. His love is infinite, and better then the love of Satan is, and therefore hee will give more then the Divell can give. 3. Hence hee makes choice of the best things to give unto his servants: For why doth the Lord give spirituall graces rather unto his children, then honour, pleasure, and riches? because they are much better then these.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there is nothing which is seemingly good in sinne, but there is the same really in piety, and the service of God; as for example.

1. Dost thou love bodily Pleasure, namely, either first, of eating and drinking? here remember the greatest pleasure is in Temperance, as Epicurus himselfe said: yea, the soule is fed with the food of the Word, and Faith, and Prayer, and holy exercises, which food farre surpasseth all the delicacies of the world. Secondly, dost thou love recreations and pastimes? certainely there are many which are lawfull, and which a religious man may use: but the internall Joy of the Holy Ghost doth exceed the delight of the most delightfull recreations. Thirdly, wouldst thou live at peace? dost thou love tranquillities? oh remember, the peace of God passeth all understanding, Phil. 4. 7.

2. Dost thou love fame, reputation, and credit? Certainly, there is no greater estimation any where than in piety: Yee shall be a wise, and an understanding people, if ye obey my Law, Deut. 4. 6.

3. Dost thou love Riches? The best treasure is grace, and faith; for that is more precious than gold. 1 Pet. 1. 7.

4. Dost thou love Honour? unto the righteous is prepared a Kingdome (Luke 12. 32.) and a Crowne of glory, 2 Tim. 4. 8.

VERSE 5. And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the Hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the Synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seene of men. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward. Vers. 5.

- In this sixt Chapter our Saviour forbids two things, viz.
  - Hypocrisie, and that in three things.
    - First in Almes, verse 1. unto 5.
    - Secondly, in Prayer; wherein are reproved their
      - Ostentation, where there is
        - A prohibition, verse 5.
        - A precept, verse 6.
      - Prolongation, where there is
        - A prohibition which is both Declared, verse 7. Confirmed, verse 8.
        - A precept, which is both Given, verse 9. Amplified, vers. 14.
    - Thirdly, in Fasting, verse 16.
  - Care of the world, verse 19.

Sect. 1. §. 1. And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the Hypocrites are.]

Quest. 1. Christ neither reproving nor condemning prayer in generall, but onely the Pharisaicall manner of praying; it may be demanded, what things are contrary to true prayer according to the doctrine of our Saviour Christ?

Answ. 1. First, not to worship the true God: Ye worship (saith Christ) ye know not what (Ioh. 4. 22.) Where our Saviour condemnes the Samaritans invocation, for he who worshippeth not God aright cannot pray aright.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Idolatrie, for he that prayes to Idols, cannot pray aright.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, not to pray in faith, and in the name of Christ, is to pray amisse: Whatsoever ye aske the Father in my name he will give it you (Ioh. 16. 23.) as if our Saviour would say, if you aske but not in my name, then you shall receive nothing.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, they pray amisse who remaine in sinne without repentance: We know God heares not sinners (Joh. 9. 31.) that is, those who continue in their sinnes, against their consciences, without repentance God will not heare, though they pray unto him.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, heathenish battologie is contrary unto true Christian prayer, as followeth by and by.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, Hypocrisie, when men pray to bee seene of men, as the Pharisees did in this verse.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, he prayes amisse, who prayes contrary to the will of God; as the Mother of Zebedees children did, who intreated Christ, that one of her sonnes might sit at his right hand, and the other at his left in the Kingdome of God. And therefore if we desire so to pray, that our prayers may bee heard; wee must 1. learne to worship truely the true God. 2. Beware of Idolatry. 3. Turne from sinne. 4. Pray in faith, and in the name of Christ. 5. avoide battologie, and all vaine repetitions. 6. Take heed of hypocrisie. 7. Frame our prayers according to the will of God.

Quest. 2. Our Saviour saith here, When thou prayest, &c. But what necessity is there of praying at all?

Answ. 1. We shall handle this more fully, verse 9. and therefore here briefly I answer. First, that by praying unto God we worship him, and therefore it is necessary that we should pray.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is meete that we should pray, that so we may exercise our faith in meditating of the promises and examples of Gods goodnesse.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is requisite to pray, because so we acknowledge God to be the authour and giver of every good gift, and celebrate his name for what good things we enjoy [b].

[b] Pareus. fpag. 651

Sect. 2. §. 2. They pray standing in the Synagogues.] Quest. 1. Doth our Saviour here condemne publicke Prayer?

Answ. No; for they are approved of both by examples from old Testament, and new: Moses prayes publickly. Levit. 23. 8. and Solomon, 1 King. 8 22. and David, Psalm. 26. 8. and 68. 31. and Iehoshaphat, 2 Chron. 20. 5. yea, hence the Temple is called the House of Prayer: and Christ promiseth to heare such prayers, Matth. 18. 21. Whence Saint Paul doth institute them, 1 Cor. 14. 19. and 1 Tim. 2. 1.

Quest. 2. What need is there of the publicke prayers? may not every man pray at home?

Answ. 1. First, because the prayer of many agreeing in one thing is so much the more acceptable unto God: If two of you shall agree on earth, as touching any thing that they shall aske, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven [c]. [c] Math. 10 19.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because thus publickly we testifie our Faith, Hope, and Thankfulnesse, and by our example excite others unto the like duty.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, that thus we might testifie, that we are members of one and the same body.

Sect. 3. §. 3. For they love to pray]. Quest. 1. Doth our Saviour condemne the offring up of prayer unto God with delight and affection?

Answ. 1. First, some understand this of the praise of men; but although that be the scope of the Verse, yet these words imply some thing more.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the meaning is, they pray in the Synagogues and in the corners of the streets, and they love to pray: Where we see that although prayer be a worke tedious to flesh and blood, yet when it is corrupted, and done amisse, then corrupt nature delights in it: Teaching us, that when religion turnes aside from the truth, it easily creepes into the affection of the flesh, and is dearely loved of naturall and carnall men. Observ.

Quest. 3. Why doe men naturally delight more in a corrupt religion then in a pure? in a false worship then in a true?

Answ. 1. First, because there is a prepostrous opposition tion between God and corrupt nature: the one striving against the other, Galath. 5. 17. and each an enemy unto other, Rom. 8 6,7,8.

Answ.2. Secondly, because Satan is an enemy unto truth, but a friend unto errour; a hinderer of true religion, but a furtherer of that which is false: tares are his corne, and the good seede he labours to choake: And thus when religion becomes to be corrupted, we have two assistants to helpe us, which before were enemies unto us: When men labour to professe the true religion of Christ sincerely, they shall be withstood, both 1. By Satan without, and 2. By their own corrupt nature within. But when men fall from truth to errour, then both Satan Satan will assist them, and their own nature will delight in that corrupt worship and service.

Sect.4. § 4. That they may be seene of men.]

Our Saviour by these words expounds the former; you must not pray in the streets and Synagogues for that end that you may be seene of men: for God is neither worshipped nor pleased by prayers which are made for the praise of men.

Quest.1. How may we know, whether our prayers be herein faulty or not? how may we judge whether in our prayers we seeke for the praise of men?

Answ.1. First, if thou prayest onely publickly with the congregation, and not privately with thy family, it is an evident argument, that thou seekest the praise of men, more then of God.

Answ.2. Secondly, if thou prayest privately with thy family, but not secretly in thy own closet; it is evident thou seekest too much the praise of men.

Answ3. Thirdly, if thou prayest privately with thy family, and secretly in thy chamber; but art more exact, exquisite, and carefull in thy private prayers, more remisse and negligent in thy secret, it is a signe thou hunteſt more after the praise of men then of God.

Answ.4 Fourthly, although we be alike carefull both of our private and secret prayers, yet except we endeavour to conceale our secret devotions, as much as we can, we are guilty of the Pharisees fault.

Quest.2. Why did the Hypocrites thus desire to bee seene of men in their prayers?

Answer. That they might by men be commended: although this may seeme strange unto us: For Almes are profitable for men, and therefore men love them, and loving them praise them: but Prayer is tedious unto our nature, and is derided by the world, wherefore it is a wonder, that the Pharisees would thus publikely pray; and yet we see they doe and hope men will commend them for it: Teaching us, that the divell will praise and extoll vertue (ad inflandos) for the puffing of us up, when he will not approve of it (ad convertendos) for the converting or encouraging either of our selves or others: Hence we see many will commend hypocrits, who condemne the generation of the just: and will laud good works (though but externall) but not follow them.

Obser.1.

Why doth the divell by any of his instruments commend the good works of any, when himselfe is an enemy unto every good worke? 273 Quest 3.

First, the divell cannot hinder the righteous from bringing forth good fruits, because they proceede and spring from the Spirit of God; and therefore he is in a readinesse to pervert them by pride and ostentation if he can. Answ.1.

Secondly, this is profitable for Satan: for if by prayse he can puffe up the performer of good workes, he thereby frustrates and makes voyd his worke: for that man utterly looseth his labor, who groweth proud of what he hath done. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, Satan provokes wicked men sometimes to praise good workes, for their owne greater condemnation: For he who knowes what is good, and commends that which is good, and yet doth it not shall be beaten with many stripes. Answ.3.

VERSE.6. But when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy doore, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly. Ver. 6.

§.1. When thou prayest enter into thy closet, and shut the dore.] Sect.1.

What is meant by these words? Quest 1.

First, by the closet some understand the heart; as Salomon saith, Curse not the rich in thy bed Chamber (*Eccles.*10.20.) that is, in thy heart. And here there is a double Allegory, namely, I. The Chamber dore is the sense: shut thy dore, that is, carnall sense, lest vaine imaginations and worldly thoughts distract thy minde in praying(a) Optimum est sensus quem pulsat Christus (Cantic. 5. 8.) Christ stands at the dore (that is, of sense) and knocks (b) II. The Doore is our mouth: shut thy dore, that is, thy lips, and let thy Prayer be like the Prayer of Hanna, conceived in thy mind but not uttered with thy mouth (c) David saith, open thou the dore of my lips, Psalm. 141.3. Answ.1. (a) Agust.ſ. (b) Chryſoſt. imperf. (c) 1 Sam.1. 11. Hierome.ſ

Secondly, some understand this literally; Enter (when thou prayest) into thy Closet, that is, let none at all be present with thee but the Lord. (d) And this is the true meaning of the words. Our Saviour hereby would teach us, that wee should conceale our private Prayers as much as we can from men. Answ. 2. (d) Chry. imp. Obser.

Why must we be thus carefull that our private Prayers may be kept secret from others? Quest. 2.

First, that so thou maist shunne vaine glory: It is not enough for a man to have no such Pharisaicall end in his Prayers, but he must take away the occasion thereof: he must so conceale his private exercises, that men may neither see them, nor heare them; for this Christ here commands. Answ.1.

Secondly, we pray not for mans sake, but for Gods; And therefore the Lord being present, what need have we of any more witnesses? Answ.2.

Thirdly, witnesses in this case are irkesome, and troublesome; certainly when many are Answ.3.

274 met together of one heart, minde, desire, and affection, their prayers are very powerfull and effectuall, but yet he who utters his voyce cannot powre forth all his heart with that freedome he should when others are present, as followes by and by.

Quest. 3. Who are faulty here?

Answ. 1. First, they who delight to pray publikely, but privately are negligent; this is palpable hypocrisie.

Answ. 2. Secondly, they who shut the doore, but turne them towards the window next the street, whereby they may both be heard and seen: this must be avoided as much as can possibly.

Ans. 3. Thirdly, they who pray with a lowde and clamorous voyce: There are some whose bodies are concealed, but are manifested and revealed by their voyces: their doore is shut, but their mouth open: we should pray (Modestiâ, contritione, lachrymis, non sonitu, strepitu, &c.[b]), with modesty, contrition, and teares, not with a troublesome and clamorous voyce.

[b] Chrys.

Object. Those who accustome themselves to this clamorous noise in their prayers, may here object, I am full of heavinesse and griefe, and I am not able to moderate my selfe.

Answ. 1. First, I judge no man, for every mans conscience shall judge him at the last.

Answ. 2. Secondly, ordinarily those who are most heartily touched with sorrow, are most silent in their prayers: Hannahs heart was full, and yet her words were not heard, 1 Sam. 1.11.. Abels blood cryed, and yet the voyce thereof was not heard, Gen. 4.10. Moses soule was so troubled, that the Lord saith, why dost thou cry unto me? and yet hee uttered nothing with his tongue, Exod. 34.15. and David prayes from the bottom of his heart, Psal. 130.1.

Quest. 4. Why may we not in our private prayer, so speake, that we may be heard of others?

Answ. 1. Chrysostome (upon these words) gives three answers to this question, namely:

First, because this argues some distrust, as though God could not, or did not heare us, when we pray with a soft still voyce unto him; or as if he did not understand the thoughts of thy heart.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because this argues folly, to disclose and make knowne our secret infirmities unto others: Nec à Deo audiris, & à malis rideris: This is no wise mans part, so to pray, as that God shall not regard him, but wicked men shall deride him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because thus (saith he) thou disturbest him who prayeth next unto thee. Sensus ad terapis. For the better understanding of this question and answers, observe two things, to wit; I. That it seemes the manner was in Chrysostomes time, sometimes when the faithfull met together, every man did pray by himselfe silently, and no one publikely, as the custome now is: Reade August. de civit. Dei. 22. 8. Thus it were lawfull for Christians to doe, if they durst not pray openly for feare of giving offence. II. It is lawfull to use the voyce in prayer; of old certainely it was an use for the people to pray aloud when they prayed alone in the Temple; for otherwise Eli would not have reproved Hannah, because her voyce was not heard, 1 Sam. 1. So David saith, Evening and morning, and at noone will I pray, and cry aloud, and hee shall heare my voyce[i]. Yea, it seemes that sometimes many prayed vocally together at once: Iohn and Peter tell their company what had happened unto them; And when they heard it, they lift up their voyce to God with one accord, and said, Lord thou art God which hath made heaven and earth, &c.[k]. So many pray together (as is most likely) in Niniveh, Ionah 3. 8. At the least all the Ministers of Gods Word have beene accustomed to pray in the Temple with an audible voyce, as appeares, Ioel 2.17.

[i] Psal. 55. 17.

[k] Acts 4. 24.

Quest. 5. What necessity is there at all to use the voyce, seeing God (as was said before) seeth and knoweth the desires of the heart?

Answ. 1. First, it is requisite for the expressing of the affection of the minde; not to instruct God, but to teach our selves with what fire our sacrifice is offered up.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it is expedient for the corroborating of our perseverance in prayer: we shall be ready (without some use of the voyce) quickly to give over.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because zeale is not to be hindred by any meanes: Now although the proper gesture of zeale be sighes, teares, humiliation and confusion (as Daniel said, I blush and am ashamed, Dan. 9.) yet notwithstanding sometimes it breakes forth into externall gestures and expressions, which are not to be wholly suppressed, but moderated.

Quest. 4. What advantage hath private prayer above publike?

Answ. Prayer in secret, and by him that is alone with God, hath these advantages above that which is publike, and in the Church.

First, it is lesse in danger of the taint of Hypocrisie: the proud Pharisee, and the humble Publicane goe both to the Temple to pray; and the Hypocrites love to pray standing in the Synagogues, &c. that they may be seen of men: But hee who prayes in secret doth it to be seene of God.

Secondly, in private a Christian may descend unto such particulars; as in publike or before others, he will not, neither ought to mention.

Thirdly, he may in private use such expressions and outward manifestations, for the better passage of his hearts affection, specially being perplexd with sorrow, or feare, as before others were unseemly and immodest. In that day of the great mourning in Ierusalem, when they shall looke upon him whom they have pierced, they shall mourne for him in bitternesse, every house and family shall mourne apart, and their wives apart[l]. [l] Zach. 12. 10. unto the end of the chapter.

Hath publike prayers no prerogatives above private?

Quest. 7. Publike prayers want not their priviledges, as for example.

Answ. First, they are performed in the order and ordinance of the Church, which private prayers are not.

Secondly,

Secondly, in the Church and congregation, many agreeing touching a thing to be asked, have a speciall promise that it shall be done for them of their Father in heaven; upon whom they set, by their prayers, as it were, in a troupe.

Thirdly, in our publike prayers and praises of God, we doe give testimony of his providence in governing of the world, and all our affaires; and that hee is present with his Church, and heares their requests, for the convincing of Atheists and Epicures, and confirmation of others in beleeving undoubtedly his care over his people and servants.

Argument. It is controverted betwixt us and the Papists, whether Churches are more holy places in themselves, and whether it is better (though privately) to pray in the Temple, then in another place?

The Papists say, God rather dwelleth and is present in Churches then elsewhere: and therefore it is more available for a man, even to make his private prayer in the Church, Bellarm. de sanctis, lib. 3. cap. 4.

The Protestants say, that publike prayers made by the congregation in the Church, are indeed to be preferred before private, but yet not because of the place, but in respect of the congregation, whose prayers jointly altogether are more fervent and effectuall then the prayer of one man; and that the prayer of a particular person made in the Church privately, is no better than a prayer made at home in regard of the place, appeares thus: Our Saviour saith, When thou prayest enter into thy chamber: he saith not, goe to the Church.

Answ. 1. Here Bellarmine answers, that the shutting of the doore cannot literally be understood, because Christ himselfe prayed in the Mountaines often, but in his chamber wee doe not reade that hee prayed at all.

To this we answer; First, by shutting the doore, Reply 1. Christ understandeth praying in secret, as it is in the Text, God which seeth in secret will reward thee openly.

Reply 2. Secondly, no marvell if we doe not read that Christ shut the doore and prayed, for hee had no house or place where to rest his head.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Bellarmine saith, that Christ here commands, that wee should not in our prayers seeke vaine glory, as the Pharisees did: And he entreth into his chamber, that prayeth without vaine-glory, whether hee doe pray secretly or openly.

Replie. Our Saviours words are plaine without Allegory, for he speaketh of shutting the doore of the chamber: And there is a manifest opposition betweene the Pharisees praying in the corners of the streets, and the others praying in secret: as Cajetane himselfe well interprets the words, They pray in the synagogues and corners of the streets, that is, In locis Publicis, in publike places.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Bellarmine to this place answers, that by the Chamber is meant the secret of the heart, and here onely are forbidden all the wandrings and vagaries of the mind, in the time of prayer.

Reply 1. First, this is absurde, for by the same reason, Almes should bee understood to bee done in the secret of the heart, because it is said vers. 4. Let thy almes be done in secret.

Reply 2. Secondly, it is cleare (as Cajetane here observes) that Christ speakes onely of private prayers, qua tales sunt: But publike as well as private ought to bee conceived in the secret of the heart, without any vagaries or extravagancies of the minde: And therefore that cannot bee the meaning of our Saviour in this place.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Pray unto thy Father who is in secret.]

Quest. 1. Where is God? where doth he dwell and abide?

Answ. In the third heaven (2 Cor. 12. 2.) in Paradise verse 4. In that inaccessible light, 1 Tim. 6. 16. above all heavens, Ephes. 4. 10.

Quest. 2. What doth our Saviour meane by these words, Who is in secret?

Answ. 1. First, he would hereby teach us the power and efficacie of faithfull prayer, though private, that it pierceth into the secret places of heaven, and penetrats the clouds.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ hereby would teach us the infinite mercy of God, who although he dwels in the secret and hidden places of heaven, yet secretly he will descend unto that man, who prayes fervently unto him, and serves him in sincerity, Esai. 57. 15. and 66. 1, 2.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Will reward thee openly.]

Object. Bellarmine (lib. 1. de bon. oper. in partic. Cap. 3.) would prove from this verse, that prayer is meritorious, because God is said to reward them openly, who pray unto him secretly: His argument is this:

Reward is of merit.

Prayer is rewarded.

Therefore it is of merit.

Answ. The Major proposition is false, for reward may as well be of favour, as of desert: Hee that giveth but a cup of cold water shall not loose his reward[m]. And yet Heaven cannot bee merited by so small a gift: Therefore this reward is of mercy, and this place sheweth, that prayer is not in vaine, but is accepted of God, but that it is meritorious it proveth not.

[m] Mat. 10. 42.

Vers. 7. VERSE. 7. But when ye pray use not vaine repetitions as the heathen doe; for they thinke that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

Sect. 1. §. 1. When ye pray use not vaine repetitions.]

Quest. 1. What is the sense and meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, some understand it of a foolish loquacitie and multiplicitie of words, which is indeed a great fault.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some understand it of long prayers, of which in the last Section.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some understand it of vaine repetitions; from Basil a foolish Poet. And this is the true sense of the words, Erasm. Rhodig. Beza.

Quest. 1. Why doth our Saviour condemne in praying these these repetitions of the same thing divers times?

276

Answ. 1. First, because it is idle and needlesse to repeate our petitions over and over, our Father knowing all our petitions, and wants, vers. 8.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it argues diffidency and distrust, as though God would not give us what we want and desire without many repetitions of our requests.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because the use of these vaine repetitions is contrary to the truth (or true nature) of prayer, which should and ought to be more in spirit, then in voice.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because it argues a cold, wandering, and extravagant minde, which knowes not what it saith. And therefore the Papists in their prayers are sicke of the heathen peoples disease. For 1. Upon their Beads they are injoyned sometimes to say, a hundred Ave Maries, and ten Pater-nosters. 2. In their Jesus Psalter, they are injoyned to say every petition ten times over (and some twelve) and to repeate the name Jesus thrice in every petitiō: as for example, in one petition there is this, Jesus, Jesus, Jesus send me my Purgatory in this life; this petition must be repeated in this manner ten times, and so the name Jesus thirty times therein resounded. 3. They have psalmes, and rimes which must be said over three or foure times every day, yea the errour of their Schoolemen is here inexcusable, who tell us, in these prayers, Non requiritur attentio actualis sed virtualis; If they attend a little at the beginning it is sufficient. Indeed if this be not eadē blaterare, to use vaine repetitions, I know not what it is.

Sect. 2. Quest. 1.

§. 2. As the heathen doe.]

Answ. Why doth our Saviour here name the heathen?

Quest. 2. Certainely because their custome was used among the Jewes: The Israelites detested the Gentiles, & yet were as bad or worse themselvs.

Ans. 1. Whence comes it that in the visible Churches of Christ, oftentimes are abuses no lesse, then are among the heathens?

Answ. 2. First, because there are many in the Church who are meere naturall, having no more grace then the very gentiles have; and therefore no wonder if they be as bad as they.

Quest. 3. Secondly, because in naturall things, and endowments, many heathens doe farre exceede and excell many that are within the Visible Church of Christ.

Answ. 1. What was the custome of the heathens in their prayers, for the using of which our Saviour here taxeth the hypocrites?

Answ. 2. First, the Gentiles thought, God was like an earthly man, who might be perswaded by words.

Answ. 3. Secondly, they denied Gods providence, and were not perswaded that God saw them, or regarded their estate, and therefore they used many words to acquaint him therewith.

Thirdly, they thought by the force of words to prevaile with God: And therefore they often repeated their petitions, Oh Baal heare us, Oh Baal heare us, 1 King. 18. 26. The heathens adored and worshipped a God that either 1. Was asleepe, or doing something else, and so could not attend unto or heare their prayers. 2. Or one who would not give them what they desired, namely, the divell, Deut. 32. 17, and 1 Cor. 10. 20. 3. Or one who could not give them what they wanted and demanded: Thus some of them adored First, dead Kings, as Ninus was worshipped after his death. Secondly, in famous persons, thus Priapus and Venus were adored. Thirdly, insensible Idols, who had eies but saw not, eares but heard not, &c. And therefore they were forced to crie much and long. 1 Kin. 18. 27.

Sect. 3. §. 3. They thinke they shall bee heard for their much speaking.]

Quest. 1. Our Saviour in these words shewes that many words, and much speaking in prayer is a fault.

Answ. 1. How many were guilty of this fault?

First, some used many words hypocritically, making long prayers that they might the better devour widdowes houses[o], these prayed maliciously. [o] Mat. 23. 14.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some used many words foolishly; and these are they whom our Saviour here taxeth and condemneth, They thinke to be heard for their much babbling.

Quest. 2. Is it not meet and requisite that our prayers should be long?

Answ. 1. First, it is not alwaies necessary, for occasions, and circumstances are sometimes to bee observed.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but certainely long prayers are sometimes expedient, and that in a threefold regard, namely. 1. That thou maist read over thy whole conscience, and goe thorow all thy heart. 2. That thou maist commend all thy estate unto God, both in regard of the pardon of thy sins, and the supply of thy wants and defects. 3. Lest thou should seeme to worship God negligently.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we have a Commandement, to bee constant, and perseverant in prayer, Reade Luk. 11. 5. and 18. 1. Rom. 12. 2. and Ephes. 6. 18. and Colos. 4. 2. and 1 Thes. 5. 17.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we have Christs patterne and example for it, who prayed all night; and was moderate in all other things, but prolixe in prayer. Guevara.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, it is an unjust, and unequall thing to be long in sinning, and short in praying against sinne, or for the pardon of sinne: and therefore long prayers are sometimes convenient and fitting.

Quest. 3. What much speaking is it which our Saviour here blames?

Answ. 1. First, not every long prayer, for himselfe was prolixe in prayer, as aforesaid.

Answ. 2. Secondly, not every repetition of the same prayer, for Christ approves of this also by his owne example; hee went againe and said the same words, Mat. 26. 44.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, but prolixitie is forbidden in these things, to wit, I. if there be more words uttered then come from the heart; if prayer be without faith or spirit: that is, if the multiplicitie of words procede not from the abundance of internall affection, but from the vacuitie thereof. II. If thou hope to bee heard for the multitude of thy words. III. If thou thinkest that God is taught taught by thy many words. IV. If there bee affectiaton and delight in prolixitie & multiplicitie of words.

Anſw.4. Fourthly, much ſpeaking or long prayers is not forbidden in theſe things: namely; I. If thou pray much or long for the exciting, or exerciſing of faith. II. If thou continue long fervently in prayer, leſt thou ſhould ſeeme to worſhip, or doe the worke of the Lord negligently. III. When thou haſt much within to expreſſe and utter; when thou haſt many wants to ſupply, many weakeneſſes to diſcover, and many ſinnes to pray againſt.

Verſ.8. Vers. 8. Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have neede of, before ye aske him.

Argum. The Papiſts ſay, Prayer is meritorious, againſt which tenet we produce this place: That cannot merit at anothers hand, the benefit whereof wholy redoundeth unto our ſelves: But prayer is wholy for our benefit, we praying for ſuch things as we neede in this verſe. Therefore it cannot merit before God.

Verſ.9. Vers. 9. After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in Heaven, hallowed be thy name.

Sect.1. §. 1. After this manner pray ye.]

Obſer. Our Saviour in theſe words doth definitely ſhew what we muſt thinke of prayer: and that he doth not taxe the thing in taxing the vices thereof. Or he teacheth us, that the cuſtome of prayer is neither evill nor arbitrarie, but commanded, and neceſſarie; Sic orabitis, ye ſhall pray thus.

Queſt.1 Why muſt we pray? what neceſſitie is there hereof?

Anſw.1. Firſt, becauſe we want many things which of our ſelves we cannot procure; and we have many enemies, which by our owne ſtrength we are not able to overcome. And therefore we muſt pray continually, Epheſ. 6. 18.

Anſw.2. Secondly, becauſe it is the ordinary meanes appointed by God for the obtaining of our deſires; Aske and ye ſhall have, Mat. 7. 7. as if our Saviour would ſay, no asking, no receiving.

Object. Againſt this it may be objected, Many men obtaine many things without prayer; and therefore it is not the ordinarie meanes for the ſupply of all our wants; The Antecedent is thus proved, I. wicked men who never pray (at leaſt aright) have, what their hearts deſire: Thus Iob ſaith, the wicked are old, mightie, bleſſed in poſteritie, and with proſperitie, &c. Iob 21. 7,8,9,10,11, Anſ.1. 12. Wicked men have theſe things in anger, as a curſe, for verſe 13. they ſpend their daies in wealth, and in a moment goe downe to hell. II. Infants enjoy many bleſſings and mercies, and yet pray not.

Anſw.2. Firſt, theſe cannot pray as yet, and therefore God requireth it not of them.

Secondly, theſe doe pray, by crying. The Ravens pray unto God (that is, crie after their manner) and he feedith them, Pſal. 147. 9. ſo infants pray when they cry, Pſal. 145. 15. III. The children of God receive many bleſſings and mercies from God, when they neglect to pray. 277

Anſw.3.

True it is that God gives many things unto his children when they forget to pray; but it is more then he hath promiſed; Bleſſings being annexed to the condition of prayer. Anſw.4

Thirdly, God hath promiſed to heare our prayers, and therefore it is very requiſite that we ſhould pray; ſee Mat. 7. 7. and Iohn 14. 13. and 15. 16. and 16. 23. Iames 1. 5. Anſw.3.

Fourthly, it is neceſſary to pray in regard of the dutie it ſelfe, becauſe, I. It is a good worke. II. It is a principall part of Gods worſhip. III. It is a mutuall colloquie with God. IV. It is a certaine warfare with God, we therein wraſtling (as it were) with him. Anſw.4.

Fifthly, it is fitting that we ſhould pray in regard of our brethren; that ſo I. we might therein give a good example unto them: and II. helpe them by our interceſſion for them. Anſw.5.

Sixthly, God loves to be ſued and ſought unto, and therefore in regard of him we ought to pray. Anſw.6.

Seventhly, it is neceſſarie for our ſelves, and that in many reſpects, namely, I. When wee joyne our ſelves unto the Saints in prayer, then we are made partakers of the prayers of the faithfull, which is no ſmall bleſſing or mercy. II. By Prayer wee are directed in all our actions: for thereby wee commit our ſelves and waies unto the Lord, and therefore have a promiſe of mercy, Reade Prov. 16. 3. and Pſal. 37. 23. and 40. 4. III. Prayer ſanctifieth the creatures unto our uſe, 1 Tim. 4. 5. IV. Prayer comforteth us in tribulation: hence Chriſt prayes when hee was ſorrowfull unto the death[a], hence Saint Iames exhorts us to pray if we be afflicted, Iames 5. 13. yea hence God commands us to pray, and promiſeth to heare our prayers, in the time of our diſtreſſes[b]. V. Prayer teſtifieth our love to God: for he who delighteth in private prayer doth ſhew that he loves to have diſcourſe with God, and conſequently loves God. VI. Prayer is an argument of our hope, truſt, and confidence in God: it is (converſio cordis ad Deum[c],) the turning of the heart unto God, or the reflection of the ſoule upon God: For by prayer we acknowledge, that { First, God cares for us. / Secondly, God gives all good things unto us. } VII. Prayer doth corroborate pious affections in us, yea increaſeth and nouriſheth the love of God in us: as mutuall ſocietie and diſcourſe doth nouriſh affections; ſo the love of God is augmented by frequent praying unto him. And therefore prayer is not needeleſſe, but neceſſary, uſefull, and very profitable. Anſw.7.

What is prayer?

It is the Colloquie of the ſoule with God: Or it is the ſpiritual aſcent of the ſoule unto God, begging at his hands thoſe things which concerne his glory, and the ſalvation of our ſoules, accor Quest. 3. When must we pray?

Answ. Prayer is either
- Publike, and solemn, these we must use: { Ordinarily, with the congregation, upon the Lords day and other Festivals. / Extraordinarily, whensoever upon any occasion we may be made partakers of them, whether in season or out of season.
- Private, which is either
  - Solemne, and Uerbal, viz. { With our Family: thus we must pray daily, morning, and evening. / In our closet; thus we must pray, as often as our affaires and callings will permit.
  - Internall, thus we must pray continually, because we have alwaies neede: For if I. we were sensible of our sinnes, wants, weakenesses, and dangers, we would pray continually. II. If we were sensible of Christ, the Spirit, and heaven, we would alwaies hunger.

Quest. 4. Where must we pray?

Answ. 1. First, a superstitious observation of the place is forbidden: because now we may pray in any place, Iohn 4. 12.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the place which is consecrated unto God is not to be prophaned: My house shall be called the house of prayer, saith Christ; and it is the most fit place for publike prayers.

Ans. 3. Thirdly, for private prayers no place is appointed, no place is forbidden.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Our Father which art in heaven.] It will not be amisse (considering the excellencie of this prayer taught us by our blessed Saviour) to handle it a little more particularly, and exactly, then wee have done the precedent, or shall doe the consequent verses: Although the contents thereof are so large, and the sense so profound, that all the profitable truthes therein contained can hardly be touched upon.

First of all I will lay downe a generall Analysis or Synopsis of the Lords prayer: and then that which is sufficient to be knowne by the vulgar reader, concerning the Division of this prayer shall followe afterwards;

Secondly,

280 Secondly, I will now propound ſome generall queſtions concerning this prayer.

Queſt. 1. How many Petitions are there in this Prayer?

Anſw. It is a knot not worth a wedge; it not being much materiall, whether we affirme them to bee ſixe or ſeven. Chryſoſtome ſeemes to make but ſixe; but Auguſtine ſaith, Septima & ultima, and ſo makes ſeven. It matters not which wee adhere unto, if we doe but avoide the ſuperſtitious obſervation of the number of ſeven, wherein ſome famous men have waded too farre.

What order doth our Saviour obſerve in this Prayer?

The moſt perfect and exact order that can be imagined: For this prayer is of all other moſt perfect, not onely containing all things that are neceſſary to be prayed for; but alſo the order, which is to be obſerved in the praying for them; As thus moſt evidently appeares.

First, the foundation of all is the glory of God; this is the laſt ſcope of all our actions, and therefore firſt to be prayed for.

Secondly, then wee deſire the comming of Chriſts Kingdome, and that for two reaſons. I. Becauſe the conſummation of the Kingdome of God, is the ſecond foundation of our actions. II. Becauſe the kingdome of grace is the meanes to bring us unto God: And therefore this in the ſecond place is prayed for.

Thirdly, then we cry, thy will be done; becauſe before we be admitted into the Kingdome of grace, we cannot fulfill, or obey the will of God.

Fourthly, having thus prayed for Gods glory, and ſpirituall graces, we then come to demand temporall bleſſings, Give us this day our daily bread.

Obiect. 1 It may here be objected, we ſtand in neede of temporall things firſt of all; and therefore wee ought to pray for them in the firſt place.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, God doth give us temporall things from the beginning of our life, becauſe wee ſtand in neede of them, as ſoone as we are borne: But yet they are not firſt to be ſought for at Gods hands.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, as we ſtand in neede of temporall things from the beginning; ſo it is neceſſary that we ſhould obey God from the beginning; The fig-tree ſhould alwaies be prepared to anſwer the Lords expectation, leſt he ſeeking fruit and finding none, curſe it and condemne it to the fire: And therefore greater is the neceſſitie of Spirituall graces, then of temporall goods, and firſt to be demanded.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, then onely temporall good things are to be demanded, when the Spirit of God and grace hath taught us to begge onely moderate things modeſtly: Wherefore they are not to be deſired till after the Kingdome of grace.

Fourthly, then we pray for the pardon of our ſinnes; and that for theſe cauſes. I. Becauſe our ſinnes are then remitted, when we are admitted into the Kingdom of grace. II. Becauſe the moſt ſanctified of all ſin againſt God, and that daily.

Fifthly, then we beg to be delivered from the Tempter, and preſerved from temptation; Becauſe it is alwaies { God ſhould protect us. / neceſſary, that { We ſhould be circumſpect.

What may we learne from this method and order obſerved by our Saviour in this prayer? Queſt. 3

Firſt, and before all things to deſire the glory God: This being the ſubſtance of the firſt Petition, we reſerve it untill by and by. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, the three firſt Petitions reſpect God, and the three laſt our ſelves; Teaching us to reſpect God before our ſelves, to regard his will more then our owne, to love him above all, yea better then our ſelves, Deut. 6. 5. and 10. 12. and 11. 1. and Mat. 22. 37. and that for three cauſes, 1 Becauſe it is a ſigne of a Saint to love God above himſelfe, yea above all things, Pſ 31. 24. II. Becauſe ſuch God hath promiſed to regard; he that honours God, God will honour him; he that cordially loves God, him will the Lord love. III. Becauſe if we thus reſpect & love the Lord above all things, we ſhal live for ever[d]. Anſw. 2. Obſer. 1.

Thirdly, ſpirituall things we deſire firſt, and in more words, yea more petitions then one: Temporall things but once in one Petition, yea in one word Bread; Teaching us in our prayers to preferre ſpirituall things before temporall, 1 Cor. 12. 31. and 14. 1. and 10. 3 4. Col. 1. 9. and that for theſe following reaſons. I. Becauſe earthly things are not alwaies good for us: but often hinder a man from his naturall reſt[e], The abundãce of the rich will not ſuffer him to ſleep. II. Becauſe they are never equally & alike good for us; or ſo good for us as are ſpirituall graces[f], for theſe are profitable both for ſoule and body. III. Becauſe ſpirituall graces are neceſſary for us: for without them we cannot come unto God or glory[g]; but we may without any, yea many temporall bleſſings. And therefore we ſhould moſt earneſtly hunger for, and deſire ſpirituall things, becauſe they are both moſt excellent in themſelves, and moſt profitable for us. Anſw. 3. Obſer. 2.

Whether is it lawfull to uſe any ſet forme of prayer, written or printed? Queſt. 4.

Set formes of Prayer read and conſidered before hand are very profitable unto the weake; both to teach them 1. What to pray for and how. And 2. to helpe their memories. Anſwer.

Whether is it lawfull to uſe this forme of prayer which is taught us by Chriſt? Queſt. 5.

Firſt, there are many formes of prayer, which are eaſier unto the underſtanding then this is. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, but this is the moſt perfect forme, & therfore we ought alwaies to imitate it, at leaſt in part, and as farre as we proceede in our prayers. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, there is no other forme injoyned us then this; wee have indeede many examples of prayer, or exemplarie prayers of Moſes, David, Salomon, Paul, &c. but of none it is ſaid as here, Sic orabitis, ye ſhall pray thus. Anſw. 3.

Whether was the Lords prayer given 1. as an example? or 2. as a prayer? or 3. as both? Queſt. 6.

Firſt, ſome ſay this was given and commanded abſolutely as a prayer; and therefore it is neceſſarie alwaies to uſe it. But this is proved falſe by theſe two reaſons, namely, I. Becauſe then it were unlawfull to uſe any other forme, or prayer. II. Becauſe the word here uſed is τοῦτο ſic, non τοῦτο hoc: pray Thus, not This. Anſw. 1.

Secondly,

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say that this is given onely as a plat-forme, to direct us how to pray: but this is false, as will appeare by a double reason, to wit, I. Because Saint Luke sayth, say thus: When yee pray; λέγετε say. Saint Matthew here προσεύχεσθε pray; whereby it appeares that the words may be said as a prayer.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Certainely this prayer was given us by the Lord as a platforme; and unto him that doth rightly understand it, it is the most prudent perfect, and compendious prayer of all prayers: And therefore the superstition of the Papists (who say at once so many Pater nosters) and the curiositie of the Anabaptists (who will not endure that it shall be said at all) are both here condemned.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, as this is a platforme, or exemplarie prayer, so it is also commanded Omnibus & semper to all, alwaies, because all men in all ages must strive in their supplications to imitate this forme, as we shall see further in the next question.

In the third answer we affirmed that the Anabaptists deny this to be a prayer; which is also the opinion of the Browniſts, who held, that the words laid downe here by our blessed Saviour in the 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13 verses, are positions, or rules of direction for praying, and not petitions; Against this assertion we argue thus.

Argu. 1. An expresse Commandement, neither contrarie to nature, nor against reason, or the analogie of faith; agreeable also to the scope and tenor of the place, ought to bee obeyed and literally understood.

But these words, when thou prayest, say thus, Mat. 6. 9. and Luke 11. 2. say our Father, &c. is such an expresse Commandement, as is neither against reason, nor contrary to nature, or the analogie of faith, but agreeable to the scope and tenor of the place. Therefore it ought to be obeyed, and literally understood, and used as a prayer.

Argu. 2. Whatsoever Scripture hath in every respect the forme of a prayer, is not onely matter of doctrine, but hath beene used also as a prayer.

But this Scripture, Mat. 6. 9. hath in every respect the forme of a prayer: Therefore it hath beene used as a prayer, and is not onely matter of doctrine.

The Major proposition is thus proved; how can we tell which are prayers and which are not, but onely by their forme of petition, whereby they are distinguished from Doctrines and rules proposed in another forme; as Whatsoever you aske it shall be given you, and the like[h].

[h] Mat. 7. 7 and 21. 22. and 1 Iohn 5. 14.

The Minor proposition is as evident as the Sunne, as is thus shewed. That Scripture which hath expresly the Petitioned, and the Petitioner, and the Petition, hath in every respect the forme of prayer.

But this Scripture Mat. 6 9. hath lively laid downe in it I. the Petitioned, Our Father: II. the Petitioner every one of the faithfull, shrowded, and foulded up in those words Our, and Us. III the Petition, which is either deprecative against sinne, sathan, and temptation: or supplicative both for spirituall graces, and temporall blessings. Therefore these words here used by our Saviour have in every respect the forme of prayer.

Argu. 3. In a dutie prescribed unto all, and to be used by all, the Holy Ghost is plaine, and the Scripture so shallow, that a Lambe may wade: But if these very words be not to be used as a prayer, but onely given us as a Rule of prayer, then no Christian for 1500. yeare or there abouts did understand our Lords meaning. Therefore it is very probable that it is a prayer.

Object. The Browniſts object, The Apostles never used those very words in prayer: Therefore these words are but positions, and rules of doctrine.

Answ. 1. First, an expresse Commandement is warrant enough without any example.

Answ. 2. Secondly, There is no example of Baptising in the name of the Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghost, yet is the Commandement of Christ sufficient warrant so to doe. Compare Mat. 28. 19. with Acts 10. 28. 19. 5.

Quest. 7. Whether are we obliged and injoyned to use this prayer alwaies when we pray?

First, No.

Secondly, it binds
- First, Negatively alwaies, for we must never use another forme; that is, we must pray for no other things, nor otherwise then according to this forme.
- Secondly, affirmatively onely in part, secundum exigentiam, Mus. s. according to our present necessities and occasions; as appeares by these three particulars.

I. Christ himselfe did not alwaies pray this same prayer, for First, sometimes he gives thankes, Mat. 11. 25. I thanke thee O father Lord of Heaven, &c. Secondly, sometimes hee prayes in other tearmes, Mat. 26. 30. Father, take this cup from me. II. The Apostles of Christ often pray otherwise, Reade Acts 1. 24. and 4. 24. III. Sometimes we are (in a manner) constrained in our prayers to expresse our spirituall necessities, which verbatim are not contained in this forme. And therefore we are not affirmatively obliged alwaies to these words.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, I adde another answer to this question given by Paraus[i]. That although publickly in the congregation, & privately at home, we often (in regard of our present necessities) pray in other words then these in the Lords prayer; yet it is very fit and convenient that we should seale up and conclude all our prayers with this forme of prayer; and that for these causes. I. Because thus we obey the Commandement of the Sonne of God; who in this verse saith, Sic orate, pray thus, and Luke 11. 2. When thou prayest sic dicite, say thus; And therefore it is fit that sometimes this forme should bee used. II. Because we must not doubt, or question, but these words prescribed by God the Sonne, are very acceptable unto God the Father, when they are poured forth by a pious and intelligent supplica-

[i] Parens f. Mat.

290 tour: For the Father doth alwayes heare the Sonne, and therefore hee will be ready to heare the words of his Sonne. III. Because it doth most briefly contain a perfect summe of all those things which are necessary to be prayed for, and therefore whatsoever is over-slipt by us in our Petitions, is supplyed by this forme, wherefore it is not amisse to conclude alwaies with it.

And thus I conclude the generall questions concerning this prayer, proceeding unto the explication of the severall petitions.

If any desire to know whether this Prayer may or ought to be said to the Saints, let him consult with M. Fox in his Acts and Monuments, where the matter is discussed, pag. 1274.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Our Father which art in Heaven.]

I will not consider of these words according to the order of nature, but of place, taking them as they lye.

Quest. 1. Why doe wee appropriate God unto our selves? calling him ours?

Answ. That wee may pray the more confidently, because if he be our father he will helpe us.

Quest. 2. Why doe we pray in the plurall number, our father, not my father?

Answ. 1. First, because it is our duty to pray one for another, there being no faith without this true brotherly love, Gal. 6.4.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee pray our father for the greater increase of our confidence, and assurance that we shall be heard; knowing that all the faithfull pray with us and for us. Vis unita fortior, many hands quickly dispatch a great worke, many faithfull prayers quickly pierce the clouds, and ascend the heavens, and come into Gods eares, and never returne without a blessing: And therefore great is our confidence and assurance to be heard, when we know that all Gods children with us pray, our father, thereby praying with us and for us as well as themselves.

Quest. 3. Whether under this title father, is onely the first person of the blessed Trinitie supplicated?

Answ. 1. First, although Christ here teacheth us to pray our father, yet we are not hereby prohibited to supplicate either God the Sonne, or Holy Ghost, for we may pray unto any of them, this word father being taken in Scripture two manner of wayes:

Namely, { Personally, as it is distinguished from Sonne and Holy Ghost, but not so here, Mat. 20.19
Essentially, as it doth distinguish God from man, and so it is here taken, to teach us that wee must pray unto none but unto God, as followes by and by.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Christ is also called a Father, Unto us a sonne is given, who shall be called the everlasting Father, Esa. 9.6. And therefore the Lord Christ is here included.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the Holy Ghost is called by the Apostle, the Father of lights, Jam. 1.17. and therefore this title Father doth not exclude the other persons of the blessed Trinity.

Fourthly, it is our duty to supplicate, and invocate all the three persons. Answ. 4.

I. We petition God the Father for what wee stand in need of, because he is the Author of every good thing which we enjoy, Iam. 1.17.

II. Wee supplicate God the Father in the Name and mediation of God the Sonne, who is the alone Mediator betweene God and man, hee onely laying flat the partition wall [k]. [k] Iohn 16. Act. 4.12.

III. We implore the Throne of Majesty in the Name and Mediation of Christ, to be pleased to impart spirituall graces and gifts unto us by the administration of the blessed Spirit, and therefore this title Father includes, not excludes the rest.

Why call we God Father? Quest. 4.

First, that we may acknowledge our selves to be his children, and that in a foure-fold regard. Answ. 1.

I. By Creation, because he made and framed us, Luk. 3.38.

II. By Protection, because it is he that takes care to defend us from all those dangers we are incident to fall into.

III. By Redemption, because hee hath ransomed us by Christ from the captivitie of Satan.

IV. By Sanctification, because it is the Lord that by his Spirit doth regenerate and sanctifie us [l]. [l] 1 Cor. 6. 10, 11.

And therefore deservedly we call him Father, in these regards, although in no regard we have deserved to be called or made his children.

Secondly, we are taught to call God Father, that thus the prayers of the faithfull may be distinguished from the prayers of unbeleevers. Answ. 2.

For { First, the godly regard no other father in regard of this Father.
Secondly, the wicked they have God to be their Lord, but not their Father; he is Lord over them and rules over them, but they deny unto him that love, reverence, and obedience, which a childe ought to give unto his Father.

Thirdly, we are taught to call God father, to excite and stirre up in us a filiall reverence of him, Psal. 2.9, 10. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, we call God father to corroborate and strengthen our assurance of being heard, Answ. 4.

Because { We are present before; And We make our wants knowne unto } a Father, who loves his children more dearely then any naturall parent doth his childe, for his love unto them is infinite, sempiternall, yea eternall [m]. [m] Luk. 11. 30, 31.

This Verse is a strong argument against the popish invocation of Saints, our Saviour not sending us unto any creatures, but unto God himselfe, Precibus, Our father.

Why must we pray unto the Lord in all our necessities, and not at all to the blessed Saints, who love truly all that are good, or belong unto God? Quest. 5.

First, because prayers to Saints are no where commanded, and therefore it will be but will-worship to pray unto them. Answ. 1.

Secondly,

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the Scriptures doe directly prohibit, and condemne it, Iudg. 13.16. Acts 10 26. Apoc. 19.10. and 22.10.

Ans. 3. Thirdly, because we are punctually commanded to call upon God onely, and alwayes, Psal. 50. 15. Call upon me in the time of thy trouble, so Ioel 2. 13. and Act. 2. 21.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because God afflicts us, and brings us into straights for this end, that he might draw us unto himselfe, and not drive us from him unto others; as wee see Exod. 3. and Psal. 107. They cry and pray in their distresse, not unto the Patriarches, but unto their God.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because invocation is a part of the worship and service of God, and therefore it belongs onely unto him, Ioel 2.13,14. and Matth. 4. 10.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because prayer ought to be in faith (Rom. 10.14.) Now we must not beleeve in the Saints but onely in God: In our Creed we doe not say (Credo in ecclesiam, sed Credo in Deum) I beleeve in the Church, but I beleeve in God.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because we cannot say to the Saints Our father; and therefore this prayer cannot bee said unto them, neither any prayer according to this forme; because as was said before, wee are obliged negatively unto this, see before Question 7. and Booke of Martyrs, pag. 1274.

Eighthly, the last, but not the least answer is taken from the nature of him unto whom wee ought to pray. Here then observe, he that wee ought to pray unto, should be 1. Lubens, willing to helpe us. 2. Sciens, one that knowes our necessities. 3. Potens, able to save. 291 Answ. 8.

First, he whom we must pray unto, ought to be lubens, willing to helpe; but there is none like unto the Lord in mercy, hee being the Father of mercies: And therefore he onely is to be invocated.

Secondly, hee ought to be sciens, one that knowes more then we our selves: For

I. He should know Genus morbi, the kinde of the disease, what our malady is; the Physician and Lawyer can better understand our estates, then we our selves, and those that cannot, are unfit and unable to helpe us.

II. He should know apta remedia, what the best meanes are for the curing of our griefes, lest otherwise they should give a stone instead of bread, and hurt rather than helpe. Sometimes we aske that which is hurtfull for us; and therefore he unto whom wee should pray, ought to know, both what we are, and what may be truly good for us for the time to come: And these things the Lord knows better then all the Saints and Angels together.

Thirdly, he should bee Potens, able both — To heare, and that 4. manner of wayes; namely,

- First, from Heaven unto earth; this the Papists say, the Saints can doe in a glasse, that is, the face of God; but this is false, as shall bee elsewhere proved.
- Secondly, to understand all languages and tongues wherein men pray: this the Papists thinke the Saints doe, and it may be so; therefore I question it no further.
- Thirdly, to heare the sighes, and see the hearts of all; and this is necessary in a double respect, to wit,
  - I. That they may be able to understand those who pray in the Spirit, without a voyce, or words, Rom. 8.26.
  - II. That they may be able to distinguish between those who pray spiritually, and those who pray hypocritically. Many seeme to pray with much fervencie, and therefore it is requisite that he that is supplicated should not onely heare the words which are uttered, but also see the heart from whence they come. Now to ascribe this unto Saints, were to attribute Omnipotencie unto them, which is peculiar unto God.
- Fourthly, Simul & semel, they should be able to heare all suites and suiters at once, in all the parts of the world: this also is proper unto the the Lord, and cannot be communicated unto any other without a great indignity offered to his sacred Majestie: For this is the difference betweene the Creator and the creature; He knowes all things in instanti, we know, what we know successivè.

To helpe, relieve, and satisfie all our wants and desires, which onely the Lord doth. Reade Esa. 43.11. and 45.21. and 46.5.

Obiect. 1 Against this last question, the Papists object divers things, namely;

First, the Saints pray for us, therefore wee may pray unto them.

Answ. 1. First, whether the Saints pray for us or no, I dispute not, because I am perswaded they pray for us in generall, and as farre as they know. And therefore I omit the Antecedent.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the argument is sicke of a non sequitur; they pray for us, therefore we may pray unto them, followes not: For

I. We pray for our brethren; therefore (by this Argument) they may pray unto us.

II. Poore men pray for Kings, therefore Kings may pray unto poore men.

III. The Papists pray for the godly deceased; therefore (by this Argument) the deceased Saints should pray unto the Papists, which is grossely absurd.

IV. The Papists pray for the Pope, therefore he ought to pray unto them.

Secondly, wee stand in need of a Mediatour Obiect. 2.

292 unto the King, therefore much more unto God.

Answ. 1. First, it is most true that wee have offended the Lord of Glory, and by our transgressions provoked him unto anger: wherefore we stand in need of a Mediatour unto him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee have a Mediatour which is Christ (1 Iohn 2, 12.) And therefore it is an injury offered unto the office of Christ, to have any other.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, non est par ratio, the simile or comparison holds not, as thus plainely appeares.

I. A King cannot remember all things, cannot know all his subjects, cannot heare all suiters, cannot particularly love all faithfull subjects; because he neither knowes all, nor knowes the hearts of any: But God remembers all things, knowes all men, can heare all petitioners at once, knowes the hearts of all, and particularly knowes all his subjects and faithfull servants, knowing them all by name.

II. We cannot have accesse unto the King at all times, but we may unto God.

III. Wee are strangers unto the King, but if we be the children of God, then God is our Father, and Christ is our Husband: The Queene needs no Mediatour unto the King, nor the son unto the Father: And therefore if wee belong unto the Lord, there is no need of any other Intercessour but Christ.

Ans 4 Fourthly, if the King shall command mee to come boldly, and immediately unto him, whensoever I will, and for whatsoever I desire, and strictly chargeth me to use no Mediatour unto him, as though I did distrust of his love; then there were no neede of a Mediatour unto him, yea I should disobey and displease him, if I made use of any. This is our case, God commands us to call upon him onely, and forbids us to pray unto any other (as is proved plainely in the foregoing question) and therefore wee sinne against him, if we invocate the Saints, either for mediation or intercession.

Object. 3 Thirdly, they object that it is lawfull to pray unto the Saints from experience, thus: Many repairing unto the shrines of the Saints, and there praying unto them, have beene cured of divers maladies; which plainely proves that God heard the Saints in their behalfe.

Answ. 1. First, certainely there are many lies scattered abroad in in this kinde, whereof their learned Papists are ashamed, and will not report them as truthes, but call them piafraudes and pia mendacia; because good use may be made of them, as Fables may be moralized; yea, confessing many to be apparently false, and many at the best to be suspected. I referre him who makes question of this to that ingenuous Jesuite Melchior Canus[o].

[o] Pa. 333 334.

Answ. 2. Secondly, miracles are not promised to beleevers but infidels (1 Cor. 14.) Ecclesijs plantandis non plantatis, for the setling of Churches, not for setled Churches; where the Gospell is about to be planted, not where it is already planted. And therefore these miracles they so much brag of; doe rather prove them to be infidels, and as yet no true Church, then any thing else; for to a Church so many hundred years setled as they would make us beleeve, theirs hath beene, there is neither need nor promise of miracles.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, in times past there were miracles wrought among the heathen, were their Idols therefore true Gods? Satan can transforme himselfe into an Angel of light, and (the Lord permitting) can doe rare and wonderfull things.

Object. 4 Here they will object, among the heathen the Divell was invocated, and prayed unto who is the father of lies (Iob. 8.44.) but they call upon the Saints, who will not deceive them.

Answ. Certainely the Saints will not, but Satan can: Neither amongst the heathen was the divell prayed unto plainely (qua talis) but as an Angell of light (2 Cor. 11.14.) And so at this day amongst us and them, there are some who will cure horses and hogges by good prayers, altogether ignorant that the poore creatures are helped by the divels meanes. If any deny this, let them shew, why their prayers are better and more prevalent for this purpose then the prayers of other of Gods children. And therefore the Papists had need well to consider this, lest that Satan, not the Saints cure their maladies, deluding and deceiving them, as a just judgement of God upon them, for their incredulity and disobedience unto his word [p].

[p] 2 Thes. 2. 10, 11.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we say and conclude therefore, Miracles are to be judged by the doctrine, not the doctrine by the Miracles: there were those who did foretell things to come, and yet God forbids the people to believe them, if they teach, or perswade that which is contrary unto the word [q]. Yea, there shall bee false miracles in the false Church [r]. Wherefore the Papists must either prove invocation of Saints by Scripture, or not at all, for miracles against the Scripture are not to be believed [s].

Quest. 6. What benefits doe we receive from God that we are taught onely to pray unto him?

Answ. If he be our Father then

- First, hee will free us from all evill.
- Secondly, hee will preserve us from that evill one, the divell.
- Thirdly, hee will inhabite, and dwell with us, and in us, 2 Cor. 6 18.
- Fourthly, he will provide all good things for us.
- Fifthly, he will guide and direct us by his Spirit, Rom. 8.14, 15.
- Sixthly, hee will give the Kingdome of heaven unto us, Luke 12.32. Rom. 8.17.

Quest. 7. What is it that hinders our prayers from being heard? for wee often call upon our Father but he answers us not?

Answ.

The 293

The impediments are either
- Firſt, Generall, namely, ſinne; becauſe God will not heare ſinners (Iob. 9. 31.) nor thoſe who regard iniquity in their hearts (Pſal. 66. 18.)
- Secondly, particular, to wit,
  - Firſt, Cruelty: Yee ſhall make many prayers, but I will not heare; for your hands are bloody. Iſa. 1. 15.
  - Secondly, hard-heartedneſſe againſt the poore. He that ſtoppeth his eares againſt the crie of the poore, he alſo ſhall cry himſelfe, but ſhall not be heard, Prov. 21. 13.
  - Thirdly, diſſenſion, and diſcord: hence our Saviour adviſeth thoſe to be reconciled who have offended one another, before they come to offer up the Calves of their lips unto God, Read Mat. 5. 24. and Marke 11. 25.
  - Fourthly, Pride; God reſiſts, withſtands, and denies good things unto the proud, but giveth grace to the humble, ſee Pſal. 51. 17. and Eſa. 66. 2. and 1 Pet. 5. 5.
  - Fifthly, Doubting, he that would be heard muſt pray in faith without wavering, Iames 1. 6.
  - Sixthly, Contempt of the word of God: Becauſe I have called and yee refuſed, yea ſet at naught all my counſell; therefore ye ſhall call, but I will not heare you[t]. t Prov. 1. 24, 25, 28.

And therefore if we deſire that our prayers may be heard, we muſt carefully eſchew Cruelty, Miſerableneſſe, Diſcord, Pride, Doubting, Contempt of Gods word, yea all ſinnes whatſoever.

Queſt. 8 Who are they that God hath promiſed to heare when they they pray thus, Our Father?

Anſ. 1. Firſt, thoſe who beleeve in him, and place all their truſt and confidence upon him, John 1. 12.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe who by a ſpirituall regeneration are ingrafted into Chriſt, John 15. 5.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, thoſe who are ſealed by the Spirit of promiſe, unto the day of their ſalvation, Rom. 8. 9.

Anſw. 4 Fourthly, thoſe who firſt of all ayme at, and ſeeke for the glory of God, 1 Cor. 10. 31.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, they who ſtrive in their life and converſation to imitate God; labouring to be holy, pure and perfect as he is, Mat. 5. 44.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, thoſe who devote themſelves wholly unto the ſervice of God both in ſoule and body (1 Cor. 6. 19, 20.) denying themſelves, their owne wils, and deſires, ſubmitting, and ſubjecting themſelves wholly to the will and pleaſure of God.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Which art in heaven.]

Queſt. 1. How are theſe words to be underſtood?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, Auguſtine underſtands them of the hearts of the faithfull; as though thoſe Temples were the heaven, wherein God dwels. He confirmes his paradoxe by theſe arguments. I. Becauſe otherwiſe thoſe who are higher in ſtature, ſtate, and ſituation, ſhould be nearer unto God: that is, if God dwell in heaven (literally underſtood) then taller men, and thoſe, who live upon mountaines and hils, and ambitious and high ſpirits, ſhould be neareſt unto God: whereas the poore, lowly, and contrite in ſpirit are neareſt and deareſt unto him. II. Becauſe God profeſſeth that hee will dwell in the humble, and with them[u]. Therefore (ſaith the Father) by heaven is meant the hearts of the humble. III. Becauſe God hath ſaid, that the hearts of his children are his Temple, and manſion place, 1 Cor. 3. 16. and 6. 19. and 2 Cor. 6. 16. IV. Becauſe God is not to be included in heaven.

u Eſa. 57. 15.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, although the remembrance of this Father be venerable, yet I dare not ſubſcribe unto his opinion in this particular; and that for theſe two reaſons, namely. 1. Becauſe, if wee may not include God in heaven, no more may we in the hearts of the faithfull; for as he is (extra calum non excluſus) without heaven, yet not ſhut out of heaven; as he is (intra calum non incluſus) within heaven, yet not ſhut up in the heaven; ſo he is alſo (intra corda non incluſus) in the hearts of the faithfull, but not included within them. 2. Becauſe although God bee preſent in the earth, as well as in the heavens (as followes in the next queſtion) yet there is a more full and ample manifeſtation of the Majeſty and glory of God in heaven, then there is one earth. Heaven is his ſeate and Throne, earth is but his footſtoole: The truth of this reaſon further appeares thus: Firſt, the Scripture ſaith, he dwelleth in heaven[v], and he looked downe from heaven, Pſal. 2. 3, and 14. 12. Secondly, the manifeſtation of Gods power, juſtice, and anger is from thence: God manifeſted his power upon the old world, by raine from heaven: he ſhewed his wonderfull workes upon Egypt, by haile from heaven: yea notified his power upon the Amorites, by throwing ſtones from heaven upon them (Joſh. 10) and upon Sodome, by raining fire and brimſtone from heaven upon them, Gen. 19. Thirdly, Chriſt ptaying lookes up unto heaven, Marke 7. and Luke 9. Fourthly, Chriſt telleth us, that as he deſcended from heaven, ſo hee will againe aſcend into heaven, Epheſ. 4. 10. And therefore this word heaven is not here to bee underſtood of the hearts of the faithfull, but of the Empyreall heaven.

v 1 Tim. 6. 16.

Queſt. 2. Why doe we ſay, Which art in heaven, is not God every where?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, in generall God is every where both in heaven and earth, Eſay 66. 1. Ieremiah 23. 23, 24.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, God is on earth, and his eyes are in all the corners thereof, 1 King. 8. 23.

294

Thirdly, but his glory is most transcendent and apparent in Heaven, that being his throne.

*Answ.*3. Reade Psalme .2. 4. and 5. 34. and 115. 3. and *Esa.*57.15. and 1.*Tim.*6.15.

*Answ.*4. Fourthly, God is said to be in Heaven. I. in regard of GOD. II. in regard of our selves.

First, we say our Father which art in Heaven, in regard of God, and that for these ends. I. That we may understand him to be the Creator of Heaven. II. That wee may hereby confesse him to bee the governour of all the world, who sees and knowes all our necessities. Psalme. 2.4. and .115.3. Yea hereby we shew forth his divine dominion, that unto his Kingdome and office who is in Heaven doth appertaine to heare our Prayers, to consider our wants, to regard our necessities, to relieve our distresses, and to afford helpe unto us in all our straights. III. That wee may shew forth his divine power, that he is able to doe and give those things which we demand, all things being in his power. IV. That we may acknowledge his divine wisedome, for being in Heaven, he knowes how to free and helpe us, yea what may be truely good for us. V. That we may acknowledge him to bee the Author, and giver of heavenly joy, and eternall life. ° VI. Christ teacheth us to call God Father, to shew hereby two miraculous things unto us, viz.

° Rom.6. 23.

First, that hee who dwels in that inaccessible light and height which no eye can attaine unto (1 Tim. 6.16.) is yet notwithstanding prepared to heare the requests of poore earth-wormes when they pray unto him.

Secondly, that the Prayers which are uttered in a small still voyce, should ascend the Clouds and penetrate the Heavens.

Secondly we say, our Father which art in Heaven, in regard of our selves, and that for these ends, viz. I. That all our thoughts of God might be divine and heavenly: or that we might have no base or earthly conceite of God, nor any human imagination of him, lest we should measure him by the standard of carnall reason. II. To teach us to state a difference, betweene our heavenly and our earthly Father: because he is omnipotent, perfect, just, impartiall, and the like, which our naturall parents are not ˣ III. That by this compellation or addition wee might bee admonished to seeke heavenly not earthly things of God, and when as wee seeke earthly, to desire them for this end, that wee may be more enabled to doe good, and thereby to glorifie God, having a spirituall aime and end even in our petitions for temporall things. IV. That by this appellation we might bee admonished. to know, and acknowledge, that so long as wee live on earth, wee are pilgrims and strangers from the Lord, who is in Heaven: and consequently to excite and kindle our desires, that they may be inflamed with a longing and hungring affection after the fruition & possession of that heavenly Kingdome where our Father is. *Chem. Harm. Cap.*51 *fol.*607. V. That we might pray the more fervently, seeing we invocate a heavenly Father. VI. That wee might rather use the spirit then the voyce in Prayer, because it is not the words of the mouth but the sighes, groanes, and desires of the heart which reach unto Heaven, VII. That wee might bee carefull to crave no unlawfull nor unjust thing at the hands of our Father which is in Heaven. VIII. That we might bee carefull to be transformed unto a heavenly nature, and conversation, that seeing our Father is in Heaven, we might (as children of such a Father) have our conversation on earth, as though we were in Heaven.

ˣ Math. 23 9.

§.4. Hallowed be thy Name.] *Sect.*5.

What is meant heere by the Name of God? *Quest.*1.

First, the Name of God sometimes signifies God himselfe; They that love thy name (that is thy selfe) are blessed. Psalme 5.12. *Answ.*1.

Secondly, sometimes Name signifies the workes of God: How excellent is thy Name, that is, thy workes, *Ps.*8.10. *Answ.*2.

Thirdly, sometimes Name doth signifie and denote unto us the attributes of God; as Exodus. 3.14,15. My name is Eheje, and Iehovah, that is, one that hath life and being in himselfe, and from himselfe, and gives life unto all other creatures: and Exod. 15.3. The name of the Lord is, Dominus bellicosus, a warlike God: so he is called El-elohim, a strong and A mighty God; and Saddai or Schaddai an All-sufficient God. *Answ.*3

Fourthly, Name by a Metonymie is taken for glory, or honour; Oh Lord shew thy Name, that is thy glory, honour, and power, Exod. 9.16. and 14. 4. 17. and 33. 19. and Iosh. 7. 9.

Fifthly, it signifies the worship, or celebration of God. Acts 21.23. And thus in this place it is taken for the glorie, honour, and worship of God himselfe, and the celebration of him in his attributes.

What is meant by this word Hallowed? *Quest.*2.

First, it signifies to make holy: thus Christ sanctified himselfe (*Iohn.*17.19.) and us, Romans 8. 30. *Answ.*1.

Secondly, it signifies to consecrate or dedicate unto some holy use: Thus the leviticall holy things were separated from a common use, and therefore were called holy. *Answ.*2.

Thirdly, it signifies a preparation unto divine worship, Exod. 19.10. *Answ.*3.

Fourthly, it signifies to proclaime, or declare one to be holy, and so it is taken in this place, to set forth the glory of God: Teaching us, that we must both desire and endeavour, both labour and pray, that the Lord may bee glorified in us and by us. 1.*Corinth.*10.31. *Answ.*4. Obser.

Why must we thus earnestly endeavour and fervently desire that Gods Name may be glorified? *Quest.*3.

First, because God is better and more worthy to be sanctified and glorified then any other. is He infinite, and incomparable there is none worthy to be compared unto our Father which is in Heaven: And therefore our chiefest aime in all things must be to glorifie him. *Answ.*1.

Secondly,

Answ. 2. Secondly, because he is most able to recompense us if we glorifie him: There is none able to doe that for us, which our God can; wherefore our chiefest care should be to Hallow his Name.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because all things were made for his glory: we were by him created for this end (Proverbs. 16. 4) and therefore let us not frustrate his expectation, nor defraud him of his right, but labour to honour him, and hallow his Name in all our actions.

Answ 4. Fourthly, because God creating us for his glory he will be glorified by us, either by our conversion, or by our confusion: And therefore if we desire to be preserved from eternall destruction, we must be carefull to advance his glory here on earth.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because it is a signe of our filiation and adoption into the fellowship of sonnes (for a child honours his Father. Malach. 1. 6.) And therefore if we desire to be assured that we are heires of glory, we must glorifie our Father which is in heaven.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because God hath honoured us, and that two manner of waies, namely, I. Temporally, he made all things for us; that is, hee made the world for man, and made man Lord of the world, over all the creatures. II. Spiritually, he hath daigned to call us his children [a] he hath married us to Christ [b] such a dignity as we are not able worthily enough to conceive off. David thought it a great thing to be called the Kings sonne in law; how great then is our dignity that are not the sonnes in law of an earthly King, but the adopted sonnes of the King of Heaven and earth: And therefore we shall be left without excuse, if we make it not our chiefest study, to bring much glory and honour on earth, to our heavenly Father.

[a] 1 John. 3. 1. & Ro. 8. 17.

[b] Phil. 2. 9

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because God will honour us if we honour him. And that I. In this life. 1. Samuel. 2, 30. II. In the life to come. Daniel 12. 3. and Matthew 13. 43. Wherefore we should endeavour to advance and set forth his glory. Against the summe and substance of this question it will be objected, God is incompatible, and therefore how can he be honoured or glorified: He is infinite and perfect and therefore what can be added unto him?

Obiect.

Answ. 1. First, it is true, we cannot augment or encrease that essentiall glory which is in God, because that is like God himselfe, infinite, and perfect.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but we may enlarge, and advance, that accidentall glorie of God which is in the world, viz. the acknowledging, preaching, publishing, and setting forth of his glory, which is the thing we heere pray for, and must here endeavour to practise.

Quest. 4 How must we glorifie the Name of God? how or wherein must wee set forth his honour?

Answ. 1. First, Opere, in our deeds and works, and that two severall waies, to wit. I. In our whole life we must studie to set forth his glory, and whatsoever wee doe, to doe it to that end. II. Wee must patientlie suffer all injuries and wrongs according to the example of Christ our Saviour, Esa. 53. For God is glorified when we suffer undeserved injuries patientlie for his Name sake.

Secondly, Ore, in our speeches, and tongues, and that many waies, namely, I. By glorifying God, and magnifying his Gospel, and our profession of the true religion which wee are called unto, and have undertaken; for our mouthes should be filled with the praises of God, and of his trueth, and of that religion which we professe. II. By being zealous professors of the Gospel, and not lukewarme Christians, Apocal. 3. 16. III. By acknowledging the law of God to be just and gracious; that he commands us nothing, but what he may justlie exact, yea his Commandements are light and easie in regard of what he might lawfullie, and justlie exact. IV. By acknowledging all the workes of God not onely to be just, but mercifull also. That man is happie, who can see, and clearelie interpret the mercie of God in all his works and dealings with him: That howsoever the Lord handles him, yet hee confesseth God to be mercifull, because all the affliction the Lord hath laid upon him, comes farre short of what he hath deserved. V. By acknowledging all good things whatsoever we injoy to come from God. Iames. 1. 7. VI. By reading continuallie the praises of our heavenlie Father in the Booke of the creatures, and the actions of the World: everie creature in the World being a little Booke, wherein wee may read the praises of our God, Psalme 148.

Answ. 2.

Thirdlie, Corde, in heart, and that three waies, namelie, I. By remembring all the mercies we receive from God, whether spirituall, or temporall, whether blessings or deliverances, not letting any of them slip out of our memories. II. By desiring the glorie of God, and by studying, how we may glorifie him more and more. III. By being zealous of his glorie in our hearts, and more moved when his Name is dishonoured, then we should be for the greatest disgraces or indignitie that could be offered unto our selves, remembring Gods honour is our glorie. IV. By desiring with our hearts, that we may see the glorie of God. Psalme 27. 4. and 42. 1, 2. And thus wee must labour to glorifie our Father which is in Heaven, in thought, word, and deed.

Answ. 3.

Quest. 5. How is the Name of God dishonoured?

Answ. As it is honoured, three manner of waies, viz. by thought, word, and deed.

First, God is dishonoured Corde, in the heart, and that divers waies, I. By the love of carnall and temporall things, God having made the heart for higher ends then these; And therefore woe bee unto that man who makes unto himselfe a God in this world, whether it be his belly, or his gold, or his pleasure: For our hearts should be alwaies in heaven, and our affections set upon those things which are above, Coloss. 3. 2. Otherwise wee dishonour 296 dishonour our Father with our hearts. II. By a neglect of spirituall things, and a contempt of those graces which God offers unto us in and by the word. III. If wee doe not labour and endeavour daily to weane our affections from the world and worldly things, and to increase in strength of grace, and wisedom, and all vertues more and more (seeing that we are imperfect so long as we are in the way) wee dishonour our God. IV. Wee dishonour the Lord in our hearts; when we are inwardly or outwardly proud of graces given, as the Pharisee was, Luke, 18. 11.

Secondly, God is dishonored Ore, by the tongue, and that divers waies also. I. By swearing, Levitic. 19. 12. and Mathew. 24. 16. II. By medling with the attributes of God, and holy things lightly, idly, vainely, and without reverence. These two belong unto the third Commandement, and therefore I here passe them by. III. By blasphemous speeches of God, or his word, or holy things.

IV. By murmuring either { First, against the law of God. Or, Secondly, against Gods dealing with us in any particular affliction.

V. By excusing our sinnes. 1. Iohn. 1. 8, 9. and Iosh. 7. 19. My sonne confesse thy sinne, and give glory to God; as if hee should say, hee who cloaketh, denieth, or excuseth his sinne dishonours God. VI. By all vaine, unseemely, and filthy communication, Ephes. 5. 3, 4. VII. By praying wickedly, rashly, or irreverently.

VIII. By denying of Christ, and that either { First, in generall, by a cowardlinesse, and fearefulnesse in our profession, when we dare not professe Christ before men. Or, Secondly, particularly, by not speaking for God and Christ, against sinne.

IX. We dishonour God if we doe not glorifie him. A dead Image doth not dishonour God, although it speake no good; but man that is a living Image of the everlasting God doth dishonour his Maker, if he honour him not with his tongue, and in his words: For it it is not enough for man to speake no hurt, or not to dishonour God by his words, but hee must labour also, that God may bee glorified by his gracious speeches, and holy communication, otherwise hee doth dishonour his God.

Thirdly, God is likewise dishonoured Opere, by our workes, and that these waies. I. By giving that glory which is due onely unto God, unto the Saints, as the Papists doe in their worshipping of them, and praying unto them. II. By magnifying, glorifying, and honouring men, or our selves, more then our God. III. By sinning, thus principally we dishonour God in our lives and actions. Every sinne pollutes, by every sinne God is dishonoured, but chiefely by great sinnes, which are either more exorbitant in themselves, or are committed by men more eminent, as for example.

First, Ministers are Cities, set upon a Hill, and therefore they must be extraordinarily carefull not to defile their wayes: because by their sinnes God is most of all dishonoured.

Secondly, Magistrates are the Image of God, yea his Deputies, and Vice-gerents on earth, being stiled by his Name, and called Gods, Psalme 82. And therefore if they bee wicked, they much dishonour him whose Image and superscription they beare.

Thirdly, those who are potent and rich, whom God hath raised to great estate, or high places; if these be given to oppression, or lying, or covetousnesse, or prophanesse, or gluttony and drunkennesse, or chambering and wantonesse, they much dishonour God; because the more abundantlie God blesseth them thē others; the more is hee dishonoured by then, if they bee not better, and their lives, more unblamable then others.

Fourthly, the professors of the Gospel doe exceedingly dishonour God, when they are wicked.

[c] IV. Wee dishonour God in our lives, if we doe not by our lives glorifie his Name: If we be but negative Christians, we are nothing, for God created us unto good workes. (Ephes. 2. 10.) that thereby we might glorifie his Name, Matthew, 5. 16. [c] Rom. 2. 24.

VERS. 10. Thy Kingdome come, thy Will be done, in earth, as it is in Heaven. Vers. 10.

§. 1. Thy Kingdome come.] Sect. 1.

What is meant by Kingdome? Quest. 1.

Figuratively,

Kingdome is taken either.
- Figuratively, to wit.
  - Sometime for the word of God; The Kingdome of God shall be taken away, and given to another nation (Matth. 21.43.) that is the word shall be taken from them.
  - Sometimes for the infusion of grace by the Spirit of God. Mark. 4. 26.
  - Sometimes for persons, to wit, either the Saints, or the Church of Christ.
- Literally for that dominion which God exerciseth, which is either.
  - Generall, to wit, his Lordship over all men, all creatures, yea all the world; specified in these places. Psalme 29. 19. and 47. 7. and 97. 1.
  - Particular which is either.
    - Of vengeance, anger, power, and wrath; And thus he rules over the wicked, Psalme 99. 1.
    - Of mercy and love, and thus he rules over his children, according to a double time, viz. either.
      - Of grace in this life.
      - Or,
      - Of glory in the life to come. Reade. Psa. 24 7. and. 44. 5.

Quest. 2. What is meant by this word Adveniat, let it come? Heaven comes not unto us, but wee goe unto it; wherefore it should rather be (Adveniamus) Let us come unto thy kingdome: then (Adveniat) let it come.

Answ. These words may be understood two waies, namely,

First, for Declaretur, let it be made known; as if our Saviour would say; let the world know that thou art King, and that thou rulest over all: And this is to be referred to the Kingdome of vengeance.

Secondly, for Perficiatur, let it be consummated and finished; as if hee would say, that which thou hast decreed and determined concerning thine elect, fulfill and perfect both in us, and in all thine: Now this hath reference to the Kingdome of mercie.

First, Adveniat regnum, id est, Declaretur regnum, Thy kingdome come, that is, let thy Kingdome be made knowne: This cannot bee understood of Gods generall Kingdome over all the world (mentioned in the former question) for God hath this already, yea no Christian makes question, but that God is Lord, ruling and governing all the world. It is therefore to be understood of his particular Kingdome, to wit, the Kingdome of vengeance; the words being taken from the declaration of Gods wrath, anger, power, and vengeance, Observ. Teaching us, That every Christian ought to pray that God would shew himselfe the potent King of all the world, by destroying all his enemies, and the enemies of his Church. Thus David prayes; powre forth thy anger upon the Gentiles, yea smite and destroy them in thy wrath.

Quest. 3. Why should we pray for the confusion of the enemies of God and his Church?

Answ. 1. First, because it makes for Gods glory; hee is dishonoured and contemned by the wicked, who will not obey his behests, but oppose his injunctions; who will not be subject to his lawes, but (validis remis) with all their might set themselves against his rule and government, and will not have him to rule over them. And therefore the glory and honour of God is highly advanced, when as such impious, obstinate, stubborne and rebellious people bee cut off and destroyed.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is good for the godly. As wee pray for the ruine of Gods enemies, through our zeale to Gods glory, so also wee pray for the perdition and destruction of the enemies of the Church of God, through our love to the Church, and true members thereof, because their destruction is good and profitable for the children of God, who are oppressed, injured, wronged, and persecuted by them. Bonos punit qui malis parcit [d] he punisheth the righteous who spares the wicked, because the impunitie of the wicked increaseth their impietie towards the righteous. Hence wee finde a double practise in the people of God, namely, I. They pray for the destruction of the Lords enemies. Iudg. 5. 31. Psalme 83. 8. &c. II. They give thanks for their destruction, when God hath revealed, his vengeance and declared his power in their utter ruine and downfall, Read Exodus 15. Iudg. 5. Ps. 136.

[d] Seneca.

Quest. 4. How may we pray for the enemies of God, and Church?

Answ. 1. Not onely in zeale, nor onely in love, but both mixt together; For I. wee may be zealous with a wrong zeale; thus Paul breathed forth threatning, against the Disciples of Christ; and the Apostles were too ready with Elias to call for fire from Heaven; but the Lord checks them for this their forward cruell zeale, because it was not mixed with love, but proceeded from a desire of revenge. II. Some naturall respect unto the person of the enemie of God, and the Church, makes us oftentimes to pray only in love for his health, prosperity, preservation, and the like, and not in zeale. Because he is of affinitie, or acquaintance, or by some bond of friendship knit neare unto us, therefore we pray for him in love, towards our selves, but not in zeale unto Gods glory, or love unto

298 unto Gods Church, carnally preferring our particular intereſt and relation unto any enemie of God or his Church, before either the glory of God, or good of his Church, unto whom hee is an enemie.

And therefore, whatſoever the enemies of God or his Church bee in regard of our owne Particular, it is our dutie thus to pray for them.

Firſt, with a condition, that if it may ſtand with the Lords pleaſure and good will, he would be graciouſly pleaſed to convert and turne them, and of perſecuting Sauls to make them preaching and profeſſing Pauls.

Secondly, but if not, that they may bee deſtroyed, leſt they bring the people of God unto ruine, or the Lords name bee prophaned by them.

Object. Worldlings, and wicked men object, This prayer for the deſtruction of Gods, and the Churches enemies, ariſeth out of envie, and therefore can be neither good nor warrantable.

Anſw. It proceedeth not from envie, but from zeale and love.

Queſt. 5. How can a man pray for the judgements of the Lord to bee effuſed upon any, out of love and charitie?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, wee may deſire it out of our love to Gods glory, who is diſhonoured by their lives.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, out of our love unto others, who are in danger to bee corrupted and tainted by their evill example; when ſome perceive others to be wicked, and to ſet themſelves againſt God, his law, truth, and children, and yet proſper in their wickednes, it heartens them on to the like practiſes: And therefore in love unto theſe we deſire, that theſe ſtumbling ſtones may be removed out of the way.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we may pray for the ſubverſion and ruine of the enemies of the Church, out of our love unto the children of God, who are offended by them and with them, as was ſaid before.

Anſw 4. Fourthly, wee may begge this, even out of our love unto themſelves, who are for the preſent both Gods enemies, and the Churches; for I. We deſire the Lord to lay ſome affliction upon them though it be heavie; that thereby they may learne to feare God: And ſo by the puniſhments of their bodies, their ſoules come to bee ſaved in the day of the Lord. This is good and profitable for them. II. If temporall affliction will not humble, and bring them home, then we deſire God to remove them away by death ſpeedily, that ſo their puniſhment may bee leſſe in heli fire: For if they ſhould live longer, they would ſinne more and worſe (wicked men growing daily worſe and worſe) and conſequently their eternall judgement would bee ſo much the greater, and more inſupportable. And the leſſe their puniſhment is, the better it is for them.

Will God heare theſe imprecations?

Queſt. 6 Anſw. Certainely hee will: hee hath promiſed to heare his childrē when they pray for vengeance againſt their owne particular enemies, and perſecutors Luke 18. 7. much more then when they pray againſt thoſe who are both the enemies of God, and adverſaries alſo unto his Church.

Queſt. 7. Who are theſe enemies whom we muſt pray againſt?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, thoſe who by their ſinnes diſhonour God; the Lord is diſpleaſed with all ſinnes, but his name is diſhonoured by ſome ſinnes more then others, and by the ſinnes of ſome men more then others: Now the more that any man diſhonours God by his ſins, the more ſure he is of perdition & deſtruction except he repent becauſe he is one of the Lords chiefe enemies.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe who by their ſinnes give a publike ſcandall to the profeſſion of religion, are great enemies both to God, and his Church.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, thoſe who ſinne with a high hand, and are inſolent in their wickedneſſe, againſt either God or his Church, are ſome of theſe enemies who ſhall certainely periſh.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, thoſe who ſinne deſperately without repentance, being obſtinate in their tranſgreſſions, and not mourning for their iniquities, are of this number which the Lord will be avenged of, when his children cry unto him to declare himſelfe unto the world to bee King of Kings, by the deſtruction of his and their enemies. And thus much for this expoſition of theſe words, Thy kingdome come.

Secondly, Adveniat regnum, Thy kingdome come, is taken for perficiatur, and hath reference to the Kingdome of mercy. Now in the words thus underſtood we begge many things at Gods hands;

To wit, both that we may be
- Freed from the
  - Sathan and His Miniſters, that is,
    - Perſecuters. And
    - Seducers, which are either
      - Atheiſts, Or
      - Superſtitious perſons.
  - falſe Church, to wit, both of
- Brought into the true Church, and this we deſire both for
  - All the godly that
    - Firſt, the Church may be conſummated.
    - Secondly, that it may bee glorified, to wit, by the extenſion of the - Limits, and bounds thereof. And
      - Holy profeſſion thereof. And
      - Pure life, and good examples of profeſſors.
    - Thirdly, that they may enjoy the meanes, viz.
      - The word, and
      - The power of the Spirit with the word.
  - Our ſelves, that we may be brought both into the Kingdome of
    - Grace, in this life.
    - Glory, in the life to come.

Having, all theſe ſeverall particulars to handle in another place, I will here onely ſpeake a word or two of the two laſt, wherin we pray that both wee and all the elect may firſt bee brought into the kingdome of grace, and afterwards into the kingdome of glory.

Can

Quest. 8 Can we of our selves, or by our owne power come unto the Kingdome of grace?

Answ. To this Gerson answers, Signanter dicitur in oratione Dominicâ, Adveniat regnum tuum, id est, ad nos veniat, quia virtute nostra ad ipsum pervenire non possumus. Very significantly doth our Saviour in this verse say, Thy Kingdome come, that is, let it come unto us, because wee by our owne power and strength are not able to come unto it.

Quest. 9. If it be thus, then how can wee promote or helpe forward this Kingdome of grace and Christ?

Answ. We must strive to advance, propagate, and enlarge this Kingdom of grace by these meanes,

First, by prayer, as in this verse.

Secondly, by submitting of our selves unto God by true obedience, suffering him wholy to rule, & beare sway in our hearts by his blessed spirit.

Thirdly, by opposing and resisting as much, and as farre, as lawfully we may the enemies of Christ and his Church.

namely,

Fourthly, by comforting and helping the Church, and children of God to our abilities; we must doe good unto all, but especially unto the household of faith; that the faithfull who are in any distresse may be comforted, and others thereby encouraged to strive to be of that societie and fraternitie, who will not see one another lacke.

Fifthly, by a good life, and holy conversation: for that is a meanes to convert others unto the faith, and bring home erring sheepe unto Christs fold. Phil. 2.15. and 1 Pet. 2.12.

Que. 10. Why must we be thus carefull by all waies and meanes to bee made members of Christs Kingdome upon earth?

Answ. 1. First, because we have an expresse Commandement for it, Mat. 6.33. Seeke first the Kingdome of God, and the righteousnesse thereof.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because wee have the constant example of all the faithfull for it, whose principall care hath beene still for this.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because wee have bound our selves with an oath both in Baptisme, and the Supper of our Lord that we would forsake the kingdome of Sathan, and submit our selves to this Spirituall kingdome of Christ.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because the subjects of this Kingdome, are interested, and made heires of all good things in this life, both temporall and spirituall, Mat. 6.33. Rom. 8.32. and 1 Cor. 3.21.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because the Citizens of this spirituall Jerusalem, shall be made eternally happie, and blessed in that Jerusalem which is above, in the life to come.

Que. 11. Who are careless and negligent of helping forward this Kingdome of Christ, and grace?

First, those who are altogether negligent in praying fervently for the amplification, and extension of this kingdome. Answ. 1.

Secondly, those who cannot endure the yoake of Christ, but disdainefully, and reproachfully cast it off from their necks, Psal. 2.2,3. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those who manifestly, and openly, or closely and secretly, warre, and fight for the sworne enemies of Christ, sinne, sathan, and the wicked opposers of the Church & truth; These are I. Secure sinners, who sleepe in their iniquitie, and cry, tush no evill shall come unto them, although they be not the servants of Christ, but the slaves of sinne and sathan. II. Those who dispute, and pleade sinnes and the devils cause; that is argue, and reason for the upholding, bolstering, and maintaining of sinne. III. Those who speake for, side, and take part with wicked men in their wickednesse. Cast in thy lot with us, Prov. 1. who will rather condemne the generation of the just, then of the wicked. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, those who will not either for the propagation, or conservation of this kingdome, bestow the least part of their estates; but will rather suffer it to decay, decline, yea fall downe, then support and uphold it with their riches. The meanes to propagate the profession of the Gospell, and to enlarge the publication thereof, is the preaching of the word; now as Saint Paul said, well, he had rather speake five words in a knowne tongue, then ten thousand in an unknowne. So many say (or at least thinke in their hearts) wickedly, that they had rather speake ten thousand words against preaching then five for it. The preaching of the word is as a treasure, which should be purchased though at a high rate, Mat. 13. But there are too too many, who will rather want it, then buy it, yea some had rather give a pound to bee deprived of it then a peny to enjoy it. Certainely, those who are enemies unto preaching are no friends unto this spirituall kingdom of Christ. Answ. 4. e 1 Cor. 14.19.

Fifthly, those are faulty in this particular of enlarging the Church, and kingdome of Christ, who either openly, or secretly, strive to bring in errours, Heresies, Schismes, Popery, Superstition and the abommination of desolation into the Church of Christ, that is, into a place, towne, city, or kingdome, where Christ is professed. Answ. 5.

Que. 12. What may wee thinke of those who are thus faultie in the promoting, and advancing of the Kingdome of Christ?

Ans. 1. First, they are to be esteemed as disobedient, and contemners, of the Commandement of God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we may thinke them scoffing Ishmaels, who deride not onely the worshippers, and servants, but also the worship and service of God: For how can they say, Thy kingdome come, when they labour to hinder it, without palpable derision of prayer?

Answ. 3 Thirdly, we may thinke such to bee rather imitators of wicked men, then of Godly; and therefore are to be accounted no better then the enemies of this Kingdome.

Answ. 4 Fourthly, that in Baptisme, and the celebration on

300 on of the Lords ſupper they are perjured and forſworne; and therefore are to be ranked with ſuch as neither obſerve faith, nor troth, nor Promiſe, nor word, nor oath with God, becauſe all theſe they have violated moſt perfidiouſly.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, wee may truely thinke that for the preſent they are no ſubjects of this Kingdome, but rather ſworne enemies: and therefore are unworthy to bee made partakers of any thing that is good either ſpirituall or temporall here, or eternall hereafter.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, we may ſafely ſay, that as in this life they have obeyed the Kingdome and the King of darkeneſſe, and been rebellious and refractary rebels againſt the ſpirituall kingdome of Chriſt, ſo (except they truely repent) they ſhall at the laſt day receive the wages of wickedneſſe, eternall death and condemnation. Rom. 6. 23.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Thy kingdome come:]

In theſe words we deſire of God, that we may be brought unto his Kingdome.

Queſt. 1. Whether by Kingdome is here meant the kingdome of grace, or of glory; for the word ſometimes ſignifies the one, ſometimes the other; and probable reaſons may be given for both.

Anſwer. The word is here to bee vnderſtood of both the kingdomes, in their order: namely, firſt we deſire that we may bee brought into the Kingdome of grace, and then unto the kingdome of glory.

Queſt. 2. Are there two kingdomes of mercy? is Chriſt a double King? is there not one faith, one Chriſt, one Church, one Kingdome? doth not the Scripture ever and anon tel us of one only Kingdome of heaven? yea how can there be a double ſenſe of one place? how can ſuch a ſhort petition as this is have a double expoſition? And therefore how by kingdome can bee meant both the kingdome of grace, and the kingdome of glory?

Anſw. The Kingdome of Chriſt is one, for hee is King of earth and heaven, Col. 1. 20. and all things in heaven and earth are ſubject to his dominion. Phil. 2. 9. But there are two degrees of this Kingdome according to a double time; namely, I. we deſire that we may bee admitted into the kingdome of grace in this life. And II. in to the Kingdome of glory in the life to come.

The ſcope therefore of the petition is twofold, Primarie, that at length we may be brought into the Kingdome of glory; now this we deſire immediately, finally, and for it ſelfe; becauſe it is the perfection of a Chriſtian, and his true εὐδαιμονία, and chiefeſt good.

The Secondary ſcope of this petition is, that we may be brought into the way which leades thither, to wit, the kingdome of grace: and this we deſire becauſe it is the condition: None can come into that kingdome, but by this, and therefore we deſire to be brought into the kingdome of grace for the kingdome of glories ſake, this being firſt deſired in our intention.

Queſt. 3. Here it may be demanded, An ſit? whether there be a heaven, or kingdome of glory? It is wonderfull, and much to be lamented, to conſider how farre Sathan doth prevaile not onely with Pagans, but alſo with Chriſtians, inſomuch as they doe not onely doubt of, but alſo denie that there is any ſuch thing: yea this is the craft of the devill, who will quickly make us denie, if once we begin to doubt of the truth of it: But it belongs to another place to ſhew the ſeverall enemies of this kingdome of glory: I will here onely ſhew the cauſes of this negation, and then anſwer the queſtion.

Firſt, naturall, and carnall reaſon cannot comprehend God; mans braine being a ſhell too ſhallow to containe ſuch an Ocean: And hence the wiſeſt are ſooneſt ſeduced, becauſe they will not beleeve any thing, which they cannot take up.

Secondly, our affections naturally deſire, that we might be ingulfed freely in the ſea of pleaſure that without coſtraint we might do whatſoever our hearts luſt after: facile credimus quod enixè cupimus, we eaſily beleeve that which wee earneſtly deſire; and therefore we ſpend our daies in good things, thinking that there is no life after death.

Thirdly, to denie this Kingdom of God ſeemes the moſt preſent remedie againſt the horrours of conſcience: It is reported, that a Fryer urged ſo pathetically the ſufferings of of Chriſt, that he drew teares out of ſome of his hearers eyes; which being perceived, he bad them not weepe, for perhaps the hiſtorie was fabulous and not true, I would not belie the devill, and therefore I will not affirme this for a truth, but ſay it may be a Fable: and will onely make this application of it, when the conſcience is ſtrucke with horror, that for ſinne ſhe ſhall never be admitted into the Kingdome of God, but ſhut out from thence; then the devill brings this comfort to the drouping perſon; that it may be there is no ſuch thing as a Kingdome of God, and therefore it is but a fopperie to grieve for the loſſe of a thing which is not. And thus the God of this world blindeth their eyes, making them beleeve that as it is with the beaſt, ſo alſo with man, there is no more of them after death, no reward for righteouſneſſe, and therefore let them take their pleaſure while they may.

I now come to anſwer the queſtion, although Anſw. I will not proſecute it amply, but prove it briefely;

Firſt, if there be a God, then there is a Kingdome of God. But the former is true, Therefore alſo the latter.

I. From the confeſſion of all nations it appeares that there is a God; becauſe all worſhip ſomething.

II. This is cleare alſo from the terrour of conſcience which wicked men have, as wee might ſhew by the examples of Herod, and Nero, but that ſomething hath beene ſaid before, Chap. 2. ver. 3. both of Herod, and this horrour of conſcience.

III. That there is a God is evident from the nature of Sathan: wee grant that there is a divell (which is ſpirituall, inviſible, and eternall a parte poſt) and ſhall wee denie that there is a God.

IV. From the creation of the world, for either, I. the

I. the world was made; and then by whom but by God? Or II. It was not made, but is eternall: now what a shame is this to give eternity unto the earth, and to denie it unto God.

Secondly, If there bee a resurrection of all either unto death or life, happinesse or misery; then there is a Kingdome of God, and place of happinesse. But the Resurrection is proved from these scriptures, Esay 25. 8. Apoc. 21. 4. and 2 Pet. 3. 13. and 1 Cor. 15. where it is proved by many arguments. Therefore there is a Kingdome of God.

Quest. 4. Where is this Kingdome of God?

Answ. In heaven, as appeares thus:

First, from Scripture, Phil. 3. 20. and 2 Cor. 5. 1. and Col. 1. 5.

Secondly, it is called Jerusalem which is above, Gal. 4. 26. and Col. 3. 1. 2. quæ supra.

Thirdly, Christ ascended up into heaven, Luke 24. 51. Acts 1. 9. and Ephes. 4. 8. so also Elias.

Fourthly, the elect which are upon the earth at the last day, shall be caught up in the clouds, and † 1 Thes. 4. 17. shall meete the Lord in the ayre†.

Fifthly, there is a promise made us of a new heaven, Esay 65. 17. and 66. 22. and 2 Pet. 3. 13. and Apoc. 21. 1. And therefore it is evident that this Kingdome of God is in heaven.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Thy will bee done in Earth, as it is in Heaven.]

Quest. 1. What is observable in this Petition?

Answ. Two things, namely, { First, the thing desired, viz. That the will of God may bee perfected. Secondly, the measure; to wit, as sincerely in earth, as in heaven.

Object. Bellarmine produceth this place to prove the possibilitie of fulfilling the law of God: arguing thus, We pray according to Christs prescription, Thy will be done as in heaven so also in earth; wherin we desire grace and abilitie to fulfill the law of God; and we either attaine unto this perfection in this life, or wee pray this prayer daily in vaine.

Answ. 1. First, in this prayer wee are taught daily, so long as wee live to pray for pardon of our daily sinnes: as we every day say, give us this day our daily bread, so also every day forgive us our trespasses: and all the ancient Fathers confesse that this petition is necessary for al the Saints, so long as they live. But to those who obey God on earth, as he is obeyed in heaven, there is no neede of remission or pardon. Therefore there is none obey God so on earth: for although this be here desired by the Saints, yet it is never obtained in this life.

Answ. 2. Secondly, this petition is three severall waies interpreted by the Fathers, all which oppose Bellarmines argument.

I. Thy will be done in heaven, so also on earth; that is, as thy will is accomplished in the Angels, so let it bee also in men. In this sense it is manifest, that the regenerate doe not obtaine what they daily beg for, untill they obtaine to be made ἰσάγγελοι like unto the Angels. 301

II. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven: that is, let thy will bee obeyed as in the righteous so also in the wicked; here first, Bellarmine would blush to say, that all wicked men should fulfill the law of God, although we thus pray, or shall equall the righteous in obedience. Secondly, in this sense the fulfilling of the law is not included; because all those doe not for the present fulfill the law, who are called righteous, but humbly confesse and acknowledge their sinnes, striving hard to the marke.

III. Thy will be done in earth, as in heaven: that is, let the flesh assent unto thy will, as doth the spirit: neither let the flesh lust against the Spirit; but as a good Spirit doth not resist thy will, so let not the body resist the spirit. This sense doth wholy overthrow the Cardinals argument; for this perfect subjection of the flesh unto the Spirit, although we pray for it in this life, yet wee doe not obtaine it untill the end of our life.

Thirdly, that which the Jesuite saith (that we pray in vaine, that the will of God may be obeyed in earth as in heaven, except we attaine unto this perfection in this terrene, and corruptible body,) is most false and vaine. For he prayes not in vaine, who in the time appointed obtaines what hee prayes for. Now by this prayer unto God wee daily procure a greater measure of grace from him, and approach nearer unto the perfect fulfilling of the will of God, and at the length obtaine perfect righteousnesse. Bishop Davenant de justitia actuali, Cap. 52. pag. 562, 563. Answ. 3.

Quest. 2. Why doe we pray Thy will be done; will not the Lord accomplish all his owne will?

Answ. Hic non oramus ut faciat Deus quod vult (nam faciet omnia quæcunque voluerit) sed ut nos possimus facere quod ipse vult: Cyprian. s. we doe not here pray, that God would doe what he himselfe desires (for he will doe all his pleasure) but that we may be able to doe whatsoever hee requires of us.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Thy will be done.]

Quæ. 1. The ordinarie question is here, what will of God is here meant, Signi an Beneplaciti? Whence this question may be demanded; Hath God two wills? Is there composition, opposition, or mixture in God?

Answer. As God is one, so his will is one: but by reason of the consideration of the divers parts of this will, wee terme it diversely. Thus the Schoole men say,

Voluntas Dei { spectu Modi { Secreta / Revelata } Respectu objecti { Decreti. / Mandati. } Respectu naturæ { Signi. / Beneplaciti. }

That which belongs unto our institution, is this; The Will of God is taken some times for that which { Hee hath decreed to doe / He would have done by us } And is called Voluntas { Decreti / Mandati.

302

Wee muſt now know that the will of God in this place may be taken for either or both of theſe; for although the principall parts of this petition be meant, de voluntate mandati, of that which God would have done by us; yet Chriſt elſewhere expreſly expounds it, de voluntate decreti, of that which God hath decreed to doe: Father if it be poſſible, let this cup paſſe from me, nevertheleſſe, not as I will, but as thou wilt, that is, as thou haſt decreed [f]. Having to handle the former (God aſſiſting me) in another place, I here treat onely of this latter; De voluntate decreti.

f Mat. 26. 39.

Thy will be done, that is, O Lord fulfill whatſoever thou haſt decreed.

Queſt. 2. Is not this petition idle, and vaine? will not God fulfill whatſoever he hath decreed, whether we will or not? none can reſiſt his will, Rom. 9. 19. Neither muſt wee enquire or ſearch into Gods decrees [g].

g Act. 1. 7.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, certainly the decrees of God are like the Lawes of the Medes and Perſians, which cannot be diſannulled or made void, but ſhall ſurely in the appointed time be accompliſhed.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, yet there are here two things required of us, namely,

I. A ſubſcription and aſſent unto the will of God.

II. A deſire conjoyned with prayer, that wee may freely ſubmit our ſelves unto the will and decrees of God without murmuring.

Unto this willing ſubjection to the immutable will of God many things are required of us, viz. 1. An acknowledgement of the providence of God. 2. An acknowledgement of the goodneſſe of God. 3. An acknowledgement of the wiſdome of God. 4. A reſting in the will of God. 5. A carefull circumſpection, leſt wee ſhould tempt the providence of God.

Firſt, in the petition thus underſtood, de voluntate decreti, there is required of us, Agnitio providentiæ Dei, an acknowledgement that the will of God governes the world: He doth whatſoever hee will [h], both in heaven and earth [i].

h Pſ. 115. 3
i Pſa. 135. 6.

How doth it appeare that all things are ordered and diſpoſed off according to the will of God?

Queſt. 3.

Anſw. 1. Firſt, this is Gods prerogative to governe all things: The Angels doe his Commandements and hearken unto the voyce of his word; the Hoſts of Heaven are his Miniſters, and doe his pleaſure, Pſal. 103. 20, 21, 22.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, hee now rules and governes all things according to his decree from everlaſting, and his eternall purpoſe.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, this decree and purpoſe did ariſe from his will; for except God and his will bee the firſt mover, we muſt grant another God and another Mover; which is blaſphemouſly derogatory to ſo ſacred a Majeſty.

Queſt. 4. Who are faulty in this particular? that is, who deny either in opinion or practiſe that the will of God governes the world?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, the Stoicks, who aſcribed all things to Fate: Certainly, there is a connexion of cauſes, but not depending upon Fate, but upon the will of God.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, the Heathens who aſcribe things to Fortune, Rotam volubilem. Certainly, this is the foundation of Atheiſme.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, thoſe who bridle, and reſtrain the will of God; ſaying, that he did not thorowly, narrowly, and on every ſide view every thing from the beginning: This is to meaſure God by our groſſe conceits, and to derogate from his Omniſcience.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, thoſe who ſay they will doe this or that; when they ſhould rather ſay, if God pleaſe, Iames 4. 15.

Secondly, there is required of us in this petition, Agnitio bonitatis Dei, an acknowledgement of the goodneſſe of God; or an humble confeſſion, that the will of God in all things is juſt, his will being the rule of goodneſſe. Reade Dan. 9. 7. Rom. 3. 4. from Pſal. 51. 4.

Queſt. 5. Who deny this, either in opinion or practiſe?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, thoſe who murmur againſt Gods dealing with them; but of this by and by.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, thoſe who give themſelves to humane, atheiſticall, and blaſphemous diſputations and quæres, viz.

I. Why hath God given man a Law, which is impoſſible perfectly to obey?

II. Why will not God ſave all thoſe whom he hath created?

III. Why did not God preſerve Adam in his holy eſtate, but permitted him to fall?

IV. Why were not all redeemed in and by Chriſt effectually, ſeeing his death was a ſufficient price for all?

V. Why did not God by his Prophets preach unto Tyre and Sidon, ſeeing they would have repented, if the word had been ſent unto them? And many more of this nature: to which wee might anſwer many things; as for example.

Firſt, that the Law is not impoſſible in it ſelfe (for it is fulfilled in heaven) but unto our corrupt nature, Rom. 8. 3.

Secondly, God is debter to no man, God owes neither mercy nor ſalvation unto any; for it is of his great mercy that we are not all conſumed [k]. k Lam. 3. 21.

Thirdly, it makes for Gods glory, that thoſe who are obdurate and hardened in their ſinnes, ſhould be damned.

Fourthly, we might anſwer (with Auguſtine) Fecit gehennam curioſis, that God hath a hell in ſtore for ſuch curious inquiſitours, as dare demand of him a reaſon of his actions.

Fifthly, but that anſwer which becomes us beſt unto all theſe, is this, Even ſo Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight. Injuria fit Deo, cum cauſam (voluntate Dei) ſuperiorem poſtulamus (Aug.) It is a great indignitie and injury unto God, to ſeeke a further, or higher cauſe of his actions then his owne will. Paul durſt not doe it, but in the diſputations of this nature cryeth out, Oh man, who art thou that repliyeſt againſt God [l]. And againe, How unſearchable are his judgements, and his waies paſt finding out [m]: Teaching us to acknowledge, Sapo occulta, ſemper juſta; that is, the judgments of God are alwayes juſt in themſelves, although wee are not able often to ſee the equitie l Mat. 11. 26. m Rom. 9. 20. n Rom. 11. 33.

equitie of them, nor to understand them.

Thirdly, there is required of us in this petition, agnitio ſapientiæ, an acknowledgement of the wiſdome of God; or an humble confeſſion, that it is much better for us to yeeld our ſelves to be guided and directed by God, then to draw him to our deſires: Wee muſt ſo highly prize the wiſdome of God, that we ſhould rather deſire to obtaine from him what he in his heavenly wiſdome knows to be good for us, then what we our ſelves ſhould wiſh, if wee might have whatſoever wee would. But I reſerve this unto chapter 26. verſe 39. Not as I will Father, but as thou wilt.

Fourthly, we are taught in this petition to acquieſce in the will of God, or whatſoever the will and providence of God ſhall bring to paſſe, we muſt endure and undergoe, patiently, willingly, and contentedly; humbling our ſelves under the mighty hand of God [o]. o 1 Pet. 5. 6

Queſt. 6. Why muſt we thus patiently brooke, whatſoever the will and providence of God ſhall bring to paſſe?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe this is the beſt way not to bee harmed by any caſualty or croſſe: It is much better for a man to ſwim with the ſtreame, then by ſtriving againſt the ſtreame to be drowned: A man had better patiently to yeeld and ſubmit himſelfe unto God in affliction, then by repining and murmuring to adde affliction unto affliction; for none gaines by contending with his Maker.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, Vana eſt ſine viribus ira, Anger without power to revenge is idle; wee cannot prevaile againſt God, but doe we what wee can, he will doe all his pleaſure, and therefore patience is the beſt.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, whatſoever the Lord doth is juſt (as was ſaid before) and therefore patience and ſubmiſſion becomes us in all ſorts of croſſes whatſoever.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly the Lord hath Deſpotical and Lordly power over us, we are but the clay, the work of his hands, the ſheepe of his paſture; and therefore we ſhould be willingly contented with all his dealings.

Fifthly, whatſoever the Lord doth unto us is done (Paterno amore, non tyrannico more) with a fatherly affection, not in a tyrannicall paſſion; as thus evidently appeares.

I. He ſeekes our good, he deſires not our deſtruction, but rather that we might live.

II. He takes notice of all our wants, diſtreſſes, and dangers: the haires of our head are numbred before him [p]. And all our teares are put into his bottle [q]. p Mat. 10. 30. q Pſal. 56. 8.

III. When he doth tempt and afflict us, it is for our good: Wee are chaſtened of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned with the world [r]. r 1 Cor. 11. 32.

IV. He never afflicts us above our ſtrength, but with the temptation makes a way to eſcape [ſ]: And therefore who would not commend himſelfe into his hands, caſt himſelfe into his lap, and commit himſelfe unto his protection, providence, tuition, and care? ſ 1 Cor. 10 13.

Queſt. 7. Who are blame-worthy here?

First, thoſe who murmure againſt God, in the time of adverſity, miſery, and affliction: And therefore that we may not be faulty herein, we ſhould remember theſe things, to wit, Anſw. 1.

I. If we give reverence to the Fathers of our fleſh when they correct us, ſhall wee not much rather be in ſubjection unto the Father of Spirits, when he afflicts us [t]? t Heb. 12. 9.

II. If all be made partakers of chaſtiſement, then why ſhould we murmure [u]? u Heb. 12. 8.

III. If correction be a ſigne of Gods love unto us, then we ſhould not repine at it [v]. v Heb. 12. 6.

IV. If affliction be a confirmation of our adoption, then it is cheerefully to bee undergone [w]. w Heb. 12 7.

V. If wee receive good things from Gods hands which we have not deſerved, ſhall we not receive evill things which we have deſerved [x]? And therefore let us learne to be contented in the worſt condition in regard of temporall things, as Paul was [y]; let us patiently ſubmit our ſelves unto God, as David did [z]; and learne to give thankes unto God, or to acknowledge his juſtice in all his judgements, as Iob did, Iob 1. 21. x Job 2. 10. y Phil. 4. 12. z 2 Sam. 15. 26.

Secondly, thoſe who relapſe, and fall either unto idolatry, or temporizing through feare of affliction. Daniel and the three Children durſt caſt themſelves upon God, the one ſuffering himſelfe to be caſt into the Lyons dennes, rather then he would omit the worſhip of the true God; the other into the fire, rather then commit idolatry, by worſhipping a falſe God, Dan. 3. and 6. Thus confident and conſtant were alſo the Apoſtles of Chriſt, who herein are worth our imitation [a]. Anſw. 2. a Act. 4. 19. & 5. 29

Thirdly, thoſe who in the time of affliction give themſelves to the uſe of wicked meanes: as for example: Anſw. 3.

1. In injuries men often flie preſently unto evill ſpeeches, and revenge, altogether unmindful that it was not done without Gods permiſſion and providence.

2. In ſickneſſe, ſome repaire preſently unto witches, charmes, and the like.

3. In poverty, ſome run unto theft, fraud, deceit, cozenage, ſupplanting others, and the like.

Fourthly, they who immoderately bewaile any loſſe or croſſes; the revelation of the will of God ſhould cauſe to ceaſe all ſuch mourning, 1 Sam. 3. 18. and 2 Sam. 12. 20. Anſw. 4.

Fifthly, thoſe who are given to covetous wiſhes, deſires, prayers, and immoderate cares, whereof afterwards.

Fifthly, in this petition, Thy will be done, underſtood de voluntate decreti, wee are taught to take heed, that we doe not tempt the providence of God; that is, we muſt not ſo adhere unto the will of God, that wee neglect the ordinary meanes which God hath appointed to be uſed: for the meanes are the ordination of God, and a part of his will, and therefore by no meanes to be neglected. Anſw. 5.

What meanes are they which wee muſt not neglect?

304

Answ. The meanes are either
- Externall, which are either
  - Remedies against evils and that either
    - To come, as caution, circumspection, and care not to intrude our selves into danger.
    - Present, and that either
      - In act, as Medicines and Physick against sicknes.
      - In power, as Marriage against concupiscence.
  - Meanes for the obtaining of good things, as labour, industry, wisdome, &c.
- Internall, are to be used according to the external which if they be
  - Absent, then wee must adhere to the internall, and trust onely in them, and that in their order, namely,
    - First, wee must use prayer; thus doth Hezekiah, both against his sickneſſe, and his enemy, Esa. 37.1, 2, 14. and 38.2.
    - Secondly, faith; wee must say, 1. God sees my distresse; 2. God hath brought me into this straight. And 3. hee will take care of me to deliver me, and helpe me, if it may stand with his glory and my good.
    - Thirdly, patience; although the Lord should not deliver us; thus the three children say, if the Lord will not preserve them, then they will patiently suffer for his sake, *Dan.*3.17.
  - Present, they are either
    - Evill, and diabolicall, which are not at all to be used, as was said before.
    - Good, and then
      - First, the externall meanes are to be used with all fidelity.
      - Secondly, but we must not trust in them, but corroborate them by the addition of the internall meanes.

*Sect.*5. §. 5. In earth as it is heaven.]

*Quest.*1. What is the meaning of these words?

*Answ.*1. First, something hath been said hereof before §. 3 Answer 2. to the objection.

*Answ.*2. Secondly, some expound this of Christ and his Church: Thy will be done in earth (that is, in the Church, the Spouse) as it is in heaven, that is, by Christ the head of the Church.

*Answ.*3. Thirdly, some understand this of the Church Militant and Triumphant: Thy will be done in earth, that is, in the Church militant, as it is in heaven, that is, the Church Triumphant: And thus it is usually interpreted.

*Quest.*2. What is observable in these words?

Answ. Two things, viz. First, that in Heaven God is perfectly worshipped. Secondly, that on earth God is not perfectly worshipped.

*Obser.*1. First, we learne hence, that in Heaven God is perfectly worshipped and obeyed without any defect, or failing at all.

*Quest.*3. How doth this appeare?

*Ans.*1. First, in Heaven we shall be like unto the Angels, *Mat.*22.30. But they serve the Lord perfectly, *Psal.*103.20,21.

*Answ.*2. Secondly, in Heaven we shall be like Christ, 1 Iohn 3.2. therefore without sinne.

*Answ.*3. Thirdly, in Heaven wee shall rest from our labour, *Revel.*14.13. therefore from sinne.

*Answ.*4. Fourthly, in Heaven death shall be destroyed, and consequently sinne; for sinne is the sting of death, 1 *Cor.*15.55. &c.

*Answ.*5. Fifthly, in Heaven we shall put off all corruption, 1 *Cor.*15.42. and in all things we shall be perfect, compleat in knowledge, 1 Cor. 13.10. yea perfect men, *Ephes.*4.13.

Sixthly, all mutable and changeable things shall cease in Heaven; and therefore sinne. All things there then shall be eternall as God is: And there shall be time no longer. *Answ.*6.

What meanes must wee use to be made partakers of this Kingdome, where we shall perfectly obey our God? *Quest.*4

First, meditate upon a three-fold life, namely, 1. Of Adam in Paradise. 2. Of our selves in the flesh. 3. Of the life which is lead in heaven. *Answ.*1.

First, meditate upon the life of Adam in paradise, that so we may remember from whence wee are fallen, and repent, Revel. 2.5. Yea, consider our losse, and seriously bewaile it. Remember what thou wert there, namely,

I. Innocent, pure, without sinne, created after the Image of God, Genesis 1.29. Ephesians 4.24.

II. Secure and safe, in peace and tranquillitie; for there was neither danger, nor death, nor enemies.

III. Familiar with God; In Paradise Man durst talke with his Maker without feare.

IV. In the Garden mans wisdome was excellent, hee could name the woman, and all the creatures with names suting unto their natures: But by sinne man hath lost all these: Oh who would not desire to recover this condition? And therefore remember if thou wert in heaven thou shouldest have all these, and much more, and shouldst never lose them.

Secondly, meditate upon our life which wee leade in the flesh, what manner of life it is,

To wit,

First, calamities, and ſudden chances.
Secondly, poverty and want; the beſt ſtanding in need of many things.
Thirdly, troubles, croſſes, griefes, frettings, and never quiet.
Fourthly, and the ſinnes which thou haſt committed, thou committeſt daily; this would make any tender conſcience cry out, Woe is me, that I am conſtrained to dwell in Meſech, Pſalm. 120. 5.

To wit, that here is — Fifthly, infirmities and weakeneſſes whereby we are not able to doe what wee ſhould:
- First, Temptation ariſeth, and aſſault us unto evill.
- Secondly, many ſiniſter ends we have in the performance of good duties.
- Thirdly, a ſluggiſh wearineſſe and unwillingneſſe, ſeizeth upon us in good workes.
- Fourthly, if any good duty be performed willingly, and cheerefully, we are ready preſently to brag and boaſt of it.
- Fifthly, we are very uncertaine and inconſtant in the way and worke of the Lord: And therefore what cauſe of mourning doth this life afford unto us?

Sixthly, blindneſſe of minde, ſo that we can neither — Meditate of eternall joyes: Nor Underſtand ſpirituall things, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

Seventhly, all things are fraile, nothing is ſtable: And therefore who is there who would not be weary of this life, when he ſeriouſly remembers theſe things?

Thirdly, meditate upon that life, which the Saints lead in Heaven, that ſo we may hunger the more earneſtly after it.

Remember there: —
- First, that an end ſhall be put to all evils for ever: all things there being ſweet, and happie.
- Secondly, mutability ſhall be taken away: all things there being eternall and ſtable.
- Thirdly, the chaines of ſinne ſhall be broken, and the minde ſhall be free from all evill: there ſhall be chaſtity without any uncleanneſſe, ſanctitie without any pollution, gravity without any fooliſhneſſe, temperance without any gluttony; there the minde ſhall be alwayes ſober, holy, pious, wholly and alwayes addicted to the love of God.
- Fourthly, We ſhall ſee God face to face, Mat. 5. 8. Revel. 22. 4.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, let us conſider our folly, who yet wallow in the puddle of ſinne; and acknowledge our danger who are deceived by Satan, as by Dalilah was Sampſon.

Anſw. 3 Thirdly, let us remember the danger of procraſtination, and delay: For

I. Satan is crafty.

II. Sinne daily increaſeth within us, both in regard of quantity and quality.

III. We daily are eſtranged more from God, and ſtray farther from him.

IV. Death comes daily creeping upon us: oh conſider how many fall into the ſnares of death, at unawares, when they thinke of no ſuch thing at all.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, let us recall our ſpirits from the love of all earthly things, with Mary chuſing the better part, and placing our affections upon thoſe things which are above, uſing the world as though we uſed it not, 1 Cor. 7. 30.

And thus much for the firſt thing obſervable in this petition, that in Heaven God is perfectly worſhipped and ſerved.

Secondly, from theſe words, Thy will be done on earth, as in Heaven; we learne, that God is not perfectly worſhipped in earth, for otherwiſe Obſer. 2. what need we pray? Or, that the will of God is ordinarily violated upon the earth, 1 Iohn 5. 19.

Queſt. 5. How doth this appeare?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, there are many in the world who know not the will of God; the Gentiles are ignorant of the truth and Word of God; yea how many Sects are there in the world, both in China, Æthiopia, Turkie, Perſia, and India? yea how many Papiſts, Heretickes, Familiſts, Libertines, and Separatiſts, who underſtand not aright the will of God: And therefore no wonder if they doe not obey it.

Secondly, in the Church there are many wicked, many diſobedient unto the will of God. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, the godly in the Church are infirme and weake, the beſt of all ſinning often, 1 Iohn 1. 8, 9. Anſw. 3.

Queſt. 4. How many ſorts of people are there in the Church, who doe not fulfill the will of God?

Anſw. Many, but principally theſe five, namely;

First, prophane perſons, to whom nothing but ſinne and iniquity is pleaſing.

Secondly, morall and civill honeſt men, who are without all taſte or relliſh of Religion.

Thirdly, Hypocrites, who have a forme of godlineſſe, but deny the power thereof in their hearts [b]. [b] Tim. 3. 5

Fourthly, thoſe who are halfe converted; as Agrippa was halfe perſwaded to become a Chriſtian, and Herod contented to do halfe the work of a Chriſtian man, Mark 6. 20.

Fifthly, thoſe who ſtick at the threſhold, and cleave in the barke of Religion; tything mints, and ſtraining gnats, but neglecting the greater things of the Law.

306

What is required of the righteous within the Church towards theſe?

Queſt. 7. Anſw. Wee muſt endeavour to helpe them to fullfill the will of God, by theſe meanes, to wit, Firſt, by counſelling, adviſing, exhorting, and perſwading them unto obedience. Secondly, by ſhining before them in a holy life and converſation; that what our exhortations cannot, our examples may doe. Thirdly, by our prayers unto God for them; that he would inable them to performe his will. Fourthly, by our offices, and functions: Thus Miniſters muſt reprove and Magiſtrates puniſh, that ſo thoſe who will not be drawne with the coards of love, may be plucked as brands out of the fire [c] Iud. 23. verſe.

Queſt. 8. What is required of thoſe who are within the Church, towards thoſe who are without?

Anſw. They muſt endeavour to helpe them to fulfill the will of God by theſe meanes, namely, Firſt, by their good, and holy example, wherein theſe two things are required: I. Wee muſt appeaſe, and compoſe all jarres, diſſenſions, ſchiſmes, and breaches for ſmall matters. Certainely many are debarred from embracing the religion of Chriſt, becauſe they know not whom to follow; ſome being Lutherans, ſome Calviniſts, ſome Anabaptiſts, ſome Separatiſts, &c. II. We muſt be of unblamable lives: a Turke being in London refuſed to embrace our religion, becauſe Chriſtians blaſphemed, and ſwore by the name of Chriſt. Secondly, Chriſtians muſt helpe Pagans by their prayers unto God for them, that the Lord would be pleaſed to ſend his word amongſt them, to reveale his will unto them, and to inable them to walke in his wayes.

Verſ. 11 VERS. 11. Give us this day our daily bread.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Bread.] This is the object of the petition.

Queſt. 1. What is meant here by Bread?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, it ſignifies ſometimes all manner of food, Read theſe places for the proofe hereof, Gen. 43. verſ. 16. 25, 32, 33. and 2 King. 6. 22. 23. and Deut. 8. 3. and Mat. 4. 4. and Luke 14. 1. and 1 Sam. 28, 22, 24.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, it ſometimes ſignifies all manner of proviſion which is ſold in the Market, 1 Sam. 2. 36.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, Bread ſignifies ſometimes all temporall things, or all things neceſſary for this life; and thus it is taken in the text.

Queſt. 2. Why doth our Saviour rather name bread then any other food?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe bread is moſt generally neceſſary: All nations (almoſt) uſe bread, and that (in a manner) with all meate; and therefore it is with all the moſt common food.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe it is moſt uſuall and vulgar, a food which the poore are made partakers of as well as the rich, and therefore both poore and rich pray for it.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe this hath reference unto that evangelicall promiſe which is made, Mat. 7. 9. If the ſonne doth aske bread, the father will not give a ſtone: And therefore our Saviour teach-us to pray for bread, as if he would ſay, we muſt pray that thoſe things which God gives us, may be given for our good with a bleſſing.

How doth it appeare that it is lawfull to pray for temporall things? Queſt. 3

Firſt, becauſe Chriſt hath made a generall promiſe, that whatſoever we aske his Father in his name, he will give it unto us: And therefore temporall things are included, John 14. and 1 John 5. 14. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, becauſe temporall things muſt be had, therefore they muſt be prayed for, nothing being ours. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, becauſe it is an acknowledgement that they come from God, and his mercy; as followes afterwards. Anſ. 3.

Fourthly, becauſe it ſhewes our truſt and confidence in God, thus to run unto him in the time of need. Anſw. 4.

Many things are here objected, but I joyne them together. 1. Temporall things are not to be ſought after, Mat. 6. 33. 2. They are not to be cared for, verſe 25. 3. It belongs unto the Gentiles to ſeeke for theſe things, not unto Chriſtians, verſe 32. 4. It is a vaine thing to labour for them; for we cannot of our ſelves procure the leaſt temporall bleſſings, Luke 12. 26. 5. It is injurious unto the providence of God; your Father knowes what you have needs of, ver. 30. Object.

Firſt, that it is lawfull to pray for temporall bleſſings is proved in the former queſtion. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, it is not prohibited us to beg them in any of the places objected. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, the inſtances objected do partly condemne al anxious care partly forbid us to ſet our hearts upon any worldly thing, and partly direct us how to pray for temporall bleſſings namely, neither firſt, nor onely. Now of all theſe by and by. Anſw. 3.

How muſt we pray for temporall things? Queſt. 4.

According to theſe ſhort Rules. Anſw.

Firſt, beg them not onely; it is a ſhame for a Chriſtiã to pray for nothing but earthly things. Rule 1.

Secondly, beg them not firſt, Mat. 6. 33. that is, let not temporall things be firſt in place, to pray for them before ſpirituall; or firſt in the affection of the heart, to pray more fervently for them, then for ſpirituall. Rule 2.

Thirdly, deſire not temporall things, with too fervent an affection: that is, 1. Love them not, give them no place in the heart. 2. Doe not beg them with many words, or in divers petitions, but ſo contend rather for ſpirituall graces. Rule 3.

Fourthly, pray not for them, but for pious uſes, that is, I. Negatively, deſire them not unto wantonneſſe, or luxury, or revenge, or pride? II. Affirmatively, deſire them, that we may be thereby inabled to doe good to our families, friends, neighbours to the poore, Church, and Common-wealth, wherein we live. Rule 4.

Fifthly, pray for worldly things, untill the Lord of glory bee thy heavenly Father: for hee hath promiſed nothing but to his children; as followes afterwards. Rule 5.

What

Queſt. 5. What temporall things muſt we, or may wee pray for, when we are the children of God?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, for protection, or for our naturall life; together with the health of the body, the ſoundneſſe of the members, the comfort of the minde, and freedome from ſickeneſſe, Eſa. 38. 2.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, for food, and raiment, 1 Tim. 6. 8. as Iacob did with a vow, Gen. 28. 20.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, for ſufficiency for our charge, places, and perſons; alwaies remembring to bee contented with what wee have, and to ſubmit our wils to the will of God.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, for a bleſſing upon that eſtate which we have.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, for a bleſſing in our callings, and in all our affaires publike and private.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, for preſervation from caſualties, dangers, and enemies, Pſal. 141. 8.

Anſw. 7. Seventhly, for thoſe comforts which are neceſſary to our temporall life.

Anſw. 8. Eightly, credit and reputation being a temporall good thing, it is lawfull for us to pray, for the preſervation of our fame, and good name among men.

Queſt. 6. Why muſt we give thankes for our meat, or conſecrate the creatures before we eate them? is it not enough to pray for them and a bleſſing upon them in our ſolemne prayers?

Anſw. Chemnit (Part. 4. Pag. 107. exam. Concil.) gives divers reaſons hereof, namely, Firſt, that wee may learne, not to eat like the horſe and mule who have no underſtanding, but that our eating may bee conjoyned with pious and religious words, and thoughts. Secondly, that hereby wee may acknowledge, that wee have thoſe creatures from God, who takes care to provide for our bodies, as well as our ſoules. Thirdly, that wee may know that wee are altogether unworthy of thoſe creatures (having loſt our right of the uſe of them by Adam) except onely as they are reſtored by Chriſt againe unto us to be uſed. Fourthly, that hereby wee may beleeve, that the uſe of the creatures is ſanctified unto us by prayer. Fifthly, that thus we may deſire God to make them profitable for the health of our bodies. Sixthly that wee might pray unto God, to preſerve us from intemperance, and exceſſe, wee being ſo prone unto gluttony in eating, and to healths, quaffings, and drunkenneſſe, in drinking. Seventhly, becauſe after wee are full, wee are forgetfull, after we have received the good bleſſings of God, we are very prone to unmindfulneſſe of them, Deut. 8. 12, 14. Eightly; I adde another reaſon why we muſt conſecrate and ſanctifie the creatures before we eate of them, and that is taken from authority, namely, I. Of Saint Paul, who commandeth us to uſe it, 1 Tim. 4. 4, 5. II. Of Chriſt and the faithfull who frequently uſed it. III. Of the ancient Church, Chryſoſtome[d] concludes, Oportet, tum in initio, tum fine; It behoves us to give thankes both before meat, and after. If the ſtudious Reader deſire to ſee the cuſtome of the Greeke Church in this duty of giving of thankes, I referre him to Clemens, lib. 7. Conſtitutionum: If hee deſire to know the manner of the Latine Church let him repaire to Chemnitius, exam. concil. Trid. part. 4. pag. 108.

§. 2. Our daily bread.] Sect. 2.

What is the meaning of this word Daily? Queſt. 1.

ἐπιούσιον, By Interpreters is diverſly rendred, namely, Firſt, ſome ſuperſubſtantialem, or ſuperſubſtantiall bread. Origen and Hierome, and they expound it either I. Of Chriſt: Or II. Of the word of God: Or III. of the Sacrament; giving this reaſon for this expoſition. Quia abſurdum de terrenis cogitare: It is abſurd to thinke of earthly things in our prayers. Anſ. 4.

Secondly, ſome interpret it, Craſtinum quaſi in poſteras (Eraſm. f.) Give us this day bread for to morrow, as naturall parents doe provide for their children againſt the next day.

Thirdly, but moſt truely, it is rendered, Vulgarem, quotidianum, quotidiè uſitandum, our ordinary, uſuall, and daily bread; thus Hier. f. Luc. 11, and Chryſoſt. and Senenſ. 6. and Auguſt. epeſt. ad Probam. and all our Moderne Interpreters: Syriacus, panis neceſſitatis noſtræ, our neceſſary bread. And Auguſtine gives three worthy and weighty reaſons againſt the other interpretations, namely, Firſt, becauſe the Eaſterne Churches did not communicate or aſſemble unto the ſolemne places of divine worſhip, every day; and therefore they did not underſtand this word, either of Chriſt, the word of God, or the Sacrament.

Secondly, becauſe if it were meant of the Sacrament, then it were not lawfull for them to uſe this prayer, on that day they communicate, when one they have comunicated, which yet was uſuall with them, to ſay the Lords prayer after the Sacrament.

Thirdly, becauſe it is not lawfull for us to pray contrary to this forme, as was ſaid before verſ. 9. queſtion 7. And therefore either temporall things are underſtood and meant in this petition, or it is not lawfull for us to pray for them at all, which is proved falſe, by Chriſts own practiſe (Father if it be poſſible take this cup from mee) and before in this verſe. The meaning then of this verſe is, give us our vulgar, and daily bread, which may ſerve for our ordinary uſe: Teaching us, that in temporall things no great matters are to be prayed for.

Why may we not deſire rare, great, eminent, and extraordinary temporall bleſſings? why may wee not pray for high honours and abundance of riches at Gods hands? Queſt. 2.

Firſt, becauſe temporall things are not to bee deſired for themſelves, but out of meere neceſſity, and therefore wee muſt crave herein onely neceſſary things. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, becauſe it is a ſigne of a coveteous minde, and of a minde not contented with the Lords allowance, nor his lot; to ſeeke for great things at Gods hand. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, becauſe it is hurtfull for us, and that in a threefold regard, to wit, I. In the Commonwealth, greatneſſe, and riches is the occaſion of hatred, envy, war, and death; becauſe ſuch a Anſw. 3.

one

308 one shall not escape, if hee transgresse the law, because he is rich, Eccles. 5. 12. II. In the body, it hinders the peace, quietnesse, and tranquillitie thereof; for the cares, and affaires of a rich man will not let him sleepe, Eccles. 5. 11. and Psal. 127. 2. III. In the soule, riches pearce that therow with many sorrowes, 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. And therefore we should learne to bridle our desires, praying onely unto the Lord for necessary things, and no further.

What temporall goods may we pray for? Quest. 3.

Answ. Temporall goods are either
- First, Necessaria, necessary both for
  - Being: thus food and raiment are necessary.
  - Well-being both in
    - Body: thus the health of the minde, body and members are necessary.
    - Estate, & goods, for the executing of our calling.

  These are to be prayed for.
- Secondly, Competentia, competent either unto
  - The comfort of our life. Or,
  - A full and ample estate, Or,
  - Honour, and a high estate.

  These are not to be desired from God, but may be received, if given by him.
- Thirdly, Superflua, superfluous things, whereof there is no laudable use. These are neither to bee desired, detained, nor reserved; such as these were of old banished per Ostracismum. Rhoding. & Alex. ab Alexand. And therefore having necessary things, we should bee therewith contented[e].

[e] Perk. upon Mat. 6. 25.

Quest. 4. Why should we desire onely necessary things at Gods hands?

Answ. 1. First, because whatsoever is more then these doth us no good at all; that is a mans portion, which hee doth enjoy; and therefore if a man have sufficient for use, he hath enough; and though hee had more, yet hee could eate no more, nor endure to weare any more apparell.

Answ. 2. Secondly, honour is but an idle aire, and windy vessell: as followes in another place.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, as riches increase, so molestations arise; and they encrease who spend them, Eccles. 5. 10.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if a man give way to his owne desires he shall never be satisfied, Eccles. 5. 9. but his heart will be like the horse-leach that cries give, give, and hath never enough, Prov. 30 15.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, by seeking after superfluous things we lay a stumbling blocke before our owne soule: Riches being the thornes which choake the seed of the word, Mat. 13.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, we are uncertaine, how long we shall live, and therefore if we be not contented with necessary things, but greedily seeke for more, wee may in our abundance heare Dives call: Stulte hâc nocte, thou foole, this night shall they take away thy soule; and then whose shall those things be, for which thou hast wearied and ruined thy selfe. Content is like a wall upon the top of a hill, from which if a man descend hee shall never be satisfied.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Our daily bread.]

Quest. 1. Why doe we pray for our bread?

Answ. 1. First, negatively, not because we challenge it at Gods hands as our right.

Quest. 2. Secondly, affirmatively, for these causes following. I. Because wee doe not desire great things, but onely such as may be fit for our selves. II. Because they are to bee obtained by our labour; and therefore by prayer we desire a blessing from God upon our endeavours and affaires. III. Because they are so necessary for us, that ordinarily our life could not subsist without them. IV. Because by the divine, and eternall providence of God, our lot and portion in temporall things is appointed; Prosperity and promotion, come neither from the East, nor from the West, but from the Lord, who hath from all eternity decreed, what to give in outward things to every person; And therefore we desire that the Lord would give that portion unto us, which in his blessed will, and mercifull decree he hath ordained for us: And it is called Our bread, because it is ordained for us by God.

If God have decreed, what hee will give to every one of us in temporall things; then what need we pray at all for our daily bread? will not God fulfill his decrees without our prayers? Quest. 2.

First, prayer is the ordinance of God, and therefore it is not to be neglected at all: yea, it is the ordinary meanes for the obtaining of our desires. Answ. 1.

Secondly, wee must pray, because this shewes our hope, and trust, and confidence in God. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, wee know not whether God have decreed to give us such and such things or not; and therefore if we stand in need of them, wee must pray for them. Answ. 3.

How or with what mind can we pray in these uncertainties? Quest. 3.

Wee must pray according to these meditations, animadversions, and resolutions, namely, First, we know not what God will give us in particular though we pray unto him. Secondly, but in generall we know, that the decree is gone out; & that God hath determined what he will give us. Thirdly, we acknowledge, that all our endeavours can alter and change nothing in Gods decrees[f]. Fourthly, therefore if it please God to leave us in our temporall troubles, and not to preserve, and deliver us, we are contented, and intend patiently to indure whatsoever our good God hath decreed concerning us. Answ.

[f] Luk. 12. 26.

Fifthly, yet notwithstanding this resolution wee pray unto him, and must continue praying untill his blessed Will bee revealed in and upon us. And that for these two reasons. I. lest wee should bee wanting unto our selves by our remissenesse. II. Lest we should be culpable before God for our neglect: or, that wee doing our endeavour wee might bee free from blame blame before our heavenly Father.

Quest. 4. How or by what meanes may wee bee assured, that our Prayers should be heard in temporall things?

Answ. 1. First, if wee our selves use the meanes diligently which God requires, namely, Care (or endeavour) and Prayer; then wee may expect a mercifull successe from God.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if we our selves belong unto God, then the promises of God belong, and are unto us, yea and Amen in Iesus Christ.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if wee lay no stumbling blocks in the Lords way: thus David constrained God to take the rod of correction in his hands. 2. Sam. 12. Thus Christ complaines, that hee would have been gracious unto Ierusalem, but they would not Matthew 23.37. So the Lord would have bestowed yea showred his blessings upon his people, but their sinnes hindred and with-held good things from them, Ierem. 5. 25. Malach. 3.10. And therefore if wee desire that the Lord may heare and answer graciously our requests, wee must leave all sinne, and labour in sincerity of heart to serve the Lord.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if the thing wee beg, be for our good, comfort, and profit; then we may expect a mercifull grant of it, otherwise not; for our all-wise-God will not give us a stone instead of bread.

Vers. 12 VERSE. 12. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debters.

Sect. 1. §. 1. And forgive us.]

Quest. 1. What method doth our Saviour use or observe in this Prayer?

Answ. 1. First, some say Christ handles those things:
- First, which belong unto himselfe.
- Secondly, which concern our selves.
  - 1. Naturall things.
  - 2. Spirituall things.
- In which hee laies down.

Answ. 2. Secondly, some say Christ handles:
- First, Divine things, in the three former petitions.
- Secondly, Humane things, in the fourth petition.
- Thirdly, Diabolicall things, in the two last petitions.

Answ 3. Thirdly, some say that wee pray:
- For, good things first, in foure affirmative petitions,
- Against evill things in the second place, in two negative petitions.

And unto these I assent.

Quest. 2. What is observable in this petition?

Answ. Two things:
- First, the petition wherein are:
  - 1 The debt. Our debts.
  - 2 The remission of the debt. Forgive us our debts
- Secondly the condition, as we forgive our debters.

What is this debt? 309

Sinne, ἁμαρτίας. Luke 11.4. And hence ever and anon in the Scripture wee read of the Remission of sinne, as also in the Apostles Creed. Quest. 3 Answ.

Obiect. A debt is that which a man owes unto another; and therefore if our sinnes be debts, it will follow that we ought to sinne; for a man ought to pay his debts.

Answ. There is a three-fold debt:
- First, Direct, and this debt is obedience which wee owe indeed unto God; For we are debters unto God, to live according to the Spirit. Ro. 8.12.
- Secondly, Per consequens, by consequent; thus the Mulct of sin, namely, punishments temporall, spirituall, and eternall, is called a Debt.
- Thirdly, Metonymicum; and thus the cause of the debt (to wit sinne) is called a debt in this place; because sinne is the cause of that punishment which is due unto us: But the most proper debt is obedience.

Quest. 4. Doe we desire to bee freed from obedience? If that be our proper debt which wee owe unto our God, and wee desire that our debt may bee remitted; it seemes that we implore the Lord to ease our shoulders from the yoake of the Morall Law

Answ. We doe not in this petition desire a relaxation from our obedience; but that our omissions may not bee strictly required or punished. Hee who hath committed theft, doth not desire that it may be lawfull for him to steale hereafter, but that his by-past theft may bee pardoned. Or as a Debter when his day is past, intreates favour and forbearance for the time by-past, and promiseth to pay all shortly: And thus we properly desire in these words; that the Lord would forgive us the punishment which is due unto us for our sinnes; as the King pardons murder, and homicide.

Quest. 5. Why doth our Saviour call this a debt?

Answ. 1. First, that we might know, sinne to be the cause of punishment.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that wee might know, that all is abolished together, namely, both the cause and the effect, the sinne, and the punishment; the one being blotted out, he will remember the other no more.

Quest. 6. How doe we owe the debt of obedience unto God?

Answ. 1. First, wee owe it out of duty: Because the Lord

For this end hath:
- I. Created and made us, Ephes. 2.10. & Rom. 9 21. We were made men for his service.
- II. Redeemed us, that we might serve him in righteousnesse, and true holinesse, Luke. 1. 74. Tit. 2. 14.
- III. Elected us, and predestinated us unto the adoption of sonnes, that that as children wee might obey him[1].

IV. Called us, that wee might obey him in sanctification and honour. 1. Thess. 4. 7.

V. Enlightned us, that wee might increase in his service. 2. Corinth. 3 18.

VI. Sanctified us in Christ, that as members of Christ wee might performe his will. Ephes. 5. 27.

[1] Ephes. 1. 4.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we owe obedience unto the Lord by command; God hath given us a Law to obey; and Christ hath renewed it. Ephes. 4. 24. Wherefore S. Iames cals it the Law of liberty. Iames 1. 23. Now this command is, that wee should serve him in Righteousnes towards man, and Holinesse towards himselfe, and that all our dayes.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we owe obedience unto God for his benefits, which wee daily receive from him.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we are debters unto God, by covenant and contract;

And that both.

First, in Baptisme, wherein wee promised fealtie, and new obedience unto the Lord.

Secondly, in our profession, and vocation unto Christianity; as we are Christians wee have promised to put on Christ, and serve God as the members of Christ, all our dayes.

Thirdly, in our daily Prayers wherein we make new promises unto God of new obedience.

Fourthly, in the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, wherein wee receive a pledge from God, which is as a seale of that covenant which is made betweene us and God.

Quest. 7. Is every man obliged to pay this debt unto God?

Answ. Every man is obliged either to the debt of obedience, or to the punishment of sinne: whether they be Heathens, or Christians, or great men, or the inferiour and ruder sort; or prophane persons, or ignorant, or servants, or children; yea every one of what nation, ranke, or quality soever.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Forgive us.]

Obiect. 1. Some object this place against the certaintie of remission, thus: Wee are here taught to pray for the pardon of our sinnes day by day; al which were needlesse if we could be assured of pardon in this life; and therefore there can bee no certaine assurance, that our sinnes are remitted.

Answ. 1. First, this fourth petition must bee understood not so much of our old sins, as of our present, and new sinnes for as wee goe on from day to day, so we adde sinne to sinne; and for the pardon of them wee must humble our selves and pray.

Answ. 2. Secondly, wee pray for the pardon of our sinnes, not because we have no assurance thereof; but because our assurance is weake and small; wee grow on from grace to grace in Christ, as little children doe to mans estate, by little and little; and therefore we pray daily for more.

Argu. The Papists say, that a man by good workes is justified: Against this wee thus argue from this place; Our Saviour teacheth every man though never so just, to pray; forgive us our sinnes: And therefore no man is just by his workes.

Answ. To this Bellarmine answers, This petition of the Lords Prayer is to bee understood onely of veniall sinnes, which are mixed with our good workes. Bellar. de Iustif. lib. 6. cap. 20. resp. ad loc. 5.

Reply. 1. First, the word is ὀφειλήματα, Debts; so that herein wee pray to have all our debts forgiven; now wee are more endangered, and endebted unto God, by great sinnes, then by small; And therefore veniall sinnes onely are not here meant.

Reply. 2. Secondly, S. Luke readeth ἁμαρτίας sinnes; and S. Iohn defineth ἁμαρτίας, sinne to be ἀνομία, transgression. 1 Iohn. 3. 4. But great sinnes are transgressions of the Law more then veniall: Therefore, they are not excluded.

Reply. 3. Thirdly, if good workes be tempered with veniall sinnes, how can they, being imperfect, make us just, and perfect before God? But of this more by and by.

Obiect. 2. The Papists say, good workes are meritorious and satisfactory, and from this Verse goe about to prove, that Prayer satisfieth for sinne: wee pray (saith Bellarmine) for forgivenesse of sinnes, and by thus praying we satisfie for our veniall sinnes.

Answ. The Lords Prayer overthroweth their doctrine of satisfaction; wee therein concluding, for thine is the glory: wee take not the glory, to our selves, but ascribe all unto God. Forgivenesse of the debt is of mercy; where then remission is of grace, there can bee no satisfaction of worthinesse.

Quest. 1. Stand all sinnes in need of remission? art not some veniall, and pardonable of their owne nature?

Answ. 1. First, the Papists say, some sinnes are veniall, and that either I. Of their owne nature; because they are not (contra legem, sed praeter legem Dei) against the Law of God, but besides it; as the hatred of our enemie, in some degree; or not to be silent, when an Elder commands, and the like. Or II. for the littlenesse, and smallnesse of the sin; because they are not equall to eternall death, neither deserve it[1].

[1] Stapler. Antid. Evang.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Papists agree but jarringly amongst themselves in this particular: some saying they are veniall sinnes, because they are not against the Law of God; some saying that they cannot properly bee called sinnes, thus Bellarm.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, that which is not Contra legem Dei, against the Law of God, is not sinne; For the Law is the Rule both of good and evill;

And

And every sin is sin in as much as it is a violation the Law.

Answ 4. Fourthly, what is lesse then the eating of an Apple? (Gen. 3) then an idle word? (Mat. 12.36.) Then a corrupt thought? Gen. 6.5. And yet these are threatned with judgement and punishment.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because Stapleton saith, these sins are not paria æterna morti, that is, there is no resemblance analogy, or proportion betweene these small sins, and eternall death; I adde therefore this one answer more; That there is a parity, resemblance and equality,

I. In the affection of the person offending, who would for ever have given way to these if he had lived.

II. In the person offended, who is an infinite God. And

III. In the choise of sin, before life eternall. And

IV. In the guilt and staine of sin, because it can never be blotted out, by time or torment.

Object. 3 The Fathers speake of veniall sins, and the Scripture of mortall; And therefore some are veniall.

Answ. Sinne is called veniall or mortall, foure manner of wayes, namely

First, comparatively, as a sin which is lesse evill. Thus there are seven deadly sins, (as the Schoolmen say) which are greater then a sin of ignorance; because that is excusable In tanto non in toto, in part, but not altogether.

Secondly, in respect of the person sinning which is either
- I. Elected, but not as yet regenerated; now such a ones sins are all veniall in the event, because they shall bee pardoned, 1. Tim. 1.13.
- II. Regenerated, and justified; whose sinnes shall not bee imputed, Hence David pronounceth such a one blessed, Psalme 32.1. And S. Iohn saith such have an Advocate for their sinnes 1. Iohn 1.9. & 2.1. Hence sinne is sometimes said not to bee theirs, Rom 7. Yea not to be sinne, 1 Iohn 1.3, 9. and 5.18.

Thirdly, in respect of the infallible danger: so S. Iohn saith, there is a sinne not unto death (1. Iohn. 5.16.) Where we may observe, that sin is called Mortall for which we must not pray: and that a sinne not unto death whose danger is not so great as that is.

Fourthly, in respect of the merit: that sin is called veniall which in the severity, rigor, and strictnesse of justice doth not deserve death. And thus no sin is called finall in all the Scripture. 311

Are all sinnes equall? Quest. 2.

First, the Stoicks affirme it, and Christians who assent unto them herein thus confirme it. Answ. 1.

I. Because sin doth not consist in the matter of the action, but in the mind: Sin is a prevarication and straying from the truth, and right way. The sin is alike, to sinke a Ship by overlading her, either with Sand, or Gold. Thus the Stoicks: the following reasons are produced by the Christians.

II. Because, every sinne is a violation of the Law, yea of the whole Law; for hee who is guilty of the breach of one, is guilty of all, Iames 2.20. Therefore all are alike.

III. Because the same punishment is allotted to him who workes wickednesse, and to him who consents onely thereunto. Romans 1.32.

IV. Because the action and cogitation are both alike before God: to commit adultery actually, and with the heart; to kill and to hate; as also of other sins (Matthew. 5.) Are alike in the sight of God; And therefore all sins are equall.

Secondly, although sin differ not (ab extrà differt intrà) without, yet it differs within; to wit, that sin which is committed through ignorance, negligence, and infirmity, is lighter and lesser then that which is committed maliciously, wittingly, and of set purpose. Againe many are worse then one. Againe, hee sins worse, who sins against a greater measure of grace. And therefore thus all sins are not equall. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, one sin differs from another ab extra, even in regard of the outward act: Thus the murder of a King, or of a Father, is much more horride then of a stranger, enemie, or private person. Thus blasphemie against God is greater then contumely or reproch against our neighbour. Thus it is a greater sin to rob a poore man then one who hath no want. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, certainly there is an inequality; in the Scripture; And that Answ. 4.

I. Of glory 1. Corinth. 15.

II. Of punishment. Matth. 10.15. & 11.22. Of both which else-where.

III. Of sin, there beeing a difference betweene anger, Racha, and foole, as was shewed in the former Chapter vers. 22. so Iohn. 19.11.

Fifthly, we distinguish betweene the - Nature of sin; which is ἀνομία, the transgression of the Law; and is the same in all sins, without any difference: hence all are mortall, even unto idle thoughts.
- Degree of sin which is aggravated principally by these circumstances, viz.
  - First, from the mind, and heart, and internall purpose; if it bee done with inward boasting, or a perverse will. Answ. 5.
  - Secondly, from the neglect of greater power, strength, and grace.
  - Thirdly, from the number; many sins being heaped together.
  - Fourthly, from the time; when sin is long continued in.
  - Fifthly, from the person; when it is committed against God.

And

312 And thus although all sins have one and the same nature (as all Individua partake of the nature of their Species) yet in regard of the degree of sin we say, that those sins are greater which are committed wittingly and willingly, then those which are committed ignorantly, and with reluctation against them. Those which are committed by a man of more grace, strength and knowledge, are worse then the infirmities of the weake. Those in whom are legions of Divels and sins, are worse then those who are given but to one sin, as the young man, Mat. 19. 22. Those who continue in sin are worse, then he who fals but once. Those who sin immediately against God, worse, then those who sin immediately against man.

Quest. 3 Are all sins pardonable, because wee are taught here to pray for pardon against all?

Answ. 1. First, all sins are pardonable, except the sin against the Holy Ghost.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Papists seeme to grant this that the sin against the holy Spirit is unpardonable: but yet they acknowledge, that it is not so irremissible (as though it did exceede the mercy of God, if they could but repent) but because God gives them over unto a reprobate sense; and with-holds from them the assistance of his Spirit whereby they might bee restored.

But in this point, first Scotus is faulty, who will not fully acknowledge the truth of it. And Secondly, Camara[1] à Catharino erres here, who saith onely, that this sin is very hardly, and very seldome pardoned: Now the reason of this their error was twofold. Namely,

[1] Camara. quæst. concil. et expos. quæ. 175. Pag. 191.

I. Because they placed this sin in any act simply, without those requisite circumstances thereof, which follow by and by.

II. Because they stretched this sin beyond its bounds, making six kinds thereof contrary to the six effects of the blessed Spirit, which are these.

First, trust and confidence in God.	Desperation.
Secondly, the feare of God.	Presumption.
Thirdly, the knowledge of the truth.	A resisting of a known truth.
Fourthly, joy for the aide of the Spirit, towards our Brethren.	Envy, for graces, blessings, & endowments which God hath bestowed upon our Brethren.
Fifthly, a sorrow for sin.	Gloriation, or boasting in sin.
Sixthly, a purpose to repent.	An obstinate purpose of continuing in sin.

(Whose opposite is:)

Answ. 3. Thirdly, unto this sin against the Holy Ghost three things are required, to wit

I. Illumination, Read those two places. Heb. 6. 4. & 10. 26. If they have bene enlightned, and have had a taste, &c. And againe, if after wee have had a knowledge of the truth, &c. Thus there must be a knowledge of our duty, and an opening of the eyes of our understanding, before this sin can be committed.

II. A Relapse, and falling away, yea a returning unto impurity. Read. Heb. 6. 6. & 2. Peter. 2. 1. 20, 21, 22. & Matthew 12. 45. Unto this sin there must be a turning with the Dog to his vomite, and with the Swine which was washed to the wallowing in the mire.

III. Malitious presumption, or a hatred of Christ; when a man shall deride, contemne, spurne, trample under his feet, and blaspheme Christ, his Word, Law and truth, Religion, and the like, which he hath formerly professed, it is an argument of this unpardonable sin [m]. Here wee must carefully observe, because I say presumption is a signe of this sin, that there

[m] Math. 12. 31. Heb. 6. 6. & 10. 29.

Is a double presumption:
- De Deo: a presuming too much of the mercy of God: And thus the godly may presume.
- Contra Deum, when a man presumes that he can prevaile against God and thus Iulian the Apostate, and Herod, and the Pharisees (Mat. 28.) did.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, this sinne thus qualified is unpardonable, Mat. 12. 31. because it cannot be repented of.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Forgive us our debts.]

Quest. 1. How doth God forgive us our sinnes?

Two manner of waies, first freely; and Secondly, totally.

Answ. First, the sinnes of the faithfull are remitted freely, without any helpe, or payment of theirs at all; that is, their sinnes are pardoned of grace and meere mercy, and not for their workes.

Quest. 2. How doth it appeare, that we are not justified for our workes.

Ans. 1. First, the Apostle, saith, it is impossible, Rom. 8. 3. That the workes of the law should save us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our best workes are imperfect; like a menstruous cloath, Esay 64. 6. And therefore David desires God, not to enter into judgement with him, Psal. 143. 2.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if our workes were perfect, yet they could not be a price whereby wee could procure any thing at Gods hands, because they are debts; all men owing the debt of obedience unto God, as was shewed in the former verse. A man cannot with one summe, both satisfie an old debt, and buy a new purchase; and therefore our obedience being due unto God, can merit nothing (much lesse justification and remission) at Gods hands.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because if Justification bee by the workes of the law, then faith is made void, and the promise of none effect, Rom. 4. 14. Because it cannot bee both of faith and of workes, Rom. 11. 6.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, the first mooving cause of our redemption, and salvation was in God, not in our selves; In him there was a double cause, namely; first his love towards us; God so loved the world, John 3. 16. and 1. John 4, 9, 10. that hee gave Christ for the salvation thereof. Secondly, the will of God, Reade, Esay 53. 7. John 10 15. 18. and James 1, 18.

Obiect. 1 Christ hath merited & purchased redemption, remisand justification for us, by his blood; Therefore how doth God forgive us our debts Liberè, Freely?

Answ. 1. First, certainely our sinnes were remitted, and our soules ransomed by a deare price, even the blood, and bitter death of our Deerest Lord. 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but this remission which was purchased by Christ, was Free in regard of us, and that I. Because God did it willingly, that is, God the Father of his owne free mercy, and good will sent Christ for the effecting of this worke, Iohn 3. 16. II. Because Christ, God the Sonne, willingly undertooke the work of our salvation, Iohn 10. 15, 18. III. Because, this was done by God and Christ without our asking, or entreating; we did not implore either God the Father, or God the Sonne, for this great worke of our redemption; we by nature being dead, blinde, averse and reprobate unto every good worke, Reade Ephes. 2. 1, 2, 3. 5. 12. Rom. 5. 10. Acts 2. 37. Gal. 1. 15. and 1 Thes. 1. 9. IV. Because we by no meanes or way could possibly deserve this at Gods hands: and this is the chiefest thing to be observed. For one of these three things every man must affirme.

First, that either Christ came in vaine, because man by his owne workes might have satisfied for his owne sinnes, and saved his owne soule; which (I thinke) no Christian dare say. Or

Secondly, that wee could not have beene redeemed, justified, or saved, without Christ; but we deserved that he should doe it for us: Here let man pleade with his Maker, and produce his strong reasons; What there could be in a poore, base, despicable, and wicked creature, which might deserve, that Christ (the Sonne of God, God with God, equall with the Father, the Lord of glory, and King of Kings) should take mans nature upon him, and by his death, and blood purchase his salvation. Or Thirdly, man must confesse the point in hand, that our sinnes are remitted freely by God, for Christs sake, without any worthinesse or workes of ours at all: we neither having I, A price in our hands, by which we could buy this plenary Indulgence of our sinnes. Nor II. An adequate merit of heaven; nothing being in a poore mortall wight, which can deserve that eternall, and unspeakeable weight of felicity and glory. Neither. III. After grace can wee merit any thing of our selves at the hands of our great God, but must even then pleade guilty before his Tribunall: as was shewed in the former question.

Obiect. 2. Saint Iames saith, that Workes justifie us, Iames 2. 21, 24.

Answ. 1. First, they justifie us before men. Shew me thy faith by thy workes, James 2. 18.

Answ. 2. Secondly, before God, they justifie, that is, approve our faith to be true. Iames 2. 22.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, workes doe not justifie, that is, make just the person; neither doth Saint Iames affirme it.

Obiect. 3 Saint Iohn saith, hee who workes righteousnesse is a righteous man, 1 John 3. 7.

Answ. He argues from the effects, not from the cause. Evil workes merit, therefore also good.

It follows not, because they are free, and perfectly wicked, so are not these: but of this elsewhere. Obiect. 4 Answ.

Our workes are accepted in Christ. Obiect. 5

T'is true, but that is after we are justified, not before. Answ.

Fides sola, faith onely doth not justifie us, Iam. 2. 14. 17, Obiect. 6

Faith onely justifies without workes; although faith which is alone without workes doth not, that is, justifying and saving faith must not, neither can goe alone without workes. Galat. 6. 5. But justification is ascribed solely to faith, not at all to workes. Answ.

This doctrine, that our workes doe not justifie us before God, makes men prophane. Obiect. 7

T'is false, for workes conduce much; that is, they are both necessary and profitable. Answ.

First, workes are necessary and that in a threefold regard, namely; I. because our dutie must be discharged, which is obedience unto God, Eph. 2. 10. II. because thankefulnesse must be shewed unto God for all his mercies, and that by obedience[o]. III. Because God is glorified by our good workes, Mat. 5. 16. [o] Psalme 116. 12.

Secondly, workes are profitable, and that in these respects, to wit; I. they confirme our faith, hope, confidence, and assurance in the mercies of God. II. they are acceptable unto God, yea by workes we please him. III. They shall bee rewarded, even to a cup of cold water.

Thirdly, but they merit not this reward, Luk. 17. 10.

What is required of us unto the assurance of this forgivenesse of our sinnes? Quest. 3.

We must labour truely to repent, and then we may be assured of remission; whatsoever our persons; whatsoever our sinnes have beene. Whose persons are worse then Manasses, Sauls, (called afterwards Paul,) and the theefe upon the crosse? and yet these repenting found remission. Whose sinnes are greater then Davids, Lots, Noahs, Peters? And yet upon their repentance these were received into favour. Wherefore repent, and all our sinnes shall bee blotted out, Esay 1. 18. Answ.

How must we be truely disposed unto this repentance? Quest. 4.

First, delay it not, but while it is said to day turne from sinne. Answ. 1.

Secondly, labour to change thy affections; both thy love unto sinne, and thy tediousnesse and carelesnesse in that which is good. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, learne to change thy life and conversation for the time to come; that is, strive to bee a new creature, Gal. 6. 15. Cor. 5. 17. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, labour for faith in Christ, because his death is the onely price of our redemption. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, use the meanes unto humiliation; that is, the word, and examination of our selves thereby, together with the fruits, effects; and reward of iniquitie, not forgetting whom wee have offended by our sinnes, our gracious God, and most mercifull Mediator. Answ. 5.

And thus wee have seene how the Lord pardons our sinnes freely.

Secondly, God forgives our Debts, Totaliter, wholy: Or, the Lord remitts unto the faithfull, both the whole sinne, fault, and guilt, and the whole punishment.

Quest. 5. How doth this appeare?

Answ. 1. First, from these phrases used by the Lord in Scripture, viz.

I. Obliviscendi, Of forgetting: I will pardon them, and I will remember them no more, Reade Esay 43.25. Ierem. 31.34. Ezech. 18.22. and Heb. 10.17.

II. Of washing and clensing. I will make you as white as woall, Esay 1.18.

III. Of peace; Thy faith hath saved thee, goe in peace, Luke 7.50. And Christ hath made peace betweene us and God, through his blood, Col. 1.20. Now if God have forgot our sinnes, and washed away our sinnes, and is in Christ at peace with us, then certainely both the sinne and punishment is pardoned.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because those who are once purged, have no more cõscience of those sins from which they were purged. Heb. 10.2. And therefore both the sinne and punishment are taken away together.

Thirdly, either all punishments are remitted with the sinne, or none; let the Papists shew us where there is a distinction of punishments in Scripture, whereof some are pardoned in this life, and some reserved to bee satisfied for after this life, or in this life: for to my understanding this no where appeares. Answ. 3.

Fourthly, because our sinnes are not twice punished: once our sinnes were laid upon Christ, who suffered for us, Esay 53.56. and therefore with the guilt the punishment is taken from us. Answ. 4.

Quest. 6. Is a man bound then to make no satisfaction unto God?

Answ. There is a double satisfaction: first, by action, Secondly by passion.

Firſt, there is a satisfaction which consists in action, or doing.

This is twofold, to wit, either
- To our neighbour; this is necessary, for the sinne is not pardoned, nisi restituatur ablatum, except the injured person be recompensed.
- To God, which is either of
  - Thankfulnesse; What recompence shall I make the Lord for all his mercies, this is lawfull, and our duty, Psal. 116.12.
  - Atonement, this is unwarrantable; because Christ by his death hath done this.

Secondly, there is a satisfaction which consists in Passions, or suffering; and thus wee cannot satisfie the justice of God for our sinnes.

Obiect. 8 God first pardons David, and then punisheth him. 2 Sam. 12. and therefore the justice of God must be satisfied by temporall punishment.

Answ. David was punished for mans sake, not for Gods, who never respects what is by-past, after it is once pardoned. God correcteth David, not for the satisfying of his justice (for that was fully satisfied by the sufferings of Christ), but that the enemies of God might not blaspheme, and that others by his afflictions might learne to feare to offend the Lord. Hence then Purgatorie is but a meere trifle, because after wee are washed from our sinnes by the blood of Christ, wee have no neede of a second purging, 1 John 1.7.

Quest. 7. What may we thinke of the afflictions, crosses, and calamities of the righteous?

Ans. 1. First, that they are not inflicted upon them in anger. If Solomon sinne, God will visit his sinnes with a rod, and his iniquitie with a stripe, Psal. 89.32. but yet this correction shall bee in love, Psal. 89.33. and 2 Sam. 7.15. For God loves his alwaies, John 13.1.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we may thinke, that God in his corrections never respects the time by-past, but alwaies the time to come, that is, either I. His own glory, as he did in Iobs tribulation, and Pauls temptation, 2 Cor. 12.9. Or II. The Churches satisfaction, as he did in punishing of David, 2 Sam. 12.14. Or III. The benefit and good of the person afflicted: Here then observe, Affliction is profitable in these three regards,

- First, it saves and preserves from condemnation; yee are corrected, that ye may not be damned, 1 Cor. 11.32. The spirit of bondage leades us unto repentance [p]. p 2 Cor. 7.9,10.
- Secondly, it encreaseth the hatred of the by-past sinnes: David sees not his sinne untill affliction be threatned, 2 Sam. 12. and then hee cries out, with loud clamours, Psal. 51.
- viz. Thirdly, it preserveth from future sinnes: hence Davids tribulation made him, more warie for for the future time, Psal. 119.67. and Pauls temptation kept him from pride [q]. q 2 Cor. 12,8. 9.
- Fourthly, it teacheth us the waies of the Lord. Now in affliction have I learned thy law [r]. r Psalme 119.71.
- Fifthly, it breedes in us a wearines of the world, and a tediousnesse of this life, Phil. 1.23.

VERS. 13. And leade us not into Temptation; but deliver us from evill: for thine is the Kingdome, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen. Vers. 13.

This is the last petition, which some cut and divide into two, distinguishing it diversely.

Firſt,

First, into Spirituall temptation, and Temporall evill. Canisius.

Secondly, into future evils not to bee induced, and present evils to be removed.

Thirdly, into the effect, Temptation: and the cause that evill one: and this is most probable.

Fourthly, here is the Evill, or danger, and that is Temptation, and the remedie, which is, a freedome from evill.

Sect. 1. §. 1. And leade us not into temptation.]

Quest. 1. What doe wee in generall pray for, or desire in these words?

Answ. 1. First, wee desire, that seeing Sathan cannot tempt when, whom, or as farre as he would, but onely, when, whom, and as farre as God permits, and grants; that therefore our heavenly father would not give us into the hands, or power, or policie of the Devill, that Tempter, but that himself would be pleased to dispense and moderate our temptations, and not to suffer us to bee tempted above our strength[r].

[r] 1 Cor. 10. 13.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we desire, that when Sathan sifts, and tempts us, God would not forsake us, or leave us to our selves, or deprive us of his grace and helpe, but that he would be graciously pleased to be present with us, to stand by us, and to assist us in the houre of temptation; rebuking, restraining, and expelling Sathan; yea so supplying us with strength of grace, that wee may not be overcome of Sathan or sinne, but may overcome them, and endure couragiously the brunt of the combate.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, seeing that naturally wee are secure, unprovided for an assault, drowsie in temptation, not weighing and thorowly pondering the sleights and enticements of the Tempter, together with his strength, and our manifold weaknesses; neither seriously considering the danger of temptation; we therefore pray unto our God, that hee would awake us from the sleepe of securitie, and make us watchfull, arming us also with the whole armour of a Christian, giving us wisedome and fortitude, that so we may rightly withstand temptation.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we desire here also, that the Lord would give unto us, patience, consolation, and hope; that we may bee enabled to indure, and patiently beare whatsoever temptation the Lord shall lay upon us, and as long as he shall please to exercise us there with; And that his grace in the meane time may be sufficient for us.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, we desire that when we are so assaulted and insnared by temptation, that we neither know what will be the end of it, nor how to escape out of it; that the Lord would so dispose of it, that we may be able to sustaine and endure it, and that he would put such an end unto it, as may be for his glory, and our good.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, because the Lord knowes, wee have but small strength, and power; we therefore desire that Christ would preserve us from the perillous, and pernitious houre of temptation. Apoc. 3. 3.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, we desire, that in temptation God would keepe us from the presumption of Peter, and from the desperation of Saul.

Answ. 8. Eighthly, we intreate the Lord, not to punish one sin with another, by permitting us to be led (for some former rebellion) into some dangerous temptation; as he permitted David to number the people, 2 Sam. 24. 1. Or by giving us over to our owne hearts lusts, Psal. 81. 3. Or by giveing us over to a reprobate sense, Rom. 1. 28. or to worke wickednesse and that with greedinesse, Ephes. 4. 18. (Chemnit. harmon. Chap. 51. pag. 621.

Quest. 2. What is meant by temptation?

Answ. πειράζειν, to tempt, hath these three principall significations, namely:

First, properly it signifies to try, prove, or make triall of. Hence

Secondly, it is taken for the triall or probation of God, when he proves our patience, faith, and obedience, as was shewed before, Chapter 4.

Thirdly, it is taken for the tentation of Sathan: when hee tries, whether he can deceive and seduce us or not.

Quest. 3. What is the meaning of this word leade?

Answ. εἰσενέγκῃς, it is not to constraine, or compell to sinne, but to deliver us up to the will of Sathan to be seduced, and deceived; or wee pray that God would not give us into the hands and power of the tempter, or temptation.

Here then foure things offer themselves to be considered of; viz. First, that it were needlesse to pray against temptation, except there were both feare and danger of it. Secondly, that except wee move God by our prayers, wee are in danger to be led into temptation. Thirdly, that seeing prayer is to be offered up in faith, we may therefore hope, that this request shall be granted. Fourthly, that the devill hath many waies to deceive us; when God leaves us in his power. Fifthly, Christ teacheth nothing in vaine unto us, but now except we were daily in feare of temptation, it were needlesse to pray against it: And therefore wee may hence learne, that our life is miserable, and full of temptation: our life is a warfare, we are souldiers, and Sathan is the enemie which fights against us, Reade these places, Iob 7. 1. and 1 Pet. 5. 8. and 2 Cor. 7. 5. and 1 Tim. 1. 18. and 2 Tim. 4. 7. and 2. 3. 4. and Heb. 10. 32. Iam. 4. 1. and 1 Pet. 2. 11. Obser. 1.

Quest. 4. Why is our life so full of temptations?

Answ. 1. First, because wee must not bee received into glory, untill we have beene proved and tryed.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because wee must not be crowned with a reward, untill wee have laboured and wrought.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because afflictions and temptations quicken our desires after heaven, there being there neither temptation nor tribulation.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because those who are not tempted, are bastards, and not sonnes; Heb. 12. 8.

Secondly, by our Saviours teaching us here to pray against temptation, it appeares that God himself (except he be moved and perswaded by our supplications) doth sometimes leade into temptation.

Quest. 4. Doth God tempt any? Doth not Saint Iames say flatly, let not any man when he is tempted, say he is 316 is tempted of God; for God tempts no man, James 1. 14.

Anſ. 1. First, ſome diſtinguiſh here between good temptations and evill; ſaying, I. Good comes from God; thus Abraham was tempted, Gen. 22. 1. Iſrael, and Exod. 15. 25. and 16. 4. II. Evill temptations come from ſathan. But

First, wee pray not againſt good temptations but evill; the former being not onely allowed but alſo requeſted, Tenta me, prove me, ſaith David, Pſal. 26. 2.

Secondly, yea God ſometimes permits evill Temptations for tryall: thus he tryed Iſrael by falſe Prophets [t], and thus hee tryed Hezekiah. 2 Chron. 32. 31.

[t] Deut. 13. 3.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome diſtinguiſh here of the end; ſaying, ſathan tempts, that we may be deſtroyed, the fleſh tempts that we might ſinne, God tempts that he might try us. Vrſians. But this doth not fully ſatiſie the queſtion, concerning the Actor or Authour of temptation.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, ſome diſtinguiſh between the actiō & permiſſion; God hath a hand in the act of tempting; for the action is from God, in as much as it is an action, not in aſmuch as it is ſinne [u], Deus agit materiale peccati, non formale, &c. God is the author of the action, but not of the obliquitie of the action. Camara. ibid.

[u] Camara. pag. 71.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, ſome diſtinguiſh here of tempting immediately, and by meanes, and this is true, but it holds not univerſally.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, God works in his actions two manner of waies, viz.

- First, generally, and that both,
  - By directing them unto a good end: Thus all things worke together for the beſt, Rom. 8. 28.
  - Moving them in the beginning: For in him we live, move, and have our being. [v] Act. 17. 28.
- Secondly, particularly, and that either by
  - Exciting the meanes; thus God moves the Angels, and good men, by quickning and enclining the will.
  - Permitting the meanes; and thus he permitted Ahab to be tempted (1 King. 22. 21) and Iob 1. 9. and 2. 4.

Therefore to conclude, God tempts theſe waies. I. By moving, and cauſing the action, in as much as it is an action. II By regulating & diſpoſing of it to a good end; to wit, to his glory, though it bee the death and deſtruction of the ſinner 3. By permitting ſathan to tempt; as was ſhewed before in Ahab and Iob. IV. By taking away, or withdrawing his grace for a time; as he did in Hezekiah [w].

[w] 2 Chro 32. 31.

But theſe following waies God tempts not, to wit, Neither I. By compelling or forcing ſathan to tempt any. Nor II. By moving the heart unto ſinne: This Saint Iames ſaith, comes from our corrupt nature and not from God, Iames 1. 13. Nor II. By propounding the occaſions and allurements unto ſinne, thereby to bring us unto death, for ſo ſathan tempts.

Obſer. 2. Wee may learne then hence, that God doth ſometimes leade us into temptation, namely, both by permitting ſathan to aſſault us, and by withholding his grace from us. To the places above quoted adde theſe. Acts 5. 3. Rom. 1. 24. 28. Theſ. 2. 10. and 2 Tim. 2. 25. Sometimes we provoke God by our ſinnes, and therefore he gives us over to worke all manner of wickednes: Sometimes wee incenſe him by deſpiſing his mercy, Rom. 2. 4. 5. ſometimes by greeving the holy ſpirit; And therefore hee withdrawes his preventing grace from us; giving us over to a ſpirit of ſlumber and ſleepe. And therefore wee ſhould bee principally carefull, not to provoke our heavenly Father, who onely is able to preſerve us from temptation.

Queſt. 6. How or by what meanes doe wee provoke God to leave us unto our ſelves, or the will of ſathan, or to permit us to bee led into temptation, that knowing the cauſes hereof we may labour to avoid them?

Anſw. The meanes, or cauſes hereof are theſe.

First, ignorance of God; or a fooliſh heart and ſottiſh full of darkeneſſe, Ro 1. 21. & 2 Cor. 4. 4.

Secondly, wavering, ſtaggering, and inconſtancy in religion, Ephes. 4. 14. Rom. 1. 25.

Thirdly, a neglect of Gods call, abuſing the tender of grace, and extinguiſhing the motions of the bleſſed Spirit, Prov. 1. 24. &c.

Fourthly, a not fearing the terrors of the law, or threatnings of God, Prov. 1. 29, 30.

Fifthly, an hatred of the word of truth in the mouth of the Prohets; as Ahab did, 1 King. 22. 8.

Sixthly, a cleaving unto ſinne, and delighting in iniquitie, Rom. 1. 26. 29. 2 Pet. 2. 12, 13.

Seventhly, a returning unto our vomit, and former ſinnes, 2 Pet. 20. 21. 22.

Eighthly, a calumniating, and ſcandalizing of God and religion, Rom. 1. 21. and 2 Pet. 2. 2.

And therefore if we deſire not to bee led into temptation, let us carefully take heede 1. of Ignorance, 2. Inconſtancy in religion, 3. Of neglecting the day of our ſalvation, that is, either the call of the word outwardly, or the motions of the Spirit inwardly; 4. Let us learne to feare Gods meanes, 5. To delight in the word of God, though it ſhould reprove us; 6. Let us forſake and avoide all ſinne; 7. Let us never turne unto our old ſinnes: But laſtly, labour to glorifie God, & adorne that profeſſion which we have undertaken.

Thirdly, prayer is to bee offered up in faith, therefore our bleſſed Saviour by teaching us here to pray againſt temptation, doth ſhew that wee may beleeve that this ſhall bee done for us which we deſire: Or, that the Lord is ready, and prepared to preſerve and deliver us from temptation, if wee will but ſeeke unto him by prayer. Reade Pſalme 34. 4. and 50. 15. and 1 Cor. 10. 13. and 2 Theſ. 3. 3. and 2 Pet. 2. 9. and Revel. 3. 10.

How

Quest. 7. How doth this appeare, that God is readie to preserve us from temptation, if we pray?

Answ. 1. First, because it is the office of God to moderate all things; and to rule all things by his providence; and therefore if he please, he can preserve and deliver us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because Sathan himselfe cannot hurt us, except God permit; he could not touch Iobs body untill God gave him leave, hee could not take away Iobs life, because God forbad him, Iob 1. 2. and 2. 4. hee could not enter into the swine without leave, Mat. 8. 31. yea Christ dislodgeth him, and casteth him out at his pleasure; And therefore it is plaine, that he cannot tempt us, except God permit, and consequently, that God is able to preserve us from temptation.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the truth hereof will appeare if wee looke unto Christ, who I. was armed for us, and overcame Sathan for us, Mat. 4. and was tempted that hee might succour those who groane under temptation, Heb. 2. 18. II. Christ was offered up for us, and triumphed in the Crosse over death, and him that had the power of death, even the devill, Col. 2. 14. and Heb. 2. 14. and 1 Cor. 15. 55, &c.

Quest. 8. What must we avoide our selves, for the escaping of temptation?

Answ. 1. First, love no sinne at all; for if we have a desire, and affection unto any, wee cannot withstand the temptations thereunto as we ought.

Answ. 2. Secondly, love not the world, esteeme it not as a friend; for if so, we can never beware of, or avoid the inticements and allurements thereof, as we should, 1 John 2. 15. James 4. 4.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, let us not give place unto the occasions of sinne, lest unawares we bee caught in the net, or fall into the snare; let us consider by what meanes, occasions, or provocations we are most frequently ensnared, that wee may learne, and labour carefully to eschew them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, let us refraine vaine thoughts, and mortifie all internall corruptions. Col. 3. 5. and 1 Pet. 2. 11.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, let us tame, and bring under the flesh, unto the obedience of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 9. 27.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, let us not be negligent in our lives and conversations, but warie, watchfull, and circumspect, Ephes 5. 15. both over our words, works, and thoughts.

Ans. 7. Seventhly, let us not yeeld unto temptation, or surrender the bucklers at the first stroke; let us not deliver up the fort, at the first onset, and suffer out selves to bee taken captive at the first assault; but let us fight it out, and resist even unto blood, Heb. 12. 4. Jam. 4. 7. like a stout souldier, 1 Tim. 1. 18. and 2 Tim. 2. 3. for if we be faithfull unto the death, fighting couragiously the battels of the Lord, we shall overcome, and be crowned, Reade[a].

[a] Revelat. 2. ver. 7. 10. 25 26.

Quid faciendum? What must wee doe both to prevent Temptation, and to escape it, when thereby we are assaulted?

Quest. 9 We must never goe without our weapons, or unarmed, but put upon us the whole armour of a Christian: principally these three, namely,

Answ. First, the shield of faith, Eph. 6, 16. and 1 Joh. 5. 4. labour by faith in Christ to withstand all his temptations, whether they tend unto presumption, or desperation.

Secondly, the sword of the Spirit; for if the word of God abide in us, we shall be safe, 1 John 2. 14: but of this we spake before, Mat. 4.

Thirdly, prayer, & this is frequently to be used, Ephes. 6 18. yea daily according to our Saviours direction in this place; where we are taught by him every day to pray, against temptation.

Fourthly, our Saviour by teaching thus frequently & fervently to pray against temptation, doth shew, that the devill hath many waies to deceive us, when God leaves us in his power or unto his will. But of this much hath been spoken before, Chap. 4.

§. 2. But deliver us from evill.] Sect. 2.

What doe we generally pray against in these words? Quest. 1.

First, seeing that Sathan goes about like a roareing Lyon, seeking whom he may devoure, wee therefore pray unto God, that hee would graciously keepe, protect, and defend us from him, and all his deceits, baits, allurements, and temptations: And that if he should ensnare or intrap us by his craft and subtiltie, that he would be pleased to free us, and deliver us out of his power. Answ. 1.

Secondly, we desire, that God would preserve us from sin, and every evill worke, and not suffer us to fall thereinto: And if wee should bee overcome by any sin, that he would free, and redeeme us there-from, and inable us to cease from evill, and to do good; to dye unto sin, and to live unto righteousnesse. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, wee pray here against all evils, to wit. Answ. 3.

I Against the evils of the life to come; namely, eternall punishment, and condemnation.

II. Against the evils, losses, crosses, casualties, and dangers of this life, both spirituall and corporall; both externall, and internall: And if wee be subjected under any of these evils, that he would be pleased to take it away from us, principally if hee see, that it be perillous or pernicious, and not profitable or beneficiall unto us.

Fourthly, because wee often desire many things which we thinke are good and profitable for us; and to be freed from many things, which wee thinke are evill and hurtfull: yet because we doe not know for the time to come what they may prove, wee therefore desire that the Lord (who calls those things which are not, as though they were, and knowes as well what is to come as what is present) would preserve us, and with-hold all things from us, which he sees and knowes to be evill for us. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, if it seeme not good unto God to take the temptation or buffet of Satan from us, or to free us from any affliction which lieth upon us; then we desire that hee would give us patience, obedience, consolation, and hope; lest otherwise that which hee sendeth unto us, or layeth upon us for our good, should become evill unto us. Answ. 5.

Sixthly, because all our protections, preservations, and deliverances, in this life are imper- Answ. 6.

318 ſect, we being no ſooner free from one evill and temptation, but we fall into another; we therefore deſire that God would bring us unto that place, life, and kingdome, where we may bee fully, and perfectly delivered from all danger, temptation, and evill, for ever and ever. Amen.

Queſt. 2. What is the meaning of theſe words, Deliver us from evill?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſome expound this of the Neuter gender; de omni malo, futuro, vel præſenti (Auguſt. ſ.) Of all evill, whether preſent upon us or to come.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſome expound this of the Maſculine gender, de malo illo, of that evill one the devill; thus Chryſoſtome and Beza ſup. And that for theſe reaſons.

I. Becauſe he is the Tempter, and therefore as in the former words we pray againſt temptation, ſo in theſe againſt the author thereof Sathan.

II. Becauſe (ſaith Beza) πονηρὸς doth rather ſignifie the perſon then the thing: But Beza himſelfe doth rather aſcribe it to the thing, then to the perſon, upon 1 Iohn 5.19. yea our Saviour himſelfe doth attribute it ſometime to things: An evill man out of the evill treaſure of the heart ἐκβάλλει πονηρὰ bringeth forth evill things[b].

[b] Mat. 12. 35.

III. Becauſe the Maſculine article is here added, and not the Neuter.

IV. Becauſe πονηρὸς ſignifies Sathan elſewhere, as Mat. 13.19,38. and 1 Iohn 2.13,14. and 3.12.

V. Becauſe Tertullian (lib. de fuga) renders it Malignum; Deliver us from that malicious creature, who is ſet upon a miſchiefe.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, wee need not contend much about the meaning of the words, whether wee expound it of the Neuter gender or of the Maſculine, ſeeing they come both unto one; that is, it matters not much, whether wee underſtand by evill, that evill one, Sathan; or thoſe evils which proceed from him; as it is moſt generally interpreted.

Queſt. 3. What is the evill one, whom from we deſire to be delivered?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, he is a Tempter, Mat. 4.3. The Tempter came unto him: in which title we may obſerve theſe things:

I. He tempts the beſt, and ſpares none, hee aſſaults Noah, Lot, Abraham, David, Ioſeph, Iob, Paul, Peter, yea Adam in Paradiſe, and Chriſt in the wildernesſe.

II. Hee enſnares the wicked, taking them captive at his will, 2 Tim. 2.26.

III. Hee is the father of all ſinne (Iohn 8.44. and 1 Iohn 3.8.10.) who ſowes the ſeeds of all iniquitie in the hearts of men, Mat. 13.25.

IV. The place of ſinne is the habitation of Sathan, Revel. 2.9,13. and 3.9.

V. Hee hinders the fruit of the word, Mat. 13.19. 1 Theſſ. 2.18.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, he is a Lyar, (Iohn 8.44.) and the father of lyes, in whoſe mouth are as many untruthes as words, all his promiſes of good which hee makes unto us, being like the promiſe of knowledge which he made unto Adam.

Thirdly, he is an Accuſer, who when he hath tempted us unto ſinne, then he accuſeth us unto God, Luke 10.18. Revel. 12.9,10. Anſw. 3.

Fourthly, hee deſireth to deſtroy us: In this title of Deſtroyer wee may take notice of theſe things. Anſw. 4.

He was a murderer and deſtroyer from the beginning, Iohn 8.44.

II. He is like a roaring Lyon, who ſeeketh up and downe, whom he may devoure, 1 Pet. 5.8.

III. He is called Ἀπολλύων, the deſtroyer (Apoc. 9.11.) although I thinke that there this is the name of Antichriſt, not of the Divell.

Queſt. 4. How doth the Divell tempt and aſſault us, that knowing it, we may learne to avoid him?

Anſw. Sathan comes unto us ſometimes cloathed, ſometimes armed.

Firſt, ſometimes the Divell comes unto us cloathed, and that with the ſhew, 1. Sometimes of pleaſure. 2. Sometimes of riches. 3. Sometimes of glory and honour. 4. Sometimes of humane Lawes. 5. Sometimes of honeſty. 6. Sometime of Religion, tempting unto curioſitie and ſuperſtition.

Secondly, ſometimes the Divell comes againſt us armed, and that 1. Sometimes aſſaulting us by the good things of the world. 2. Sometimes with the terrour of evill things. 3. Sometimes by the example of others. 4. Sometimes by the counſell of wiſe men, or perſwaſion of friends. 5. Sometime by the power of our own affections and luſts.

And therefore how hard is it for us to reſiſt him? yea, how impoſſible of our ſelves to overcome him? Wherefore let us walke circumſpectly, and pray fervently, that the Lord would deliver us from this evill one.

Queſt. 5. How doth it appeare, that the Lord both can and will deliver his children when they pray unto him, both from tentation and affliction, both from evils, and the evill one?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, he never ſleepes, but alwayes wakes, and watcheth over his children: And therefore no danger can come upon them at unawares.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, he knowes all things, yea foreſees all things before they come, therefore hee can keepe backe, and prevent whatſoever hee pleaſeth.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, he alwayes loves them, yea even to the end, 1 Iohn 13.1. therefore will be carefull of them.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, he can doe whatſoever he will, for all power is in his hands, Mat. 28.20. And therefore he either can keepe off danger, or deliver from danger, or chaine up our enemy.

Anſw. 5. Fifthly, Nullum tempus occurrit Deo, his help comes never too late; for he can preſerve in the Den, Dan. 6. and in the fire, Dan. 3.

Anſw. 6. Sixthly, he knowes all things, whether they be good for us or not; yea, can order and diſpoſe of all things to our good, Rom. 8.28.

Sect. 3. §. 3. For thine is the Kingdome.]

Obiect. 1. The Papiſts bluſh not to affirme that this concluſion is not Scripture, producing theſe Arguments or Reaſons for the proofe hereof.

Firſt, ſome of them ſay, that we the Proteſtants ſtants have corrupted the Text, and added theſe words.

Anſw. This is a moſt impudent ſcandall, to ſay, that we Proteſtants have added this concluſion, for it was uſed long ſince by the Fathers, as followes by and by.

Object.2 Secondly, Bellarmine ſaith, that theſe words, For thine is the Kingdome, &c. are not Canonicall Scripture, but were added by the Gretians.

Anſw. Theſe words are not added unto the Greeke Text, but are diminiſhed and taken away by the Latine Tranſlator, as Valla obſerves.

Object.3 Thirdly, divers Latin Fathers, who underſtood Greeke well enough, in their Expoſition of the Lords Prayer, make no mention of theſe words at all, neither are they found in divers Bookes.

Anſw.1. Firſt, we will oppoſe or vie Fathers for Fathers, Bookes for Bookes with them.

Anſw.2. Secondly, the authority of the Greeke Fathers who write and ſpeake of the Greeke Text, is greater and more venerable than the authority of the Latine Fathers who ſay nothing thereof, Ameſius tom.1.p.22. Now theſe words, are in the oldeſt Greeke copies, and they are older, and more excellent then the Latin copies; yea theſe Greek Fathers, Theophylact, Euthymius, and Chryſoſtome, both upon Matthew, & in his imperfect worke (which is fathered upon him) reade theſe words, yea it was uſed alwayes by the Greek Church, which wuld rather certainly give credit to the Greeke Text, then to the Latine.

Anſw.3. Thirdly, although many Latine Fathers recite not theſe words, yet they are recited by others of as ſufficient authority as they are; for both the Churches in France, Holland, Spain, and Italy uſe them, (ſee defence of reformers againſt Maſter Hutton, part.1. pag.210.) yea theſe words are found in the copies of other tongues beſides Latine. Munſter telleth us, he ſaw an old Hebrew copie, wherein theſe words were, and alſo a Syriack: Muſculus ſaith he ſaw an old Chaldee copie, wherein they were likewiſe: And the Chriſtians in Arabia uſe this concluſion in generall. Beza (ſup.) telleth us, that the moſt part of the Gretians uſed them; but Eraſmus (ſup.) ſaith all; and Bellarmine doth not much gainesay it (de verbo Dei, l.7. & de bonis operib. partic. 1.6.)

Object.4. Fourthly, theſe words are not in the Latine Canon; therefore they are not Canonicall. This is their chiefeſt and ſtrongeſt reaſon; Or the Enthymeme may be thus framed. Hieromes (or the vulgar) Latin Bible hath not this concluſion, therefore it is not authenticall.

Anſw.1. Firſt, the vulgar Latine Bible is none of Hieromes; Bellarmine himſelfe will not undertake to defend and maintaine this quarrell, but waves the cauſe, in a manner confeſſing that it is none of his.

Anſw.2. Secondly, Hierome hath corrected many things in his Bible, upon which he paraphraſeth, which yet remaine corrupted in the vulgar Latine; and therefore it is not authenticall, whoſoever ownes it.

Thirdly, I anſwer the objection with the objection: the vulgar Latine Bible hath not this concluſion, for thine is the Kingdome, &c. Therefore it (that is, that Bible, or that Interpretation of the Bible) is not authenticall. For the proofe of this anſwer obſerve, Anſw.3.

I. The New Teſtament was firſt written in Greeke, and this Goſpel either in Greek or Hebrew, as all confeſſe (as we ſhewed before in the generall queſtions before the firſt chapter. Queſtion 10.) And therefore if theſe words be in the Hebrew copie, and in all the Greeke copies, as was ſhewed before; then it muſt neceſſarily follow, that the Latine is not authenticall which hath them not.

II. If wee looke but into this very Prayer, which is taught us by our Saviour, we ſhall find the vulgar Latine Bible to be of ſmall authoritie.

Firſt, in Luke 11.2. The whole Preface is omitted except father, when ye pray, ſay, Pater ſanctificetur, &c. Father, hallowed bee thy Name.

Secondly, the third Petition, Thy will be done, &c. is wholly left out.

Thirdly, halfe the laſt Petition, But deliver us from evill, is left out alſo. And therefore this Tranſlation is but a crooked Rule to walke by.

Fifthly, Bellarmine objects; the Greeke Fathers, and Churches uſing this concluſion in their Liturgies, ſeparate it from the Lords Prayer, not continuing it with it, as here it is, Bellar. de verb. Dei 1.7. & de bonis oper. partic.1.6. And he inſtanceth upon the Liturgie of Chryſoſtome. Object.5

Although this Liturgie which hee quotes be adulterate, and none of Chryſoſtomes, yet it is falſe that it is ſeparated from the Lords Prayer, for even there it goes before the concluſion: Amen. Anſw.

Sixthly, they object, Cui bono? what good could it be to Hierome, or the Author of the Latine Tranſlation to leave it out, if it had beene of the Scripture, or divine authority? Or for what end ſhould they doe it? Object.4.

Firſt, I anſwer hereunto, as Bellarmine doth for the omiſſion of the Preface, and 2. Petitions mentioned in the former Objection, Anſwer laſt, from Luke 11.2. (de bonis oper. partic. 1.6. quod verò) that this concluſion was omitted through the careleſneſſe and overſight of the Writer or Printer. Anſw.1.

Secondly, our venerable Fulke anſwers, that thoſe who writ the firſt copies over againe, omitted theſe words in the ſecond writing, as a thing commonly knowne, and daily rehearſed of every man, Fulke, Preface to the Rhemiſt. §.38. Anſw.2.

If the Authenticalneſſe and divine authoritie of the latter part of this verſe be thus queſtioned, then how may it appeare that it is Canonicall? Queſt.1.

Firſt, the matter and ſubſtance of the words is holy, nothing in them diſſenting from the Analogie of faith, but agreeing thereunto, being borrowed Anſw.1.

320 borrowed from, 1 Chron. 29. 11. Cartwr. resp. Rhem. praef. §. 38.

Answ. 2. Secondly, these words are most apt, fit, and pertinent to the matter in hand; for herein our Saviour renders the reason, why wee begge all these things at Gods hands, because the Kingdome and power of all is his, and therefore he alone can give whatsoever he will, Cartwr. ibid.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because otherwise the Lords prayer should not be a perfect plat-forme. For the understanding hereof observe, that unto a perfect prayer two things are required; namely, I. To beginne in faith: so here we beginne, Our Father, &c. II. To end in praise, and thankes, and glory unto God; as here, For thine is the kingdome, &c. And therefore to take away this conclusion were to make this most perfect form of prayer imperfect, and without any praise or thansgiving unto God.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because our Saviour had made us sollicitous, and sorrowfull by putting us in mind of our enemies in the former words (But deliver us from evill) hee doth therefore in these words incourage us, For thine is the kingdome, &c. that we might not feare or be dismayed, Erasm. sup. a Chrysost. ex aurea catenâ.

Quest. 2. Are there no Kings in the world but God, that our Saviour saith, For thine is the kingdome?

Answ. There are many Kings, but they are all subordinate; the true kingdome being onely in God; who is the transcendent Lord, or King κατ' ἐξοχήν, or Lord paramount, or the onely true, and independent King, Read for the proofe hereof, Psal. 22. 28. &c. and 24. 7. &c. and 29. 10. and 103. 19. and Rev. 17. 14. and 19. 16. and 1 Tim. 1. 17. and 6. 15.

Quest. 3. How doth it appeare that God is the onely true, independent King of the whole world?

Answ. 1. First, because hee created all things in heaven and earth.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because hee provides for all creatures, the eies of all things looking up unto him for their food.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because hee gives, and establisheth lawes unto all the world.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, and all kings, and governours are his deputies, and viceroies, Rom. 13. 1. &c.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because hee hath but onely one kingdome, viz. { In earth, spirituall, and militant. / In heaven, eternall, and triumphant.

Quest. 4. How must we obey this King?

Answ. 1. First, acknowledge that thou art bought with a price, and art wholly his, 1 Cor. 6. 20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, deny thy selfe, offer up, and devote thy selfe wholy unto the Lord; Rom. 12. 1.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, looke unto the lawes and ordinances of this King, meditate upon them, observe them, and direct thy life by them.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, let his service, and obedience bee the worke of thy whole life; striving carefully as long as thou liveſt to avoide whatsoever thy Lord forbids thee, and to obey whatsoever hee requires of thee; that being a new creature, and bringing forth new obedience, thou maist become acceptable unto him, 2 Cor. 5. 9, 17.

Quest. 5. What may wee expect from this King, if wee thus labour to serve him?

Answ. Our expectation doth concerne either
- First, this life, wherein we hope for, and expect things belonging either unto the
  - Body, which are twofold, namely, both
    - Providence in all needefull temporall things, for if we serve him, surely we shal be fed.
    - Protection from all evill, whether enemies, dangers, casualties, sicknesses, or whatsoever.
  - Soule, to wit, the internal, and spirituall kingdome of grace in our hearts; and peace of conscience, Phil. 4. 7. and joy of the Holy Ghost; and new strength of the spirit, whereby we may be inabled to live wholly unto the Lord, Gal. 2 20.
- Secondly, the life to come, to wit, that eternall, immortall, incorruptible & everlasting Kingdome of heaven; for which we cry daily with the Saints under the altar, How long Lord, how long wilt thou deferre thy comming [c], and with Saint Paul groane so long as we are absent from it [d], desiring from our hearts to be dissolved, that we might injoy it [e].

[c] Rev. 6. 10
[d] 2 Cor. 5. 2, 4, 8.
[e] Phil. 1. 23.

Sect. 4. Observ. §. 4. And the power.] Wee desire here that we may obey the will of God, and be freed from all evill, because God is able to doe this for us, whereby our Saviour teacheth us, that Gods omnipotency is the foundation both of our faith, and obedience, and prayer: As appeares by these three particulars.

First, he who can doe all things whatsoever he will, is to bee prayed unto; but God is such a one.

Secondly, he who can be avenged of us when and as hee pleaseth, is to be feared, but God is such a one.

Thirdly, hee who can supply all our wants, and relieve us in all our necessities, and deliver us from all our enemies, and dangers, he is to be trusted unto; but God is such a one: Therefore his omnipotency is the foundation of our prayer, obedience, and trust.

Quest. 1 Who must feare the omnipotency, and power of God?

Answ. 1. First, rebells and disobedient persons; if the love of God will not draw them, then let the power of God affright and terrifie them; for he is able to take vengeance of them, and although with much long suffring and patience he indure them long (2 Pet. 3. 9.) yet at last, he will certainely powre out his wrath upon them (Rom. 2. 5.)

2.5.) when they shall not be able to indure his anger.

Answ.2. Secondly; the righteous should feare to offend God; remembring these things. 1. God is able to withhold good things from them, if they sinne against him. 2. God is able to bring evill things upon them, if they provoke him. 3. God can bring a spirituall weakenesse upon them, by withdrawing his grace from them for a time, as he did from Hezekiah, 2 Chron. 32.31. 4. They are not stronger then God to tie his hands, when his wrath is kindled, 1 Cor. 10. 22.

Quest.2. If God bee able alwaies to heare and helpe, then how comes it to passe that sometimes hee heares not, and sometimes heares; yea, sometimes helpes not, and sometimes helpes?

Answ.1. First, it is true that sometimes God heares not; but the reason hereof is not because he cannot, but for some other cause, namely.

1. Because hee who prayeth unto him pleaseth him not in his life and conversation; and therefore his prayers returne backe againe as an abomination unto God.

2. Because the petitions which are powred forth please him not; being either wicked, or worldly, or malitious, or vaine, and not heavenly.

3 Because the thing prayed for is not particularly fit or convenient for the person praying, in regard of some circumstances; or at least because it is not best for him; but God sees something which is better, in one of these regards, namely, either;

First, in respect of his glory: Or

Secondly, in respect of the edification of the Church. Or,

Thirdly, for thy selfe, to wit, either;

I. For the tryall of thy patience. Or,

II. For the strengthning, and exercising of thy faith. Or.

III. For the augmentation, and encrease of thy experience, grace, strength, &c.

Answ.2. Secondly, if it be a righteous man that prayes, God alwaies heares him, in as much as may bee good for him, and never denies his requests; yea observe, I. Unto God nothing is impossible to doe. II. For the good nothing is too much to be done. And therfore happy is the condition of the righteous in his prayers, Iames 5.16. for that is his cornucopia. First, wanteſt thou temporall good things, then pray, and they shall be given. Secondly, desireſt thou freedome from evils, then pray, for there is no time too late for God to helpe, Iames 5.16. Psal. 90.3. Thirdly, desireſt thou to bee preserved from temptation, then pray, and the grace of God shall sustaine thee, 2 Cor. 12.9. Fourthly, desireſt thou to be delivered from Satan then watch and pray. Fifthly dost thou desire increase of grace, peace of conscience, then pray for it. Sixthly, dost thou from thy heart desire that thy heart were made a temple of the Holy Ghost, then with thy heart pray unto God first to purge, and then to possesse thy soule, Prov. 21.1. Rom. 8.32.

Sect.5. §.5. And the glory.]

Our Saviour in these words shewes, that Gods Glory is to bee sought before all other things: and we must labour to doe all things to his glory; but of this wee have spoken before, vers.9. 321

Sect.6. §.6. Amen.]

Quest. What is the meaning of this Word?

Answ. It is used three manner of wayes, namely,

First, by way of asseveration; and thus it is rendred Certè, verily; Thus Christ often; Amen I say unto you, that is, verily I say unto you.

Secondly, by way of professing; and thus it is rendred, fiat, it shall be done, or I beleeve it to be true.

Thirdly, by way of praying, and thus it is rendred, fiat, so be it; and this is the meaning of Amen in this place.

VERSE. 14. For, if yee forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you. Vers. 14.

For if yee forgive men their trespasses.

Quest.1. Why is this Petition of all the rest onely repeated?

Answ.1. First, this Petition is repeated for the difficulty of the duty required; It is so hard a thing unto flesh and blood to forgive, that our Saviour doth second the Prayer with a promise of pardon from God in this verse.

Answ.2. Secondly, this Petition is repeated for the necessity of the duty enjoyned.

Quest.2. When is this duty of forgiving necessary?

Answ.1. First, it is necessary alwaies, so long as we live; because God requires it of us, and because it is pleasing unto him.

Answ.2. Secondly, it is particularly necessary in the Supper of the Lord; and that in a double regard,

I. Because then we are to bee reconciled unto God, and stand in neede, that all our sins should bee abolished, and blotted out: now if we desire that God should bee reconciled unto us, wee must be reconciled unto our brethren; and if we desire to be forgiven of God, we must forgive them.

II. Because, then wee are to bee united into one body, and to bee made one Bread: And therefore reconciliation is then principally necessary.

Quest.3. How is this brotherly union and concord to bee wrought, and continued?

Answ.1. First, let him who hath done the wrong and injury humble himselfe, and make restitution, and satisfaction for his wrong done.

Answ.2. Secondly, let those who are injured and wronged bury all injuries and wrongs in the grave of oblivion.

Answ.3. Thirdly, let them imbrace and love their brethren with their whole heart; that is,

I. The Saints, and all holy men in the Lord.

II. All men whatsoever for the Lord.

Answ.4. Fourthly, let both, and all, resolve these things for the time to come, namely

I. Not to remember what is by-past: this belongs 322 belongs principally to the injured party.

II. Not to provoke any by injuries: this belongs unto the injuring party.

III. Not to bee easily provoked unto revenge by wrong: this belongs unto the person injured.

IV. Not to esteeme of earthly things before heavenly, or spirituall: that is, not so deeply to apprehend a temporall injury, that rather then suffer it, wee will deprive our selves of a spirituall benefite and mercy: like many, who will rather forbeare comming to the Sacrament then pardon their brother: yea rather let their owne sins alone unblotted out in Gods Booke, then obliterate their brothers transgression out of theirs.

VERSE 15. But if yee forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive you your trespasses.

Vers. 15.

In this verse our Saviour shewes, that there is no salvation without remission, that is, no mercy to bee expected from God, without shewing of mercy unto our brother; or there is no hope that God will forgive us, except wee forgive him.

Quest. 1. Why will not God forgive us, except wee forgive others?

Answ. 1. First, because not to pardon our brother is an argument of a mind voide of charity.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because not to forgive those who injure us, is a worke of Satan.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because not to remit a wrong is an inherent sin which is not yet repented of: And therefore such a one God will not pardon.

Quest. 2. Will not God forgive us our trespasses, except we forgive others perfectly, without any reliques of anger, dislike, or revenge?

Answ. 1. First, we must not expect to pardon injuries perfectly; we carry a body of sin about us, and we have the reliques of sin in us, which hinders us from perfection in any duty. Rom 7, 23. Gal. 5. 17. 20.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but these two things wee must doe, and then confidently hope for pardon from God, namely

I. Resist even all inward grudges, and spleenes, and disfavours, and desires of revenge; giving place to none of them, but striving against them, and withstanding them even unto blood [d].

[d] Heb. 12. 4.

II. Endeavour to corroborate and strengthen thy heart against all such corrupt reliques of anger, dislike, and revenge, by fervent Prayer unto God.

Quest. 3. Whether must the injured person, pardon the injurie, if the injurious seeke not reconciliation at his hands?

Answ. He must: for if his brother forget, or neglect his duty, hee must not therefore neglect his owne.

Object. Our Saviour saith, If thy brother trespasse against thee, and turne againe unto thee, saying I repent, thou shalt forgive him [e] that is, if he desire mee to forgive him, and to bee reconciled unto him; wherefore I need not forgive him, without this submission and acknowledgement from him.

[e] Luk. 17. 4.

Answ. 1. First, certainly it is most true, that it is his duty to desire remission and reconciliation, who hath done the wrong.

Answ. 2. Secondly, but if he will not, yet thou must be carefull of the salvation of thy owne soule, and solution of thy debts, which thou canst never procure but by pardoning thy brother, and being reconciled unto him.

VERSE 16. Moreover when yee fast, bee not as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appeare unto men to fast: verily I say unto you, they have their reward.

Vers. 16.

When yee fast, bee not as the hypocrites.]

Quest. What benefit or commoditie doe wee gain by Fasting?

Answ. Bellarmine (lib. 2. de jejun. cap. 2.) Shewes five utilities of fasting; namely,

First, it is profitable for the taming, and subduing of the flesh, and internall corruption.

Secondly, it is profitable for the disposing and exciting of the minde unto Prayer, and the meditation of holy and heavenly things. These two wee grant

Thirdly, it is profitable unto the worship of God; For it is not the worship of God in it selfe, but onely accidentally, because it doth dispose a man unto the worship of God, and so it is pleasing unto him.

Fourthly, fasting is profitable (saith the Iesuite) for the satisfying of God for the sins wee have committed, and for the appeasing of him. This is false, as appeares thus

I. If fasting could satisfie for our sins, and appease God, then Christ died in vaine.

II. In those places of Scripture where wee read, that God turned away his anger from the persons fasting, as from Ahab, Hester, the Iewes, and Ninivites; even there this is not ascribed to their fasting, but to their praying.

Fifthly, fasting is profitable for the meriting, and obtaining of temporall blessings, and eternall mercies. For Annah by fasting obtained a Sonne. 1. Sam. 1. And Christ here promiseth that God will openly reward those who fast: but this is false, as appeares thus.

I Annah obtained her sonne by Prayer: for this child I prayed, and the Lord hath given mee my petition, which I asked of him: saith Annah unto Eli. 1. Sam. 1. 27.

II. God gives nothing of debt unto man, because in nothing God is debter unto him, as is shewed else-where.

III. Christ promiseth unto him that fasteth a free reward, but it is for prayers sake; for good things are given unto those who pray per se, but to those who fast, ex accidenti. Now it is manifest, that to him who prayes the reward is given not of merit, or debt, but of mercy, and favour; for the person praying is onely onely an humble begger asking an almes, to whom nothing is owing; and therefore much lesse is any thing owing unto him who fasts.

Vers.17. Verse. 17. But thou when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face.

Sect.1. §. 1. But when thou fastest, &c.]

Quest. What is the meaning of this verse?

Answ. I will give no other answer unto this question here, but onely that which the Father gives (August. serm.41. ad frat) Christus nos jubet jejunare, lavare faciem, caput ungere. Christ commands us to fast, to wash our face, and to anoint our heads; wherein hee doth point out three Christian duties unto us; Quid enim aliud jejunare nisi à malo declinare; faciem lavare nisi bonum facere; caput ungere nisi totum Deo tribuere; What is meant by fasting, but onely to turne and abstaine from evill; what other thing is meant by washing the face, then onely to doe good: And what can the anointing of the head signifie but this, that wee must dedicate our selves wholy unto the Lord; and ascribe all glory and honour unto him in every good work wee doe.

Sect.2. § 2. When thou fastest.]

Our Saviour here doth not take away the object, but still granteth the use thereof: that is, he doth not forbid fasting, because hypocrites abuse it, but doth notwithstanding allowe the exercise of it: from whence I might observe two things, namely,

Obser.1. First, that those things which have bene long and palpably corrupted either by abuse or superstition, may yet notwithstanding bee recalled and reduced unto a holy use. But I passe by this.

Obser.2. Secondly, that although the fasting of hypocrites be condemned, yet there is a fast which is pleasing unto God, and approved by him.

Obiect. Fasting is an outward ceremonie, and therefore ended in Christ.

Answ.1. First, the ceremonies of fasting are properly in the rites thereof; that is, fasting in it selfe was not a ceremonie, but these things in fasting were ceremoniall, to wit, sackcloath, ashes, and the rending of the garments.

Secondly, all externall and adiaphorall actions are not antiquated, & worne out of date; yea this of fasting is commanded, Levitic. 16. 29. & 23.27. & *Numb.*29.7 &. Ioel. 1.14.2.12. 15. & 1 *Corinth.*7.5. Answ.2.

Thirdly, this duty of fasting is to be undertaken for the commodity, and utility thereof; as a remedy against many evils. Answ.3.

Quest.1. What necessity is there of fasting?

Answ.1. First, we have cause to feare many temporall evils: And therefore fasting conjoined with Prayer is a good meanes for the averting of them.

Answ.2. Secondly, wee have committed many sins against our God; therefore it is equisite that we should humble our selves by fasting, as Ahab did, *King.*21. and *Dan.*9.3.

Answ.3. Thirdly, our corrupt nature is rebellious, warring against us; wherefore by fasting it had need be tamed, Rom. 7. 23 and 1 *Cor.*9.27.

Answ.4. Fourthly, naturally we are weake unto (and dull in) the performance of good duties; and therefore it is necessary that wee should quicken, and rowse up our selves by fasting; for it corroborates us unto prayer, and private meditations, and the hearing of the word, and every good worke (Acts 13.3. and 14.23.) and that by these meanes. I. By quickning and sharpning the sense. II. By taking away sleepinesse, dulnesse, and stupidity. III. By kindling, and enflaming our zeale.

Quest.2. What is fasting?

Answ.1. It is an exercise whereby wee abstaine from our accustomed foode for a time, for certaine causes, and that without superstition, Aretius, Calvine, this is an outward Fast.

Answ.2. It is a religious exercise, whereby wee deny unto our selves for a time all things that are pleasing and delightfull unto our nature; and by conjoyning thereunto mourning and humiliation, we arme our selves thereby unto the works of religion. This is an inward fast.

Quest.3. How many parts are there of a true Fast?

Answ.

- Three namely,
  - First, the foundation; which is the sense of our poverty, whether
    - Private either
      - Of our selves.
      - Of others, as David did, Ps. 35.13.
    - These are either
      - Publicke, of that whole Church wherein we live.
      - Externall, as a calamity either
        - Fallen out already, as *Iosh.*7. Iudg. 20. and 2 *Sam.*1.
        - Hanging over our heads; which is both threatned by God, Ionah 3. 5. and feared by us, Ezrah 8. 21.
      - Internall whether it bee through
        - Sorrow for some sinne or sins committed.
        - Feare of temptatiō, or inward concupiscence.
        - Weakenesse, in the performance of good duties.
  - Secondly, the outward practise thereof.
  - Thirdly, the inward truth, or life thereof.

Secondly, the next part of a true fast is Praxis externa, the outward practise thereof, wherein there are these things required; to wit:

First, an abstinence from meate, and drinke for a time?

This

This is either { Absolute, from all kindes of meate or drink for the time of the continuance of the fast: as was observed by the Jewes, Hest. 4.16. and the Ninivites, Jonah 3.5. Or,
Respective, which is either in regard of { The quality of the meat; when men abstaine not from al sorts of meates, but from all sorts of pleasant and delightfull meates.
The quantity of the meate, Multi panem in pondere, aquam in mensurâ [f]. Many ate by weight, and drunke by measure. Because In nimio pane non deest peccatum [g].

f Isidor.
g Bern. de pass. dom. 42.

Secondly, an abstinence from all naturall delights, Esa. 22.12. Amos 6.6. Mourning is the way unto repentance, 2 Cor. 7.10. and therefore in the time of fasting (which should bee a time of humiliation) we should rather goe unto the house of mourning then of mirth.

Thirdly, an abstinence from wedlocke comforts, Let the Bride goe out of her chamber, Ioel 2. 16. and 1 Cor. 7.5.

Fourthly, an abstinence from our labours, and workes, because imployments distract the mind, Numb. 29.7.

Fifthly, some adde, that hereunto is required Almes, Esa. 58.7.

Thirdly, the last part of a true fast is Interna veritas, the internal truth and life thereof; & this is the marrow of the matter, because the heart is to bee established with grace, and not with meate, Heb. 13.9. Here many things are observable, but I reduce them unto these three, I. There must be a rending of the heart. II. A turning unto God. III. A sacrifice to offer up unto God.

First, in the true internall or inward fast there must be a rending of the heart, and an humbling of the soule Ioel 2. 13. Rend your hearts, and not your garments, so Lev. 16.29. and 23.28. Here wee should seriously meditate of those things which might wound, and breake the soule, as the corruption of our whole nature; the multitude and magnitude of our by-past sinnes; the weight, and strength of our present concupiscence, the malice of Satan against us; the danger of hell fire; the many provocations of our God. Oh happy is that man who can weepe drops of blood, and can sinke himselfe (upon the day of fasting) unto the bottome of sorrow; for such God will comfort, and raise up, 1 Peter 5.6.

Secondly, in the true fast there must be a converting and turning of the heart unto God, Ioel 2.13. Rend your hearts, and turne unto the Lord. In this conversion there are three things required. I. A turning from sinne, both our old sinnes, and all sinnes. II. A hungring after a reconciliation with God, as the prodigall child did, Luke 15. III. A desire to possesse and injoy God by faith in the soule; and to be made partakers of internall joy by the Holy Spirit.

Thirdly, in the true fast, wee must provide some sacrifice to offer up unto God. Thus the Lord commands his people upon the day of fasting to afflict their soules, and to offer an offring to him, Lev. 23.27. and Numb. 29.7.

Sacrifices are now ceased, and therefore what must we offer up unto God? Quest. 1.

First, we must offer up unto God a broken and a contrite heart, for such a sacrifice pleaseth him well, Psal. 51.17. but of this something was said before. Answ. 1.

Secondly, we must offer up unto God the sacrifice of repentance; wee must sacrifice our sinnes and repent us seriously of our iniquities. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, wee must offer the sacrifice of mercy unto God; in the day of humiliation and fasting, wee must pardon those who have offended us, and bee reconciled unto those who are at oddes with us, and doe good unto those who stand in neede of our helpe, reliefe, and succour [h]. Answ. 3.

h Esa. 58. 7. Ezac. 7.9.

Fourthly, wee must offer up the calves of our lips, and sacrifice of our prayers unto God: for fasting is no fasting without prayer, Ose. 14.3. Answ. 4.

Fifthly, wee must offer up the sacrifice of praise unto God, that is, give thankes unto his name (Heb. 13.15.) both for those many mercies hee bestoweth upon us, and those many evills we are preserved from by him. Answ. 5.

Sixthly, wee must offer up our selves unto God, and that two manner of waies, namely: I. By adjudging our selves worthy of punishment both temporall and eternall: for this vilifying, and debasing of our selves doth glorifie our God. II. By addicting, and devoting our selves wholly up unto the service of the Lord, resolving henceforth to serve no other but onely him, all the daies wee have to live. Answ. 6.

What time is most fit for fasting? Quest. 5.

Wee

Answ. We fast either for

- Temporall things and that either for
  - Removing of evils whether
    - Publike or Private: Here there is need of the acknowledgment of our deserts, of our humiliation, of the deprecating of the punishment, and the taking away of the evill which is feared and deserved.
  - Procuring of good things, as the Church did, Act. 13. 3. and 14. 23. and our Church now doth at the ordination of Ministers.
- Spirituall things, and that either for
  - The quickning of our prayers, and that if we be sensible of
    - Some present temptation, or lust, or concupiscence, and desire that it may be mortified and subdued.
    - The absence of Christ, whom wee desire should returne as the Apostles desired to have him awaked, Matth. 8. 25.
  - Private meditations, & that whether they be for things
    - By past, as for
      - The sinnes of our youth.
      - The losse of our time.
      - The love of Christ towards us.
      - The bitternesse of his death and passion, &c.
    - Present, as namely the examination of our lives, sinnes, occasions unto evill, repentance, faith, and the like.
  - Holy duties, as the hearing of the Word, the receiving of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, and the bringing of our infants to the Sacrament of Baptisme: Before all which duties, fasting conjoyned with repentance and prayer is very profitable.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Anoint thy head, and wash thy face.

Quest. 1 What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, some understand them Tropologically namely:

I. By head, some understand Christ, and by anointing, Almes: Anoint thy head, that is, doe good unto thy Neighbour; for love is like unto ointment, Psal. 133. thus Chrysost. (hom. 9. fer. 4. Ciner. tom. 2.) Unge caput, id est Christum, &c. Anoint thy head, that is, Christ with the oyle of mercy and charitie, as Mary did, Mat. 26. 7. Chrys. imperf. s..

II. Some take the head for the sense, reason, and understanding, because that is the head of the soule; and by the anointing they understand joyfulnesse and cheerefulnesse; Anoint thy head, Ut latitiam spiritus sancti intus habeamus, that within in thy soule thou maist have the joy of the Holy Ghost, Chrysost. imperf. and Hilary s. and Gualt. s..

III. Some take face for conscience, and washing for cleansing; wash thy face, that is, purge and cleanse thy heart. August. s. and Hilarie. s..

IV. Some by the face, understand the conversation; which must be washed and cleansed from all pollutions whatsoever, Philippians 2. 15.

V. Some by the face understand both these; Wash thy face, that is, both thy body and soule from all filthinesse of sinne. Chrysostome imperf.

Secondly, some understand these words literally, that is, strictly according to the letter, to wit, of a generall command of anointing the head in fasting: this with an unanimous consent is confuted and rejected by Hierome, Chrysostom, Augustine, and Hilary, and that for these reasons: Answ. 2.

I. Because this was never used either by any converted Jewes or Christians.

II. Because thus they should make a greater ostentation of their fasting then the Pharisees did.

Thirdly, some expound these words literally, but not so strictly according to the Letter, as the former did; to wit, onely respectively according to the manner of the Gentiles; and this interpretation is two-fold, namely, Answ. 3.

I. Because anointing was accustomed in the times of jollitie and mirth; therefore wee must be so farre from shewing any heavinesse or sadnesse in our countenance, that wee must rather put on a shew of joy and mirth; thus Hilary sup. But Calvin refutes this, because this were to fall into the contrary dissimulation.

II. Those signes of cheerfulnesse which thou shewest at other times ordinarily in thy countenance, refuse them not; And this is principally and generally taken to be the meaning of this place, and to this I assent, because the inhabitants of the East did use to anoint themselves.

What use was there of Oyle amongst the Oriental, or people of the East?

Answ. Typicall, which was two-fold, { Sacramentall, thus the Kings and Priests were annointed. / Extraordinary, as Iam. 5. of which in his proper place.

We read of a double use, namely, Ordinary, which was either for {
1. Ornament, thus (almost) every day they did anoint themselves, except it were upon the dayes of fasting and humiliation. Reade Ruth 3. 3. and 2 Sam. 14. 2.
2. Mirth and rejoycing, as Psal. 45. 7. this differeth not much from the former, as appeares by 2 Sam. 12. 20.
3. Reverence, Psal. 23. 5. thou annointest my head (that is, causest me to bee had in reverence and honour) even in the presence of mine enemies: thus Christs feet was annointed, Luke 7. 46. and his head, John 12. 3. in token of reverence.
4. Sepulture and buriall; thus Christ saith, that Mary powred ointment upon him, for his buriall.
5. Agility, thus their Champions were anointed to make them more quicke, nimble, and agile.

How may this anoynting of the head with oyle and washing of the face, be applyed profitably to the present duty of fasting?

By an Analogie wee may collect from hence an Allegoricall description of a true fast.

For the better understanding, and cleerer confirming of this, observe these two things:

Obser. 1. First, true fasts ought to be performed and celebrated with the oyle of gladnesse, that is, spirituall joy, Rom. 12. 12. and 14. 17. Philipp. 4. 4. Remembring, that it is the worke of the Lord, and therefore it must be done cheerefully; yea it is a spirituall worke, and therefore it must bee performed in spirit and truth, that is, with the alacrity of the soule: More particularly;

1. Wee must labour to performe our fasts with cheerfulnesse; remembring these two things,

First, how necessary it is to fast; our sinnes are many, our estate is perillous, our enemies are craftie, yea our pleasure doth often seduce, and lead us aside: And therefore very requisite it is, that we should by abstinence strengthen our selves.

Obser. 2. Secondly, how profitable it is to performe this worke with readinesse and cheerefulnesse of heart; for it shall be rewarded, verse 18.

2. Wee must labour to sanctifie our fasts in the Spirit, Rom. 5. 5. Remembring that as we doe the worke of the Lord, so we shall be assisted in our worke by the Lord.

Secondly, our Fasts ought to be pure, and that both

I. In conversation, lest otherwise wee should be a disgrace and dishonour unto Religion.

II. In conscience (Esa. 1. 16. and 52. 11. and 1 Thess. 4. 3. &c.) because no uncleane thing shall come unto God, Ephes. 5. 5. Act. 10. 14.

Quest. 4. How may wee know, whether our Fasts are sanctified unto the Lord, or when wee fast, whether we fast unto him?

By this, if thou washest thy face in thy fast; that is, if thou cleansest and urgest thy conscience from sinne? Answ.

Quest. 5. This is Ignotum per ignotius, or at least per æque ignotum; therefore how may we know, whether we be washed and purified from our sinnes, or not?

Answ. This may be knowne by the examination of these particulars; viz.

First, hast thou inquired out all thy sinnes, both new and old, both of omission and commission, both substantiall and circumstantiall, both of thought, word, and deed; and that for this end, that thou maist mourne for them, and labour to expell them?

Secondly, hast thou put off thy sinnes, tearing them from thee, as Hercules did the shirt, sent him by Dejanira; casting them from thee with a full purpose of heart never to put them on, or to turne unto them againe?

Thirdly, hast thou learnt the way of sinne, that is, all the turnings, and windings, and movings, and secret passages, and occasions of iniquitie, Esa. 5. 18.

Fourthly, hast thou resolved to fast, and to abstaine from all sinne as long as thou livest?

Fifthly, hast thou by prayer washed thy owne soule, both with the teares of contrition, and the teares of supplication, imploring the Throne of mercy for spirituall strength against sinne?

Sixthly, hath Christ answered thee, within speaking peace unto thy heart by faith? Certainly if these things be in us and abound, we may be certainly assured, that our fasting shall be rewarded.

Sect. 1. Quæst. 1.

§. 1. Lay not up for your selves, &c.] Why doth our Saviour adde this exhortation?

Answ. 1. First, because the Pharisees being rich, their abundance might be a stumbling stone unto the Apostles: And therefore Christ doth arme them against it; Teaching them, that it must not offend the godly, to see the ungodly rich, and great in the world (Psal. 37. and 73.) for the time will come, when there will be a change, the wicked being miserable, and the righteous happy.

Observ.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because the love of riches becomes not the Apostles of Christ; For

I. How can they be enemies unto the world, if their heart be in the world?

II. How can they be faithfull unto God, if they serve the world and hate God?

III. How can they strive and contend for heaven except their hearts and affections be there?

IV. How can they but seeke their owne lucre and gaine in all things, if their hearts bee on the earth?

V. How can they dissuade others from the love of the world, if themselves be guiltie thereof?

VI. How could or would they be beleeved if they should dissuade others, from the treasuring up of riches, if themselves were given hereunto?

VII. How unfit was it for those times of persecution and trouble, to lay up treasures?

And thus for these causes our Saviour gives this exhortation unto the Apostles.

Quæst. 2. Why doth not our Saviour ad, lay not up treasure for your selves as the Hypocrites doe, as he did fore, both in prayer, almes, and fasting?

Answ. 1. First, because not onely hypocrites, but all others (in a manner) were guilty of this. Qualis. s.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because those who were esteemed most wise in the world were given too much to the love thereof; And therefore our Saviour forbids it in generall.

Quæst. 3. Whom doth our Saviour here speake unto?

Answ. Not onely unto his Apostles, but also to those who were rich, and desired to be rich: because he neither would have them to gather treasures, nor to set their hearts upon them, whom they have laid up.

Quæst. 4. What doth our Saviour prohibit here, when he saith, lay not up for your selves treasure?

Answ. Hee doth not forbid labour, and honest callings, whereby necessary things may bee acquired; without the detriment and hurt of our neighbour (for this is commanded Ephes. 4. 28. and 2 Thes. 3. 11, 12.) but the love of temporall things (as follows by and by) which is conjoyned with the neglect of divine worship; and a diffidency or distrust of the providence of God.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Lay not up treasures;]

Quæst. 1. Why doth our Saviour prohibit this?

Answ. 1. First, because he who is addicted unto earthly things is an Idolater; not beleeving that God is the Creator of heaven and earth, and their Lord before whom they must have no other Gods.

328 Secondly, because hee who is addicted unto the world doth deny the providence of God, Answ. 2. yea God himselfe.

It is worthy observation, how our Saviour doth confirm the providence of God even by the booke of nature, as an Antidote against this love of the world: and that by these Arguments.

Argu. 1. First, we should leave the care of providing foode and raiment for us, unto him, who hath given both body and soule unto us, verse 25. The Argument plainely is this: The soule (that is, the life) is much more excellent then meat; And the body is much more excellent then cloathing; Therefore hee who gave the greater and more excellent things unto us without our intreatie; will much more give the lesse worthy, if we pray unto him.

Hereunto we might adde these reasons.

He who hath not spared to give his Sonne for us (Rom. 8. 32.) will not deny us inferiour blessings.

Hee who hath given us bread from heaven, (John 6.) will give us earthly foode.

He who hath given Christ to bee a garment unto the soule (Rom. 13. 11. 12.) will apparell the body.

Argu. 2. Secondly, he who feedes the birds is God, yea thy Father; and therefore he will not deny meat unto thee.

The Master of the family, who gives meate to his horse, and oxen, and sheepe, will certainely not withhold it from his children. Now if men who are wicked know, how to give good things unto their children; how much more then our heavenly Father, Luke 11.

Argu. 3. Thirdly, hee who cloathes the lillyes, will much more have a care of cloathing us.

Thirdly, because the Gentiles love and labour
Answ. 3. for these earthly things: now we should be better then they.

Doth our Saviour forbid us to lay up temporall riches.
Quest. 2.

Answ. Not absolutly, but respectively; but of this by and by, verse 24.

What is principally prohibited in this verse?
Quest. 3.

Answ. The love of riches, or the setting of our hearts upon them.

Riches are the blessings of God, why therefore may we not love them?
Quest. 4.

Ans. 1. First, because it is undecent for an heire of heaven, to be so base minded, as to mind, or love earthly things: It is a disgrace for a man to delight in childish vanities and toyes.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because riches hurt us, and bring many cares along with them; of this verse 24.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because riches tempt unto many evills, 1 Tim. 6. 10. For from hence come I. contentions and suites, II. Injuries and wrongs, III. hard-heartednesse towards the poore, IV. fraud, deceit, false weights, and measures, lying and dissembling, V. supplanting of others, VI. false witnesse, perjury, and bribes in judgement, VII. theft and sacriledge, VII. oppression of Orphans, & making ship-wrack of a good conscience, VIII. Usury and extortion IX. murder, X. treasons and treacheries XI. the denyall of the faith and Apostacy. All these effects and more the love of riches hath produced. And therefore let us not so love riches, as that either, I. wee unsatiably desire them, when wee want them. Or II. Rejoyce in the fruition of them when wee have them. Or III. Mourne and greeve for their losse, when wee are deprived of them.

§. 3. On earth.] Sect. 3.

Our Saviour here by an Antithesis doth shew, that the love and affection of earthly things is unbeseeming a Christian.

Why may not the righteous love earthly things? Quest.

Answ. 1. First, because they are most fit for brute beasts to affect, who are meerely mortall, and led onely by sensuall appetite.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because wee must not remaine on earth alwaies; and therefore our affections should not be here.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because wee have a better country, which is above; & therfore our affections should not be set upon those things which are below, but we should 1. Mortifie all earthly, and carnall affections, Col. 3. 5. 2. Hunger after Christ, who farre exceedes all worldly treasures and delights. 3. labour for the certainty of salvation, Luke 10. 20. and peace of conscience, Phil. 4. 7.

§. 4. Where the moth and rust doth corrupt.] Sect. 4.

What is the meaning of these words? Quest. 1.

Answ. 1. First, the phrase here used is applyed to our vulgar and common possessions, and the corruption thereof. For 1. Moth is applyed to garments. 2. Rust, to vessels. 3. Theeves to both.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the meaning is, that all things here are subjected to vanity and corruption.

Observ. Christ doth not here name Lyons, beares, ship-wracke, fire and the like but ordinary and weake things, to teach us: That the smallest and most usuall evils are instruments of Gods correction: For 1. He can convert and turne all things, yea even evill things unto good: 2. He can make use of sathan well; and therefore whatsoever evill doth afflict us is but the Lords rod. And therefore we should see Gods hand in all evils.

Quest. 2. Wee may see the hand of God in the Moth, and rust, but how in the theefe, whose deede is wicked, yea forbidden by God positively in his law, Thou shalt not steale?

Answ. God permits theeves either 1. for thy covetousnesse and hard-heartednesse. Or 2. for the correction of the negligence of the commonwealth; because sinne is not punished. Or 3. for some other sinne, because it is usuall with God to punish one sinne with another.

Obiect. If it be thus, then theeves are Gods servants.

Answ. Certainely they are, as Assur was the rod of his anger; and Nebuchadnezzar an instrument to punish the Jewes: theeves are Gods servants as the Caldæi, and Sabæus, and sathan himselfe was, Job 1. But yet these must know that they are indeede the slaves of sathan, and that God will at length cast them into the fire.

Quest. 3. What may we learne from hence?

Answ. The Omnipotencie and infinite power of God, who can punish us by the least creatures: Hee did did not oppresse Egypt with Lyons, but with Grashoppers, and Frogges, and Flies, and the like: And thus often the least creatures have been great enough to take away the life of man. As for example. First, we may see this in Animate creatures; 1. Popilius, Hatto, and divers others were slaine by rats and mice. 2. Aristides dyed through the bite of a weasell. 3. Messalinus, was killed with Horseleeches. 4. Hermonactes was stung to death with Bees. 5. Pope Adrian was choaked with a flye. 6. Cassander was eaten with lice. 7. Antiochus, and Herod with wormes.

Secondly, we may see the truth of this in Inanimate things. 1. Alexander Elens the Philosopher died with a reede. 2. Drusus, the sonne of Claudius Cæsar was choaked with a peare. 3. Terpandrus with a fig. 4. Sophocles, with the stone of a grape. 5. Tarquinius Priscus with a fish-bone. 6. Our Earle Goodwin with a crumme of bread. 7. Fabius with a haire in milke. 8. Campson Sultane of Egypt, was choaked with dust.

Thus we may reade as in a Map, Gods Omnipotency, and Mans Impotency: and learne to feare him, who is able to arme the least and weakest of his creatures, and make it strong enough to cope with, and conquer sinfull man.

VERS. 20. But lay up for your selves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor where theeves breake through, and steale.

Vers. 20.

§. 1. Lay up for your selves treasures in heaven.]

Sect. 1. Quest. 1. How doth this verse agree with Colos. 1.5. For there the Apostle saith that life and glory is laid up (to wit by God) in heaven: but here our Saviour biddeth us to lay up treasure for our selves in heaven; where by treasure is meant eternall glory?

Answ. We must here distinguish betweene these two things, namely, 1. The essence and substance of glory. 2. The degree and measure of glory.

First, there is the essence and substance of glory, which consists in the fruition of the presence of God, in the fellowshippe and society with God the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost, and with the Angels and Saints: now this the Apostle speakes of Colos. 1.5. because this is laid up for true beleevers.

Secondly, there is the degree and measure of glory, which may be laid up, and may be increased by beleevers: For they by their good workes of faith may treasure up a greater measure, & degree of glory. True it is, that a greater reward shall not be given them in heaven for the merit of their workes, but of the meere mercy of God, who in the day of retribution will crowne his own gifts, not our merits: and where he findes a greater measure of gifts; and a greater measure of the workes of faith, there he will in mercy bestow a greater measure of glory, according to that of the Apostle, He that soweth sparingly, shall reape sparingly, and hee that soweth liberally, shall reape liberally[l]. And againe, as one starre differeth in brightnesse from another, so shall it bee in the resurrection[m]. Whence it appeares that there shall be a greater measure of glory in one Saint then in another, according to the measure of the workes of faith. Now this our Saviour speakes off in this place: lay up treasures for your selves in heaven, that is, treasure for your selves, a measure of glory; and adde one measure to another: as men in heaping and hoording up riches, adde one shilling and one pound unto another.

[l] 2 Cor. 9. 6.

[m] 1 Cor. 15.41.

§. 2. Lay up treasure in heaven, where neither moth, nor rust, &c.] Sect. 2.

Quest. 1. What is the principall scope of our Saviour in this verse?

Answ. His maine drift, I conceive, is to shew an Antithesis or opposition betweene terrestriall, and celestiall treasures.

Quest. 2. Wherein and how doe they differ?

Answ. 1. First in temporall things the successe, and event is uncertaine: yea often the end doth not answer the expectation, nor the crop the paines, but a man utterly loseth his labour: But pietie hath certaine Promises of God, and heavenly glory in the life to come. And therefore the Lord being true, the event and successe of heavenly treasures is certaine.

Answ. 2. Secondly, In earthly things a man often takes much paines, and great labour for little profit, & benefit: But in heavenly things the least thing, even a cup of cold water shall have a plentifull reward, Mat. 10.42. and our least sufferings shall be crowned with exceeding glory, Rom. 8.18.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, earthly things are but temporary, transitory and corruptible, & are sometimes spent & & exhausted by use, sometimes corrupted or defaced, either with the moth, or rust, or age, yea though they be retained entire, and reserved safe, yet they cannot make the possessors constantly & solidly happie and blessed. But heavenly treasure our Saviour calls ἀνέκλειπτον, Luke 12.33. a treasure which faileth not; because neither by time, use, or any way they can either bee diminished, defaced, corrupted, or made worse; but are durable, perpetuall, eternall, yea a treasure which can never be exhausted, but will remaine with, and make eternally happie the possessor thereof.

Vers. 22. 23.

VERS. 22. 23. The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light. But if thine eye bee evill, thy whole body shall be full of darkenesse. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkenesse, how great is that darkenesse.

§. 1. The light of the body is the eye, &c.] Sect. 1.

Argu. The Papists say, that in men there is (Liberum Arbitrium & a malo & ad bonum) a freedome of will, by which we may both doe good, and abstaine frō evill: Amongst many other arguments our men urge this verse, arguing hence from the corruption of the understanding.

In man Liberum arbitrium proceedes from the understanding and will, which are faculties of the humane soule: And therefore it is necessary that Free-will (Liberum Arbitrium) should be such as the the understanding and will is: The Argument is drawne from the understanding which is now corrupted, in this manner.

330 If the understanding of man be evill, then mans Free-will is not good: If Free-will be not good, then neither is it free from evill. But the former is true, therefore also the latter.

The consequence is plaine of it selfe, but more evidently appeares from this verse; The light of the body is the eye, &c. Which place all Interpreters acknowledge to be metaphoricall, drawne from the light of the body unto the light of the minde; see Chrysostome, Iansenius, and Lucas Brugensis. sup.

The Antecedent (namely, that the understanding in all men naturally is corrupted, vitiated, depraved, and obscured) is thus confirmed from these places, to wit. I. From verse 23. If thine eye be evill, &c. Now that the eye is evill appeares from Luke 4. 18. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, and therefore hath the Lord sent mee to preach the recovering of sight to the blind: and therfore it appeares that all men without Christ are blinde, as Cajetane well observes upon those words. II. From Mat. 4. 16. The people who sate in darkenesse saw a great light: where we see the state and condition the Galileans were in when Christ came to dwell amongst them, so Luke 1. 79. III. Hence salvation in and by Christ is described to be a freedome from darkenesse: ye are called, that you might shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkenesse, into his marvellous light, Col. 1. 13. Thus without Christ all men are in darkenesse. IV. Out of Christ all men are darkenesse, Ephes. 5. 8, ye were darkenesse, &c. which darkenesse was wrought in us by Sathan, 2 Cor. 4. 4.

If the Reader desire to see a further, fuller, and more ample prosecution of this Argument, I referre him to Chamierus, De libero Arbit. lib. 4. cap. 3 Tom. 3. pag. 88.

Sect. 2. §. 2. If thy eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.]

Object. The Papists hold that the workes of the righteous be perfect, and Bellarmine (De justific. lib. 6. cap. 15.) hopes to prove it from this verse, arguing thus.

If thy eye be single, thy whole body shall be light; And Luke 11. 36. (for I joyne them as hee doth both together) If thy whole body bee full of light, having no part darke, the whole shall be full of light, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

In these places is described a worke perfectly good, both substantially, intentionally, and circumstantially, both in regard of the matter, intention, and all the other circumstances; For Oculus simplex, the single eye, is a good intention; and Corpus Lucidum, the light body, is the good worke. Now such a worke our Saviour pronounceth to bee full of light, having no part darke.

But if such a worke bee a mortall sinne of his owne nature, as the Lutherans say, then it should be all darke. For as an evill intention, so any other fault or defect makes a worke evill, although it be in his owne nature and kinde good.

Wherefore some certaine workes of the regenerate are so good, that they are exempted and freed from all sinne, defect, fault, and obliquity whatsoever.

First, Bellarmine concludes (extra thesin) that which is not in controversie; for wee doe not dispute, whether the good workes of the regenerate be sinne in their owne nature (for this none of us doe say) and therefore he falsely ascribes this to the Lutherans) but whether they be sinne by accident or not, that is, through the corruption of the workeman: And this indeed we say, that by reason of the contagion of our nature, there alwaies adheres something to our best workes which of its owne nature is evill, vitious, and contrary to the law of God; and consequently in the rigour & severity of Gods judgement is mortall and deadly. But we acknowledge, that the good workes of the regenerate in their owne nature (that is, as they proceed from the grace of God within us, and his Spirit assisting us) they are good, holy, and pleasing unto God. Answ. 1

Secondly, his consequence is naught: Christ describes a worke perfectly, and in every respect good; Therefore the workes of the regenerate are such; is a grosse, and absurd conclusion. We must not from hypotheticall and conditionall propositions collect categoricall and absolute conclusions, for that is done without booke. If thy eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light; this is true, but this proves not that the eye is so, or if that were granted, no more would follow from hence, then this that all those actions which proceede onely from the mind were pure; for the cleater taking up of this answer, I lay downe these Propositions. Answ. 2.

First, in the law of God, the Lord doth both prescribe, and describe workes perfectly good: yea, it is contrary to the nature of the law to admit of imperfection, the law injoynes us to love the Lord with all our heart, with all our soule, and with all our strength: in which words is described a worke perfectly good, and so our Saviour in the places objected, may give us an Idea of a worke full of light having no part darke in it. Propos. 1

Secondly, although the law perscribeth and describeth workes perfectly good, yet it followeth not hence, that any workes of the righteous are such. When it is said that Philosophy is Amor sapientiæ, a love of wisedome, the perfect nature thereof is described: But we must not hence presently conclude that the Philosophy of Socrates, or Plato, or Aristotle was perfect: Thus Christ saith, not that any man hath a single eye, or a body all light, but speakes hypothetice, si fuerit, If there be a single eye. Propos. 2

Thirdly, by the eye is meant the mind, which is enlightned and healed by the grace of the holy Ghost. Propos. 3

Fourthly, although we should grant that the mind were perfectly enlightned, and that all the actions of such a one were light, in as much as they proceed from the grace of regeneration; yet to those actions cleaves something which doth not proceed from this regenerate minde, but from the corrupt and unregenerate flesh; for that hath alwayes in it some darkenesse and vitiousnesse, Propos. 4 ousnesse, as Saint Paul proves plainly, Rom. 7. And therefore though the workes of the regenerate should proceed from a perfectly pure mind, yet we might not proclaime them perfectly pure and good, because they are tainted by the body, and polluted by the unregenerate part of man.

Prop. 5. Fifthly, the illumination, and purgation of the mind is here only imperfect and inchoate, as appeares by these places, We know in part, and wee prophecie in part, 1 Cor. 13. 9. and Rom. 12. 2. and Ephes. 4. 23. The Apostle exhorts those who are regenerate, to labour to be more and more renewed in the spirit of their minds.

Prop. 6. Sixthly, notwithstanding these reliques of darknesse and corruption, the regenerate are called by the Lord, A parte meliori, from their better part, light, now ye are light in the Lord, Ephes. 5. 8. And their workes pure, as followes by and by.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the single eye signifies not perfection, but integrity and singlenesse of heart, without guile or dissimulation: Thus Augustine acutely distinguisheth betweene Rectum corde, & mundum corde; right in heart, and cleane in heart: Rectus corde est is recto cursu, id est, recta fide atque intentione pervenire potest, ubi habitat mundus corde. Hee is right in heart which endeavoureth that with a right course, that is, with a right faith, and intention hee may at length come thither, where dwelleth the cleane in heart[m]. Thus in both places objected, by a single eye, wee must understand a minde enlightned and purged by the Holy Spirit, and by a light body, a life and conversation shining in righteousnesse and holinesse. For if the eye be cleare and quicke sighted, a man walkes on cheerefully, and readily in the right way; if the eye be blind or vitiated, a man stumbles, and falls, and erres: And so if the mind bee enlightened and purged, the child of God walkes on in the right way of the Commandements of the Lord; but if it bee obscured and blinded, then a man walkes in the way of darknesse and sinne.

[m] August. de perfect. justit. contr. Celestin.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Bellarmine erres in saying that a single eye is a good intention: For by the single eye is not meant the intention (neither is it to be restrained thereunto) but the pure light of the minde: for a good intention doth not suffice for the producing of a worke full of light, as appeares by Saint Paul, who wanted not a good intention when hee persecuted the Church and members of Christ and yet the work was a work of darknesse because it did not flow from a minde enlightned and purged.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, the Jesuites inference is erroneous, that any fault or defect going along with a good worke, makes the worke wholly darke and wicked; for it followes no more then this, some ignorance or ignorance in something may be found in Socrates or Aristotle; and therefore they are altogether ignorant.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, hee doth not rightly conjoyne an evill intention, and any other obliquity, nor truly affirme that there is the same reason in both, for the vitiating and corrupting of an action which is good in its owne nature and kinde; for the malice or evilnesse of an action principally depends upon the will, and therefore an evill intention doth argue the action to be crooked and depraved: But any other obliquity or failing which sprouts from the corruption of our nature, doth not argue voluntary malice, and consequently doth not vitiate a moral action, which is good in its owne nature: Although if wee speake strictly, our best actions may bee called bad for their imperfections and defects, which cleave unto them. 331

Answ. 7. Seventhly, the light having no darknesse (mentioned by Saint Luke) is faith, which wholly inlightneth the body; as Christ saith, He that is washed is cleane every whit (John 13. 10.) But this maketh not for the perfection of workes.

Answ. 8. Eightly, yet the light of faith, though considered in it selfe, it hath no darknesse; yet in the sight of God, and conferred with his light, is full of darknesse: as Hierome well noteth upon those words, God is light, and in him is no darknesse[n]. Hee sheweth that all other lights are obscured with some blemishes.

[n] 1 Ioh. 1. 5.

Answ. 9. Ninthly, Saint Luke saith, that the light body hath no darke part in it, because in every worke it followes the light, and walkes by the direction thereof; and yet there may bee some darknesse mixed with this light. The Moone is all enlightned at full Moone, and yet even then some darkish and duskish clouds appeare in her. And therfore al these things considered we dare not subscribe to the Cardinal, who saith that the good workes of the regenerate are perfect.

I find this present Objection handled by B. Davenant, de justitia actuali; Cap. 26 pag 438, 439. By D. Willet, Synops. of good workes, part. 3. qu. 2. fol. 127. By Chamier de oper. imperf. lib. 11. Cap. 22. §. 10. fol. 361. Tom. 3. and Amesius Bellar. enerv. tom. 4. pag. 197. From all which I have borrowed something.

Sect. 3. §. 3. If the light that is in the body be darknesse, how great is that darknesse.]

These words are alleadged by M^r. Wemse in the last part of his exercitations, to prove that the originall Text of Scripture is not corrupted (pag. 117.) The Scriptures are the light of the Church, and if the Originall Text were corrupted, how great were the darknesse of the body.

Conjuncta } instrumentis gratiæ } Remota.

Remota instrumentis gratiæ, are the preachers, and their writings, and they may be corrupted.

Conjuncta instrumentis gratiæ, are the Prophetes and Apostles, and their writings; these the Lord kept from errour and corruption for the good of his Church.

Vers. 24. VERS. 24. No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other, or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other, ye cannot serve God and Mammon.

Sect. 1. §. 1. No man can serve two masters.]

This

332 This verse containes a compleate Categorical syllogisme.

No man can serve two Masters.

But God and Mammon are two Masters.

Therefore neither ye nor any can serve God and Mammon.

The Minor proposition, that God and Mammon are two contrary Masters, our Master takes as granted; and proves the Major, ab effectis, from the effects of love, hatred, adhesion, and neglect: If he love the one, he must hate the other, if he hold to the one he must neglect the other.

No man can serve two masters.

1. Distinguish betweene { The Persons } For the husband and the wife make but one Master; two Consuls are but one Magistrate; and two partners are but one Commander. / The Rule. }

2. Distinguish betweene { Helpe and Service } Namely betweene { An Action / The fundamentall reason of the action. }

For he who serves thee may helpe thy friend, yea in helping thy friend serves thee, because it is by thy command. For thus farre onely a mans servant may serve another, viz.

First not in all things, but onely when his Masters occasions will permit.

Secondly, not when hee will of himselfe, but onely with the love and leave of his Master.

And therefore (these things premised) no man can serve God and Mammon; For I. They two doe not make one Master, or Governour; but are diametrall opposites. II. They two are not two friends, but enemies, as appeares by the hatred of Sathan against all the Saints and children of God, and the Dragons persecuting of the woman. III. Their employments will never permit their servants to serve one another; that is, the Lord requires, that we should serve him wholy, and his workes we can never fully performe as long as we live: and therefore he will never permit his servants to serve Mammon, because he is his enemie: his worke and employment will never permit that we should serve another at any time, because that continually filles our hands, and when wee take leave to worke any other worke, we wholy neglect our Masters worke.

Observ. Our Saviour then hereby teacheth us, That no man serveth God truely, but he who serveth him onely. Reade 1 Sam. 7. 3. and Deut. 6. 13. 14. and Mat. 4. 10. and 1 Cor. 10 21.

Quest. 1. Why must wee serve God onely, and the world not at all?

Answ. 1. First, because the world is contrary unto God; yea so contrary that hee who serves the world cannot serve God (in this verse) hee who loves the world, cannot love God, 1 Iohn 2. 16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, as children acknowledge but one Father, and Subiects one King, so servants must acknowledge but one Master, and serve him only.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, God is a jealous God, and will not divide his honour, Exod. 20. 5. Nahum. 1. 2. The Romans would not admitt of the God of the Hebrewes, because he would either be served alone, or he would not bee served at all; and this is the true nature of God, for he will not part stakes with any, but will either have all the heart, or none of the heart.

Obiect. Many men serve two partners, many men serve two persons, a husband and a wife, many men serve two Consuls, yea two Friends: How therefore is this true, No man can serve two Masters?

Answ. 1. First, some expound this of opposite and contrary Masters, that a man cannot serve two enemies: and this is true in the present case, for God and Mammon are opposites and enemies.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the Proposition seemes universally true, understanding it with a double distinction viz.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because except we serve God onely, we cannot please him, and by devoting of our selves wholy unto him we become acceptable, Rom. 12. 12. and 1 Thes. 4. 1. Wee are obliged unto the service of God, as a wife is unto her husband, to wit, both affirmatively and Negatively; she must love her husband, and she must prostitute her selfe to none, besides her husband; so we must serve the Lord, and none else at all besides him.

Quest. 2. May we not serve the King?

Answ. Yes, but in the Lord, Rom. 13. 1. The Cantabrians answered Augustus, that their houses, lands, possessions, and riches were his, but themselves belonged unto none but unto the Gods, and themselves. So we must remember that we are the servants of the Lord, and may in him and for him serve his substitutes, but wee must serve none against him.

Quest. 3. Whether may wee injoy good temporall blessings or not?

Answ. 1. First, we may enjoy them in the Lord, in as much as they were given by him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, we may enjoy them, so farre forth as they accord and may stand with his service, and obedience.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, we may enjoy them, in so much as they may promote and advance his glory.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, we may enjoy them, giving thanks unto God for them, 1 Tim. 4. 4.

Quest. 4. Wherein doth the service of God consist?

Answ. In these three things, namely,

First, in the obedience of his law, statutes, and ordinances; we must serve him by doing his will.

Secondly, in subjection unto him; wee must confesse and acknowledge in all humilitie, that we are obliged to performe whatsoever hee requires of us, being none of our owne.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, in a holy profession of his name before men, although it bee with danger, as the three children did, Dan. 6. 10.

Quest. 5. It is hard for us to devote our selves wholy unto the Lord, and his service; and therefore by what spurre may we be quickned, or by what argument may we be moved hereunto?

Answ. By an Argument drawne ab absurdo, because it is grossely absurde to serve any other: for the confirmation, and amplification hereof observe, That he who serveth any other besides the Lord must doe it for some of these causes, al which are absurd.

Namely, either because

First, hee hath more warrant to serve another, then to serve the Lord; this is absurd, for we are commanded to serve him only, Mat. 4. 10. from Deut. 6. 13.

Secondly, others have as much interest in us as the Lord hath; this is absurd, because he is our Lord, both in regard of our creation, redemption, and gubernation.

Thirdly, those whom we serve are better and more worthy in themselves to be served then the Lord is; this is absurd, because God is Optimus Maximus.

Forthly, others are better in regard of our selves; that is, it is more profitable for us to serve others thē to serve the Lord; this is absurd, for he is Optimus the best of all in regard of us; yea our chiefest good & happinesse; & therfore we should doe as Cato advised the Romans in the contention betweene Cæsar and Pompey, serve the best.

Fifthly, we love others more then wee love the Lord; this is a shame, for we should love him above all, as followes afterwards.

Sixthly, those whom we serve love us more then the Lord doth; this is false, for he is called φιλάνθρωπος, the lover of mankind, yea he hath not Titulum finere, for never any shewed that love unto others, wch he shewed unto mankind in giving his only begotten Sonne unto death for them when they were enemies, Rom. 5. 7. 8.

Seventhly, others deserve to be served better then the Lord doth; this is absurd: for wee have from the Lord both our bodies and soules, both our being and well being.

Eighthly, the precepts and lawes of others are more just, and equall; this is false, for all his commandements are holy, and just, and good, Rom. 7. 12. yea his yoake is easie, Mat. 11. 30. 333

Ninthly, others are to bee feared more then God: A man is most carefull to serve him whom he is most fearefull to offend; now none is to be feared so much as the Lord, for others onely are able to harme the body, but he can cast both body and soule into eternall destruction, Mat. 10. 28. wherefore he is to be served in feare, Psalme 2. 11.

I conclude this with a history: Signior Pyrho di Stipiciano being at the defence of Carignan in Piemont, valiantly sustained the siege against Mons. d'Augnian, and all the French Camp; and (after that the Marquise of Vasto was discomfited at Cerisole, where the Emperours part lost the battell) he before he would yeeld, although greatly destitute of victuals, held them out forty dayes, and at the length, having no hope of succour he was constrained to yeeld; and so departing from Carignan, went (according to the oath he had taken) unto the King of France, who greatly honoring his vertue, albeit he was his enemie, offered him great preferment if he would serve him: But Signior Pyrhus rendring thankes to his Majestie, refused all offers made. Afterwards upon this he had figured for his Impresse the horse of Iulius Cæsar, who would never suffer any other rider: His Motto was, Soli Cæsari, faithfull onely to the Emperour. Thus let us doe, neither through feare, or for riches, pleasure, honour, preferment and the like, serving any other; but with all fidelity and constancy serve the Lord all the dayes of our life.

§. 2. He must hate the one:] Sect. 2. Obser.

Our Saviour in this place shewes that the love of the world doth induce us unto the hatred of God.

Why doth the love of the world make us to hate God?

First, because the love of riches leades us unto the worship of Sathan: hence the devill tempts Christ to worship him, by offering the world unto him, Mat. 4. 9. yea hence covetousnesse is called Idolatry, Eph. 5. 5. and Col. 3. 5. Answ. 1.

Secondly, because there is a contrarietie of nature betwixt God and the world: love and hatred are opposite, so is God and the world. Answ. 2.

The Lord is pure, just, immoveable, eternall, and good:

The world is polluted, unjust, mutable, temporall, and evill, Gal. 1. 4. and 1 John 5. 19.

The world hated Christ, John 7. 7. The world hated not you, but me it hateth.

The Lord hateth the world: although not as it is his creature, but as it is our Lords bearing rule in our hearts, and usurping or taking up the chiefest roome in our affections.

Thirdly, because God and the world are contrary in their commands, and leade unto divers ends; Si esurientem a cibo abigas, animum transferri (Plaut.) A man would hate and be angry with him Answ. 3.

him who should drive him from a well furnished Table, when his stomach were in folio: so men hate God, because hee prohibits those things which the world layes before them, and which they lust after, and long for.

The world leads and perswades unto pleasure, honour, mirth, idlenesse, and peace.

The Lord leads, and perswades unto patience in injuries, losses, and crosses; to suffer persecution, to goe into the house of mourning, to deny our selves, and pleasures, and the like: And therefore no wonder if the love of the world make us hate God.

Quest. 2. Why must we not love the world, which was created by God for man?

Answ. 1. First, because it is transitory, and all things that are therein, Iob 27.16. &c. Prov. 12.27. & 20 21. & 2.16.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it provokes the Lord unto anger. Esa. 57.17. Prov. 15.27. Ierem. 6.13. & 22.13.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, because it hardens the heart, Esa. 57. 17. as Mat. 5.4. & 2. Peter 2.14.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because the love of the world, doth so possesse the whole man, that a man can neither, heare, desire, nor doe any thing against his covetousnesse, but all for it, as for example.

I. A covetous man cannot pray heartily for any thing, but for his ships, and corne, and cattle, and debtes, and estate, and the like.

II. A covetous man can neither heare aright, nor heartily desire the Word of God, This people saith the Lord come unto mee, as my people, and sit before me as my people, and heare my Word but doe it not, for their heart goeth after their covetousnesse. So our Saviour saith that the thorny cares of this world choake the seede of the word. Wherefore David prayes, incline my heart O Lord unto thy Law and not unto covetousnesse.

o Ezech. 33.31.
p Mat. 13. 18.
q Ps. 119. 36.

Quest. 3. By what meanes may wee bee freed or preserved from the love of the World?

Answ. 1. First, labour to feare God, and then he will provide for thee, Psalme 33.18,19. Behold the eye of the Lord is upon them that feare him: to deliver their soule from death, and to keepe them alive in famine.

Answ. 2. Secondly, labour for grace and piety, for that is great gaine, and true riches 1. Timoth. 4. 8. Yea to him who once gaines, and obtaines them, they will really appeare to be more precious then gold.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, labour for contentation; for having once that, we have enough, whatsoever else we want. 1. Ti. 6. 6.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, have a frequent meditation and expectation of death, the Resurrection, the day of judgement, life eternall, and ever-during death: for this will crucify the love of the world in us.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, labour that thou maist bee made the servant of God; that being admitted into his service, thou maist apply thy selfe wholy unto him, and his obedience.

Quest. 4 How may wee know whether wee are guilty of this love of the world or not?

Answ. 1. First, if wee take most paines for the world, and be most carefull therein, it is a signe that wee are lovers of the world. Mat. 6.25.31,32.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if wee will rather forsake God, and the waies of righteousnes, then these worldly things, it is a signe that we are lovers of the world, Matthew 10.37,39. & 19.20.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, if we judge those happy, who abound in riches and worldly affluence, then it is an argument that the world hath too great a place in our affections.

§ 3. And love the other.]

Sect. 3. Obiect. Our Saviour in these words shewes, that the love of God doth bring along with it the hatred of the world: Or, he who loves the Lord will hate the world. Zelus vnius consortium amoris contrarii in amato, si inveneris, dedignatur & nititur repellere quantum potest.

Quest. 1. Why doth hee who loves the Lord hate the world?

Answ. 1. First, because worldly things withdraw and take off the heart from God: therefore he who freely loves the Lord avoids and takes heede of the love of them.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our love unto God is shewed by our obedience; but worldly things (at least) hinder us from the service of the Lord: and therefore he who loves the Lord, as baites and snares escheweth them.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, hee whose heart is inflamed with the love of God, thinks worldly things unworthy his love: and despiseth them as childish toyes.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Nullum datur vacuum; The love of God doth fill and replenish the soule, which the world cannot; and therefore leaves no voide places for any contrary loves: The heart cries give, give and is never satisfied so long as it is set upon the world; but when the Lord once enters the soule, it is then at quiet, and saith with Iacob: I have enough.

What worldly things must we hate?

Quest. 2. These things. Answ.

I. The sinnes of the world.

II. The allurements of the world.

III. The impediments & lets of the world. And

IV. Our own corrupt affections.

Why must we love the Lord?

Quest. 3. Answ. 1. First, because all good things are prepared for those that love him: eye hath not seene, nor eare heard, nor have entred into the heart of man the things, which God hath prepared for them that love him. 1. Cor. 2.9. Read also. Ephes. 6. 24. & 2. Timoth. 4 8. & Iames. 1. 12.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because it is a shame for Christians to love the world, and not to love God. Larkes that soare aloft in the ayre, build their neasts in the earth; but the children of men should not doe so.

The wood-Pecker, is called in Greeke μιερὸν for her beauty, & feathers of divers colours; but ἐν τῇ γῇ κατασκάπτει she builds her neast in the earth: so there are many men of rare parts otherwise, who spoile all by groveling upon the earth, setting themselves wholy to gather the thick clay of

of this world together. Now it is a great shame for those, who would bee helde the children of God, and members of Christ to love any created temporall thing more then God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if wee looke upon God wee shall finde that there is great cause to love him, and that in many respects, namely,

I. In regard of his Law and that { First, because hee commands us in his Law to love him. Secondly, because his Commandements are just, holy, and equall.

II. In regard of his relation unto us; because he is our Father, Master, and King, therefore we should love him.

III. In regard of his liberality, and mercifull bounty unto us, extended both in our creation, as also in providing for us what is good, in protecting us from all evill, in bestowing spirituall mercies, and meanes upon us, yea in giveing of Christ for us. And therefore wee should love him.

IV. If wee respect the essence and nature of God, we shall see therein great cause to love him; and that.

First, in regard of himselfe, because hee is invisible, immutable, incomprehensible, immortall, the most high, and blessed Lord God.

Secondly, in regard of our selves, because he it the object of the soule, and there is nothing that can give rest to the soule, but God: The heart of man is like the needle of the Compasse that trembleth untill it come to the Pole. The soule of a wicked man is in a sling[r]; Now that which is in a sling is violently tossed about; and so is the soule when it is not upon the proper object.

1 Sam. 25. 29.

David said Libbi sebbarchar my heart was troubled, Psalme 38. 10. Sobber is called a Merchant which goes to and fro to sell his wares, to shew how the heart of man is troubled about sundry things: yea further the letters here are doubled, to signifie the great care and trouble that David had, when hee sought after these things, as the Merchant seeketh for his game. When the rich man said in the Gospell, Soule take thy rest, for now thou hast much goods laid up for many yeares, Luke 12. 19. Hee put the soule then from the right object: But when David said, Returne my soule to thy rest, Psalme. 116. 7. Then he set his soule upon the right object. As light is the first object of the eye, and not the light of the Sun or Candle. So God is the first object of the soule, but not this or that way revealed, by his creatures, or by his word: And therefore hee ought to bee loved for himselfe.

Quest. 4. By what meanes may we be inflamed with the love of God?

Answ. 1. First, labour to feele the sweetnesse of God; labour to know how good and gracious the Lord is; All men desire that which they judge to be principally and chiefely good for them; And therefore if wee could but once taste, or conceive, how sweet and good the Lord is, it would make us to love him. A man comes to this knowledge partly by the hearing of the Word of God, and partly by meditating of the great and gracious workes of God, but principally by Faith in Christ.

Answ. 2. Secondly, pray daily unto God, that hee would so shine into thy heart by some glimpse of his holy Majesty, that thou mayst become sick of love.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, separate thy selfe from all those things which may hinder thee from loving the Lord.

Quest. 5. What things let or hinder us from the love of God?

First, the love of sinne: Non bene conveniunt; the Arke and Dagon cannot both stand in one Temple, nor God and sin be in one soule; And therefore labour to leave, and learne to loath all sinnes whatsoever, because God will not come, where sinne is wittingly harboured without any opposition, or reluctation.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the love of the world: as in this verse, and Iames. 4. 4. & 1. John 2. 15. Wherefore love not the world.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the blindnesse of the judgment: sense preferreth temporall things before spirituall; And therefore labour that our understandings may bee enlightned, and our judgements informed, that being able to discerne between things that differ, we may (with Christ) know to refuse the evill, and chuse the good[s]. [s] Esa. 7. 15

Quest. 4. How may we know, whether we love the Lord or not?

Answ. 1. First, if wee hate sinne, the world, and worldly things, and all things that are opposite, or contrary unto God; it is a signe that we love him.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if we thinke and meditate seriously and frequently upon our God in private, it is a signe that we love him.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, if we have a high estimation of our God, valuing him above all other things, it is an argument of love. Alexander desiring to know, whether Apelles were in love with Campaspe (whom hee had intended for himselfe) caused his page (when Apelles was in serious discourse with him) to cry out, Apelles, Apelles, looke about you, your shop is one fire: wherewith hee being affrighted cryed out, aye mee, if the Picture of Campaspe bee burnt, I am undone.

Thus if we can say with him, we are undone, if we loose our God, or with David, that there is nothing in Heaven or earth that wee desire besides him; it is a comfortable signe of love[t]. [t] Ps. 73. 25

Answ. 4. Fourthly, if our love bee perpetuall, and constant, it is a signe of true love. Gasper de Magno, a Knight of Millan, bare a Stockdove with a Diamant in her bill, it being the nature of this Bird never to loose any thing it hath once taken, thereby to inferre, that he would never give over to love his Lady, whose name was also Diamanthe. His Motto was, In aternum; For ever: Thus it is not enough to love the Lord at times, or for a time, but if wee desire to 336 to approve our love to be faithfull and unfained, we must love him above all things, and that for ever and ever.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Or he will cleave (or hold) to the one: and forsake the other.

I conceive that our Saviours scope is here to argue from verse. 19. and that thus;

Lay not up for your selves treasures on earth; because then you will adhere and cleave to them:

Obser. Teaching us that hee who studies to lay up treasures on earth will hold to them. Eccles. 4.8. & 6.1, 2.

Quest. 1. How doe men adhere and hold to riches?

Ans. Two manner of wayes, viz.

First, Voluntarie willingly, when a man makes choice rather of riches then of God and graces: this is shamefull and monstrous, for a man wittingly, and willingly to preferre his body before his soule, the world before the Lord, and goods before grace.

Secondly, Coactè, by constraint; when his affections are so captivated with the love of the world; that like Birds in lime-twigs he cannot free himselfe; but (video meliora, proboque, deteriora sequor) although he see what is best, and approve thereof, yet still he followes what is evill. It is a miserable thing for a man to know, that he runneth on the high way to destruction, and yet cannot stay himselfe.

Quest. 2. Why may wee not labour to be rich?

Answ. 1. First, because riches are not necessary; Natura paucis contenta; A little sufficeth nature; a little meat will feede us, and a few cloathes will keepe us warme; And therefore there is no necessity of being rich.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because riches are full of troubles; being acquired by labour, kept with care, lost with griefe and spent with much unwillingnesse, as shall else-where be shewed.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, riches are full of perill, and danger, being hurtfull

Both for the { Body, as shall be shewed amply in another place: in the meane time Reade Eccle. 5.10,11,12,13,14.

Soule because they hinder us from holy duties, namely, { First, from Prayer, because either { First, they distract the Minde in Prayer; the thoughts and heart being about some worldly things, while the lips pray. Secondly, or the power of Prayer is conversant about earthly things; that is, the most (and most fervent) petitions are for earthly things.

Secondly, from following of Christ, as wee see in the young man; who chose rather to leave Christ then his riches. Matthew 19.20.

Thirdly, from turning unto God; riches so bewitching, and inchanting us, that we cannot leave them, though we dye for it.

Quest. 3. Why may wee not lay up treasures on Earth?

Answ. 1. First, because this is a brutish thing to spend all our time about earthly things. The Swine never lookes up unto Heaven, but alwaies beholds the earth; and being violently cast and laid upon the backe, so as that shee sees the Heaven, the admiration of the sight thereof makes her cease her yelling. Thus many live here on earth, as though there were no other life, as though they should live here for ever, yea as though God had created them for no greater or higher ends then to be rich.

Plutarch.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because riches are uncertaine, yea shall not abide with us: The Frenchmen say, that sicknesse comes to men on horse-back, but returnes from them on foote; that is, comes suddenly, but goes leasurely; Now riches are contrary here unto, they come creeping like a snayle, but flye away like an Eagle; they are long a getting, but quickly lost. Wee are deprived of our riches three manner of wayes.

I. Sometimes they are taken away from us, by some casualtie, either of fire, water, theeves or the like, Read for the proofe hereof, Psal. 76. 3. and Prov. 12. 27. and Eccles. 5. 11, 12.

II. Sometimes wee are taken from them, when we make most account to take pleasure in them; as wee see in the rich man, who had no sooner said, Now soule take thy rest, but the Lord saith, Stulte hâc nocte, Thou foole this night shall thy soule be taken away[u]. [u] Luke. 12.20.

III. Sometimes they remaine with us, and wee with them; and yet are taken away in regard of use and comfort; sometimes a man is so hindred either by sickneslie, or imprisonment, or some domesticall vexations of wife or children, or the like, that he hath no more joy or comfort in his possessions, or riches, then if he possessed none at all. And therefore why should wee waste and spend our daies in treasuring up that which will take the wings of the morning, and flye away.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because for the most part they make us worse: A man who seriously desires to bee good, will not seeke for or after that which may make him evill, But riches are of this nature: And therefore we should not consume and waste our time in labouring to heape them up. Alexander sent a great reward unto Phocion, because he heard that hee was an honest man: But he refused the present, and returned this answer, That hee thanked the King, for his bounty, and good conceit of him, and intreated ted him, to let him bee an honest man still; As if hee would say; such a summe as Alexander sent, was enough to corrupt him, and to make him worse: and therefore he durst not meddle with it. Certainly riches and the things of this world are snares, impediments, lets, yea the baites of Sathan (as appeares by him who had married a wife, and him who had bought a Farme, and him who bought the Oxen [w]) and therefore as wee should avoide the coards of vanity, that draw on iniquity, so wee should not heape up, and gather together, that which will bee a meanes to make us rather worse then better.

[w] Luk. 14. 18, 19, 20

Quest. 4. Is it not lawfull at all to lay up treasures here one earth? doth not Saint Paul say, that he who provides not for his family is worse then an infidell, 1 Tim. 5. 8. yea doth not Salomon say; Bee thou diligent to know the state of thy flockes, and looke wel to thy herds? Prov. 27. 23.

Answ. 1. First, in generall it is lawfull to possesse riches, as followes afterwards.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in generall it is lawfull to procure and acquire riches honestly: Iacob increased his estate, when he was with Laban, and Ioseph gathered exceeding much riches from Pharaoh.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it is lawfull to lay up treasures, and to provide some estate for our children, 1 Tim 5. 8. yea it is the duty of parents, as Saint Paul saith, The children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children [a]:

[a] 2 Cor. 12. 14

Answ. 4 Fourthly, our Saviour forbids to lay up treasures not absolutely, but respectively: For the understanding hereof marke well these two things, namely:

I. That some treasures are lawfull, and necessary, to wit, wherein riches lawfully acquired are laid up, whether publickly in Exchequers, or Halles; or privately, by private persons, onely remembring, that they must be laid up without injury of any, and with thankesgiving unto God.

II. There are some treasures unlawfull, which our Saviour forbids, vers. 19.

Quest. 4. How may wee know, whether our hoording, and heaping up of riches be unlawfull?

Answ. 1. First, if there be no necessity of laying up riches either for our selves, or for ours; it is then a signe that our treasures are disallowed and disliked by Christ.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if we heape up riches with the discommodity of others, or by any wicked means, it is an argument of a prohibited treasure.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, when we place our hope, trust, and confidence in our riches treasured up; distrusting the good providence of God; it is an infallible signe of an unlawfull treasure. Quantum quisque sua nummorum servat in arca, tantum habet & fidei [b]. When men by their riches heaped up, hope to bee releeved, helped, and succoured come what can come unto them, it is an argument that their hearts are set too much upon their treasures, and their confidence is too great in them.

[b] Iuvenal.

Answ. 5. It was said in the second answer, that wee must not treasure up riches by wicked meanes; hence it may be demanded, how doth a man wickedly lay up treasures?

Answ. 1. First, when he acquireth them by unlawfull and unjust meanes: to wit, either by theft, or fraud, or perjury, or false weights or measures, or adulterated wares, or by supplanting of others, or usury, or oppression, or detaining of the hirelings wages, or the like. Woe be to that man who gathereth riches by those meanes.

Answ. 2. Secondly, a man treasureth up riches wickedly, when he keepes them too close, that is reserves them I. Cruelly, by denying to affoord helpe either to that Church and Commonwealth wherein hee lives, when there is neede, or by releeving the poore, when they are in distresse. Many are so carefull to keepe what they have, that the poore shall rather die; then bee preserved by their riches, they will rather have no preaching, then procure it with their purses, yea, the kingdome, or City wherin they live shall be undone (as Constantinople was) rather then they will helpe it with the exhausting of their treasures.

I. Men sometimes reserve their riches, Sordidè, basely, denying themselves their part of them; when having riches, they want hearts to use them, Eccles. 4. 8. and 6. 1. Woe be to that man who is so carefull to reserve his riches, that hee withholds them in the time of need either from King, Church, Poore; or himselfe and his.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, a man treasureth up riches wickedly, when he heapes them up too much, that is: I. Without any necessity, as was said before. II. Without any measure, never saying, it is enough, of which afterwards.

Sect. 5. §. 5. Ye cannot serve God and Mammon.

Our blessed Saviours generall scope is here to teach us, how impossible it is for a man to serve religion and the world sincerely, and ex animo.

Quest. 1. What is meant by Mammon?

First, some say that hee is one of the foure principall divels which are opposite to the foure cardinall vertues; the first of which divels is Asmodeus, which is the spirit of luxury and uncleannesse, and is opposite to the vertue of Chastity; the second divell is Beelzebub, which is the spirit of gluttony and drunkennesse, and is opposite to Temperance; the third divell is Mammon, which is the spirit of coveteousnesse, and is opposit to Charity, and liberality; the fourth divell is Lucifer, the spirit of pride, opposite unto Humility [c].

[c] Petrus Secur. Ser. dominica. ser. 19.

But certainely Mammon is not a divell, because a man may lawfully make him friends of Mammon, which he cannot of the divell, as followes by and by.

Answ. 2. Secondly, μαμωνᾶς, or μαμωνᾶ, as it is according to the Syriake signifieth gaine, or lucre, thus Elias and the Chaldeans, and also the Germans, who derive it from the Hebrew word Mum, which signifies a reproach; because immoderate, and unlawfull gaine is worthy of reprehension & blame. But this is not the meaning 338 of the word, because wee may not make us friends of evill gotten goods (as followes by and by) but we may of Mammon.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, some say that Mammon signifies Riches, not wickedly got, but unprofitable to the possessor; or riches whereof a man hath no use or need: Thus μαμωνᾶς was described by Suidas, πλοῦτος χρήσιμος ἐχόμενος ἐν τοῖς παροῦσι, ἀλλὰ περιττὸς καὶ ὑπὲρ τὴν χρείαν. Mammon is those riches and that substance, which doth not proceed from the divell, but whereof there is no necessary use: This is probable and likely to be true.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, sometimes Mammon indefinitely signifies riches, and wealth; and so I take it to signifie in this place.

Quest. 2. What manner of service is heere spoken of? Yee cannot serve God and Mammon.

Answ. There are two sorts of service, First, the service of the divell, by whom some are taken captive at his will, 2 Tim. 2.26. thus Witches, Enchanters, Sorcerers, Magitians, and the like are the divels servants. Secondly, there is a service of the servants of the divell; namely, the service of sinne, and of the world, which are thus distinguished:

I. The service of sinne is thus by S^t. Paul described, the servants of sinne 1 yeeld themselves, and are content to obey sinne, Rom. 6. 1, 6, 17, 19. and 2. are free from righteousnesse, Rom. 6. 20.

II. The service of the world (which is the service here spoken of) is a willing subjecting of a mans selfe unto the allurements, and provocations, and baites of the world, or a yeelding unto the inticements unto evill, which are found in the world: Whence it is that a man cannot serve God and the world.

Quest. 3. Why cannot a man serve both God and the world?

Answ. 1. First, because there is neither of them but requires the whole man: Nemo repentè fit bonus, Nemo repentè fit dives: None are quickly good, non are quickly rich: if a mā desire to be good he must accustome himselfe to a long, constant, and continuall trade of religion; if a man desire to be rich, he must rise up early, and goe late to bed, and eat the bread of carefulnesse; yea, hee must imploy both head and heart: And therefore religion and the world cannot both be served by one and the same man.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because God and Mammon are contraries; the Lord labours to withdraw our affections from the world; and Mammon strives to seduce and intice us from the Lord. And therefore both cannot be served.

Quest. 4. What difference is betweene God and Mammon?

Answ. 1. First, Mammon vexeth and turmoileth his servants night and day; but the Lord continually comforts his.

Answ. 2. Secondly, Mammons servants are never satisfied; the servants of the Lord never want necessary things, and having that which is sufficient are contented with it.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, Mammon at length handles his servants as enemies: but the Lord calleth his no longer servants but friends, Joh. 15. yea the children and coheires of Christ, Rom. 8.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, he who serves Māmon must necessarily hate God, & he who serves the Lord, ought to hate the world, and to renounce Mammon.

Quest. 5. How may wee know whether wee serve our riches, or our riches serve us?

Answ. 1. First, if wee use our riches as servants, sending them abroad at our pleasure, unto the reliefe of the poore, and every good worke, we may then be called their Masters.

Answ. 2. Secondly, if Mammon
- First, sends us whether hee will, Per mare, per terras; if the love of riches cause us to expose our selves to imminent danger and hazards, he is then our Master.
- Secondly, if thou darest not send thy riches abroad when necessity requires; if thou darest not satisfie the necessities of the poore, although they cry unto thee for feare of scattering thy riches; then certainely thou art Mammons servant.

Quest. 6. How is Mammon to be cast out?

Answ. By the workes of mercy, and exercising our selves in doing good: be hospitable to strangers, redeeme captives, cloath the naked, give bread to the hungry, drinke to the thirsty, comfort those who are in misery, visite the sicke, and the like; for by this meanes wee may bee freed from Mammons service.

Quest. 7. What is required of us unto this service of God?

Answ. 1. First, a serious labour of the life; wee must serve him in righteousnesse (towards men) and true holinesse (towards God) all the dayes of our life. The worke of the Lord is great, and therefore it cannot be performed, nor he served, without a great deale of care and paines.

Answ. 2. Secondly, a generality of obedience, both in regard of the - Things commanded, wee must not abstaine from some sinnes, or doe some things, as Herod did, but labour to avoide whatsoever is evill, and do whatsoever is good.
- Times, not obeying of God, per intervalla, by starts, or for a time; but all our time, we injoy upon earth.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, feare, wee must obey him with feare, Malach. 1.6. If I be your Master where is my feare: Wee must stand in awe of him, and not dare to offend him.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, a desire to please him, in what hee commands: It is not naturall, rationall, politicall, or hypocriticall obedience (of which in his proper place) which doth approve us to be Gods servants. But that obedience which proceedes from a true and internall desire to please him.

VERS 25. Therefore I say unto you, take no thought for your life, what ye shall eate, or what ye shall drinke, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on: is not the life more then meat, and the body then rayment.

Vers. 25.

Sect. 1. S. I say unto you.

Quest. Why doth our Saviour give this counsell with a regedico, I say unto you?

Answ. 1. First, because he was their Master, and therefore they should heare his voyce.

Secondly,

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe he was wiſe, they were fooliſh; and therefore they ſhould give credit unto him

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, becauſe he himſelfe did as he ſaid; for hee was not carefull; and therefore they ought to obey having both his precept, and preſident for it.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Quapropter, wherefore I ſay unto you.] διὰ τοῦτο: therefore; We may obſerve here how Chriſt perſwadeth unto, and diſſwadeth from nothing without reaſon; he diſſwades, from coveteouſneſſe, and gives reaſons for it, he diſſwades from carefulneſſe and gives reaſons for it, yea ever and anone doth ſo, as elſe where, what will it profit a man to gaine the whole world, and looſe his owne ſoule? Teaching us hereby, Obſer. That Religion is not contrary to reaſon.

Queſt. 1. How doth that appeare?

Anſw. Thus; Reaſon is the rule (Tum veri, tum boni, tum aqui, tum juſti) both of that which is true, and good, and juſt, and equall: for the better underſtanding hereof obſerve; that which is true in one ſcience is not falſe in another; that which is true in Philoſophy is not falſe in Divinitie; & contrily to that w^ch^ is true in Divinity is not falſe in reaſon, but onely above her reach; yea if any thing were true in one Science & falſe in another, then Verum non eſſet reciproca affectio entis, that is, that w^ch^ hath a being ſhould not be true, & that which is true ſhould not have a being Foure things there are here to bee diſtinguiſhed, to wit, Veritas, ſupra, infra, juxta, contra rationem.

Firſt, there is a Veritas ſupra rationem, a verity that is above reaſon; this is of things taken up by faith.

Secondly, there is veritas juxta rationem, a verity which is agreeable to reaſon; this is of things taken up by reaſon.

Thirdly, there is veritas infra rationem, a verity which is under reaſon; and this is of things taken up by ſenſe.

Fourthly, veritas contra rationem non datur, there is no verity contrary to reaſon: It is not againſt reaſon to beleeve that a Virgin conceived and bare a Sonne, but it is above reaſon.

In Iſrael there was a judicatorie of ſeventy, who judged of matters of greateſt weight; and there was an inferiour judicatorie conſiſting of three, and theſe judged of goods, and matters of leaſt moment: that which was truely concluded in the higheſt judicatorie, was not falſe in the inferiour; and although they could not judge of a falſe Prophet, as the great Synedrion did, yet they held it not falſe in the loweſt judicatorie, when the great Synedrion concluded ſuch a one to be a falſe Prophet.

Queſt. 2. Whether is reaſon or religion, Philoſophy or Divinity to be preferred?

Anſw. Divinity, and Religion are to be preferred before the other two: elſe we ſhould doe as Demonides a Schoolmaſter in Athens did, who having crooked feete, had his ſhooes ſtolen from him, which were made according to his feet: whereupon he wiſht, that the feete of thoſe who had ſtolen his ſhooes, might become like unto the ſhooes which they had ſtolne. This was a fooliſh wiſh, to deſire the ſtraight foot to bee made fit for the crooked ſhooe, whereas the ſhooe ſhould be made fit to the ſtraight foot: Philoſophy and natural reaſon is but a crooked ſhooe, and therefore to conforme Divinity thereunto were to conforme the ſtraight foot to the crooked ſhooe; Divinitie muſt be the ſquare to correct that, which is not ſtraight.

Who forme or frame a modell of Religion by the mould of humane reaſon? Queſt. 3.

Anſw. The Church of Rome: if we will take a view of the ſeverall points profeſſed in Popery, wee may eaſily perceive whence they have taken the patterne of them, not from Moſes on the Mount, but frō ſcholaſtick ſpeculations; as for example, Firſt, becauſe the Mathematickes conſider lines, figures, circles, points, abſtracted from bodies; therefore they gather, that accidents may be in the Sacraments without the ſubject.

Secondly, becauſe Morall Philoſophy eſtabliſheth neither puniſhment nor reward, unleſſe the free-will of man goe before; hence they inferre that there is free-will in man. Againe, becauſe morall Philoſophy knoweth no vertues, but inherent habits and vertues; therefore it is that they ſet themſelves againſt the imputed righteouſneſſe of Chriſt. The morall Philoſopher calles vice a voluntary evill; therefore they inferre, that concupiſcence is not ſinne, becauſe it is not altogether voluntary.

Thirdly, from the Politicks, in policie, the beſt ſort of governement is Monarchicall; therefore the Popes governement muſt be Monarchicall. Againe, in Princes courts, men uſe Mediators to goe to their Prince, therfore they conclude, that we muſt uſe the interceſſion of the ſaints to God. In policie, no lawes are given, but which the ſubjects may fulfill; therefore man is able to fulfill the law of God.

Fourthly, from the Phyſickes; Phyſicke teacheth us that the body turnes to corruption, and diſſolves; upon this they inferre, that the body of man ſhould have dyed naturally as it doth now, though he had not fallen, if ſupernaturall righteouſneſſe had not kept backe corruption; thus making God as well the author of death, as of nature, conſidering man onely according to the principles of nature, and not according to this firſt creation. Againe, Phyſick teacheth us, that the blood alwaies followeth the body, therefore they have taken away the cup from the people in the Sacrament, beeauſe (ſay they) if they get his fleſh, they get his blood, per concomitantiam.

Fifthly, the Metaphyſickes teach us that every poſitive thing is good; therefore they define originall ſinne to be a mere ptivation.

Sixthly, I might ſhew, how from the Platonickes they have borrowed their apparition of ſpirits; how from the Poets fables they have taken their Purgatorie; and how from the incantations of the Gentiles they have borrowed their exorciſmes, but I inlarge it no further.

May we not oppoſe Reaſon to Religion? Queſt. 4.

Anſw. No, becauſe this were to goe about to confute God from his owne rules.

340 But Preachers teach that reason, and humane wisedom are opposite unto God, & religion; yea Object. 1 Saint Paul himselfe affirmes the same, Romans 8. 6, 7, 8.

Answ. This is meant of the corrupt and blinde wisedome of man, and not of right reason: for it is one thing to be
- Contra rationem, against reason: for no such thing is true in Religion.
- Supra rationem, above reasons reach; thus wee doubt of the magnitude of the Sunne, and wee are altogether unable to conceive fully or comprehend God, and things which are infinite; because we are blind.

Object. 2 But reason it selfe seemes in some things to be opposite.

Answ. 1. First, Reason is either
- Humane, when wee reduce or bring back God unto a humane order; not acknowledging him to be eternall, infinite, and the great Creator of all the world; this indeede is opposite unto God.
- Divine, when wee know how to distinguish betweene God and man; both in his power and equitie.

Answ. 2. Secondly, particularly, there are two sorts of Oppositions, viz.
- Possibilitatis.
- Æquitatis.

First, Possibilitatis, whether such a thing bee possible unto God or not?

To this Christ answers, unto God nothing is impossible. Indeede ordinarily two things are said to be impossible unto God, namely;

I. To sinne, this argues infirmitly, and impotency, and therefore cannot have place in God.

II. To be contrary unto himselfe, for this argues mutabilitie, and variation.

But in these we must not say, God cannot, but God will not; the thing is the same, but the phrase is more remote from blasphemy.

In this first opposition of Possibility there are two quæres, namely,

First, An sit? whether any thing be impossible unto God? here with Christ above wee must answer negatively; Nothing is impossible unto God.

Secondly, Quomodo sit? How such a thing may be? here often reason is foolish, and not able to give an answer, and that sometimes in humane things, sometimes in Divine.

I. In humane things reason often is not able to give a reason, as why an Amulet hung about the necke should preserve from poyson, or enchantment, or bewitching? why a bone-ring should preserve from the cramp? how five thousand could bee fed with five loaves, and twelve baskets full left. Many men admire how the earth can hang in the aire; how the Eclipses can be foretold: how the motions of the heavens can be discerned or understood: how men can goe with their feet against ours; This is a thing so hardly to be beleeved, that Virgilius the Bishop was degraded, and expelled his Bishopricke, by Boniface, Pope Gregory, the seconds legate [w]. Thus reason is blind and foolish in humane things.

[w] Aventinus.

II. In Divine things reason is much more to seeke, beeing therein in many things altogether ignorant. Multa in religione fide credenda, non demonstratione, rationeve probanda: There are many things in religion which cannot bee demonstrated, or proved by reason, but are onely to be beleeved by faith; as God to bee eternall, a parte ante & a parte post, without all beginning, & without all end: and for the torments of hell to be eternall, that is, without end, although they had a beginning: how can reason demonstrate the blessed Trinity in Unity ever to bee worshipped? when wee begin to consider of these things, we must cry out O altitudinem, O the depth of the riches, both of the wisedome, and of the knowledge of God; how unsearchable are his judgements, and his wayes past finding out, Rom. 11. 33.

Secondly, Æquitatis, flesh and blood doth here frequently reason against God; demanding how he can equally and justly doe such or such things and this troubles us most, because we doe not consider God as the Creator of al things, but as our companion, wee equall him with our selves, and then try him by that rule: God in derision said Man is become like one of us; and Man in his reasonings and disputes concerning God, makes him like Man. As for example.

I. What reason can there be for eternall punishment for a temporall fault? how can God punish a man justly with eternall and perpetuall torments, for momentary offences?

I answer, reason it selfe doth confirme the equitie of the thing, for

First, sinne is eternall voluntate, in desire and will; a wicked man would sinne for ever, if hee did upon earth live for ever: and therefore it is just with God for ever to punish him

Secondly, sinne is eternall iniquitate, that is, out of measure sinfull, and of an infinite merit, because committed against an infinite and eternall God: and therefore is justly, eternally punished.

Thirdly, reason will say, that there is no reason to deny that unto God which we allow to men, or to think that unjust or unequall in God, which in men we hold most just: now man for offences committed against man punisheth eternally, for sometimes he taketh away his eares, sometimes cutteth of his hand, sometimes taketh away his life, which are justly called eternall punishments, because they can never bee restored: the whole world cannot give unto a dead man life, or unto a mutilated man limbs.

II. What reason is there that God should condemne us for Adams fault?

Reason here answers, that for treason against the King, the Father is beheaded, & the children disinherited; Why then should wee pleade against God? our Father Adam committed high treason against him, yea the covenant was made with all men in Adam, and therefore justly may the the Lord reject us, wee sinning against him in our fathers loynes: yea we have the seede of all corruption in us by nature, and therefore the Lord may justly cast us into Hell before we live to commit any actuall transgression.

And therefore of all these things let us not say, that they are contra rationem, against reason, but that they are supra rationem, beyond or above reason; and that the things are true, and possible, and just, and equall, but we are blind and cannot see how or which way: Wherefore beleeve τὸ ὅτι, that such and such things are; acknowledge that thou art not able to understand τὸ διὰ τί, how they are: Reason telleth us, Deus est, that there is a God; but reason knowes not, quid est, What this God is, as Simonides acknowledged. I conclude therefore this question, Contra rationem nemo sobrius dicit, contra scripturam nemo Christianus, & contra ecclesiam nemo pacificus. No sober man will speake against reason, no Christian man will speake against Religion and the Scriptures, no peaceable man will speake against the Church.

Quest. 5. Why doth Christ bring reasons for what hee exhorts unto, or dehorts from, as was affirmed in the beginning of this second Section?

Answ. 1. First, for the greater manifestation of his love and mercy; who doth not teach us pro imperio, but applyeth himselfe to our capacity; shewing that he doth not command as a Tyrant, but perswade us as a friend unto that which is good and profitable for us.

Answ. 2. Secondly, that wee might bee left without excuse; if the Lord shall dissuade us from sin, and perswade us to turne unto himselfe, by arguments drawne (Ab utili, honesto, æquo, &c.) from the utility, necessity, honesty, equity, and excellency of the thing; how injurious are we unto our God? how inexcusable are wee in our selves, if wee will not be drawn by so many, and so strong coards?

This is a plaine argument that wee willingly and wilfully close our hearts, shut our eyes, and stop our eares, both against the light of reason and Religion, the one not being contrary unto the other: sometimes the Lord gives us morall counsell, sometimes divine, and therefore the greater shall our judgement bee, if we be not obedient.

Quest. 6. How doth it appeare that Christ teacheth, and exhorteth unto, and dehorteth from nothing without reason.

Answ. It might largely bee shewed and proved through the whole Gospell; but I will instance but onely upon this present Sermon, and upon a particular or two therein, where to the life wee shall see, that all the things taught therein might bee confirmed by strong and plaine reasons: as for example.

First, Christ dehorts us from seeking the praise of men, and the applause of the world; and that for these reasons following, namelie,

I. Because it is a vaine, airy, and unconstant breath; nothing more unstaid, and unstable then the many-headed multitude, who to day will cry Hosanna, and to morrow Crucifie him.

II. Because the praise of men (in our good workes) is unprofitable; seeing not men but God must judge us at the last day.

III. Because it is a blast which will puffe us up and make us swell, and grow both more proude, and worse then formerly we were.

IV. Because the praise of God is more worthy, and therefore more carefully to be sought for.

Secondly, Christ exhorts us to avoid Hypocrisy; and that for these reasons.

I. Because we shall not be judged at the last day by outward duties, or appearances.

II. Because God will never accept of Hypocriticall workes.

III. Because God requires and sees, and searcheth the heart.

IV. Because Hypocrites shall onely receive a temporall reward on earth, but not an eternall in the Heavens.

V. Because an hypocriticall shew of true Religion, makes us not happy; for vertue (which is the way unto felicitie) consists in action.

Thirdly, Christ exhorts us to shew forth the good workes of sanctity, and uprightnesse, and that for these reasons:

I. Because wee shall at the last day bee judged according to our workes: The judgement of God (saith Saint Paul) is κατὰ ἀλήθειαν according to truth (Rom 2. 2.) that is, κατὰ τὰ ἔργα according to workes. vers. 6.

II. Because if wee bring not forth good fruits; we shall be hewen downe, and cast into the fire.

III. Because they shall bee rewarded with true felicity and happinesse in the Kingdome of God.

IV. Because they are profitable and necessary, both in regard of God (because he is glorified) and of others (because they are edified) and of our selves; because they make sure our election and vocation unto us, 2 Pet. 1. 10.

Fourthly, he dehorts us from the care of the world; and that by these reasons.

I. Because it distempers, and disturbes the minde, Psal. 127. 3. It will not suffer a man to sleepe.

II. Because it alienates and estrangeth the heart from God, 1. Tim. 6. 9.

III. Because it derogates from God, as though he would not, or could not, or knew not, how to provide for us;

IV. Because it is unprofitable in a double regard, namely.
- First, wee cannot by our care adde one cubit to our stature, Mat. 6. 27.
- Secondly; because God will Provide for us without our care; Luke 12. 30.

Fifthly, Christ exhorts us to seeke heavenly things before all things; and that for these reasons.

I. Because our treasure is in Heaven; and therefore our hearts should bee there.

342. II. Becauſe Heaven and the ſalvation of our ſoules is a matter of the greateſt importance and weight unto us, both in regard of the loſſe, & in regard of the gaine: for if wee gaine Heaven we gaine the greateſt, if we looſe Heaven wee looſe the greateſt inheritance and poſſeſſion that poſſibly can be.

III. Becauſe heavenly joyes, glory, felicity and happineſſe is onely permanent, enduring for ever.

IV. Becauſe onely in Heaven is our true felicity, and chiefeſt good.

And therefore let reaſon and Religion rule and direct us, and we ſhall be happy and bleſſed for ever and ever.

Sect. 3. §. 3. Therefore I ſay unto you.]

Our Saviours concluſion is here worth obſerving: Covetouſneſſe leads a man unto the ſervice of Mammon; therefore I ſay unto you bee not careſull; &c.

Obiect. It may here be objected, A care of the world, is leſſe then covetouſneſſe?

Anſw. 'Tis true, therefore wee are taught hereby to avoide the leſſe, or wee ſhall never eſchew the greater: Or ſinne is to be reſiſted in the ſmalleſt beginnings: Principijs obſta, we muſt give no way unto the water at all.

Obſer. Why muſt the leaſt beginnings of ſinne be reſiſted?

Queſt. 1. Firſt, becauſe the leaſt ſinnes are moſt deſpiſed and ſlighted, and therefore doe moſt eaſily and frequently prevaile with us: wherefore it is not without need to prevent the ſmall beginnings of ſin.

Anſw. 1. Secondly, becauſe ſinne is a ſeede, a graine of Muſtard-ſeede, which acquires height, and growth, and ſtrength, by little and little. Nemo ſtatim ſit peſſimus: as a garden is not quite overgrown with weeds in an inſtant, but being neglected a while, they begin to ſpread and diſperſe themſelves: ſo a man becomes not a divell incarnate at once, but ſinne by degrees ſeaſeth upon him, and at length wholy ſurpriſeth him: As for example, from theſe verſes.

Anſw. 2. I. Comes careſulneſſe for the things of this world: from hence,

II. Comes feare, and doubting leaſt wee ſhould want, and be expoſed to povertie: from hence,

III. Comes Oportet habere, wee muſt have ſomething to lay up for the time to come: from hence,

IV. Omne ſaxum volvitur, no meanes is left unſought of enriching our ſelves, from hence,

V. Comes a covetous detaining and reſerving of what wee have; not imparting of it unto any good uſe, from hence,

VI. Comes a certaine hope and truſt in what wee have laid up: wee begin to make an idoll of our riches, ſaying unto gold thou art my God, and unto the wedge of Gold thou art my confidence. And therefore there is great reaſon that we ſhould reſiſt the leaſt motions and beginnings of ſin.

Queſt. 2. What are thoſe ſmall ſinnes which wee muſt take heed of?

First, the leaſt circumſtances of ſinne, wee muſt hate the garment ſpotted with the fleſh, and abſtaine from all appearances of evill. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, the occaſions of ſinne, for otherwiſe we cannot be free from ſin it ſelfe. David by not avoyding the occaſions of idleneſſe, and giving his eyes leave to rove, was drawn unto adultery. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, our internall affections; becauſe thoſe are the roots of all evill: and therefore muſt be mortified. Anſw. 3.

§. 4. Take no thought for your life, what you ſhall eat, &c.] Sect. 4.

Why doth our Saviour condemne care about temporall things? Queſt.

Firſt, becauſe it afflicts the heart: or (as Salomon cals it) is the vexation of the ſpirit, Eccleſ. 1. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, becauſe it hinders the fructification of the word: thorny cares hinder hearing, Matthew. 13. A Philoſopher going to Athens to ſtudy, caſt away, and forſooke all his riches, and poſſeſſions, that his minde might bee the more free for the ſearch of wiſedom and knowledge: ſo when men come to heare, or read, or meditate, or pray, they had neede caſt away all worldly care from them, otherwiſe they will utterly diſtract their minds from the duties in hand. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, worldly cares make us forget God, and doe eſtrange the ſoule from God. Anſw. 3.

§. 5. Is not the life more then meat, and the body then raiment?] Sect. 5.

Our Saviour implyes here in generall, that the things of greateſt importance, are moſt to be looked after: we muſt have more care of our bodyes then of our apparell, of our ſoules then of our bodies: becauſe as the body excels raiment, ſo doth the ſoule the body. Obſer. 1.

Wherein doth the ſoule excell the body or why is it more to bee regarded, and cared for? Queſt. 1.

Firſt, it is better, and therefore more to bee regarded, in reſpect of the creation thereof, for the body was created of the duſt of the earth, but the ſoule was imprinted by God, and infuſed, being created a pure and immateriall ſubſtance, without ſin, according to his own Image. Anſw. 1.

Secondly, the ſoule is better then the body, and more to bee cared for, in regard of the office thereof; God created both the ſoule and body to ſerve him, but principally the ſoule: for the body with Martha is daily troubled about many things, but the ſoule with Mary ſhould attend wholy upon God, and ſuffer nothing to harbour there but what is holy, and pure: yea the ſoule muſt love nothing but God, as the wife with a conjugall love muſt love none beſides her husband. Anſw. 2.

Thirdly, the ſoule is more excellent then the body (and therefore more to bee cared for) in regard of the nature and ſubſtance thereof: the body is mortall, the ſoule immortall, the body of a corporall ſubſtance, the ſoule of a ſpirituall. the body partly (and in ſome ſort wholy) Anſw. 3

ly) from man, but the soule wholly from God; the body of an earthly nature, the soule of a spirituall.

Quest. 2. Why must our care and affections be set upon the best things, to wit spirituall?

Answ. 1. First, because this argues our wisedome, whereas the contrary would argue us to be but foolish and childish.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because temporall things will not endure, but spirituall graces will.

Answ. 3 Thirdly, because the most profitable temporall things are but meanes to preserve the body, and temporall life; but spirituall graces are profitable both for body and soule, both here and hereafter for ever.

Dost thou desire
- First, Riches?
- Secondly, Houses?
- Thirdly, an Inheritance?
- Fourthly, friends and good companions, because thou art a sociable creature?
- Fifthly, Honour?
- Sixthly, Wisedome with Salomon?
- Seventhly, pleasure, as Salomon once did?
- Eightly, Marriage, dost thou thinke a good Wife or Husband a principall comfort?

Then Remember
- Godlinesse is great riches, and the best treasure [a]. a 1 Tim. 6 6.
- In heaven there are many mansions [b]. b Ioh. 14. 2.
- There is an inheritance immortall prepared for those who serve God. 1 Pet. 1. 4,
- That on earth thou shalt be admitted into the society of the Saints, and in heaven thou shalt have fellowship with God and Christ, and the Saints, and Angels [c]. c Ps. 16. 3. and Heb. 12. 22. and 1 Ioh. 1. 3.
- That in heaven thou shalt raigne, and be endued with a kingdome [d]. d Rom. 8. 17
- That in the word is true wisedome; it being able to make us wise unto salvation [e]. e 2 Tim. 4. 8.
- That true solide, perpetuall, and eternall joy is onely to be found in the Lord, Phi. 4. 4 & Ioh. 16. 22.
- That the Lord will marry thee unto himselfe in righteousnesse, in judgement, in loving kindnesse, and in mercy, and betroth thee unto him in faithfulnesse [f]. f Hos. 2. 19, 20.

We may here observe our Saviours argument a majori ad minus, God hath given you the greater things, therefore he will give you the lesse: he hath given you life, therefore he will not deny food; hee hath given you a body, therefore he will not with-hold raiment: Teaching us hereby:

Obser. 2. That the experience we have of Gods mercies in greater things, should make us more confidently hope for, and expect the lesse: Thus David saith, He that delivered me from the Lyon and Beare, will deliver me from this Philistine [g]: As if he would say, it is lesse dangerous for man to combat with man, then for man to combat with a Beare or Lyon; now God delivered me from the greater perill, and therefore I dare trust him in the lesse. Thus Saint Paul saith, Hee who hath given Christ for you, and unto you, will withhold nothing from you, Rom. 8. 32. g 1 Sa. 17. 37.

Quest. 3. How doth it appeare that spirituall graces are more necessary and delightfull and profitable for us then corporall, that we must thus prefer them before all temporall things?

Answ. Because whatsoever we desire or long for in temporall things, we may finde in spirituall, and that after a more singular and ample manner, as for example.

Quest. 4. Why may we so boldly rely upon God for future blessings, after the receit of former mercies?

Answ. 1. First, because the Lord gives nothing casually, but upon most wise counsell, and mature deliberation.

Answ. 2. Secondly, because God is never weary of doing good unto those who serve him.

Quest. 5. Doth our Saviour forbid all carefulnesse for temporall things?

Answ. There is a two-fold care, viz.
- First, a godly moderate care which is injoyned us by Commandement (Read, Prov. 6. 6, and 2 Cor. 12. 14. and 1 Tim. 5. 8.)
- Secondly, a distrustfull carking care, whereby men trouble themselves about the issue of their labours, and when they have done their indeavours; dare not rest therewith, but vexe themselves about the successe, not relying on Gods providence for the blessing, but onely on the meanes.

The practise of which care stands in these two things, namely,
- First, a diligent walking in our calling, dealing uprightly with all men, onely minding honest and necessary things.
- Secondly, a committing of the successe and issue of all our labours and endeavours to God, As Genesis 22. 8. Exodus 14. 13.

Now the effects of this care are three namely,
- First, it oppresseth the heart, making it exceeding heavy and pensive, for feare of want; for this care dares not trust God, but is in feare continually, untill he see the successe.
- Secondly, it draweth men to use unlawfull meanes, as lying, fraud, false weights and measures, &c.
- Thirdly, it makes men weary of Gods worship, it distracteth the minde in prayer, and hearing of the word, and suffers it not to bring forth fruit, Luke 8. 14. for when the mind is wholly set upon the world, there is no respect to the matters of God.

344 VERS. 26. Behold the foules of the aire, for they sowe not, neither doe they reape, nor gather into barnes, yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better then they?

Verſ. 26.

Sect. 1. §. 1. Behold the foules of the ayre.]

Christ here sends us to the creatures, that from them we may learne the goodnesse of the Creator:

Obſer. Or to teach us that we may and ought to read God in the booke of the creatures: God is read (we say usually) in three bookes, viz. I. In Christ. II. In the word. III. In the world. The Psalmist observes onely two bookes, namely, Heaven and the Word, Psal. 19.1. &c. Promisit Deus naturam, submissurus prophetiam. g. The world is a booke, wherein we may read God, in which booke are three leaves, the Heaven, the Earth, the Sea, and there are as many letters and histories in those leaves, as there are starres in the heaven, creatures in the earth, & fishes in the sea. (Clem. Alexand. & Sphinx. pag. 37.) all which are ἄμισθοι διδάσκαλοι (Rhod. 8. 17.) Schoolmasters which will teach us gratis, without any salarie.

g Tertul. de resurre. carn.

Queſt. 1. What must we reade in the creatures?

Anſw. There is nothing which will not shew either God, or our selves, or both unto us; and therefore wee should passe by nothing slightly, but meditate seriously of all things that occurre.

Queſt. 2. Wherein may we see or read God?

Anſw. 1. First, we may read the providence of God in these things, namely. I. When we see so many flockes of Ravens, and birds, who neither sowe, nor reape, nor have store-houses, nor barne, and yet are fed, Luke 12. 24. II. When wee heare the young Ravens crying (Psal. 147. 9.) because they call unto God (Iob 39.3.) for food and hee feedeth them. III. When the Hen gathers her chickins under her wings: God offring thus to doe with us, if we will but obey him, Mat. 23.37. IV. When we see the beautifull Lillyes, verſ. 28. V. When we have showres in season; that is the former and latter raine, Ier. 5. 24.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, we may read the protection of God, when we see Sparrowes multiply so fast, because I. Their lives are but short, they cõtinue but two years ordinarily, Barthol. II. They have many enemies: as First, the Kite, nd (almost) all sorts of Hawkes. Secondly, Cats, and Weasels. Thirdly, Men which are the worst enemies of all. For first they build in houses and barnes, & Secondly, flie by flocks, & so many fall together into the net. And yet for all this they increase extreamely: Thus it was with the Martyrs in the Primitive Church; the more they were persecuted, the more religion flourished and increased.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we may read the mercy of God, in the lambe who is dumbe before the shearer; Christ being thus for our sakes, Esa. 53.7. Acts 8.32.

Anſw. 4. Fourthly, we may read his power, in Behemoth, and Leviathan, Iob 40. And the Lyons, who seek their prey from the Lord, Psalme 104. 22.

Queſt. 3. In what creatures or things may wee read our selves?

Anſw. 1. First, we may read, what we ought to be, from these creatures, viz. I. From the Ante we may learne to be industrious and providently carefull, Prov. 6. 6. II. From the Doves we may learne to be simple, harmelesse, and innocent, Mat. 10. 16. III. From the Lambs we may learne to be meek, gentle, and patient, Mat. 10. 16. Ioh. 21. 16.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, wee may read what we are from these things, namely. I. From our shadow we learne that our lives are short, Iob 8,9. II. From the Oxe at the stall, we may learne our unthankefulnesse, Esa. 1.3. III. From the Oxe going to the slaughter, we may learne our folly in sinne (Prov. 7. 22.) the end whereof is destruction, although we follow it merrily. Dum ruit ad cædem simplex lascivit ut agnus.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, we may read the danger we are in by reason of temptation, in these things, to wit: I. In the sweetnesse of hony; because sin seeems so unto our taſt, although it bee bitter in the belly, Prov. 5. 3. II. By fire in the bosome, which burnes him that carrieth it (Prov. 6.27.) so he who harboureth temptation in his heart at length is scorched with the flame of sinne. III. By birds escaped from the snare of the fouler (Prov. 6 5.) because if they had not escaped, they had dyed, so except we escape from the snares of the Divell, we perish, 2 Tim. 2. 26.

Sect. 2. §. 2. Behold the foules of the aire, &c.]

Queſt. 1. What creatures doth Christ send us unto to learne of, and to reade God in?

Anſw. 1. First, not unto Lyons, or beasts of prey, but birds.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, not unto household foules, which are fed by the family, but unto birds which live of themselves.

Queſt. 2. Why of all birds doth Christ send us to the Ravens? Luke 12. 24.

Anſw. 1. First, because of all other birds almost they are the most hated. Gualt. ſ. Or Anſw. 2. Secondly, because the old ones never feede the young, untill some blacke feathers appeare upon them. Barthol, 12. 11. ex Iſidor. And therefore all the meane time they are fed by the dew of heaven. Barth. ex Auguſt. or with wormes and maggots which are bread in the nest: as Sphynx. 85. Or Anſw. 3. Thirdly, because by their old ones they are quickly expelled and driven from the nest, to shift for themselves. Plin. 10. 12. ſic Calvin. Hence the foules of the ayre are called Alites, Birds, Non ſolum quia alatæ, ſed quia alitæ ab eo qui omnia alit. (Barth. 12. 1. ex Iſid.) Not onely because they are winged creatures, but because they are nourished by him who feedeth all things. Thus our Saviour would have us learne of the birds, because they are more neere unto Gods helpe, and more remote from mans.

Queſt. 3. What must we learne of the birds?

Anſ. 1. First, foules of the aire are of a more pure, light, and noble nature (Barthol. 12. 1.) they have fewer humours, and are lesse earthly, then beasts or fishes; and are more airy and hot, and therefore endure the longer. (Rhod. 2. 18.) so wee should labour to be pure, and holy, yea a chosen people, and a royall generation unto God.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, birds are of a more strong and swift motion (Barth. 12. 1.) so our affections should be quicke, and ready, and strong in our obedience, and the fruits of a new life.

Thirdly,

Answ. 3. Thirdly, birds are more quick and sharpe-sighted (Barth. ib.) so should we in all spirituall wisedome and knowledge, Colos. 3. 16.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, foules are fatter in winter; so wee should serve God most zealously, and cheerefully in the winter of persecution and martyredome.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, they only depend upon God for their foode; so we should not expect so much as the huskes from the husbandman, or our own labour; but all from him who feedeth all.

Answ. 6. Sixthly, they labour diligently for their food, flying from place to place, seeking it here and there, but they are not solicitously carefull. Thus should we doe, as was shewed before verse 25. quest. last.

Seventhly, they frequent the heavens, and that
- First, Securitatis causâ, because there they are most safe; so wee should flie unto the mountaines, because true securitie is to be found only in God.
- Secondly, Delectationis causâ because they delight to bee there: the larke mounts with great delight, and hovers long in the aire, with great joy: so wee should set our affections upon those things which are above, Colos. 3. 1. and mind heavenly things; having our conversation and delight in heaven.

Sect. 3. § 3. Yet your heavenly Father feedeth them.]

Quest. 1. Why doth Christ adde this phrase, your heavenly Father?

Answ. That he might withdraw their mindes from all earthly ayde; as if he would say, your father whom you shall hereafter see in heaven, provideth for them, and therefore will much more for you.

Our Saviour teacheth us by this phrase, That we never fully and perfectly possesse and injoy God, untill we come unto that heavenly estate, Philip. 3. 20. Colos. 3. 1, &c. 1 John 3. 1. &c.

Quest. 2. How doth it appeare that wee shall not fully partake God untill we come unto heaven?

Answ. 1. First, it appeares by the place of perfect fruition, which is heaven; as is expressed in all these places, Phil. 3. 20. Colos. 1. 5. Heb. 11. 10, 13, 14. 16. and 2 Tim. 4. 8. and 1 Pet. 1. 4. In all which places is expressed, that the expectation of glory, honour, joy, and felicity, is in heaven.

Answ. 2. Secondly, it appeares by the heavenly nature of God, who cannot bee apprehended but after an heavenly manner.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, it appeares by that fruition which we have for the present, where wee see darkely, and obscurely, and that fruition which is promised for the time to come, when wee shall see as wee are seene. Reade for the proofe hereof, 1 Cor. 1. 9. and Ephes. 1. 3. and 2. 6. and Heb. 3. 1. and 12. 22. 2 Cor. 3. 18.

Quest. 3. If we cannot perfectly enjoy God in this life, then how shall we be sure that we shall possesse him in the life to come.

Labour for a heavenly conversation; and strive to live and leade a life on earth, as though thou wert in heaven, and then thou shalt certainly after death fully enjoy him. 345 Answ.

Quest. 4. Wherein doth this heavenly conversation consist?

Answ. 1. First, in a heavenly preparation; that we may be presented as chast virgins to Christ, 2 Cor. 11. 2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, in a holy and heavenly life, living wholy unto God and his Christ (Gal. 2. 20.) that is, walking in the waies of God, and living the life of faith, and framing our conversations according to the will of God revealed in his word, denying our selves, and our owne wils.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, in heavenly meditations, and contemplations, filling our heads and hearts with divine thoughts and meditations, ruminating thereon day and night.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, in an heavenly expectation; as Saint Paul did, who expected Christ from heaven, 1 Thes. 1. 10. and rest with the Saints 2 Thes. 1. 7.

Sect. 4. §. 4. Are ye not much better then they?]

Obiect. Our Saviour in the foregoing words gives us an example, in these he gives the application thereof. Against Christs interrogation and scope it may be objected, Fuimus non sumus, we were indeede better then the other creatures once, but now we are not, but worse then they, and next unto the wicked Angels, having lost that goodnesse which was in us at first.

Answ. 1. First, mankind (toto genere) in generall is better yet then any kind of earthly creatures, because it retaines yet its naturall Image, that is, the reasonable soule.

Answ. 2. Secondly, men excell the other creatures by the Decree of creation, men being made (by Gods owne institution) the end of the creatures, they being created for his sake, and hee made Lord over all the creatures: And although by his sinne he have lost this dominion in part, yet he hath the service of them still, using them for his pleasure, profit, and foode.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, men are better then the other creatures in possibility: because God offereth unto mankinde, Christ the second Adam, and in him the grace of restitution, and reparation, unto a better state and condition, then they had in the first Adam.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, Christ reputes us here not as we are in sinne, but as we should be by repentance, and according to that place and office, whereunto we were created and ordained.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, Men are better then the other creatures, in the providence of God; because hee takes more care for men then for beasts, Doth God (saith Saint Paul) take care for oxen, that is, in comparison of men?

Observ. Our Saviour then by this interrogation doth point out unto us this observation, namely,

That Gods reputes men the best of his creatures: the rest of the creatures when they were created, were good, but man was made exceeding good, Gen. 1. 31. Psal. 8. 6, &c. Heb. 26, &c. Mat. 12. 12. Luke 13. 15.

How

346 How doth it appeare, that God thus highly eſteemeth man above the reſt of his creatures?

Queſt.1. Anſw.1. Firſt, it appeares by mans creation; for I. He made man after his owne Image; enduing him not with a body onely, but alſo with a ſoule. II. He ordaineth the world for man. 1 Cor. 3. 21. III. He prepared heaven for man; it is not onely reſerved, 1 Pet. 1. 4. or laid up, 2 Tim. 4. 8. but prepared, Mat. 25. 34. and 1 Cor. 2. 9. yea what is prepared? Manſions, Iohn 14. 2. and ſeats, Mat. 20. 23. And the ſinne of man cannot fruſtrate or make void the covenant and decree of God, Rom. 11. becauſe if thoſe fall for whom this kingdome is prepared, God will reſtore them againe by grace and repentance, Pſal. 37. 24.

Anſw.2. Secondly, it appeares by Gods preferring of us before the Angels.

Queſt.2. How doth God preferre man before the Angels?

Anſw.1. Firſt, in offering repentance unto us, which he did not unto the Angels, Jude 6. and 2 Pet. 2. 4.

Anſw.2. Secondly, in giving Chriſt for us, which hee did not for the Angels.

Anſw.3 Thirdly, in planting a Miniſterie in the world, for bringing men unto Repentance and unto Chriſt. Ephe. 4. 11.

Anſw.4. Fourthly, by giving the Spirit of God in our hearts.

Verſ.28. VERS.28. And why take ye thought for rayment? Conſider the Lillies of the field, how they grow: they toile not, neither doe they ſpinne.

And why take ye thought for rayment?

Queſt.1. Doth Chriſt here condemne apparell?

Anſw. No, but carefulneſſe for apparell: for procurande non curande veſtes Garments are to bee procured and provided, not to be cared for.

Queſt.2. Whether were and are garments neceſſary?

Anſw.1. Firſt, they were not from the beginning, that is, before ſinne; as appeares thus.

I. There was no uncleanneſſe, filthineſſe, or unſeemelineſſe in the body, in the firſt creation thereof.

II. There was no unſeaſonable weather, nor any hurtfulneſſe in the ayre before the curſe: And therefore till after the fall, there was no uſe of garments.

Anſw.2. Secondly, but now garments are neceſſarily uſed.

Queſt.3. What uſe is there of garments now a dayes?

Anſw.1 Firſt, they are now uſed to cover the nakedneſſe; this after ſinne was taught by nature, Gen. 3. and confirmed by God.

Anſw.2. Secondly, they now are uſed to defend us from heate and cold.

Anſw.3. Thirdly, for comlineſſe, and ornament; and for this cauſe was given unto Benjamin five changes of rayment, Gen. 4. 22.

Anſw.4. Fourthly to admoniſh us of
- Sinne, and our preſent uncleanneſſe thereby.
- The ornament of the ſoule; & how carefully that ſhould be adorned, 1 Tim. 2. 9. and 1 Pet. 3. 3, 4.

Fifthly, to diſtinguiſh
- First, ſexes, women from men, Deut. 22. 5.
- Secondly, ages, thus young Ioſeph had a garment of divers colours, Gen. 37. 3.
- Thirdly, orders; Thus ſometimes I. The Kings were diſtinguiſhed by their garments. II. Sometimes the Prieſts, Exod. 28. 2. and 29. 5. &c. III. Sometimes the Rich, Luk. 16. 15. Mat. 11. 8. IV. Sometimes the Poore, Eccleſ. 40. 1.
- Forthly, occaſions, actions, affections, and times: namely, I. Holy garments, Exod. 39. 1. and 40. 12. & Levit. 8. 8. and 16 4 II. Wedding garments Mat. 22. 11. III. Garments, of mirth, Exod. 33. 4. and Eſay 61. 3. IV. Mourning garments, ſackcloth, 2 King. 6. 30. V. Garments uſed for travellers on foot, on horſeback; by men warring, and ſleeping.

VERS. 29. And yet I ſay unto you, that even Salomon in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of theſe. Verſ.29.

§. 1. And yet I ſay unto you.]

Why doth our Saviour here uſe this aſſeveration, Tamen dico, yet I ſay unto you? Sect.1. Queſt.1.

To teach two things unto us: namely, I. That Chriſt is of another opinion in many things then the world is. II. That wee muſt beleeve Chriſt whatſoever the world ſaith. Anſw.

Firſt, Chriſt ſaith, I ſay unto you, as if he would ſay, Many (and it may bee you alſo) thinke otherwiſe, but I ſay it is thus; to teach us, That he teacheth many things otherwiſe then reaſon, opinion, or the world doth. He teacheth that the poore, and perſecuted are bleſſed, Mat. 5. 2. 11. 12. but the world thinks them miſerable. Hee teacheth that godlines is great gaine; but the world holds gaine godlineſſe. Reade, 1 Tim. 4. 8. & 5. 6. Obſer.1.

How doth it appeare that Chriſt, and reaſon, and the world teach contrarily? Queſt.2.

It is cleare by theſe three things, to wit; Anſw.

Firſt, Chriſt is truth it ſelfe, but reaſon is ignorant of the truth; Philoſophie it ſelfe looking upon man as pure, and hence affirming, that man following the conduct of nature cannot erre.

Secondly, reaſon, nature, and the world looke too much upon themſelves; but Chriſt teacheth us to looke upon God; nature and reaſon perſwadeth us to reſpect our ſelves more then Gods glory, as Peter ſaid, Maſter ſpare thy ſelfe, &c. Mat. 16. 22. but Chriſt teacheth us to ſeeke the glory of God in all things, and above all things, and to deny our ſelves, Mat. 16. 24.

Whether can a naturall man be the ſervant of God or not? Queſt.3.

No.

Answ. No, because he understands nothing beyond or above naturall reason. For the better taking up of this, observe;

What the naturall man
- Can understand: namely these things,
  - First, gaine, glory, quiet, peace, estimation, and the like;
  - Secondly, to avoide, grosse, enormious, and criminall offences.
  - Thirdly, to be of an affable, meeke and courteous nature, to bee true and just in his dealings, and injurious unto none.
- Cannot understand: namely, these sixe things, to with
  - First, what is meant by the purity of the heart.
  - Secondly, the presence of God to be every where.
  - Thirdly, the internall conduct, and direction of the Holy Ghost.
  - Fourthly, what is meant by the internall fulnesse of God, Ephes. 3.19.
  - Fifthly, to glorifie God, in every action.
  - Sixtly, to be zealous for Gods glory, and in Gods service. These things are strange unto him, untill hee bee taught them by Christ.

Secondly, Christ saith, I say unto you, as if he would say; it matters not what the world saith, Obser.2. but what I say: Teaching us that wee must beleeve the word of God, whatsoever reason, opinion, custome, or the world saith to the contrary, Ioh. 10.4.27. and 8.51.

Quest.4 Why must wee beleeve the word of God before all these?

Answ.1. First, the word is Christs and he is worthy to be beleeved before all these, Ioh. 1.1.14.

Answ.2. Secondly, the word is true, yea, a perpetuall truth, and therefore deserves to be believed, Esa. 40. 8.

Answ.3. Thirdly, the word regenerates us; and is the spirituall seed whereby we are begotten, *Iam.*1. 18. and 1 Pet. 1.23.

Answ.4. Fourthly, the word directs our life and conversation, Read *Psal.*19. and 119.

Answ.5. Fifthly, the word must judge us at the last day, and therefore is more worthy to believed then those things which neither must judge us, nor we be judged by, Ioh. 12.48. and *Rom.*2.16. and 2 Thes. 1. 8.

Sect.2. §. 2. Salomon in all his glory was not arayed like one of these.]

Quest. How did the Lillies exceede Salomon in glory?

Answ.1. First, the ornaments of Salomon in all his glory were but artificiall, but the cloathing of the lillies are naturall: and looke how farre nature exceedeth art, (for art is but an imitatrix of nature; and her perfection is to imitate nature) Therefore the Lillies exceed Salomon in all his glory.

Answ.2. Secondly, Salomon when he was so gloriously decked; was beholden to many creatures, hee was beholden to Egypt for his linnen, to the earth for his gold, to the silke-worme for his silke, to the shell-fish for his purple, and had nothing of his owne; so that if every one of those should have clamed their owne, he would have stood like Æsops crow, stript of all, when every one of the foules craved their owne feathers which they had lent her; But the Lillie is beholden to no other for its beauty, and therefor doth exceede Salomon in all his glory.

Answ.3. Thirdly when Salomon was cloathed thus, it was but a remembrance to him of his fall, and he had as little cause to glory in these ornaments, as a man hath to glory in the velvet patch or plaister that covereth his wound; but the beauty of the lillie is naturall, it covereth not the shame of it; Therfore the lillie exceedes Salomon in all his glory.

Fourthly, Salomon in all his glory was but one, Answ.4. and much adoe there was to get one Salomon so decked and cloathed: But all the lillies of the field are so cloathed; Therfore the lillie exceeds Salomon in all his glory.

Fifthly, Salomon was arrayed in all his glory Answ.5. but sometimes; but the lillies so spring, so continue untill they wither and die: Therefore they exceede Salomon in all his glory.

Sixthly, Salomon was thus arrayed by men, Answ.6. but the lillies by God: therefore their glory is more excellent.

Verse. 30. Wherefore if God so cloath the grasse of the field, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven: shall hee not much more cloth you, O yee of little faith? Vers.30.

§ 1. Shall hee not much more cloth you?]

Sect.1. The scope of our Saviour in this verse is to Obser. shew, that we are neater to the love of God, then the other creatures are; or to teach us, that whatsoever good things God gives to the creatures, he will much more give unto us, except we provoke him, Reade Matth 12. 12. & Luke 13.15. & 14.5.

Quest.1. Why will God give good things much more to men then to other creatures, seeing man is but the workmanship of God as they are?

Answ.1. First, because man is a more durable creature then the herbes, or grasse, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven: and a more noble creature then the rest.

Pronaque cum spectant animalia cætera terram
Os homini sublime dedit, cælumque videre Iussit, &c.

The eye of man up to Heaven is cast;
The eye of beasts upon the earth is plac't.

Answ.2. Secondly, because God hath given man rule, and 348 and dominion over the creatures, Psa. 8.6,&c. Heb. 2.7.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because man is created for Gods glory, but the other creatures for mans good. 1. Cor. 3.21.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, man was prepared unto eternall glory, the beasts unto an earthly and temporary subsistence, and being.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, God loves man more then the rest; doth God (saith the Apostle) take care for oxen? Rom. 9.9. that is, not in comparison of men. And therefore all these considered, we may bee certainly assured that if wee doe not ponere obicem, provoke the Lord by our sins, he will not with-hold from us those good things, which he bestowes upon the other creatures, or have lesse care of us, then he hath of them.

Quest. 2. Is not the love of God perfect? and if so then how doth he love man more then the rest of his creatures?

Answ. Although the love of God bee perfect in it selfe, yet it is graduated in the creatures, according to the decree of God, who in this order hath determined to love, namely,

I. Before all things his glory best.

II. Next unto his glory, the elect.

III. Next unto them, mankinde, or the rest of men.

IV. And lastly the creatures.

Quest. 3. How may we obtaine from God those good things which we want?

Answ. We must doe as the children of God were wont to doe of old, to wit, beg them at his hands, as for example.

Doth thou want or desire

- First, bread to eate?
- Secondly, that thy estate may bee encreased, and multiplied?
- Thirdly, that thou maist bee blessed in thy undertaking of marriage?
- Fourthly, Children?
- Fifthly, freedome from thy foes?
- Sixthly, instruction in any doubts?
- Seventhly, the continuance of of life?
- Eightly, the pardon of thy sin?
- Ninthly, freedom from temptation?

Then doe as did

Sect. 2. §. 2. Oh yee of little faith.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of these words?

Answ. 1. First, our Saviour doth not here taxe infidels, but the debility and weakenesse of beleevers.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our Saviour speakes here unto the Apostles, who were not without faith; as may appeare by the diligent view of these places, Matthew 8.26. & 14.31. & 16.8.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the meaning therefore is, that weakenesse of faith hinders them from trust, confidence, and cheerful dependance upon God.

Obser. Wee learne hence, that there may be true faith which is weake; there is a smoaking flaxe, and bruised reed. Esa. 42.3. & Matthew 12.20.

Quest. 2. How doth this appeare, that faith may bee both true and weake?

Answ. 1. First, sometimes the Sunne is obscured by the interposition of a cloud: and sometimes the Lord hideth his face that wee cannot see him, Psalme 22.1,2.

Answ. 2. Secondly, there is sincerity without strength.

Answ. 3. How many-fold is this weakenesse?

Twofold, namely either

- First, in apprehension; when the knowledge is weake.
- Secondly, in application; when a man cannot certainly lay hold upon Christ; but is like him in the Gospel who said; Lord I beleeve, helpe my unbeliefe, Mark 9.24.

Quest. 4. How may a weake faith be knowne to bee true?

Answ. 1. First, the weake true faith is but of short time; or is but newly and lately infused, 1. Peter. 2.1. where there is life in an infant there is daily growth, insomuch as from a child it comes to be a man, except it be a dwarfe or monster in nature: And therefore they should suspect the truth of their faith, who are alwaies children, and both weake in knowledge and application.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the weake true faith is humble, sorrowing and blushing for sinne, and iniquity, though by-past, and mourning for her present weakenesse in application: true faith sorrowes, because she is weake.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, true faith though weake yet brings forth some good fruits of obedience, Galath. 5.6. Iam. 2.14.

Quest. 5. What are the effects of weakenesse of faith?

Answ. As infidelity in toto, so debility in tanto causeth much evill; as for example.

First, weakenesse of faith, sometimes drives unto the use of wicked meanes; a feare to want things necessary often hurryes men unto covetouscovetousnesse, oppression, usury, and covenant-breaking.

Secondly, often it brings men to murmuring, feares, terrours, and sorrowes unto death, 2 Cor. 7. 10.

Thirdly, it hinders from the hearing of the word in part, because they are not sure of the presence of God with the word, not of the aide and assistance of the spirit in the hearing thereof.

Fourthly, it makes prayer tedious; because we are not sure, that thereby we and therein we talke with God, as a man with his friend.

Fifthly, weakenesse of faith cannot bring a man unto peace of conscience, Phil. 4. 7.

And therefore it is not enough to examine, whether we have faith; but we must also examine whether our faith increase and bee strong or not.

Quest. 6. How may he know whether our faith bee strong or not?

Answ. By these plain markes or signes, to wit.

First, canst thou in all things cast thy selfe into the armes of Christ, and commit thy selfe wholy unto him?

Secondly, canst thou hope and expect, and see the presence and helpe of Christ, even without meanes, and contrary to meanes? dost thou walke by faith not by sight?

Thirdly, canst thou in crosses, afflictions, and tempotall disasters (for Christs sake) rejoyce, Rom. 8. 35.

Fourthly, canst thou despise and contemne the world, using it as though thou usedst it not[c]? because thou hast built thy nest in the Rocke, and placed thy confidence upon a surer stay then the world is, namely upon Christ, who hath promised never to faile or forsake thee.

[c] 1 Cor. 7. 30.

Fifthly, dost thou daily increase both in faith, love, obedience, zeale, and all graces, 1. Peter. 2. 2.

Quest. 7. What meanes must we use for the increasing of our faith?

Answ. 1. First, the Word of God: that is, be diligent in hearing the Word of God publikely both read & preached. Rom. 10. 17. Iam. 1. 18. & 1 Pet. 1. 25. And also carefull privately to reade it. Psalme. 119.

Secondly, purge the conscience, and purifie the heart, Iames 4. 8. And examine both thoughts, words, and workes, by the Word of God.

Thirdly, meditate daily, upon these things, namely,

I. How true and faithfull God is in all his promises.

II. How unspeakeable the love of Christ hath been and is towards his children.

III. What experience the Saints have had of the care and love of God and Christ towards them.

IV. What sweetnes there is to bee found in Christ: to wit, in the fruition and possession of him in the soule by a lively faith, Psalme 34. 8.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, pray daily unto God, and that fervently, earnestly, and with a hungring affection and desire after his grace, Cantic. 1. 3. 5. 8 & 8. 6. 7. And 2. perseverantly and patiently both continuing in Prayer. Rom. 12. 12. And expecting untill the Lord comes: for faithfull is he who hath promised, who will come and will not tarry.

VERSE. 31, 32. Therefore take no thought saying, what shall we eat, or what shall we drink, or wherewith shall wee be clothed? (for after all these things, do the Gentiles seeke) for your heavenly Father knoweth, that yee have need of all these things. Vers. 31. 32.

§. 1. Therefore take no thought.]

Why doth our Saviour so often repeate this prohibition of worldly care, as verse 19, 25, 31, 34? Sect. 1. Quest. 1.

First, sometimes repetitions are used for the excellency of the thing; as rejoyce in the Lord alwayes and againe rejoyce. Phil. 4. 4. But not so in this place. Answ. 1.

Secondly, sometimes repetitions are used for the setting forth of the greatnes of the offence; or because the thing reiterated is odious unto God; Thus the Lord repeats againe and againe, that for three transgressions and for foure he will visite Damascus, Tyre, Edom, Moab, Israel, and Iudah. Amos. 1. 3, 6, 9, 11. & Thus Christ often in one speach cryeth out; woe be unto you Scribes, Pharises, Hypocrites. Matthew 23. 13, 14, 15, 16. 23. 25. 17. 29. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, sometimes repetitions are used for our weaknes, and for the difficulty of the thing forbidden or injoyned; as hee, that hath eares to heare let him heare, Marke 4. 9. 23. 3. And thus this prohibition is repeated in this place; because the duty is so hard in regard of our nature. Answ. 3.

Who are faulty in this particular, or who offend against this prohibition? Quest. 2.

First, those who acquire riches unjustly, and with an evill conscience: to wit, by rapine, fraud, usury, and oppression. Answ. 1.

Secondly, those who are basely covetous, with-holding those things from themselves and theirs, which are requisite, and convenient. Answ. 2.

Thirdly, those also who are inwardly troubled with care for worldly things; for it argues that, Answ. 3.

I. Their faith is but weak, if they have any. And

II. That earthly things take up their minde too much.

May we not take care for necessary things? Quest. 3.

First, we may curâ providentiæ, with a provident care. Answ 1.

Secondly, we may not curâ diffidentiæ, with a distrustfull care; and that for these causes, Answ. 2.

I. Because the Law of God is of more worth then our lives; and the glory of God then our safety; and therefore no necessity must cause us to infringe the Law of God, or to dishonour him.

II. Because our distrustfull care helpes us not at all, neither doth us any good. Quæ stul-

350 titia de ijs ſolicitum eſſe quæ habebis non ſolicitus; & de ijs non, quæ non niſi ſolicitus. VVhat folly

e Chryſoſt op. imperf. is it for a man to bee careſull for thoſe things, which hee ſhall have without his taking care for them (verſe 33.) and to bee careleſſe of thoſe things; which hee hath no promiſe to obtaine without carefulneſſe: as in the next verſe, there is no hope of ſpirituall graces or eternall glory without ſeeking, and therefore we are commanded to ſeeke them, but concerning temporall things wee have a promiſe, that they ſhall be given unto us without our ſeeking, that is, without our caring for them: And therefore wee are forbidden to take thought for them in this verſe.

III. Becauſe theſe temporall things helpe nothing for the ſalvation of the ſoule; A man in regard of his ſpirituall eſtate is neither better by having, nor worſe by wanting theſe outward things: And therefore by no meanes muſt wee diſtruſtfully care for them?

Queſt. 4. By what meanes may we avoide this unwarrantable care?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, let us learne to ſuffer, to bee afflicted, and to want, and then wee ſhall take no thought, Iam. 2. 9.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, doe not meditate upon theſe temporall things; caſt the remembrance of them out of thy mind, and it will be a meanes to keepe thee from taking thought for them.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, fill thy heart with ſpirituall meditations; that ſeeing thy ſoule to bee rich within in ſpirituall grace, thou maiſt the better contemne and deſpiſe theſe outward things.

Sect. 2. § 2. Saying, what ſhall we eate, or what ſhall wee drinke, &c.]

Our Saviour here ſheweth, that God obſerves and takes notice of our very words.

Queſt. 1. VVhy doth God obſerve our words?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, becauſe hee takes notice of all things (his knowledge being infinite) And therefore alſo of our words.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, becauſe he expects that we ſhould glorify him in our words; and therefore hee markes whether we doe it or not, Rom. 10. 10. Coloſ. 4. 6.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly; becauſe all ſinfull words offend him, and therefore he obſerves all our words, that he may puniſh thoſe which are not good.

VVhat words doth the Lord heare and marke? Queſt. 2.

Firſt, all our evill and wicked words, namely, Anſ. 1.

I. All our murmurings, grudgings, and repinings, Exodus 16. 6. 7. 8. & Numbers 14. 27. & 16. 41.

II. All our blaſphemous, and atheiſticall words, Pſ. 14. 1. & 53. 1.

III. All our inſulting words, Ezech. 35. 12, 13.

IV. All our bragging and boaſting words, Pſ. 10. 5, 6. & Eſa. 47. 8.

V. All our threatning, and cruell words, 2 Kin. 19. 23. & Eſa. 37. 29.

VI. All our idle words, Mat. 12. 36.

Secondly, the Lord heares all our good words, namely, Anſw. 2.

I. All the Prayers we offer up unto him. Pſal. 50. 16. Eſa. 65, 24. Apoc. 8. 3.

II. All our mournfull ditties, Pſalme 56. 8. Exod. 3. 7.

III. All our penitentiall words, Ieremie 31. 18.

IV. All our pious, and religious words, Mala. 3. 16.

VERSE 33. But ſeeke yee firſt the Kingdom of God, and his righteouſneſſe, and all theſe things ſhall be added unto you. Verſ. 33.

§. 1. But ſeeke] Sect. 1.

Our Saviour having ſhewed, what wee muſt not doe, doth now teach what wee muſt doe: this verſe being a prolepſis.

If wee muſt take no thought for the world, then what muſt we doe? muſt we ſit ſtill, and be idle, and take care for nothing? Obiect. 1.

To this Chriſt anſwers, nothing leſſe, but we muſt bend and place our care upon greater, better, and more excellent things, namely, the Kingdome of Heaven, and the righteouſneſſe thereof. Anſw.

How may this verſe be divided? Queſt. 1.

Anſw. Into two parts, viz.

- A precept wherein are theſe two things,
  - Firſt, the things which are to bee ſought for.
    - The Kingdome of God.
    - The righteouſneſſe thereof.
  - Secondly, the manner of attaining them, viz. by.
    - Seeking of them.
    - Seeking of them firſt.
- A Promiſe. And all theſe things ſhall be added.

I plainly divide this verſe, becauſe ſome thing ſhall be ſaid of every particular thereof.

Queſt. 2. What is meant by this word Seeke?

Anſw. 1. Firſt, ſometimes it ſignifies to ſeeke after revenge, and evill: this belongs not to this place.

Anſw. 2. Secondly, ſometimes it ſignifies to ſeeke God, and ſo it is taken for the whole body of Religion, as ſeeke the Lord, and yee ſhall live. Amos 5. 8. And I have ſought thee with my whole heart.

Thirdly, Seeking is a diligent act, and an act to bee continued, untill wee have found that which wee ſeeke for: The woman ſeekes diligently, and continues ſeeking untill ſhee have found her groate. So here Seeking demonſtrates labour, induſtry, and paines. Anſw. 3.

Who are commanded here to ſeeke the Kingdom of God? Queſt. 3.

All men, of all ſorts, ages, and degrees. Anſw.

Why muſt all ſeeke the kingdome of God? Queſt. 4.

Firſt, becauſe it is ſimply neceſſary unto happineſſe. Anſw. 1.

pinesse, and blessednesse, as followes afterward.

Answ.2. Secondly, because by reason of Adams fall we have lost this kingdome, and are deprived of it, Rom. 3.23.

Answ.3. Thirdly, because wee can never obtaine it without seeking, 2 Chron. 15.2. Mat. 7.7. And therefore it is necessary that all the sonnes of Adam should seeke God.

Quest.5 What is our Saviours principall scope and meaning in this exhortation?

Answ. To teach us that the kingdome of God is not idly to be expected, but earnestly to be laboured for. Or that none can be made partakers either of the kingdome of grace or of glory, without much labour, industry, and paines, Read Deut. 4.29. Heb. 4.11. Luk. 13.24. and 2 Pet. 1.5.10. and 3.14. It is hard to live well, easie to die well; hard to obtain heaven, easie to keep from thence: he that adventured at the Olympik games must overthrow all difficulties, so wee in our journey to heaven. The old painters drew Timotheus the Athenian Captaine in lively colours; harnessed and well weaponed, and so sleeping and abiding in his tent; and fortune catching Cities and Regions for him in a Net. We must not think that we may take our pleasur and be negligent in the worke of God, upon a foolish expectation, and hope, that fortune will catch heaven for us.

Observ.

Quest.6. What can wee doe of our selves, can we by our labour procure heaven?

Answ.1. First, certainely our nature is so corrupt that we can never obtaine heaven, viribus naturæ, by the strength of nature.

Answ.2. Secondly, we must not expect grace from God, without our sedulous endeavour. Archelaus the Philosopher learning Geometrie of Hipponicus, was so dull, and yet so well learned therein, that Hipponicus would say, surely Geometry fell into his mouth as he gaped. We must not thinke that heaven will come with an idle expectation, or fall unto our share unawares, for it must bee sought; or it can never be found.

Obiect.2 Some may here object, if heaven cannot bee had without our labour and paines, then woe be unto us; for wee are both unfit, unwilling, and unable for this worke.

Answ. We should not be discouraged, because the Lord offers life and salvation unto us upon easie conditions, he doth not say that we must procure heaven, with infinit labours and sufferings, but onely that we must seeke it, in this verse. As the Physition doth shew the disease, and direct, and prescribe the physicke, and prepare the medicine; and the sicke man doth but onely take the physicke, and followe the directions; so the Lord doth shew us our sins, and the danger of them, and the remedy against them, and commandeth us onely to use the meanes, and promiseth then to blesse and heale us: for our Saviour hath said, Seeke and ye shall find [f].

[f] Mat.7.7.

Quest 7. Whether doth God give heaven unto his servants gratis, or not, for it seemes he doth not, if we must procure it with labour and paines.

Answ. The Kingdome of Heaven is given freely (The gift of God is eternall life, Rom. 6.23.) we being no way able to deserve it, and that both because our workes are imperfect, as also because they are but debts which we owe unto God and a man merits nothing for paying what he owes.

But heaven is called wages or reward, Mat. 5.12. and 6.1. great is your reward: And therefore it is not given gratis, but ex debito, of debt, Obiect.3.

First, the Lord is pleased to use this phrase of speech for the comforting of our hearts, and encouraging of us unto obedience, because it shall be rewarded. Answ.1.

Secondly, it is rightly called a Reward, but such a reward as we are not able to merit, and therefore is given unto us as children not as servants, or workmen: for the better taking up of this, observe a double difference betweene a Workman and a child, namely,

- First, to a workeman is given a condigne reward, which he hath deserved, but to a child is given more then he hath deserved: As a father thinkes a smal punishment enough to give a child for a great offence; so also he thinkes not a great reward too much to give for a little obedience. Answ.2.
- Secondly, to a workeman wages is given, if he deserve it, but to a child if he doe but indeavour to doe what his father commands, although he is not able to doe it. And thus the Lord doth with us, giving the Kingdome of Heaven to those who labour for it, though by their owne labour they are never able to procure it.

Thirdly, although the Lord is pleased to encourage us to labour by promising of a reward, yet the true name of Heaven is an Inheritance 1. Pet. 1.4. because that is derived from the father unto the sonne, by vertue of his sonship, and not for any deserts. Answ.3.

Why cannot heaven be procured without labour and paine? Quest.8.

First, because temporall things cannot be had without much labour, and care, and toile; therefore much lesse spirituall, much lesse eternall. Answ.1.

Impiger extremos curris Mercator ad Indos,
Per mare pauperiem fugiens, per saxa, per ignes.

The carefull Merchant sea and land doth trace;
That by that meanes wealth may flow apace.

Secondly, because Christ doth not save us without our assent, or comming unto him: as appeares thus: Answ.2.

I. God hath given unto us faculties of the soule, that by them we might glorifie him. Wee differ from inanimate things by nature, shall we not therefore differ from them in action? they are alwaies meerely passive, but we should be active. God who hath given the belly for the conveighing of nourishment to the whole body, hath also certainely given the soule for some end and use; for he made nothing in vaine.

II. Certainely God workes in us, but not 352 without us. Faith is a grace infused by God, or an action taught & imprinted by him; and yet it is our minde which believes, our wil which chooseth God, our affections which love him: Hence it is said, that he drawes, but whom? those that are willing; hee doth not dragge any by force; he first bends and inclines the will and affections and then we willingly follow, hence Augustine saith, Non salvabit te sine te, God will not save us without our selves.

III. The Scripture doth clearely shew this, Thus Esay speaketh unto Edom, If yee will inquire inquire yee, returne, come[g]: so againe unto all, Ho every one that hungers let him come, and who is a thirst, come &[h] and Matth, 11, 28, and John, 7, 37. our Saviour calleth: Come unto me: yea this is the end of our preaching, that men might repent and turne unto God[i]. All which shew that Christ will give grace and salvation to none without their endeavour and paines.

h Esa. 55. 1
i Acts 26. 20.

Quest. 9. How is it said then that God workes in us all things? Phil. 2. 13.

Answ. 1 First, certainely God first workes, and then after him man.

Answ. 2 Secondly, God workes all things in us, but often insensibly; and the worke seemes to bee ours, and is in regard of the substance of the worke; onely we must confesse and acknowledge that the goodnesse of the workes proceeds from the cooperation of God.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, God doth not worke in us against the mind, or faculties of the soule, but in them, and by them:

Namely { First, by freeing our affections from the yoake of Satan, and captivity of sinne. Secondly, by turning our affections unto the Creator, that so we may approach nearer unto him, and with readinesse of heart seeke him.

§. 2. Primo, Seeke first.] Sect. 2.

All creatures besides man goe with their bodies and eyes to the grownd-ward, but man was made to goe upright; and whereas all other creatures have but foure muskles to turne their eyes round about, man hath a fifth to pull his eye up to heaven-ward[k]: Which teacheth us that howsoever wee seeke for other things, yet first of all, and above all, we should seeke for the kingdome of heaven and the righteousnesse thereof. Or that heaven, and heavenly things should be hungred after, and sought for above all other things, Reade Colos. 3. 1. 2. & Heb. 4. 11. & 13. 14. according to the example of those holy men mentioned, Heb. 11. 10. 14. 16. 26. Pope Pius the 4. sending his Nephew Marcus Altempts to Maximilian King of Bohemia, to side with him in the Councell of Trent, with many promises of honours and profits, no lesse then the succession of the Empire: he answered that he thanked his Holinesse, but his soules health was more deare to him then all the things in the world[l]. Alexander the great was wont to say of Calisthenes that he begged many things for others, but few for himselfe: And Iulius Cæsar of Cicero, that hee was negligent in things belonging unto himselfe, but diligent and and importunate in things concerning the common-weale; so wee should prise our soules most, and desire many things for our for our bodies; we should be negligent in temporall things in comparison of rituall.

k Columb. lib. 5. Cap. 9. Obser.

l Histor. of Councel of Trent pag. 419.

Ignoti nulla cupido, we have no knowledge of heaven, therefore what desire can we have after it? the joyes of heaven wee are not able to conceive of, therefore how can wee in our endeavours, and affections preferre them before all other things? A man can have no desire of an unknowne thing. Quest. 1.

Answ. 1. First, somethings are unknowne { Totaliter, wholy, both, { ὅτι ἔστι That there are such things / ὅ τι ἐστὶν What those things are. } A man can have no desire at all unto these things.

Respectivè, in part, when { We know that there are such things / We know not what they are perfectly } These things a man may hope for, and desire.

Answ. 2. Secondly, although we know not all things in heaven, yet we know that there is a heaven, and somethings wee know concerning it. For the better understanding hereof observe,

Those

Those things which we expect in heaven are either
- Known, and are either
  - General, namely,
    - First, that there we shall possesse and enjoy every good thing.
    - Secondly, hat there we shall be freed from every evill thing.
    - Thirdly, that our fruition of good, and freedome from evills shall bee perpetuall.
  - Particulars, namely
    - First, in heaven we shall enjoy good things which are either
      - Internall; as the joy wee shall have in the societie of God, Christ, and the Triumphant Church.
      - Externall, to wit,
        - The glorification of the body.
        - The perfection of the Soule; In truth, purity, love, peace, and joy.
    - Secondly, in heaven wee shall bee free from all evils, whether
      - Temporall; as from hunger, thirst, cold, sickneſſe, weakeneſſe, and the like, Revelat. 7. 17.
      - Spirituall; as from falling into sinne; from all base and vile lusts; from the malice, and temptation of Sathan; from the feares, and terrours of conscience, and the like.
- Unknowne, 1 Cor. 2. 9. Thus the joyes we expect are expressed sometimes by the name of a Kingdome, sometimes of a crowne, sometimes of an inheritance, sometimes of light that cannot bee approached unto, sometimes of life eternall, and unspeakeable glory (as was shewed before, Mat. 5. 48. Sect. last) but whatsoever they are they passe our understanding, and exceede our capacitie in this life.

Quest. 2. Why must wee thus earnestly and before all things seeke heaven?

Answ. 1. First, because we are here strangers, and that is our native country; God our Father, Christ our eldest brother, and the Saints our fellow members being all there. And therefore like a man who hath beene long absent, and farre distant from his countrey, and kindred, and wife, and children, we must long to be at home.

Answ. 2. Secondly, our inheritance, and riches, and portion, and treasure is there; And therefore our hearts and hearty desires should bee there also.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, because God hath given unto us a temporall life for this end and purpose, that herein wee might labour for life eternall.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, because if we doe not labour for the righteousnesse of God (which brings unto this kingdome, as followes by and by) in this life, afterwards it will be too late.

Answ. 5. Fifthly, because the enjoyment of heaven is a matter of the greatest importance, and moment: this being that one thing which is most necessary for us, Luke 10. 42. And therefore we should earnestly pursue the quest of heaven, so carefully avoid whatsoever might hinder us from heaven. We reade of a great disputation which was betwixt the Roman Bishops, and the Scottish Bishops concerning the celebration of Easter, before King Oswin: in which Bishop Colman alleadged, that it was to bee kept upon the fourteenth day of the first moneth, because Saint John the Evangelist observed it upon that day; Wilfride the Priest and his side affirmed that it was to bee celebrated alwaies upon the Sunday which fell betwixt the fifteenth and twenty one day of the first moneth, because Saint Peter alwaies celebrated it upon that day: The King hearing of this concluded and thus decided the difference; for as much as Saint Peter is the doore-keeper of heaven, I will not gainesay him; but in that, as much as I am able, I will obey his orders in every point, lest when I com to the gates of heaven hee shut them against me[m]. Thus should we do: feare to doe any thing which might hinder, debarre, and deprive us of heaven.

[m] Fox. Acts and Monum. f. 123. 124.

Answ. 6. Secondly, because heaven is more excellent the earth. It is the habitation of the elect, the throne of the Judge, the receit of the saved, the seate of the lambe, the fulnesse of delight, the inheritance of the just, the reward of the faithful, the seate of glory, the habitation of Angels, farre beyond thought, and glorious beyond all report. In gloria celesti mira serenitas, plena securitas, aeterna felicitas. In heaven there is admirable serenity, ample security, and eternall felicity.

Answ. 7. Seventhly, because except we preferre in our endeavours and affections heaven before all other things wee are unworthy of it. Cyrus was of opinion that no man was fit for an Empire, except he did excell those over whom hee ruled (Xenoph.) So none are worthy of heaven who doe not labour and endeavour to excell others in true righteousnesse and holinesse.

Answ. 8. Eighthly, because in heaven onely is our felicitie and happinesse, and not on earth: as appeares this.

I. Here in this life wee are miserable, 1 Cor. 15. 19. And all our joyes are but false, and fraile, and at the best not to be compared with those above, Phil. 4. 8.

II. There in heaven is joy, that is, rivers of pleasure, and fulnesse of delight, Psal. 16. 11. Luke 14. 15.

III. Heaven is the perfection of the creature which consists in two things, namely, First, to be freed from evils, and to have all teares wiped off, and all cause of griefe taken away. Secondly, to be established in a good, happie, and blessed estate; It is not enough to perfect happinesse, to have good things except a man have them inconcussibiliter, constantly: so in heaven our joy shall never be taken away, Iohn 16. 22. and 16. 22.

What things must we seeke first?

These things which are in heaven: here observe, that in heaven there are two things, to wit,

Quest. 3. Answ.

I. Spirituall graces; these come from heaven, and are to be sought for on earth.

II. Eternall glory, and joy; this is to be had in heaven. Now if we have the former truely on earth, we shall have the latter surely in heaven.

Quest. 4 How may we know, whether we hunger after, and seeke first for heaven and heavenly things?

Answ. It is long and difficult to give all the signes hereof, and therefore I will lay downe a few, and that shortly, namely,

First, if we desire to have a right and interest in that inheritance, and that this desire be cordiall and reall; then it is a good signe that we seeke it. On the contrary, those who are secure, and doubt nothing, are much to be suspected.

Secondly, if we have tender and circumcised consciences, which will not endure the least thing which God forbids: it is a good signe that we long for heaven.

Thirdly, if we seeke heavenly things, as worldlings seeke earthly, that is, spare for no paines for the obtaining thereof; it is a good signe that we truely long after them.

Fourthly, if wee labour to bee pure and holy, carefully avoiding all impurity, because God is pure, and his kingdome pure, and no impure thing can come therein: it is a signe that wee hunger after heaven.

Fifthly, we may know this by our contempt of the world; for the high esteeming of heavenly things, and the despising of earthly goe together. Tanto quisque minus dolet quod desint eterna, quanto magis gaudet quod adsunt temporalia: & qui minus dolet quod desint temporalia, certius expectat ut adsint eterna. By how much the more a man mourines for the losse of temporall things, by so much the lesse he greeves for the lacke of spirituall: And on the contrary, by how much the lesse a man is troubled for the lacke of earthly things, by so much the more he is assured of the enjoying of heavenly.

Quest. 3. What meanes must we use for the obtaining of heaven?

Answ. 1. First, learne, and labour to be humble, for such shall be raised unto honour, Mat. 5. 3. Philip. 2. 7, 9. &c.

Answ. 2. Secondly, labour for Christ, for he is the way that leades thither, John 14. 6.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, labour to bee pure, and to abstaine from sinne; for onely those who are washed are admitted into this kingdome, Revel. 7. 9, 14. Mat. 5. 8. Psal. 119. 1.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, be diligent in hearing, reading, and learning of the word of God, (Mat. 7. 24. John 5. 39. Rom. 16. 25. For

I. The word doth demonstrate and hold forth Christ unto us, Heb. 1. 1.

II. God hath ordained the Ministerie of the word for this end, that we might thereby learne how to be saved, 2 Cor. 5. 19. and Ephes. 4. 11.

III. The word is the instrument of begetting faith in us, of giving the spirit unto us, and of sealing us, Rom. 10. 14, 17. Ephes. 1. 13.

Quest. 6. Must we ascribe all this to preaching, and nothing to prayer, reading, meditating, and the illumination of the Spirit in the heart, and the workes of obedience in the life?

Answ. Certainely, great things are spoken of all these, & they are al greatly to be praysed, highly to be prized, and diligently to be practised; but they are corroborated and strengthened by preaching: as appeares thus,

I. Reading is unprofitable without understanding, as is evident in the Eunuch, Acts 8. 31, but Preaching opens, explaines, and expounds the Scripture, and makes it easie to be understood.

II. The hearing of the word preached begets the Holy Spirit in our hearts, or is a meanes to bring him unto us. As we see, while Peter and Paul preached, the holy Ghost was given unto the hearers, Acts 10. 44. and 11. 15.

III. The end of our prayer, when wee come unto the house of God, is that our hearing might be blessed, and made profitable unto us.

IV. Our obedience is blind and lame, except it bee directed by the word. And therefore the word is the true guide unto heaven.

Sect. 3. §. 3. The Kingdome of God.]

Quest. 1. How manifold is the Kingdome of God?

Answ. Two-fold, of grace, and of glory.

Quest. 2. To whom doth this kingdome of God belong?

Answ. To the elect, who in this life have the Kingdom of grace in possession, and the kingdome of glory in hope, and in the life to come shall enjoy eternall life, Mat. 25. 35. Luk. 12. 32. and 1 Tim. 4. 8.

Quest. 3. Who are the Superiours and subjects of this Kingdome?

Answ. 1. First, the King hereof is three-fold, in a three-fold respect, to wit;

I. God the Father is the King of this kingdome of grace, in respect of his creation thereof.

o Psal. 149. 5.

II. God the Sonne is the King of this Kingdome of grace in respect of his redemption thereof.

p Mat. 28. 5.

III. God the holy Ghost is the King of this Kingdome, in respect of his sanctifying thereof.

q Psal. 24. 7.

Answ. 2. Secondly, the subjects of this kingdome is the invisible Church, Mat. 13. 38. Luk. 1. 33. and the formes of the Kingdome.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, the statute lawes of this kingdome is the word of God; which is properly called a law,

I. Because it is a rule of our obedience.

II. Because Christ governes us by his word, as Kings governe their subjects by lawes.

Quest. 4. Why is the spirituall and invisible Church of Christ called a Kingdome?

Answ. For the priviledges, and prerogatives which we have therein, as in a kingdome; as for example,

First, a King in his kingdome hath supreme power above all therein: so the children of God have power over sinne, Sathan, and themselves; they needs feare none, neither the calumnies of the the wicked, nor those who can kill the body, but can goe no further.

Secondly, a King may have whatsoever his heart desires; so the children of God have absolute contentation; and hence it is called a kingdome, because it hath the commodities, and benefits, and good things of all townes, and cities, and we are Kings, and Lords of all, through contentation.

Question 5. How doth the excellency and felicitie of this kingdome appeare?

Answer 1. First, it is Kingdome in it selfe glorious, even an inheritance of glory. Therefore it is an excellent place.

Answer 2. Secondly, all the subjects of this kingdome are Kings; Therefore it is a glorious place.

Answer 3. Thirdly, all the lawes of this Kingdome are perfect: That is, both teaching us the perfect will of God, and our eternall felicitie and happinesse. And therfore it is an excellent Kingdome.

Answer 4. Fourthly, this Kingdome depends upon none; that is, neither wants nor stands in neede of any Ministers, servants, officers, or the like to manage it, as other kingdomes doe: And therefore must needes be a rare Kingdome.

Section 4. §. 4. And the righteousnesse.]

Question 1. What is meant by righteousnesse?

First, sometimes it is taken for righteousnesse by faith; but not so here.

Answer 1. Secondly, sometimes for righteousnesse of life; and so it is taken in this place: our Answer 2. Saviour hereby teaching us,
